ELECTION OF CHAIR

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Good morning, honourable members. It's my duty to call upon you to elect a Chair. Are there any nominations? Mr. Barrett.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Yes. Good morning, interim Chair. I apologize; I'm sitting in the wrong seat, but I thought I'd jump in before anybody else does. I wish to nominate Norm Miller to chair this committee.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Miller, do you accept the nomination?

Mr. Norm Miller: Gladly. Thank you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Okay. Any other nominations?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We'd just like to second it.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Seeing none, there being no further nominations, I declare the nominations closed and—

Mr. David Zimmer: Hold it, hold it.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Sorry, Mr. Zimmer?

Mr. David Zimmer: I'd like the nominee, before he's elected, to make a little speech.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): We'll get him up in the chair and he can give a speech to everybody.

There being no further nominations, I declare the nominations closed and Mr. Miller elected Chair of the committee.

Applause.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you to the committee, first of all, for nominating me as Chair, and I look forward to this job. From my understanding, the public accounts committee has been relatively non-partisan in the past, and I hope that's a tradition we can continue. I understand it has done a lot of good work as well, so I look forward to chairing this committee.

ELECTION OF VICE-CHAIR

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Are there any nominations for Vice-Chair?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I nominate Mr. Barrett as Vice-Chair of the committee.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I second that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we have a seconder. Mr. Barrett, do you accept the nomination for Vice-Chair?

Mr. Toby Barrett: Yes, Chair, and I do wish to thank Ms. Gélinas and Mrs. Sandals for the nominations.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any other nominations? No other nominations, so I declare Mr. Barrett as the nominated and affirmed Vice-Chair of the committee.

Applause.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Thank you.

APPOINTMENT OF SUBCOMMITTEE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The next order of business we have is to form a subcommittee of the committee. Mr. McNeely, you have a motion?

Mr. Phil McNeely: Chair, I move that a subcommittee on committee business be appointed to meet from time to time, at the call of the Chair or at the request of any member thereof, to consider and report to the committee on the business of the committee;

That the presence of all members of the committee is necessary to constitute a meeting;

That the subcommittee be composed of the following members: the Chair as chair, Ms. Sandals, Mr. Barrett, M^{me} Gélinas; and

That substitution be permitted on the subcommittee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion or comments? None? All in favour of the motion?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Maybe I would have a comment. Are these the same terms and conditions that were there in the previous Parliament?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I believe they are, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: They are? Okay. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): All those in favour? Carried.

Now, that being done, we can move into closed session, and Mr. McCarter is going to brief us on a number of different issues, including some of the past work and business of the committee, which I'm sure will be especially beneficial for me, the Chair.

Also, as a new Chair, maybe it would be a good point at this time for the researchers to be introduced as well.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We can do that in closed session, sure.

The committee continued in closed session at 0908.

The committee met at 0935 in committee room 1.

SUBCOMMITTEE REPORT

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I call the committee to order.

The reason I called this meeting is that, in discussions with the clerk, it was clear, first of all, that we were having difficulty getting someone to come before the committee on the 21st, and then the subcommittee had been in discussions and wanting to have the Ornge presentations take three weeks, there was concern that, depending on how much time was devoted to committee writing, we may get through only one or two of the choices. The clerk advised that he thought the discussion about perhaps needing extra time would best be done by the complete committee.

We do have a subcommittee report that is almost final, which we can discuss and get some additions to, to begin the meeting, and see about getting that passed.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Do you want me to move the report? Okay. I'm assuming you want me to read the whole thing—speed reading?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Sure, and then we have two amendments to it.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay.

Your subcommittee met on Wednesday, February 29, 2012, to consider the method of proceeding on the 2011 annual report of the Office of the Auditor General and recommends the following:

(1) That each party make two selections from the 2011 annual report of the Office of the Auditor General.

(2) That the following sections from the 2011 annual report of the Office of the Auditor General be selected for review by the committee:

—section 3.01, auto insurance regulatory oversight (third party selection)

—section 3.03, electricity sector renewable energy initiatives (official opposition selection)

—section 3.05, forest management program (third party selection)

—section 3.09, Legal Aid Ontario (government selection)

—section 4.07, Literacy and Numeracy Secretariat (government selection)

(3) That the outstanding selections from the third party and official opposition party be provided to the clerk of the committee no later than Wednesday, March 7, 2012, at noon.

(4) That the committee commences consideration of the selections from the 2011 annual report of the Office of the Auditor General on Wednesday, March 21, 2012.

(5) That upon receiving the special report from the Auditor General on Ornge, the Standing Committee on Public Accounts commences hearings Wednesday of the following week.

(6) That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts does not meet on the date the provincial budget is presented.

(7) That the committee clerk, in consultation with the Chair, be authorized prior to the adoption of the report of the subcommittee to commence making any preliminary arrangements necessary to facilitate the committee's proceedings.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you.

Toby, do you have an amendment?

Mr. Toby Barrett: Yes. First of all, I want to thank the subcommittee for allowing that leeway to give us, and the third party, for that matter, a bit more time to think about our selections. We just thought it a little short notice, so thank you for that.

Our remaining selection is section 4.14, unfunded liability of the Workplace Safety and Insurance Board.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. All in favour? Agreed?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: As amended?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): As amended, yes. Agreed?

France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I wanted to bring two changes. I know that, first, I had said forest management program for one of our selections, but I had changed it to the energy regulatory oversight. I thought I had communicated this, but I must not have. So can I change it now?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Can I just interject on that, which may affect your decision? We're having quite a bit of difficulty trying to arrange to have anyone come on the 21st, and the deputy ministers and the ministry we have been able to arrange on the 21st now is forest management.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Oh, really?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes. So the odds are we'll have nobody on the 21st if we change it at this point; that's the only thing I would advise.

M^{me} France Gélinas: All right.

Mr. Toby Barrett: I might just comment that, having gone through this—and forest management, of course, is very interesting for us, but I can appreciate it, having gone through the deliberations back and forth, and I'd hate to go through days of testimony for something that the third party is not interested in hearing about now. So I would hope the flexibility would continue. We're making decisions now on hours and hours of testimony and questions; I hope there's some leeway for the third party. Those are my thoughts.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any other comments?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I will dig through my email and see who I sent it to, but I did communicate that it was not going to be forest management but electricity, regulatory oversight.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'm not sure where that email went. The clerk is telling me he hasn't received it, that he's aware of, anyway.

M^{me} France Gélinas: All right. Then let me think about that one, but I'll deal with the next one, and the next one has to do with an amendment to point 5, where I think we could add that we deal with Ornge for a period of three weeks, which would help with the scheduling of things—be added to point 5.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): All in agreement?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. We've got three weeks of hearings, and I think we had actually identified the dates for that, so if you want to put the dates right in, I think that's probably safe.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's up to the committee, so you can either have "three weeks" or the dates; "three weeks" might be a little more flexible.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just put three weeks in, but the understanding was then—yes, that's fine, if you just want to put in three weeks, but we anticipate, then, that that would be March 28; April 4 and April 18.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): But, for flexibility, we'll just put three weeks in the motion, in case—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, that's fine. As long as we get the three weeks.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): —he doesn't report when we anticipate?

Jerry?

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Back to the original point that they were talking about, regarding—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Oh, sorry. Can we deal with that amendment. So the three weeks, is that agreed to?

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Of the hearings.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Of the hearings, yes, of course.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And then there will be report writing—

M^{me} France Gélinas: The report writing and everything we can't control. It's all in your hands, guys.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): All in agreement? Agreed.

Okay. Sorry, Jerry.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: So what I'm hearing in regard to the committee hearings is that if the third party changes their position, chances are there would be nobody available to present on the 21st?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Unless the deputy minister that they're changing to is available.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Is this a first choice change that you're making, so your other one that you're replacing this with would be a first choice or a second choice?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I would say auto insurance is our first choice and energy, regulatory oversight, is our second choice.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: So what is the likelihood, in the time frame remaining in the House schedule, for us to get to the—so we have Ornge, we have our position, the third party, then the government and then our position, and then the NDP's, in order to fit that time frame.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Perhaps what I should do is ask Will to go through what his best guess is for how much work we would be able to do in the available time through till June 6, so that gives everybody an idea.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: That's exactly what I'm asking.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Jerry.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): I'll give a little bit of detail, and then I'll turn it over to Ray just to talk about the report writing, because we have a couple of options we could do with that.

Assuming that if we make a change right now to the subcommittee report and we cancel MNR from coming in on the 21st, and let's say that no one will be available on the 21st, the first item that we would most likely deal with would be the special report on Ornge for three weeks; hypothetically, let's say the March 28, April 4 and April 18.

That would leave us, on the 25th, with scheduling a pick from one of the three parties. We could do Wednesday, May 2, a pick of one of the three parties, and then we could do Wednesday, May 9, a pick of one of the three parties, but then we'd be incredibly tight for report writing for Ornge and three sections with only the following three Wednesdays available for report writing.

It was suggested that we meet in the morning and in the afternoon for report writing. It could also be suggested that we start earlier in the morning to deal with report writing, because we have more flexibility in the morning than we do in the afternoon. We're only available to meet until 3, until routine proceedings—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And earlier in the morning—

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Like 8. I know that's happened in the past; I know the committee has met as early as 8 to come in to do report writing. On rare occasions that's happened. But—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: To do that every week is a bit of a stretch.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Yes. I'll give just a little bit of time for Ray just to talk about reporting, and then you can open the floor to general discussion on how people feel about this.

Mr. Ray McLellan: I think that people on the committee have been through this before—Ms. Sandals and Mr. Zimmer and Mr. Ouellette. My best guess is, to be realistic about this, and I think that with dedicating the three days to Ornge, which I certainly understand—so on the 18th, I would go away and start to write that report, and realistically, we're probably looking at six or seven days of straight writing to get that done. It would be brought back, I would think, around May 9. Then I think there would be full dedication to looking at Ornge on the 9th. In the interim—certainly on the 25th and the 2nd—you could start dealing with one of your three picks. Ornge would probably go from the 9th into the 16th, I would think. You could schedule—and you don't have to worry about the dates too much, but I can see the 25th as being one of the picks, May 2 being another pick and May 16 being another pick, with maybe the 9th going straight to Ornge. Ornge would come back on the 30th, I would think, and then we'd probably be dealing with a report from one of the three picks. We'd try to finish those off on the 6th. Realistically, based on my experience over the years, I think if you get through—two reports, absolutely, and lucky to do the third.

In an ideal situation, from a research perspective, if we started our work on December 1, which we've done over the years, and worked right through until the middle of June, we would get five done. But we've lost almost four months. So, realistically, we're certainly going to go full tilt, but to be honest about it, I would say two, and we'd be lucky to get a third one done.

I know when you get into something as controversial—when we went back to eHealth, for example, eHealth was more complicated than any of the other reports we've done over the years in here. Certainly, Ornge is going to be more complicated than other reports. It won't be as straightforward as MNR, for example, if we were doing that. I've had a chance to read through it.

I could be wrong, but if I had to gamble, I would say we'll get two and a half reports done and table two, and the other one would probably be left dangling.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Does that include the 21st or not?

Mr. Ray McLellan: I'm taking the 21st, with MNR, out of the mix. I've started on MNR, by the way, but that doesn't matter. Setting the 21st aside, go with Ornge on the 20th and motor right through. Ornge will be a longer report to try to get consensus on and work through. Having said that, that's my best guess.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: When I was thinking MNR—and we did get the deputy from MNR to come on the 21st. I obviously haven't talked to these folks, but I'm guessing that if we couldn't get the deputy to do renewable energy on the 21st, that we're not going to get the deputy to do a different chapter on energy on the 21st; it's the same deputy. If we switch from MNR to energy, it's a foregone conclusion that that deputy can't show up, because he already said he couldn't show up. So if we switch from MNR, what I was thinking, when we thought it was MNR and we thought we did have the deputy, was if we did one pick from each party and went with MNR on the 21st—and then I would suggest that we, from the government side, do the chapter 4, because usually we don't do as extensive report writing on chapter 4s.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I agree. I know where the confusion came from: It came from me. I apologize for it. There is no point in bringing MNR here. So let's put this one aside, and let's deal with the fact that this is not our pick.

Our first choice is FSCO, and this is the one I would really want to focus on. Our second choice is energy. So let's start the conversation from there.

The layout of what we do when—nobody has a crystal ball for the future, but it's as good a guess as any with the information we have now.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So, France, are you going to move a change in the subcommittee report, then, to change your choice?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yes, please.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Can you restate it for the committee, then, please?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Sure, that our second choice be the—unfortunately, I don't remember the section number, but it would be the electricity regulatory oversight.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Section 3.02.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Section 3.02. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Any more comments? Yes, Jagmeet.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes, thank you. With respect to our first choice, which is auto insurance regulatory oversight, what was the feedback from that ministry, I guess the Minister of Finance?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): They weren't available, and I think there was a letter—

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So every single section was contacted with regard to March 21, and none were able to come.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Except for the MNR.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Ray, please.

Mr. Ray McLellan: If I can just go back to Ms. Sandals's point—

M^{me} France Gélinas: I don't think we've voted yet on the change.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No, we haven't. Okay, so we're voting on France's change to the subcommittee report to change the NDP choice. All in favour? Agreed? Agreed.

Ray?

Mr. Ray McLellan: Sorry about that. I just want to go back quickly to amend my comments too for members who are new to the committee.

As Ms. Sandals said, sections 4.07 and 4.14, because they are not full value-for-money audits, they're follow-ups, and those follow-ups are not audits—they're really just Mr. McCarter going back to check on the status of his recommendations. So those, quite correctly, travel through the committee, or have over the years, very, very quickly. In other words, to put a figure on it, I'd say probably 25% of the time you would be required to deal with those, as opposed to a full audit. Whereas Ornge would take a concentrated effort, 4.07 and 4.14 would travel a lot quicker, so that would expedite things. Thanks.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for making that clear.

Any further comment on the subcommittee report, as amended?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Well, I—no, vote on it, and then I'll comment again.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So we'll put the vote on the subcommittee report, as amended, then. All in favour? Carried.

Yes, Liz, please.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Given what Ray just said, is it feasible to do 4.07, 4.14 and then one of the third party selections, and then park the others till the fall? I mean, the issue isn't whether or not the public accounts committee will exist in the fall. I think the issue is, the way the motion was structured, that we may not be the people on the committee in the fall. I can't imagine the public accounts committee is going to disappear, because I don't think any party wants it to disappear. So we could park the other three chapters, one from each party, to the fall. It's just that it doesn't make much sense to deliberately do hearings in the spring if there may be different people to do the report writing in the fall, so that we want to do hearings, report writing—I don't know whether that's feasible, but that's the only way I can see getting through one selection per party in the time we've got available, if we're spending three weeks on Ornge.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Certainly. Toby has a comment.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Further to that and also further to the letter we have received from the Ministry of Energy, the official opposition, our first choice, is 3.03, renewable energy. That is our first choice. I don't know whether—I guess we have a letter; maybe it takes another letter or another communication—but we do wish to go forward with our first choice as soon as possible. I know that the deputy is not available in March. We're doing Ornge on into April. I would hope that the opposition's first choice would go ahead after that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So what you're saying is, if it comes down to doing one section, the section you'd like would be 3.03, electricity sector, renewable energy initiatives.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Yeah. That is the opposition's first choice.

I don't know the protocol as far as rotation or priority—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I think it's based on who we're able to get in terms of deputy ministers and other officials.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Just further to that, if there's a problem with that, having not sat on the committee, I don't know whether the committee has had an emergent meeting on a Monday to catch up with some of this, because we're starting so late. We had an election and then—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'd need permission from the House.

Maybe what I should ask is, Liz was suggesting that we meet both the mornings and afternoons on—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Every Wednesday.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): —every Wednesday as a means to be able to get more done, I guess, in the short time we have available.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: I thought that just assumed. I didn't think that there was any question that it was going to be anything other than that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Historically, when we've been report writing, we've often just met in the mornings. But we already have authorization to meet morning and afternoon, so we can expedite report writing by meeting morning and afternoon. I'm already counting that in how many hours we get to do report writing.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I think Will has as much as he needs at this point to be able to go about his work of trying to set things up now, so I think we've accomplished all we need to for this morning, unless there's anything else? France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I would like to table a motion. If it's okay, I would read it into the record.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Is it? Okay. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I gather that the usual procedure is to give some sort of advance warning. Am I correct on that?

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Past practice in the committee is to give some advance warning, but go ahead and read it into the record.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'm not very good with that, am I? Okay, I'll improve. How's that?

I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts immediately request that the Auditor General examine the contracts between the Ontario Power Authority and gas-fired plants proponents TransCanada Corp. (Oakville) and Greenfield South Power Corp./Eastern Power (Mississauga), focusing specifically on the potential cost to ratepayers of the government's 2010 and 2011 decisions to cancel the projects, and report back in a special report.

Basically, what I'm asking the auditor to do is to look at how much did it cost to cancel those projects and to report back to this committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We should get that written out, should we—or a copy for everyone, please?

M^{me} France Gélinas: A copy for everyone, please.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Will can get it copied.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: A point of order: We're supposed to get written notice when a motion is that complicated, so let's just take it as a given that we won't be debating that till the next meeting.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Let me get some advice from the clerk, please.

Okay. So there's nothing in the standing orders that says you have to give notice. It has been the past practice of the committee to give notice, though.

We should recess so that the clerk can copy this motion. We'll give you a five-minute recess for the clerk to copy it.

The committee recessed from 1002 to 1007.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. So we've now got a copy of the motion put forward by the member from Nickel Belt. Debate?

Mr. David Zimmer: Just a second. Where is my copy?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Oh, sorry. I think there are two with Mr. Moridi.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just give me a second here.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sure, no problem.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Comments? France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So, as has been the practice in the past, we have tried to work with consensus here, and we have really tried to move things forward, basically for the good of the taxpayer and for the good of the people that we represent.

The Auditor General has taken direction from this committee before, and from his statement from before, the fact that we're having this conversation, you know—he's not foreign to the fact that I will have tabled that motion. If it comes from a recommendation from this committee, then he really looks at his workload and looks as to when it would be feasible.

We are not putting a gun to his head. He still will decide, on his own accord, as to when this will take place, but he will take into account the fact that it is the wish of this committee that he look at the value for money that the people of Ontario got through those two deals. This is something that is perfectly within his scope and ability to do. This is something that he could decide to do on his own. This is something where he will know that at least one of the parties—and once you talk, we will know how many of us are interested, but I think if it was to be brought forward as consensus building, this is an area of interest to the people of Ontario. The fact that our hydro bill keeps going up is something that I'm sure we've all heard about. Here's an opportunity to show that we want transparency in some of the decisions that are made, and who else but our auditor to really tell us the goods as to the value for money that we got?

So I'm asking for the committee to support this motion with the full understanding that we are not in a position to tell the auditor when he does the work. He is a big man who will decide within the allocated resources when this work gets done, but he will know that this is work that we would like him to do, and that once this is done, we would like him to report in a special report here again. We're not taking any decision power away from his scheduling and all of this. What we're doing is asking him now to look at doing value-for-money audits on those two contracts.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your comments, France. David?

Mr. David Zimmer: While I appreciate the intent, where the member is trying to go with this, it strikes me that the whole thing is premature. I mean, the motion says it wants to focus specifically on the potential cost to the ratepayers of the decision to shut those down, but what's going on now is that the government and the two private sector companies, the one involving the Oakville situation and the one involving the Mississauga situation, are in the midst of the negotiations to figure out who's going to pay how much, if any, as a result of the government's decision to cancel the contracts. Those are very, very delicate and very, very sophisticated negotiations.

Now, put yourself in the mind of the negotiators, either on behalf of the government or on behalf of TransCanada Corp., which is the Oakville situation, or Greenfield South Power Corp., which is the Mississauga situation. Their negotiators are sitting around the table and they're back and forth about who's going to pay what and so forth and so on. And suddenly it's announced that the Auditor General is going to look into or come and do an investigation or an audit to give his opinion on what the potential costs are as a result of these decisions and who's going to pay those amounts of money and all of those other sorts of things.

If you're a negotiator now for the government trying to get the best deal, you've got a real problem on your hands. Your decision then is, "Well, do we stop the negotiations and wait and see what the auditor does? Do we continue with the negotiations?" The same problems are on the backs of the two private sector companies, and, I would argue, the Auditor General is in a very difficult position because he's now a third party going in there with his view of things, which may alter the positions of the negotiating parties.

So I think the whole thing is premature. We ought to sit back and let those discussions conclude and the parties will settle those differences between themselves. Then, frankly, it may be appropriate—it probably is appropriate—for the Auditor General to step in and look at that resolution and the events leading up to the resolution and say, “This is what happened. This was a good deal; this was a bad deal,” etc. But let those negotiators finish their work. Do not tie their hands. Do not put them in a compromising situation.

Here are two examples from other fields: Supposing there was a labour negotiation going on now between the government and some of its unions, and in the middle of the negotiation, this committee sent in the Auditor General to do some report on some aspect of the events surrounding that labour negotiation. That would really throw a wrench into the system, and we wouldn't do that. We'd let those negotiations conclude and then take a look at it.

A second example might be, supposing there are negotiations arising out of this recent rail crash out Burlington way. So the railway company is in there and the various government agencies are in there and the other parties are in there, assuming it was an ONR or a GO train thing, and we suddenly send in the auditor to get in there to give his opinion on who did what and how much it should cost and so forth. That's just premature.

So for those reasons, I'm not able to support this motion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Further comments?

Mr. Toby Barrett: Yes. I support the motion. I know what we just heard during committee deliberations: this committee has not met for many, many months. I'm not sure when the last formal hearings were—probably last spring sometime, was it?—which suggests there is a backlog of issues where we, as elected representatives, should be giving some direction to the Auditor General. I can understand why this committee hasn't met: There was an election last fall about the time some of this stuff was going on, and then lack of agreement amongst the three parties as far as establishing all of the committees. Some of them are yet to be established, as I understand. So, I mean, this is natural; we're going to have these issues come forward because of a backlog going back—gosh, almost a year, in one sense.

I know it was mentioned; this is complicated. I know the concern about wading into something midstream, but as I recall, much of these decisions occurred something like last October; here we are into March. We do know the Auditor General was wading in in the midst of the Ornge controversy. I don't think the Ornge situation has been settled, but even though there are probably some negotiations going on on many, many issues with respect to Ornge ambulance, which many people in the public are still trying to get their head around, what's going on there, the Auditor General has been empowered. I'm not sure when he first was asked to look at Ornge, but he's wading in even though we don't have the final information with respect to Ornge.

eHealth: Now there's something else the Auditor General looked at. eHealth, in my mind and certainly in the minds of my constituents, has not been resolved. You know, we hear figures of $1 billion with respect to eHealth. People ask me, “Are we going to get any of that money back?” I mean, it's fine to see something like that occur and to see that kind of money go down the drain in the eyes of many people, but the question is: Well, that's fine; you can apologize and the money disappeared, but people want to know if they're going to get the money out of some of these people who were responsible for those kinds of expenditures. It's the same with Ornge and the same with this motion with respect to both Oakville and also Mississauga.

I mean, the only information I have and my constituents have—we don't live in Oakville or Mississauga; we just hear about the billion-dollar man. Well, is that accurate? Is this a billion-dollar issue? Is it a billion for each one? I think that it's going to be—as with eHealth, as with Ornge, it takes a long time to get these things wrapped up. In the meantime, I see no reason why the Auditor General should not be alerted to this and empowered to begin to take a look at these two issues as well. As with Ornge and as with eHealth, I don't see the rationale why there would be something that it would be ill-advised for the Auditor General not to look at in Oakville and Mississauga with respect to the power generating stations there.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. I think we shouldn't underestimate the good judgment of our auditor. We have been well served by him and his office and he has shown good judgment in other positions. I have full confidence that if the auditor felt that his work was going to hinder any negotiation, he would report back to this committee and let us know. I have full confidence in the good judgment of him and his office. We will ask him to do something. If he comes back to us and says that he has reservations about doing all or part of the work, I would be in full compliance with whatever our auditor tells us.

But I think from where we sit, we're doing him a discredit by thinking that he hasn't got the good judgment to report back to us if there were to be ill or adverse effects from the direction we've given him. I have full confidence in him and his office.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Further comment? Mr. McNeely?

Mr. Phil McNeely: You were going first, Reza.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, Reza. You seem to be ready there.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you. We also have full confidence in the Auditor General. We know the Auditor General has been doing a great job in looking at the government's books. In the past, he has done a great job, and we have full confidence in his judgment. But in the meantime we don't want to put the Auditor General in a difficult position.

As a person who has done lots of business negotiations in his past life before entering politics, I assure you that under these kinds of circumstances, when you are doing business negotiations, particularly when there is a conflict on a business contract as complex as a power station—in this case, we are dealing with two power station contracts which have been cancelled or moved, and very tough business negotiations are going on between two parties. Under these conditions you don't want another person to come in and basically start looking around. You want business negotiations to go on properly, based on business norms. Once it is done, of course, the Auditor General can look at the books at any time he wishes, or his office wishes. But the timing and the procedures have to be right.

I think at this point it's not appropriate for us to ask the Auditor General to look into this case. Mr. Zimmer gave some examples. I think it is right that when there's a labour dispute, for example, you don't want to interfere. You want both sides to get to the table, and once they have done their negotiations, then of course you want to go and look at it.

The Ornge or eHealth examples, I think, don't apply to this particular case, because here we are dealing with business negotiations—contract cancellations between two parties; one side is government and the other side is the contractors. As I mentioned earlier, the contracts are, I'm sure, very complicated in terms of the size of the power plant projects, so it's very involved.

At this point, just speaking purely from a business point of view, Mr. Chair, I think we have to let the two business parties—on one side, government, and on the other side, the contractors—do their business negotiations and come to a deal. Once things are settled, then the Auditor General can indeed go in and take a look at the books and see what happened, how it happened or whatever. But at this point, I think it's very premature for us to request that the Auditor General interfere in this business.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Reza. Phil, did you have comments?

Mr. Phil McNeely: I'd just like to support the positions taken by Zimmer and Moridi here on the appropriateness of us telling the Auditor General what he should do in, I'm sure, a very busy schedule for himself. He's going to be able to choose to do this for his report, which comes out this fall. I don't think the timing is much different if he decides to proceed, but I will certainly not support this motion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. Jerry?

Interjection.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Oh, sure. Go ahead.

Mr. Toby Barrett: I just want to jump in. With respect to Ornge, was there direction given to the Auditor General as far as—we know it's a government ministry, there's private sector involved, there are contracts with the AgustaWestland helicopter company, I assume someone signed a contract with the fixed-wing airplane company Pilatus that—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Of course, the Auditor General is not here today to talk about it.

Mr. Toby Barrett: But certainly Ornge—there's public sector-private sector, there's an Italian helicopter company. I don't know who makes the—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Could we correct the record here on Ornge? The Auditor General's annual report is based on audits which the auditor chooses to do, not on audits which the committee directs him to do. If the committee directs him to do it, it's a special audit, which is what we're discussing here, which was the case with eHealth.

Ornge was initiated by the auditor as a routine audit which was originally going to become part of his annual report, but because he ran into the same sort of stonewalling in doing his research that everybody else has run into, he didn't have it ready in time to include in his annual report. So it's like we're getting a late chapter. But he didn't get any direction; he just went in and did it as part of his normal annual report.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for that clarification. If we could stick to discussion about the actual motion—and Gilles, I think, has been patiently waiting to comment.

Mr. Gilles Bisson: Listen, this committee has been pretty non-partisan, even in the case of majority governments. I look back at yourselves as a majority, the Tories and ourselves in times of government, and there has been a fair amount of co-operation on all sides in order to look at the public accounts and to deal with what needs to be dealt with.

For example, the whole issue of the eHealth scandal that happened in the last Parliament: You know, the government understood that there needed to be a clearing, an investigation as to what happened. The government supported, if I remember correctly, that particular request. Right?

M^{me} France Gélinas: No. The request was for use of consultants.

Mr. Gilles Bisson: That's right, okay. But the point is, often the government side actually works with the opposition, together, in order to get to whatever it is that we need reviewed by the auditor. So I'm a little bit surprised that the government is sort of taken aback here, because there's been a long-standing position on this committee where, in fact, government and opposition do work together.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sorry, we're out of time, but what I'd suggest, because we do have such limited time, is that we come back at 1 o'clock today and finish this discussion.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: No. Point of order: We did not get written notice of the motion. We did not get written notice of a meeting at 1 o'clock. I don't know about everybody else, but we didn't have a meeting scheduled. I've got meetings all afternoon that have been scheduled, and I would really like to hear from the auditor—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'm sorry, Liz, but we are out of time, and we'll discuss this after the committee then.

The committee recessed from 1027 to 1300.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, the committee's in—France, did you—

Mr. David Zimmer: I want to make a—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): France, did you—

Mr. David Zimmer: I want to make a motion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): France, did you have something—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do I get to start?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please do.

Mr. David Zimmer: Hold it before we get started.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I recognize France. Go ahead, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So, this morning, I put forward a motion that would ask our auditor to look at, basically, a range of costs—and this is how the motion is worded—potential costs to the ratepayers associated with the cancellation of the gas-fired plants in Oakville and in Mississauga.

We all know that our electrical bills keep going up and up. This is an issue that is important to a number of people, and this is an issue that our auditor is well equipped to shed some light on.

This morning, I have heard from members of the Liberal caucus that they felt it was premature to ask our auditor to go and do a value-for-money audit of those two projects. I would say the first argument is that this happened in 2010. We are now in 2012. I'm guessing there are some issues on the books that have been settled and certainly are worth reporting on.

The second one, the one in Oakville, was done during the election, so it's only six months old. But then, I would certainly refer to other cases where the auditors do go in when there's ongoing negotiation with the private sector.

You will remember that we were in the exact same situation two years ago, when I moved the motion forward that we look at the use of consultants by our hospitals and the health care sector. When the auditor went in, he reported to us that while he was going in, hospitals and other players of the health care system were in the process of negotiating contracts with consultants, but he did his work in a way that did not interfere with what our health care system was trying to do. He was still able to report to us some pretty telling numbers. Not only was he able to report to us some pretty telling numbers, but although ongoing contracts were going on, the government acted. You brought forward legislation; you brought forward—it was a worthwhile endeavour that, to me, led to value for money for the taxpayers of Ontario.

So I guess the point I'm trying to make is that to delay this is not going to help the taxpayers of Ontario. As well, our auditor has the skills to go in and recognize that if by him being there it's going to have an influence on any one of the parties that he's looking at—he has enough good judgment to know what to do and what not to do.

But here again, I think the report that we would get from an ongoing negotiation of pulling out of a project may lead the government to take swift, decisive action that would be in the best interest of the taxpayer, exactly like the Liberal government did the last time we did that. We were in the middle of a budget year; we were in the middle of a session. The auditor came, did his report about the use of consultants, and lots of existing contracts continued to be negotiated, but the government acted. They acted swiftly and they acted on the recommendations that the auditor had made, that gave the taxpayers value for money.

I have the feeling that we are looking at a situation that is very similar—that, although there is an ongoing negotiation going on, if we shed the light, a very professional light of our Auditor General, on the cancellations of those two contracts, I have a feeling it's going to be for the betterment of the taxpayers of this province.

So I would urge you to support the motion. If you want to do an amendment that would make sure that we are respectful of the ongoing process and that we don't jeopardize the negotiations that are going on, I would have no problem with this. Far be it from me to try to interfere in a negotiation that is going on. But I think our auditor can shine a light on all of this, report back to this committee through the House, and basically save the taxpayer a whole lot of money.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals—Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. Before I directly address Ms. Gélinas's comments, I'd actually like to go back to the comments that Mr. Bisson made before we left for lunch, or left for question period. He talked about the fact that this committee has an ongoing history of collegiality, and I think that's actually really important to talk about, how that has worked, because there are a lot of new people here.

This morning, we were having the discussion around how we could schedule things, and we've tried to accommodate getting those things scheduled and to make it so that we could have a look at Ornge. We agreed to the three weeks; we agreed to do the report from our side that's the shortest, trying to figure out a way. So we want to make it work the way it has always been.

But I think it's important to go back and look. We've always, I think—and I've been on this committee now for seven years and a bit. In that whole time, with maybe one exception, all the reports were unanimous reports. There were a couple of instances in those reports where the committee as a whole was unhappy with the response, and we all agreed together, including the government side, that we would call the people back. I can think of assistive devices. I can think of some of the issues around IBI services for autistic children, where the whole committee, including the government, said, "The answers that we're getting are not acceptable," and we actually called the deputy and the ministry back for more information or sent a letter and said, "We want you to work on this for a bit and then come back for more hearings.” We asked for additional information. It was a very collegial process, as Mr. Bisson said, trying to get that information.

When we got to eHealth, it was actually, for Mr. Barrett’s information, Minister Caplan who asked for that report, because there are actually three ways in which reports land on our table. One is the auditor’s annual report, where the auditor chooses what to audit; one is where a minister asks for an audit, and in the case of eHealth it was the minister who asked for the eHealth audit, and when that came, the government worked with everybody, dropped everything. We did a three-week series of hearings into eHealth, and I think, Ray, that you came in to do that. I think much to Ray’s surprise, as much as anybody’s, in the end we actually, even on eHealth, came to a unanimous report. It might have taken us a little bit longer than with some of the other reports, but we came to a unanimous report.

When it came to Madame Gélinas’s motion around doing something with hospital consultants—I think it was yours, on the hospital consultants—we worked with you on the motion. The government—remember, we had a majority on the committee then—worked with getting that motion massaged so that we were directing the auditor to focus on what we wanted, and we worked with the auditor. And what was critical about that discussion was that the auditor was here, and we worked with the auditor to fine-tune the motion.

Similarly, and I looked back in Hansard while we were away, when you look back in Hansard, and you made reference—no, I don’t know as you did, but there was another motion about whether or not we should be doing a special audit on the Niagara Parks Commission. When you look back in Hansard there’s actually quite an extensive discussion between the committee—so there’s a motion that Madame Gélinas tabled, and then there’s quite an extensive discussion with the auditor about amending and fine-tuning the motion so that what we’re asking for, as a committee, is something that it’s realistic to ask for.

When we’ve asked for a special audit—now, as I say, eHealth was a special audit triggered by the minister, not by the committee. The one that we did where the committee triggered the special audit and the other ones where there have at least been motions to trigger special audits, we’ve worked with the auditor. As we all know, the auditor is in Australia today. He informed us in advance that he would be in Australia today and he told us that he would be back on March 21, so everybody on the committee knows where the auditor is and knows that he will be back following March break. So that everybody doesn’t think that he took a long holiday, he’s actually attending to business. He’s been invited to Australia to speak at a conference there on auditing in the public sector. But the culture of the committee has always been very much that we include the auditor in the discussion.

Looking back, first of all, with respect to—and I’m going to get Mr. Zimmer to speak more as we go around, because he’s the legal beagle here, not me. But it occurred to me that while you were talking about the special motion that we did, the special audit on consultants, that there were hundreds of contracts that hospitals had with consultants of various sorts. Yes, no doubt at any given point in time if you’ve got hundreds of hospitals who use consultants for a variety of things, of course some of the contracts will be under negotiation. That’s almost irrelevant.

No matter what we ask him to look at—we ask him to look at procurement: Some of those procurement discussions are under negotiation at any given point in time, and if they’re under negotiation, he wouldn’t look at the ones that are under negotiation. He looks at the ones that are in place and what’s going on with things that are in place.

But in this specific motion, we’re talking about looking at two specific contracts, and those two specific contracts and the information that this motion specifically asks for, which is the cost to the taxpayer, is a matter that is currently under negotiation on those two specific contracts. So, it isn’t like there are hundreds of other contracts out there that he can look at. It’s the two specific contracts that we would be asking him to look at that are currently under negotiation.

Now, I’m not a business person, so I don’t do commercial contracts, but I do have 15 years’ experience before I came here as a school board trustee who was very active in negotiations at a school board. Trust me, the last thing you do while you’re in the middle of negotiations is ask for a public audit of the negotiation process, which is essentially what this motion seems to call for. It’s doomed to failure.

Imagine what would happen if the government, when we had demonstrations on the streets back in the education wars, as I think of them, back in the 1990s, had said, “Oh, and by the way, we’d like you to go in and audit value-for-money school board contracts, collective agreements while they’re under negotiation.” That would have been a recipe for trouble. We all know that.

No, it’s not a good idea, Mr. Barrett. I take negotiations seriously, be they commercial negotiations or collective bargaining. It isn’t a good idea to deliberately disrupt negotiations, thank you.

We have a history and, in particular in this case, we have the Auditor General being previously asked to look into this issue because what we did find—and I’m quite happy to hand this around. We can hand these all around. The way we got this letter was, it was actually in a media release that was sent out on September 29, 2011. So that was in the middle of the election campaign, obviously. The media release was from the NDP campaign and the letter in question—for the sake of Hansard I’ll read the letter in question into the record. The letter is addressed to the “Office of the Auditor General of Ontario

“Box 105

"Toronto, Ontario

"M5G 2C2"

It's obviously addressed, "To the Auditor General," and it reads:

"During the election campaign"—as I've previously noted, this was sent during the election campaign of 2011. "During the election campaign, a debate has erupted over Liberal leader Dalton McGuinty's plans to cancel construction of a gas-fired electricity plant in Mississauga.

"This commitment comes after the government cancelled a similar contract in Oakville.

"Clearly, both decisions"—oh, and I should tell you that this is signed by Andrea Horwath, leader of the Ontario New Democrats. I didn't mention that. That's where the letter is from.

"Clearly, both decisions carry fiscal risks with potential impacts on ratepayers and/or the fiscal position of the province. The lack of disclosure has left the public in the dark on the possible costs associated with these decisions.

"Estimates in some reports have indicated that cancellations costs could reach $1 billion"—and there is a reference to "Killing Gas-Fired Power Plants Could Cost $1 Billion," Toronto Star, September 26, 2011.

"In 2004, the Legislature passed the Fiscal Transparency and Accountability Act with the aim of ensuring all parties, and all Ontarians, would have a full sense of the province's fiscal challenges. The Minister of Finance stated at the time, 'We owe a duty to our shareholders, the 12.5 million people who rely on us for quality public services. We have a duty to them to report honestly, thoroughly and completely what the circumstances of their government are.'" And that's a quote from Hansard, October 27, 2004.

"Given the potential costs of the cancellation or relocation of these projects, and the current Premier's unwillingness to share any information about these potential costs which could affect the province's finances or electricity ratepayers"—and this is the important sentence—"I'm calling on your office to review the contract and these risks, and I urge Mr. McGuinty and Mr. Hudak to support this independent review.

"Sincerely," and the original was signed by Andrea Horwath.

So, according to the press release, this letter was sent. I have no reason to disbelieve it was sent. They sent a press release and said it was sent. I have never spoken to the Auditor General about it. I wasn't aware this letter had been sent. I was probably busy knocking on doors on September 29 and missed this particular NDP press release. So I wasn't even aware of this particular letter until a few minutes ago.

But it does seem to me that with what we do know about how the process works, when the Auditor General initiates an audit, the Auditor General, at the start of the audit, informs the ministry—in this case, it would be the Ministry of Energy—and the agency—in this case, I believe it would be the Ontario Power Authority that would be the agency that actually held the contracts in question. The auditor informs the ministry and the agency when he is about to conduct an audit.

What we know is that the auditor has not informed the Minister of Energy or the Ministry of Energy that he is about to conduct such an audit, and the auditor has not informed the OPA that he is about to conduct such an audit. We know that there has been at least one formal, written request to have such an audit, which the auditor has declined to act on.

It seems to me that it would be very prudent of this committee, which has a history of behaving in a collegial manner, to defer this entire issue until the time when the auditor returns and we can get first-hand from the auditor why the auditor chose not to act on this request, because, as Mr. Zimmer, as a lawyer, is quite prepared to talk about, this would appear to raise a lot of legal concerns when we ask the auditor to go and audit something which is the subject of an ongoing and active negotiation.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Could I raise a point of order?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Point of order, go ahead.

Mr. Toby Barrett: So the auditor declined. Do we have that letter, as well, from the auditor, that he declined? I don't see it here—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's not a point of order. Thank you for your comment, though.

Continue, Mrs. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I would not have that correspondence. The auditor receives, to the best of my knowledge, lots of suggestions from opposition politicians, from members of the public, from whistleblowers. The auditor receives lots of letters. He doesn't share those with the government, nor does he share his responses. The only reason we have this is because the author of the letter chose to send it out as a press release.

Interjection.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We're quite happy to recess if France wants to look and see if there was a response. My inference was, because the ministry has not been informed there is an audit, he has not currently acted on the request.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: To summarize in 60 seconds what has taken half an hour, there are three ways to direct an audit: The minister requests it; the auditor decides on his own; or this committee passes a motion that directs. There are only three ways to get an audit done. Those are the three.

Anybody can write to the auditor. That's not a way to direct an audit. What I'm asking this committee to do is to use the powers that we do have to ask the auditor to look at this. We, as a committee, have the power to do this. We are one of the three ways that an audit can be done.

Mr. David Zimmer: On a point of order here.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: With respect, for the NDP member now to say those are the only three ways you can effect an audit—obviously, the leader of the NDP, Andrea Horwath, wrote to the Auditor General, and my colleague has read that into the record. Just to supplement that: On the same day that the letter was sent to the auditor, Andrea Horwath, leader of the NDP, issued a press release to the public, out there in the public domain, including the minister's office, everywhere, and the press release said, "Toronto, September 29, New Democratic leader Andrea Horwath"—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sorry, that's not a point of order, but you're welcome to continue to debate—

Mr. David Zimmer: No. It's a point of order in the sense that I think the leader has—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Maybe the clerk could verify. What are the ways that we can mandate the auditor to do an audit?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The clerk will clarify that. He has the act right before him.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Under section 17 of the auditor's act, special assignments, "The Auditor General shall perform such special assignments as may be required by the assembly, the standing public accounts committee"—

Mr. David Zimmer: Just a little slower.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Sorry. "The Auditor General shall perform such special assignments as may be required by the assembly, the standing public accounts committee of the assembly, by resolution of the committee, or by a minister of the crown in right of Ontario but such special assignments shall not take precedence over the other duties of the Auditor General under this act and the Auditor General may decline an assignment by a minister of the crown that, in the opinion of the Auditor General, might conflict with the other duties of the Auditor General." That's section 17, which does relate to this committee.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That raises a really interesting question.

Interjection.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Sorry?

Mr. David Zimmer: No, go ahead.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Because I think what I heard you say was that if the minister makes the request, the auditor may decline, but if the Legislature or the Standing Committee on Public Accounts makes the request, it didn't, in what I heard you read, say that the auditor could decline. Is that correct?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I believe the auditor can decline, even if this motion that's before us was passed. He can decline to do it. It's still his choice.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But is that what the standing order says?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's something we should bring up with the auditor.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Exactly. If the auditor was here I'd ask the auditor, and we wouldn't have you sitting on the hot seat, Chair and clerk; we'd just ask the auditor. The auditor isn't here, which is actually the whole point: The auditor isn't here.

I have no idea why, when he was asked to look into this, he chose not to do it. But what we know for absolute certain is that he was asked. We know for absolute certain that he has not notified either the ministry or the OPA that he chooses to initiate an audit—

M^{me} France Gélinas: How do we have this fact? How do we know that he hasn't?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): France? Go ahead.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How do we know that he hasn't?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: How do we know that he hasn't notified the ministry that he's going to do an audit?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Because I asked the Minister of Energy, "Have you got a request from the auditor to do an audit?"

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Jagmeet?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you very much. First of all, let's clarify: According to the authority under section 17, it states very clearly that there's only one instance when the Auditor General may decline. It says very clearly that it "may decline an assignment by a minister of the crown." There is no indication that if the Standing Committee on Public Accounts or if the assembly, or if there's a resolution passed—that the Auditor General may decline. The "decline" only refers to an assignment by the minister, and the reason given is that, in the opinion of the Auditor General, it might conflict with other duties. So the declining portion in section 17 does not refer to a request or resolution made by the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, nor does it indicate that it refers to the assembly. That's just my reading of section 17.

But more importantly—

Mr. David Zimmer: Just a second.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But that's really important—

Mr. David Zimmer: Point of order.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Jagmeet, I think that's a question where we really do need the Auditor General here to be able to answer for 100% certainty. That's the advice I'm getting from my clerk for the committee.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Certainly. That makes sense.

But beyond that, what's important—

Mr. David Zimmer: Hold it.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If we can let Mr. Zimmer go ahead.

Mr. David Zimmer: That was the point that I wanted to make, Mr. Chair, but you've made the point for the record.

Secondly, I'm at a bit of a disadvantage here because I don't have a copy of the—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Standing order.

Mr. David Zimmer: —standing order. Could I have five minutes—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If you'd like to recess, we can make a copy of it.

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes, I would like that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, we'll take a five-minute recess.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

The committee recessed from 1333 to 1340.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We're back in session. Everyone's got their copy of section 17.

France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Well, I was happy to hear that I had the support of the Progressive Conservative caucus for this motion, but at this point, I doubt that I have the support of the Liberal caucus for this motion. But they brought a valid point: that the input of the auditor may help us move forward as a group. Given this, I would suggest that we wait for the auditor to be present to continue this conversation or debate, whatever we're supposed to call it.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Is there agreement on that from the committee? All agreed. We'll reschedule this for when the auditor is at the meeting.

There's a couple of other things; one thing that we'll discuss after we adjourn, but I would just like to ask something. As has been described here today, in the past the committee has worked in quite a non-partisan and collegial way, I think was how it was described, and I'm wondering if it might be the will of the committee that, for future motions, we give at least a 24-hour notice so that the auditor might be here, for example, and just for the benefit of all committee members. Is that something the committee members would agree to?

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Whenever possible.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Minimum 24 hours.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: If something comes forward as a result of a discussion, we want to defer that for 24 hours.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So it's the agreement of the committee that we will try to do our best to give a minimum 24-hour notice for motions.

Yes, Liz.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I mean, we're not talking about scheduling stuff, which we're just doing by consensus and then you need a formal motion; it's when we've got something like a new audit or something like that—

Interjection: Substantive.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So it's substantive, we're talking about.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, that's good. Thank you very much, committee members. I appreciate you all coming back in at late notice. It was sort of a last-minute decision on my part, but I just felt we had such a short time frame to meet that I'd just as soon we didn't use up time when we'd scheduled somebody to be here. I know I was supposed to be in a few other places; I'm sure you all were.

We'll adjourn now.

The committee adjourned at 1341.

COMMITTEE BUSINESS

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'll call this meeting to order, then. At our last meeting, we were discussing a motion put forward by France. There was a fairly lengthy discussion on that motion, and it became apparent that we needed some advice from the Auditor General, who was in Australia attending an auditor generals' conference—on his own dime, I might add.

Mr. Jim McCarter: He paid his own airfare.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Paid his own airfare. Thank you for that. I'm sure the taxpayers thank you for that.

So I think it appropriate—now that the Auditor General is back, we can get some advice from the Auditor General on this motion.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I do apologize for missing what looked like a very interesting meeting last week. I had a look at the Hansard, and it seemed like there were a couple of issues that the committee would like some input on: a response to the Andrea Horwath letter with respect to her request in December for us to look at the power plants and, also, what our interpretation of section 17 would be with respect to if the committee were to pass a motion for a special audit. I can speak to that a bit.

With respect to the Ms. Horwath letter requesting us to look at the power plant, I did respond to her on December 16, 2011, and I indicated to her—and this is a standard response that I have, regardless of any request I get from a Leader of the Opposition or from a member. Section 17 basically says that we can do a special if requested by the Standing Committee on Public Accounts or by a minister, or in one or two cases we've actually had the Premier make a request. Generally, if we get a request from a Leader of the Opposition or from a member, we write back and basically say that under section 17, I can undertake specials at the request specifically of these individuals or the Standing Committee on Public Accounts. I basically say, other than that, we do not agree to undertake special audits if it comes from another member, even including a Leader of the Opposition. I've got a couple of copies of letters where we have actually written to John Tory in the past and basically said the same thing to John Tory. In the past, I've also had a joint request from the two leaders of the official opposition, and again, we've stuck to basically the same view: that because it doesn't fall under section 17, we won't do the work.

You might say, "Well, why, Auditor, would you do that, given that you work for the Legislature?" The feeling is that if we start picking and choosing between members that write to us or opposition leaders that write to us and if we end up doing four Conservatives, one Liberal and one NDP, we could be accused of, "Why are you always agreeing to do the ones that are PCs or NDPs?"

So generally, our policy is, and we've stuck with this—and I've issued nine annual reports. I've always adopted that, where if it's a request from a member or the Leader of the Opposition, we basically refer back to section 17.

Having said that, I can tell you that I keep what I call a "high-potential" audit file of potential VFMs, and if I do get a letter from a Leader of the Opposition or from a member, it is something that I do have a look at when considering next year's audits. A number of you have stopped me in the hall or come up to me after the meeting and put a bee in my ear about things we might want to consider looking at, and I can assure you that these are things we do take into consideration.

But that was the response to Ms. Horwath, and that was the reason why we did respond that way.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any comments from members?

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: VFM?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Value-for-money audit.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Oh, VFM. I thought you said "B." Sorry.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any advice on the motion before the committee?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Maybe I could just comment on the interpretation of section 17. I know there is some discussion as to, if a minister or a committee, under section 17—

Mr. David Zimmer: Would you mind just reading out section 17 on the record?

Mr. Jim McCarter: I've got it here. I'll just read out section 17.

"The auditor ... shall perform"—shall perform—"such special assignments as may be required by the assembly, the standing public accounts committee of the assembly, by resolution of the committee, or by a minister of the crown ... but such special assignments shall not take precedence over the other duties of the Auditor General under this act”—that being the Auditor General Act—“and the auditor ... may decline an assignment by a minister of the crown that, in the opinion of the Auditor General, might conflict with the other duties of the Auditor General.”

So my interpretation of that would be—I think I’d agree with Mr. Singh’s interpretation of last week: that I can decline a request by a minister, but if it comes from the public accounts committee, I shall do it. However, it cannot take precedence over the other work of my office. So my interpretation of that is that I would do it, but the timing of when I do it would be largely up to me, depending on the impact that it would have on the other work of my office. That would be my interpretation of that section.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: The other question that we had, which isn’t section 17 per se, is, given that, if the committee makes a request, you shall do it, the question would be: Is it prudent to do it within your normal mandate? Because my sense is, you are always very careful that when you’re doing a value-for-money audit you’re not influencing the outcome of what’s going on; that you’re observing and auditing the result. Whereas in this case, where it’s under active negotiation, some of which may be commercially sensitive, having a special audit could have a very negative influence on commercially sensitive negotiations.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I do hear what you’re saying. My take on that would be, a bit: If that issue is discussed by the committee and the committee is well aware of that and as a whole the committee still goes ahead and passes the motion, I think my sense would be is, if these negotiations were going to take two or three years, I don’t think that if the committee says to me, “Auditor, we want you to do this audit, period,” they pass the motion—I think that I would probably go ahead and do it and I would not wait the two or three years, if the committee passed the motion. I think I would take the direction from the motion.

Having said that, it doesn’t necessarily mean I would start the audit up right away. Often I get asked, “Auditor, if we were to pass the motion, what’s your best take on when you would be able to start the audit?” If I was asked that question, I do always answer that question, and we have discussed that in the office.

M^{me} France G  linas: Can you answer it now?

Mr. Jim McCarter: This would be an audit that we would prefer not to start up right away, the reason being that, of all the times to start up a special audit, it’s probably the worst time, because we’re about two thirds of the way through—we do about 14 or 15 fairly large value-for-money audits each year, and we’re about two thirds of the way through that. We don’t have any spare staff kind of sitting around that I could put on this right away. We would have to pull people off a value-for-money audit.

We did talk about it, and we don’t have a lot of—just for the new members, we don’t have a big office, compared to the other jurisdictions. We run with about 110 people; Quebec’s got 240, BC’s got 130, Alberta’s got 125. We run pretty lean.

What we would have to do on this one, we would either have to cancel a value-for-money audit—basically postpone it and pull all the people off the audit. We think the earliest we could probably start it up, if it were to pass, would be probably sometime in June; we think we could probably wrestle together enough people. And this is one where, again, because we did a fair bit of work in electricity last year, we do have a bit of expertise and background in this area. We would like to get at least one or two of those same people who worked on those audits.

Our best guess right now is, we would probably start this up in late June, unless the committee were to say to me, “Auditor, thank you for that input, but we want this started tomorrow. Get it done.” I would take such a request pretty seriously. But that would be our take, from meeting with my directors yesterday and talking about the timing.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Reza.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Mr. Chair, thanks very much. As far as I understand it, an audit is generally done when an action is completed. So in the middle of an action, an audit, really, in principle, doesn’t make much sense. In this matter, negotiations are still going on between both sides, and the negotiations are very highly sensitive commercial negotiations. So in principle, in my view, it doesn’t make sense to come out and interfere, basically, in the commercial process or negotiations which are going on between the two parties.

Mr. Jim McCarter: There’s a number of challenges in doing this audit. We would probably not have access to—and I also talked to my staff about the challenges we would have in doing an audit of this nature. I’ve got a long list here. We would probably not have access to TransCanada or Greenfield records. We would probably not have access to their staff to talk to them. We might not even have access to the site, to go out and have a look at the site. We don’t know what kind of access we would have from a legal perspective. Ongoing negotiations—often, parties don’t want to talk during ongoing negotiations. There is a list of challenges to doing this audit. We’re certainly aware of the challenges that there would be to do this audit.

But I guess what I’m saying is, having said that, if the committee has a very fulsome discussion of all those challenges and the committee were still to go ahead and say, “We hear all that, Auditor. We still want you to go ahead and do this audit”—I have to be honest. The best way I can put it, and it’s fairly blunt: I probably wouldn’t second-guess that decision, notwithstanding I’m aware that on this particular one, there would be a lot of challenges or roadblocks that would have to be overcome.

It could well be that, at the end of the day, it could prove challenging for us to come up with a best estimate, given that often these sorts of contractual things—sometimes they end up going to court, and the court ends up making a decision.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Toby.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Thank you, Chair. Further to doing an audit when things are completed: As far as the Oakville station, that goes back—the announcement was made in October 2010, so that was a year and a half ago. When is this completed? Is it another year and a half? Is it three years?

As far as I know, you have to juggle other work, and I'm not aware of the magnitude of the work. But what concerns me, and what's out there in the media—the Oakville closure alone has been pegged at $1.2 billion, so people say that this was a $1.2-billion issue. I don't know whether that's accurate or not. I think it's kind of disturbing. Those are big numbers. Maybe it's only $300 million; maybe it's $3 billion. People are asking these questions.

On top of that, we've seen the announcement about closing the Mississauga plant. I haven't visited that plant. I don't know whether that's another billion dollars. Is it half a million? I think of other plants that are closing, generating stations in Sarnia and Nanticoke. I know at Nanticoke, there's well over 600 people who are working there. They are following us very closely. There's an environmental assessment to run a natural gas line down to the Nanticoke plant. Will they be a gas-fired plant? Will that be closed? How much would that cost? Maybe looking at those dollar figures is beyond the mandate of this, but when you've got two projects out there that the word on the street is they're both billion-dollar projects, I'd like to, at minimum, get something a little closer than $1 billion or $1.2 billion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thanks, David?

Mr. David Zimmer: Let me cut to the quick here and just ask the auditor—you know, hit the issue dead-on. I gather, listening to your comments, that what you're saying is that to start such a hearing now as contemplated by the motion would not be particularly effective for the reasons that you've set out because of getting access to information and all of that. Following from that, it would not, by definition, or it would not be particularly thorough—or at least it would be an ongoing struggle to do a thorough one. That, of course, would raise issues of fairness and, in fact, getting all of the relevant facts out in a manner that's fair to everybody: fair to the Legislature, fair to the companies involved, fair to the public. So I gather that—I don't want to put words in your mouth, but I get the sense that, in your professional opinion, it would be premature to tackle this now.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I would think that would be probably taking what I said and maybe going a bit too far. I think my sense would be that if the motion is passed, we will do the work to the best of our ability. Notwithstanding, as some of the members have said, there would be challenges in doing that work, and when it comes to arriving at a best estimate, we may end up with a range. I think that's what I'm saying. Again, I'm not coming down on one side or the other of the motion; I'm just saying that we would go ahead and do it, but there would be challenges in doing the work.

Mr. David Zimmer: Would it be your preference not to do the audit at this time as contemplated in the motion?

Mr. Jim McCarter: I would say that if the committee passed a motion, we would do everything in our power to comply with the committee's wishes, keeping in mind that that motion would not take precedence over the other work of my office as mandated by the Audit Act. That would come first, but certainly, when the committee passes a motion we would take that very seriously.

Mr. David Zimmer: I appreciate that, but would it be your preference that the committee not pass the motion?

Mr. Jim McCarter: I would honestly say that I really have no opinion on that. If the committee passes the motion, the motion's passed, and we'll do what we need to do to try to accommodate the committee. If the committee doesn't pass the motion, we certainly have lots of other work that will keep us busy.

Mr. David Zimmer: But it does present great problems for you?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): France.

Sorry, do you have—

Mr. David Zimmer: Sorry, I'd asked a question. But it does present great problems for you to move to conduct the audit at this time?

Mr. Jim McCarter: There would be certain challenges, as I indicated, associated with doing the work. But, again, I'd have to say, we have challenges on most of our audits. This is one where I think access to information would probably be the key issue until we really get in there and find out what kind of access we're entitled to. That is one thing that comes to mind. But I think you've worked with us fairly closely over the last eight or nine years. We push pretty hard, but sometimes we get pushed back.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. Am I right in thinking that—Interruption.

I'll let you—we have a very busy auditor this morning.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's for sure. He's got a very busy day.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No problem. When you talk about those challenges for access of information, would those challenges be the same as the government? As in, in order for the government to make those decisions, I am guessing that they looked at the financial impact of their decisions. Therefore, they probably went down that path of overcoming those challenges to find out, "What is the price of the decisions that we're making?" Or am I off-base on this?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Well, that would certainly be one of the questions that we would be asking the government ministry that was responsible for this.

M^{me} France G  linas: In this, there's no challenge getting that information.

Mr. Jim McCarter: As far as from the ministry side, as far as getting access to any information that the ministry has, we would have no problem getting access to that information.

M^{me} France G  linas: So the challenges wouldn't be from when the government made the decisions to cancel those deals. I'm assuming they look at the financial impact. That information would be available to you. The challenges come when you try to verify the financials from the players?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Essentially, to give you an example—the gist of this is, often, when you're looking at the cost of a cancellation of a contract, the contract typically has cancellation clauses in it. Very often, there are two or three parts of it. A key part is, what cost has the contractor incurred to date? We're not sure what information the ministry would have on that. The two contractors would certainly have good information on what costs they've incurred to date. But that would be an example of something that if we had access to both sides of the coin, we would go in and say, "What costs have you incurred to date? What costs have you got that you're basically contracted for and you can't get out of?" Often, there are certain go-forward shutdown costs, especially if they've started construction to make the site safe from an environmental perspective etc.; we would be looking at that. Some of that information we may not be able to get access to, I guess, is what I was trying to bring to the committee's attention.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If the committee were to pass the motion telling you to do this, and given that there are ongoing discussions with respect to both the Oakville and the Mississauga plants, would you confer with counsel for the OPA to find out at what point you would be interfering with the outcome? Or if we pass the motion, does that direct you to do the work regardless of whether or not you're interfering with the outcome?

Mr. Jim McCarter: I think my take, just off the top of my head, is that we would certainly be conferring with the people from OPA, with their legal counsel. This is one where I suspect we might engage some outside expertise to assist us, as we often do on these audits. One of those could be a lawyer with expertise in contract law. We would certainly talk to the OPA.

Now, sometimes—I say this a bit tongue-in-cheek—we approach auditees, and they say everything in their power to get us to postpone an audit. So we would listen to what they have to say.

I think the way I might approach this one is that if there was something that we felt was so important that would stop this audit dead in its tracks, and it was a motion that was passed by the committee, I think at that point, I would bring that back to the committee and I would basically say to the committee, "We started this audit. This issue has come up. We think it may have some merit, and I'd like the input of the committee as to"—that could be one thing that I could do: come back to the committee, if it were to come to that.

At the end of the day, we would try to fulfill the wishes of the committee as per the motion, but one of the first things we'd be doing is—we know the people to talk to at OPA. We know all the people there because we did an audit of wind and solar, so we know the people to talk to at the OPA regarding this.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Jagmeet?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you very much. Just to break down some of the information, my understanding is that there would be some elements of the audit which would be information that both parties have access to; for example, something like the brick-and-mortar estimates of what the physical cost of the building is, or the raw material or the labour that's gone in so far. Those things I think both parties, if we look at the government side and the other side, would have access to. Am I right on that?

Mr. Jim McCarter: It's possible. It depends on how the contract is structured. Sometimes the contract could be a cost-plus, in which case they might have more access. Sometimes it might be, basically, "We agree to build this facility to these specifications for $350 million. We're going to progress-bill you $10 million a month for the next 35 months, and if we're over, these are going to be the penalty clauses." It would depend a bit on how the contract was structured, I think.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Then, in these types of circumstances, when you're conducting—I'm assuming that you've conducted audits before where there's been a contract cancellation. In terms of how you deal with the information, is there certain discretion that you would use in terms of what information you'd release? If it's information that one party had that the other party didn't have which might affect the contract negotiation, would you exercise discretion on that component—

Mr. Jim McCarter: The other thing we have here, we expect that the whole issue of client-solicitor privilege could have a significant impact on the work here. The understanding that I have with the Ministry of the Attorney General is, we are entitled to information protected under client-solicitor privilege. However, whether we can publicly report that opinion is another matter.

Essentially, I have access to the information, but often there are certain restrictions on me being able to report it if it's protected by client-solicitor privilege. We expect that that issue could come up on this particular audit, but we don't know the extent.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just kind of summing it up, if you could present perhaps a scenario that if you conduct an audit, how would you be able to release the information? The concern is to figure out how much this is costing taxpayers. Could you think of a way that you would be able to release that information, release an estimate that wouldn't negatively impact the actual ne-negotiations but would still give a sense of how much money's being spent?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Off the top of my head, often on these two things you've got the one party saying, "We think this is what the costs are. This is what the cancellation is. This is our interpretation of the cancellation clauses." You've got the other side of the coin where they're basically saying, "No, no, this is our interpretation of what the cancellation costs are. This is what it is." Generally, you're at a range between this and this, and usually they'll come to a mutual understanding, basically a compromise. Sometimes, as I'm sure you're aware, it goes to court and the court makes a decision on what the right amount would be.

Basically, what the committee is saying to us, unless they've reached that agreement or they're pretty close, we might be in the situation where we'd be looking at providing a range, but I suspect it could be difficult to land on one number—saying it's $342 million or it's $17 million. Without doing any work, off the top of my head, that would be my best guess.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Reza?

Mr. Reza Moridi: Mr. Chair, as I indicated earlier, I think it is very, very premature for us, at this point, to ask the Attorney General to audit this situation. It doesn't make sense.

As the auditor just explained, this is a very complicated project. There's a contract here that was cancelled, so there are cancellation clauses in the contract—as in many, many contracts there are clauses for cancellation—and we have to let this negotiation continue between both sides. Once both sides come to a conclusion, at that point we may ask the Attorney General to go there, review and audit the processes and then come and tell us what happened.

Now, in the middle of negotiations, what are we asking the Attorney General to audit for? What are we going to ask the Attorney General to audit for? There hasn't been any conclusion between both sides. Once both parties, the contractor and the contractee, if they come to a conclusion and make a decision, at that point we may ask the Attorney General to go there and audit the situation and then come back and report to us and say, "Okay, that's the value-for-money audit I have done."

Now, in the middle of negotiations between both sides, I don't know what the auditor can audit for us at this point.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): David?

Mr. David Zimmer: Mr. Auditor, how would you handle this, hypothetically, if you were doing the audit? You get into the audit, you're looking at things and one of the parties to the contract, the government side, one of the private contractors or the utility and so forth says to you, "Mr. Auditor, we'd really like to co-operate with you fully and share all the information and so on, but we are on the cusp of a very delicate negotiation with various parties, and we just can't respect our fiduciary relationship to the parties we're representing in the negotiation and, at the same time, at this time, share this information with you, because it may do one of two things: It may place us, the party that's raising this issue, in a terrible conflict of interest" vis-à-vis their obligations to get the best deal for their side, and it could well place you, in their opinion, in a conflict-of-interest position because, depending on how you manage or interpret or use that information, you have the ability—almost inadvertently—to affect the negotiation one way or the other.

How would you handle that situation? It's premised on the various parties dealing with you in good faith. That's their dilemma.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I would not be surprised to see that situation arise, especially with respect to the two external parties, Greenfield and TransCanada, who would probably say, "Our primary responsibility is our fiduciary interest toward our shareholders, and consequently it's not in the best interests of our shareholders to provide or share any information with you. We're under no legal obligation to do so. Consequently, unfortunately, as much as we would like to help you out, it's not in the best interests of our shareholders. Therefore, we cannot share information with you whatsoever."

The ministry would be in a more difficult position with respect to that, because I think they'd be required to share information with us. Their concern would probably be, "Just don't disclose anything, Auditor, that might jeopardize us paying the least amount of cancellation charges that we can pay." Notwithstanding, I think the ministry would have to provide us with full and complete access to whatever information they have, although I suspect they would also say that some of this is protected by client-solicitor information.

Mr. David Zimmer: So my follow-up: If you got into that stalemated discussion—they say, "We can't give you the information. It's not that we don't want to co-operate, but we've got other fiduciary"—and so forth and so on. Then, in terms of fulfilling your professional obligations as an Auditor General, where does that leave you? Where do you go?

Mr. Jim McCarter: I think my feeling would be, based on what information I can get from the ministry, from other parties or from consulting with experts, even on what similar penalty clauses could be on similar situations, getting that sort of outside expert advice, I think I would try to come forward with a report which would give the best estimate that I could with respect to the information that I was able to obtain. If there was any caveat where I was not able to obtain information and the impact that that would have, I would set that out very clearly in the report, making that clear to the reader. That is probably how I would report it.

Mr. David Zimmer: But then wouldn't that water down the report? You give a report and say, "Here's my report, with this caveat. It, in effect, is not a full and complete report because I was unable to get this sort of information.” Really, it waters down the objective value of the report.

Mr. Jim McCarter: The best way that I could put it would be that the better and more access to information I can get, the better my estimate on the possible cancellation charges would be. So the better the information I get, the better the estimate I’m going to be able to make, is the best way I can put it.

Mr. David Zimmer: And that would be fair to all the parties, to have that full information and the full report out.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I would leave that up to the committee to make that decision, in their consideration of the motion.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you, Mr. Auditor.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. Toby is next.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Yes. As we’ve discussed, the issue is complex. I know that the interest is there, obviously. On this committee, we’ve spent a couple of meetings on this. I don’t know how the vote is going to go. Regardless of the vote, this may come up later, on this committee or somewhere else.

Being new to this committee, I don’t even have the basic information to do much of the discussion on that. Is it appropriate—this isn’t a question to the Auditor General but to the committee—to ask legislative research to put together, at minimum, a thumbnail sketch, even several pages, on this issue? We may well end up talking about this in the future, recognizing that we spent a couple of meetings on it already. I know people in Ontario are—certainly Oakville and Mississauga. I assume there was an awful lot of discussion about it there, and across the province of Ontario.

This is directly, indirectly related to the price of electricity, which is top of mind. I know in the Legislature, there were at least 19 questions from the opposition about the Mississauga plant alone. So for me it would be useful to have even a two- or three-page thumbnail sketch on what’s going down there. I mean, I can rely on the Toronto Star or I could Google it, I suppose, or do library research on my own, but I just throw that out if that would be useful for the committee. At least we’ve got—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I just ask our legislative research, Ray, to respond.

Mr. Toby Barrett: And I’m not saying we need it right away, but—

Mr. Ray McLellan: As the auditor has said, we’ll certainly undertake to do what the committee requires and what the committee wants. As I was listening to the auditor, I certainly appreciate the limitations and the challenges that he’s outlining, but I could speak with the auditor and perhaps develop a focus as to sources I could get information from and certainly proceed. So I will undertake it, if that’s the committee’s desire, to assemble what information I can above and beyond, as you were saying, just press articles, which really—you need more than that. But as I say, I’ll see what my limitations are in terms of what’s in the public domain.

Mr. Toby Barrett: My request is not urgent, unless this is on the agenda again. We’d probably need it before then. But it’s not an urgent request.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I would just ask if it’s the committee’s wish to have research do this. Did you want to defer the motion until you get this research done? Jagmeet?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I had a couple of questions that might assist, maybe, in coming to a decision. One is that—maybe the Auditor General would be able to provide some insight into this. Both sides would know—say, if there is a negotiation going on, both sides would know what the other side is asking for. So, for example, the government side would know that the private company is saying that this is going to cost them $1 billion, and they’ve put it out there. That’s not any secret information. They would know that, the government side. The private side would know that the government is saying, “No, no; it’s actually only $500 million we’re going to pay you.” That wouldn’t be a secret to the other side; that’s their ask.

Now, what the actual cost is, that might be a secret in terms of the actual cost for the private company. They might say, “You know, it’s actually costing us only $700 million. We’re asking for the $1 billion because we need to make more money.” Sure; we don’t know about that. On the other side, the government might have spent—it might have been less of a loss for them. They might be able to recover some of the material, so that might be something that might be damaging.

My question to you, Auditor General, is, in your opinion, would it be damaging to disclose at least what both sides are asking in terms of what they think the cost is? Also, what we can objectively determine in terms of cost: We can look at the building and say, “The fair market value of that building is about this much. The movable equipment in that building is about this much.” Those things are pretty objective, and anyone—you know, it’s not really any secret. I mean, you can go to the building and look at it and assess how much it’s worth. I don’t see how that would impact any negotiations. I’m wondering: What’s your opinion on that?

Mr. Jim McCarter: I suspect if, once we go in and we were to ask for that information, that may very well be the case. But often, on these sorts of things, you get the two sides in-house both thinking that we’re going to end up between here and here. When it comes to negotiating, often when they go to the other party, they say, “We want this,” and the other party says, “Well, we think it should be this.” So you could very well end up with quite a wide range.

I think the focus of our work would be, the way I see it off the top of my head, trying to do additional work to try to provide more information to the committee and saying, “You know, we’re not experts. We suspect that it’s going to end up someplace in and around this range”; that would be off the top of my head. It could be that sort of thing: They both start off way out here, and it would be our job to sort of consult experts, to look at what documentation we could, and to try to come down to here to be able to provide the committee with maybe a bit better estimate. That would be my off-the-top-of-the-head observation.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, thank you. And just one last area would be, what would—I mean, our goal is to ascertain how much the government has spent, really. So if we did an assessment of how much money was spent in terms of taxpayer dollars, the report is presented to this committee and then we make an assessment in terms of how much of that we can disclose, how does that scenario play out or has that played out?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Once we present it to the committee or it's tabled in the Legislature, it's public information, so as far as what can be disclosed, once it's in a report that we released, it's out there in the public forum.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If I can, at this point, just point out that we do have limited time this morning and one of the other pieces of business that we need to discuss, with the Auditor General's report coming out today on Ornge, is our upcoming meetings to do with Ornge and to decide on the witnesses that we'd like to call. So I'd just make the committee aware of that so that we don't have what happened last week, which is, we run out of time and I'm forced to call us all to a meeting that interferes with all your schedules. So if we can either come to the point of voting on this motion, or if it's the committee's wish to defer the motion until legislative research does more research, I'd like the advice of the committee. Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm quite happy if we defer it. I think the auditor has indicated that he couldn't get to it until June anyway, so that would give legislative research some time to put things together and we can schedule some time to discuss a deferred motion when we're not trying to deal with Ornge and other things. So I'm happy to support Mr. Barrett's idea.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: At the base of my request is that significant decisions were made by the government that had significant financial implications for the taxpayers of Ontario. Projects that we can see on the ground have started, have been cancelled. When those decisions were made, they have to have taken financial consideration into account, otherwise a government would be completely incompetent if they hadn't. That part of the equation comes from the government and is completely accessible to the auditor. In a show of goodwill, I will go along with what Liz and Toby have said, that we refer to legislative research to get us more information on this topic, with a view of really—the money that has already been spent should be the type of information that legislative research is able to put in a briefing.

If any information can come from the government as to—when you made your decisions, what was the range of financial implications you looked at? Those are certainly the types of questions that prompted me to bring this motion forward. So I want to show goodwill. I see that Liz has proposed that we postpone—sorry, the Liberals have proposed that we postpone, and so has the PC Party. I'll show goodwill and I'll agree to, do we suspend the motion or whatever, until legislative research can give us more information.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, so you're willing to defer the motion?

M^{me} France Gélinas: It's called a deferral? Absolutely. I will defer. Do I just withdraw and reintroduce it later?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): No. Like we did at the last meeting, it would just be deferred until legislative research and the auditor's office can talk about preparing this background paper for the committee, if that's the agreement on the committee, just for his research, for the two-page paper.

Interjection.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Yes, legislative research—Ray. So if that's the agreement of the committee, then would you want to add anything to that?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, I agree. I just have one other question.

Mr. Ray McLellan: I'll undertake to do this, on the committee's instruction. With respect to a timeline, we would want to have this information back to the committee by—today is the 21st of March. When would you like it back? Obviously, as soon as possible.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: When we end Ornge hearings?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I would say, see how hard it is to pull information together and get back to us. I'd rather you do a thorough job than a rushed job. I'm quite willing to give you the time it takes for legislative research to be able to access documents from the government to see how much has been spent, how much has been considered, etc., so how about we leave it up to you to tell us how much time you need to do that?

Mr. Ray McLellan: On that note, then, I'll undertake this right away and, as soon as the information is assembled, to report back, so: as quickly as I can do it.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How about we say—I would like it before mid-May so that it gives us time to deal with it again before the House recesses.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: September doesn't work for you?

M^{me} France Gélinas: No, September doesn't work. So how about we put a deadline of mid-May? If you can report sooner, great; if you can't, we understand.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Do we have agreement of the committee to defer this? All in favour? Okay.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Chair, just one request: I suspect that all parties are going to be interested in the Hansard, and it often takes a long time to get the Hansard for committees, so if there's any way that we can get the Hansard of at least this part of the meeting quickly, that's probably helpful to everyone.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. The clerk will put in a request to do so.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The other thing we have to discuss is: We have upcoming meetings to do with the Ornge report of the Auditor General scheduled for March 28, April 4 and April 18. So far, we have the deputy minister and Mr. Ron McKerlie being asked to come before the committee, and that's agreed by the committee. So I'm looking for, from the three parties, suggestions of who else you would like the clerk to ask to come before the committee. If you don't have a complete list or if you aren't ready to do that at this point, we can do that in subcommittee as well.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I have my list.

Mr. Toby Barrett: We're still working on our list, Chair. If it was more appropriate—ideally not a subcommittee meeting today, but down the road, to present some other names.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): But we'll have the deputy minister and Mr. McKerlie for March 28.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Can we come up with some sort of ground rules in terms of, each party gets the same number of invites or how long we're going to invite people to come for, that sort of thing?

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The clerk informs me that that would be helpful for him.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yeah, because if we're going to schedule this—so I guess the first suggestion I'll put on the table would be that I'm not sure what the number is but that each party gets the same number of witnesses.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, and of course, we may not be able to get all the witnesses that are on the list to actually—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And if that were the case, if we asked to have somebody invited, that you come back to that party and ask them for a replacement suggestion, if somebody that we've asked for is unavailable.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's a good question. Does the committee have any idea how long you would like the deputy minister and Mr. McKerlie before the committee? Yes, France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: For me, the deputy minister, a little bit at the beginning, not that much; and then, once I've talked to some of the other witnesses, I will probably want to talk to him again. As far as Mr. McKerlie, not a whole lot. He was not there during the scandal.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Jerry?

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Thank you, Chair. Until all the questions are answered.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Given that the deputy was there as things were unfolding and that Mr. McKerlie is responsible for fixing things and the auditor's report is partly, presumably, as usual, "Here's what's wrong and here's what you should do to fix it," what you're doing to fix it is traditionally a big part, so I think we do want the deputy and whoever he brings and Mr. McKerlie here to answer questions thoroughly.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So we'll start with that on March 28. Of this proposed list from each party, how many would you like on that list? France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'm looking at people like Chris Mazza. I'm looking at people like Jamison Steeve. I'm looking at people like Tom Lepine and Alfred Apps. I'm looking at maybe bringing forward George Smitherman, who was there when this all started; Lynne Golding; I'm looking at maybe Scott Rettig and Jeremy Tracy from AgustaWestland. I'm looking at a large list of witnesses. I mean, they cast a heck of a web, and I'm interested in people on every side of that web. I did not control the size of this scandal; they did. I want to talk to them all.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So, to get back to the question, how many people would you like to be able to put on your list?

M^{me} France Gélinas: So far on my list I have one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, 10, 11, 12, 13.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thirteen.

Realistically, right now we have three days set aside for the meetings, so I would assume that there is going to be someone on the list you've just recited that we won't be able to get, for various reasons. If they're not in the country, for example, it might be one of the reasons.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Mr. Chair, I wonder if somebody could do the math, because my sense is, if we all invite 13 people, even if some of them can't show up we're talking like 35 people. I'm not sure how we're going to fit 35 people into this. So I'm not sure 13 is the right standard if they're actually going to have any time to testify.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Toby?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'm hoping there's overlap.

Mr. Toby Barrett: I was going to say, just further to the math: I'm pretty sure there'll be some overlap.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, so we still haven't come up with a number. Do we want to—

M^{me} France Gélinas: I don't think that working on a number is useful. This is an important issue. I think it will be more—I want to give you as much heads up to try to get a hold of some of those people who, as you say, may be all over the world or not necessarily available on our time schedule. But at least I'm looking at ADMs that have been there. If I cannot get them all, maybe we'll get one of them. I'm looking at people at Agusta. If we cannot get them all, maybe we'll get one. I'm looking at the previous Minister of Health. If we cannot get Smitherman, maybe Caplan; maybe we'll get one. The idea is really to give you the list as soon as possible so you can start to call those people to see who we can bring in front of the committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, what I'm not hearing, then, is: Does each party not get an equal number of witnesses? I understand that when we sit down there may be significant overlap between the Conservatives' list and the NDP list, but—

M^{me} France Gélinas: We've never done that in the past.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We've never done this in the past, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: The NDP has never insisted that we have the same number as everybody else. We will bring forward the number that's required to go to the bottom.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. So, I think maybe we should have a subcommittee meeting as soon as possible to try to hash this out. It would make sense.

Will wants to advise on the schedule.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): So going forward, on March 28, then, by past practice of the committee the auditor would come in from 9:30 until 10:25 to give his briefing in camera. Then in the afternoon on that day, we would invite the Deputy Minister of Health and Mr. McKerlie to show up for questions and answers from 12:30 until 3. Then, if we could have a subcommittee meeting well before the 28th to discuss all of the other names and invitations that we'd like to go over, that would be fantastic. Does that work for the committee?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Why don't we start at 9? Why do we start at 9:30?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Sorry—

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Go ahead, Jim.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Auditor?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Usually, in the past, the auditor's briefing has been from 9:30 to 10:30, but we can certainly start at 9 if you'd like.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Nine is good.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Well, I think that, based on how long our meetings have been, we'll start at 9 then.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, that settles that for now.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): At this time, the clerk informs me that we do have education scheduled for April 25. That's section 4.07 of literacy and numeracy public hearings, just for the information of the committee.

So we'll call a subcommittee meeting to deal with the rest of it and we'll adjourn this meeting.

The committee adjourned at 0950.

The committee met at 1233 in committee room 1, following a closed session.

SPECIAL REPORT, AUDITOR GENERAL:
ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE
AND RELATED SERVICES

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'd like to call the public accounts committee to order for consideration of the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services.

There are a couple of points I'd like to make to begin with. First of all, the committee did agree that witnesses appearing before the committee be given an oath of witness or affirmation by the committee clerk. That does not apply to the minister.

Also, for the media present, if you can restrain yourselves from taking pictures of the material on the tables—some of it may be confidential. So please do not be filming documents on the tables.

The committee wasn't expecting the minister to be here until 2, but I've been informed the minister is going to be here for the entire afternoon, from now through until 3 o'clock. So thank you to the minister.

The deputy minister is here. Maybe we could get the people before us to introduce themselves, and then we'll start.

Yes, Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Just a housekeeping item: We received a copy of the amended performance agreement. Unfortunately, the amended agreement does not indicate where the amendments are. Just to save some time so that research can get on this for us, I would ask that we get the amended agreement that clearly shows where the amendments were made to the original agreement.

Interjection.

Mr. Frank Klees: The question is, from Ms. Gélinas, when did I receive it? Actually, I just got this five minutes ago, and I was told that it had been distributed to all members of the committee. The Auditor General says he hasn't seen it, so I'm not sure what's happened here, but there are two things. One is that we should have had this. Let's get it to the members of the committee—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees, I understand it was in the research background material that was prepared by Mr. McLellan and distributed to the members of the committee.

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand that. Second, I would also ask—and I think it would be helpful for all members—to receive a copy of the original agreement. The reason for that is that it becomes relevant to the deliberations we're going to have over the next number of weeks in terms of what the ministry was responsible for under the terms of the original agreement compared to the current amendments, because I think what we'll see is that there's not much difference. So I would ask that all members receive a copy of that original agreement as well.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well, Mr. Klees. The clerk will look after getting a copy of the original performance agreement for all members.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH AND LONG-TERM CARE

ORNGE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I guess we could get introductions, please, and then we'll do the oath and affirmation.

Mr. Saäd Rafi: Thank you, Chair. My name is Saäd Rafi, and I'm the Deputy Minister of Health and Long-Term Care. On my immediate right is Patricia Li, the assistant deputy minister of the direct services division that oversees the emergency health services branch; and also to my right, behind me, is Malcolm Bates, who is the director of that emergency health services branch—oh, sorry. The gentleman here with the glasses, third from the left, is Malcolm Bates, director of the emergency health services branch; and of course, to my far right is Ron McKerlie, the interim president and CEO of Ornge air ambulance.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. We'll start with the oath of affirmation. Clerk?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): We'll start with Mr. Rafi. Mr. Rafi, could you just raise your hand?

Do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. Saäd Rafi: Yes.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Ms. Li, you're going to be affirmed, as well? Raise your hand. Thank you.

Do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Ms. Patricia Li: Yes.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you. Mr. McKerlie, you wanted to swear an oath, I think—or do you want to be affirmed?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: I'd swear the oath.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Okay. The Bible is right there. We'll do Mr. McKerlie and then we'll do Mr. Bates.

Mr. McKerlie, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: So help me God.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Bates, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to the committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Interjection.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I believe we have time for an opening statement of no more than 20 minutes, and then we'll have 20-minute rotations and questions throughout the three parties.

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Well, thank you very much. Good afternoon. I want to say thank you for this opportunity to speak to the Auditor General's report on our air ambulance services.

I want to again thank the Auditor General and his staff for their work and advice. As always, the Auditor General has completed a thorough and insightful review. He has put forward a number of specific recommendations to improve oversight, accountability and, above all, patient safety at Ornge. Many of these recommendations have already been implemented, and I can assure members of this committee that we will act on every recommendation in the Auditor General's report.

I have had the opportunity to meet many of the paramedics, staff and pilots at Ornge. I have been very impressed by their work, often under very challenging circumstances, saving lives every day. I can tell you that they are fully committed to providing the best possible care to Ontario patients, and I am just as committed to supporting them. That is why I have taken quick and decisive action to fix those problems raised by the Auditor General, to ensure that we have a high-quality air ambulance system that is there for patients in their time of greatest need.

Pointed questions have been raised by members of the Legislature about my handling of this situation. I want to take a few minutes to walk committee members through the timeline of events that demonstrate I took action immediately upon learning of problems at Ornge.

In October 2010, the Auditor General announced his value-for-money audit of Ornge. That work continued until the release of his final report on March 21 of this year.

On January 24, 2011, Ornge's former leadership and their legal team met with my ministry and members of my staff to discuss their new structure and business venture. Many of the changes had already taken place at the time of that meeting. Ornge's leadership and legal counsel gave clear and unequivocal assurances that no public funds would be used for their private endeavours. They also assured us that there would be no impact to the services they provide to the province of Ontario. Indeed, they submitted that up to $200 million could flow back to Ontario's air ambulance service to fill what they called "service gaps" in the public air ambulance system.

I understand that Ornge also informed PC and NDP leaders, health critics, and members of their caucus of these changes.

In April, three questions regarding Ornge were asked in question period by the member from Newmarket–Aurora. When these questions were asked, I knew that the Auditor General was doing his work and that we would be provided with objective recommendations in his report. All issues related to Ornge were forwarded to the Auditor General.

On October 20, I was reappointed as Minister of Health and Long-Term Care. There were a number of issues that required my attention, Ornge being one of them, given that a draft auditor's report had been received by my ministry.

One week after being reappointed as Minister of Health, on October 27, I became aware of a number of issues that were being raised by the Auditor General in regard to his ongoing audit at Ornge.

I instructed by ministry to do an analysis of all available options to address the initial concerns that had come to light. It became very clear that the options were limited. The original performance agreement with Ornge did not give us the tools we needed to address these concerns. I could not, for example, appoint a supervisor the way I could in a hospital, nor could I make changes to that performance agreement without the approval of Ornge's board of directors. Further, because Ornge was a federally incorporated charity, legislative options were not available.

On December 1, I met with the auditor to discuss other chapters in his annual report, specifically on physician payment models. At that time, he informed me that the Ornge audit would not be complete in time for his annual report.

On December 5, Ms. Horwath asked a question in the Legislature about executive compensation, specifically asking why it was not being disclosed. I followed up with a briefing on that issue, and on December 8, a letter was sent to Ornge asking for detailed information on compensation, demanding that they disclose executive salaries from the private side of their business.

Around the same time, I learned that the Auditor General was being stonewalled by Ornge—that they were being very uncooperative. I then spoke directly with the Auditor General, and he confirmed to me that he was not getting the information he needed to complete his review. I also asked the auditor to confirm that salary disclosure was a subject of his audit, as concerns about Ornge's compliance with public sector salary disclosure were being raised.

On December 15, I met with senior executives at Ornge: then-COO Tom Lepine and then-board chair Rainer Beltzner. I demanded that they disclose executive salaries and co-operate with the requests from the Auditor General and from the ministry.

On December 19, I sent a letter to Ornge clarifying the purpose and substance of our meeting, in response to a statement released by Ornge that misrepresented the content of our meeting. Two days later, Ornge did disclose the compensation of senior executives to my ministry and revealed particularly outrageous compensation being paid to then-CEO Chris Mazza. That was when I knew something was seriously wrong—that I could not wait for the Auditor General's final report, and that I had to step in immediately.

The next day, December 22, I directed my ministry to inform Ornge that we were sending in the Ministry of Finance's forensic audit team to follow the public dollars. That team got to work immediately: They began the very next day, December 23.

It was at this time that I began to accelerate our plans to make changes at Ornge in a way that would not adversely affect patient safety or interrupt service. We had neither the Auditor General's final report nor the tools that could compel the Ornge board to comply with government directives. However, pressure on Ornge was growing—pressure from the Auditor General, pressure from the ministry and pressure from the media.

On January 11, 2012, the board of directors at Ornge signalled their intention to resign, and I recommended the appointment of an interim CEO, Ron McKerlie. A blue-chip, volunteer, new board of directors was recommended for appointment on January 25, led by board chair Ian Delaney.

The new leadership was directed to report back to me on issues of patient safety, the use of public dollars and the development of a new performance agreement. The new leadership immediately began the process of winding down the for-profit entities at Ornge, as per my direction.

On February 16, I received a report from the forensic auditors revealing serious financial irregularities at Ornge. It was at that time that the matter was referred to the Ontario Provincial Police for investigation.

Ornge is now on the right path forward, but there were serious problems under the former leadership. As the auditor notes, we have already taken substantive action to address many of the issues raised in this report.

I want to thank the new leadership at Ornge. They have already made tremendous progress on their core mission of providing life-saving care to Ontario patients. They have my full confidence.

A new performance agreement is now in place that will ensure greater oversight, transparency and accountability moving forward. This amended performance agreement will safeguard patient care and provide better value for taxpayer dollars.

Legislative changes to the Ambulance Act have already been introduced that, if passed, would protect whistle-blowers and prevent future abuses of power at Ornge. In addition, these amendments will allow the government to take control of Ornge in extraordinary circumstances through the appointment of a supervisor.

As minister, I take my full share of responsibility for what transpired. It is important that we all learn lessons from this situation. I am fully committed to fixing the problems so they will not happen again. We didn't get this perfect, but I believe the public expects that when we don't get it right, we move quickly to take strong and substantial action at our first available opportunity. That's exactly what I did. In the eight weeks from October 27 to December 22, I went from becoming aware of a draft auditor's report to sending in a forensic audit team. Three weeks after that, a new interim CEO was in place. Two weeks later, a strong, new board was in place.

I am committed to implementing every single one of the auditor's recommendations to restore public confidence at Ornge. We know there is much more to do as we continue to rebuild Ornge. Our front-line staff deserve no less and, most of all, the public deserves no less.

I am now going to pass over to my deputy minister, Saäd Rafi.

Mr. Saäd Rafi: Thank you, and good afternoon. Thanks for this opportunity to address the Standing Committee on Public Accounts with respect to the Auditor General's report entitled Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services.

Let me start by stating at the outset that the ministry and I also greatly appreciate the Auditor General's analysis, and let me assure the committee that the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care is in the process of taking action to address each of the Auditor General's recommendations.

Today, I'd like to provide the context and history of air and land ambulance services. I'd like to step back a little and look at how the delivery of air ambulance service and the transfer of responsibility to what ultimately came—

Interjection.

Mr. David Zimmer: Excuse me, is the report being distributed now? Just give—

Mr. Saäd Rafi: Certainly. My apologies.

Context, as they say, is everything. In the context of all that has gone before, I firmly believe that the ministry is now on the right track in working with Ornge's leadership to strengthen accountability, oversight and transparency at Ornge, and most importantly, the safe and effective transportation of patients.

Since their creation in 1977, air ambulance services in Ontario have undergone a number of enhancements and extended the service across the entire province. In essence, the service had three main elements: funding, dispatch and oversight provided by the ministry; a base hospital system at Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre, which oversaw the practise of paramedicine; and air ambulance services, both helicopter and fixed-wing, that were contracted out.

A not-for-profit entity called the Ontario Air Ambulance Services Co., or OAASC, was incorporated on October 8, 2004, under the federal Canada Corporations Act. In November 2005, a long-term performance agreement was entered into for the provision of air ambulance services between OAASC and the ministry. The performance agreement had an indefinite term and it governed all aspects of air ambulance services, including the performance standards to which Ornge is subject and the level of government funding.

For additional background, I want to turn briefly to the legislation and accountability mechanisms that govern air ambulance services in Ontario. Both land and air ambulance services are governed by the Ambulance Act and regulations and standards made under the act. The act sets out the responsibilities and expectations of the minister and other parties related to the delivery of land and air ambulance-related services. The government provides Ornge with funding through a contractual agreement to deliver air ambulance services as part of the minister's obligation under the act to fund and ensure the provision of air ambulance service. The province also provides Ornge with funding to operate critical care land ambulance services.

In 2011-12, the total combined funding for Ornge was over $152 million. Currently, Ornge employs a total of some 600 staff approximately, including paramedics, dispatch personnel, pilots, managers and executives.

I would like to emphasize that the government contracts with Ornge to deliver critical care land and air ambulance services and that this is governed, as I mentioned earlier, through the performance agreement. The government did not appoint the previous board of directors; it recommended the current board.

However, it must be noted that Ornge is an independently governed entity. It is not an agency of government, nor a crown corporation, nor any other extension of the government. At this juncture, it is a not-for-profit corporation governed by the Canada Corporations Act that operates as an independent undertaking.

Now let me turn to the more recent past: the matter of Ornge's private sector structure and business enterprises. In January 2011, the Ornge board sent a letter to the ministry, followed by a presentation which outlined a new corporate structure along with new profit-making business ventures. The letter was positioned as due diligence on the part of Ornge to "keep its principal stakeholder, the government of Ontario, fully informed about developments in its operations."

As I mentioned earlier, Ornge's obligations to the government are through its non-profit, charitable organization, governed through the performance agreement, which provides critical care and land ambulance services.

That characterization of the relationship between Ornge and the government is just one among a number of other confounding elements:

First, Ornge is a federally incorporated registered charity. That means that the provincial government has no powers to create laws that would affect its corporate governance or corporate structure.

Second, by the time it was presented to the ministry, the plan to create the new business structure and enter into new business ventures had already been approved by the Ornge board. For example, "Ornge is seeking nothing from the government except to make it aware of what it has done and is intending to do."

Since these for-profit activities were outside the ministry's contractual nexus with Ornge, there was no legal mechanism for intervention. In addition, since the ministry was told that these for-profit activities would not impact the services provided under the performance agreement, there was no reason to believe that such intervention was required.

Indeed, there were numerous assurances provided in the letter from the chair, Mr. Rainer Beltzner, qualified as a fellow of the chartered accountants and a director of the Institute of Corporate Directors, to the effect that: "The board has been particularly mindful of its fiduciary obligations to Ornge and its stakeholders in considering the issues raised by the new structure. Of special note is the fact that in addition to advice from its own legal and accounting advisors, the board received independent legal counsel as well."

Further, Mr. Beltzner goes on to state, "Ornge is currently seeking nothing from the government, save and except the opportunity to inform its principal stakeholder.... Ornge is not seeking ... any decision of the government."

I can assure you that probing questions were asked during the presentation. The ministry's concern was the possible blurring of the lines between public funding and private enterprise. The ministry's interests were, and remain, to ensure that there was no risk to public funds in the proposal to create a new business structure, one arm of which would continue to receive government funding for its core business of providing air and critical land ambulance services. Ornge representatives gave clear and unequivocal assurances to the ministry that the board had consulted leading legal, financial, credit rating and accounting firms, and was advised that its decisions were legitimate, above board and permissible under existing legislation, its corporate structure and the performance agreement with the ministry. The Ornge representatives also indicated that no public funds would be used in the new business venture of the for-profit enterprises and, in addition, promised a return on investment to the province for its funding to the not-for-profit side of the provision of air ambulance services.

For example, on page 2 of the same letter, the chair indicated that, “Ornge’s pursuit of the new business ventures is being funded entirely with monies advanced as debt or equity by third parties, and is not being funded by monies advanced by the government.”

Furthermore, the ministry was told that there would be no conflicts of interest in the management agreement between Ornge and Ornge Global GP Inc., the for-profit entity.

Considering the assurances provided by the eminent chair, Mr. Rainer Beltzner, on behalf of the board of directors; the assurances of no conflict of interest and no use of public funds; and the diligence of several leading advisory firms, the ministry saw no reason to doubt Ornge’s assurances.

I should add that following the presentation, the ministry did analyze a number of issues, including the potential impact of Ornge’s new business ventures on the provision of air and critical land ambulance services, which is our core responsibility; compliance with the performance agreement; and the impact on the province’s finances. The analysis concluded that Ornge was able to undertake this restructuring under the terms of the existing performance agreement.

Further analysis indicated that the ministry had no remedies to prevent the creation of this corporate structure should it want to, except to halt all funding, which would put patients at risk. Other options were to get Ornge to agree to renegotiate the performance agreement, which was deemed unlikely, or to continue to monitor the delivery of the core services to see if this structure had any impact on the provision of those core services. Furthermore, as I mentioned earlier, Ornge is federally incorporated; hence, it was not possible for Ontario to enact legislation affecting Ornge’s corporate governance.

It wasn’t until the Auditor General told the ministry that Ornge was being uncooperative regarding the private side of their corporation that it started to emerge that there were some private sector business issues at play.

Hindsight is perfect vision, and in hindsight, it is tempting to say that the original performance agreement should have been drafted in a way that would have prevented the alleged abuses that occurred later. But frankly, Ornge’s leadership’s apparent promotion of private interests over public interests was unforeseeable. No one could have imagined when the performance agreement was drafted that measures would have to be built in to stop the leadership from apparently ignoring its fiduciary responsibilities and possibly using public funds for their own private interests.

For my part, in conclusion, I would like to assure the committee that the ministry is fully committed to strengthening Ontario’s air ambulance service so that it operates with the public interest—and patients’ interests—solely in mind. We are also committed to implementing the Auditor General’s report recommendations.

The report’s analysis and recommendations will go a long way to help the ministry achieve that goal.

I also want to thank the new leadership at Ornge, led by interim CEO Ron McKerlie and the board chair, Ian Delaney, who have already made tremendous progress to resolve the issues at Ornge.

Ontarians are fortunate to have front-line pilots, paramedics and staff at Ornge whose exemplary work continually puts patient care first. The ministry has every confidence in their dedication, commitment and professionalism.

Thank you for your attention, and we’d be pleased to answer your questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Minister and Deputy Minister, for your presentations.

The format now will be that we’ll have 20-minute rounds of questions, starting with the official opposition and going through the three parties.

Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Mr. Chair—

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Is it possible to speak some statements into the record that may be helpful, from Ornge’s perspective, in terms of answering some of the questions?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): How long of a statement do you have? We won’t cut into your time, other than—

Mr. Ron McKerlie: I promise I will speak as quickly as I can.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): How long are you asking for?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: If I could have five or six minutes, that’d be perfect.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Is that agreed by the committee, to give Mr. McKerlie five minutes?

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, I would prefer to get on with the questioning. Mr. McKerlie can have some time later, and we’ll have some questions for him as well.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So it’s not agreed by the committee—

Mr. Frank Klees: That was the agreed format.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): —to give five or six minutes. Okay, then, we’ll start with the questioning. Sorry, Mr. McKerlie.

Go ahead, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: I’d like to start, Mr. Rafi, by asking you to clarify for me why, in your presentation, you tell us at length about why the ministry had no authority to intervene, and yet the ministry intervened very aggressively. What changed that allowed the ministry to intervene, once the minister decided to do so, from the previous set of circumstances? You had no more authority under the performance agreement to do so. No one gave you any more latitude. Your excuse—and I’m sorry to use that, but it is that—to not take action under the authority that you had under the existing performance agreement, which we both have read, I assume, that clearly gave the ministry not only authority to intervene in terms of oversight and to hold Ornge accountable to performance levels and standards—the ministry refused to do that. What changed from the time that the minister said she had no authority to your very aggressive intervention?

Mr. Saād Rafi: The ministry has always had an authority to audit Ornge, so the minister was well within her bounds to call for auditors, that turned into forensic investigators, to go in in December.

But the direct answer to your question is: the voluntary resignation of the board. Absent that, we still would not have been able to affect Ornge's structure, either through the performance agreement—and we definitely were not able to affect Ornge's corporate structure, the for-profit side, through the performance agreement.

We did exercise our oversight capacity on the performance level standards—the term you used—within the performance agreement throughout the time that we've had this performance agreement in place, and we continue to do so today.

Mr. Frank Klees: So in other words, until such time as you went to Ornge and asked the board for their co-operation, the ministry took no initiative to do so. That could well have taken place much earlier, once there was a signal—in fact, there was a signal. If the minister didn't want to listen to members of the Legislature who raised these concerns as early as April, and if the minister had at least listened to the auditor's draft report, that should have given rise; why wait until—actually, it was about three months later. Why would the ministry not have taken initial steps—knowing that perhaps she felt, or the ministry felt, they didn't have the authority, why would they not have taken that step: called the board and said, "Look, we've got serious problems and we're going to move in"? Why?

Mr. Saād Rafi: So there's an audit taking place. We have analyzed what our ability to step into that organization is. It is extremely limited. The remedies, as I mentioned, are not available.

There was an implication, if I'm not mistaken—and if I didn't understand you correctly, please do correct me. But I understood you to say that the ministry encouraged the board to step down. The ministry indeed did not do so. The board agreed to resign on their own volition.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, that's unfortunate.

Mr. Saād Rafi: I don't know what motivated them to do that. That's a question for them.

But we receive an audit report at the end of September, a draft report, and then throughout the next ensuing several weeks, actions are taken, as the minister has chronicled. But first, assessment was taken as to, one, repairing any concerns we might have had with the draft content. The auditor I think generously changed some factual elements to the report. But it was at that juncture that we were seeing the types of things that were, I think—

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Rafi, thank you for that.

Mr. Saād Rafi: —the two principal elements that were causing some trouble.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. You know, that's even more discouraging. I was hoping that at least it was the ministry that took the initiative, and the ministry waited until the board volunteered to resign?

Mr. Saād Rafi: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Rafi, you are—

Mr. Saād Rafi: No, sir. I—

Mr. Frank Klees: —deputy minister of a $48-billion ministry.

Mr. Saād Rafi: I'm afraid that's unfair. I'm afraid that's unfair. I did not say we waited for the board to resign. I referred to the minister's comments and the chronology of events that she laid out there. I'd be happy to cover them again, but the point—

Mr. Frank Klees: No, I have some questions I'd like to ask you, actually.

Mr. Saād Rafi: Sorry.

Mr. Frank Klees: I hear what has happened here.

I have another question for you. Under the terms of the performance agreement, the health services branch of your ministry had a responsibility to oversee all of the service delivery and the performance standards that were incorporated. In fact, it had a responsibility to help develop those performance standards. Apart from the financial issues that were taking place, quite frankly, the more important issue for us in this committee and in this Legislature is what happened to the performance levels of providing those emergency services.

We have heard—you know; you know full well—from paramedics and front-line pilots about how service levels were devolving: the number of missed calls, the number of patients who were put at risk. Your emergency services division is investigating now a number of incidents. The coroner is investigating certain instances. Where was the emergency services branch of the Ministry of Health while these reports were coming forward? Where was your ministry in terms of those issues?

Mr. Saād Rafi: Exercising its due diligence and its requirements is a core responsibility under the performance agreement. I do not believe there are coroner investigations taking place today. We have an investigative function—you're quite right—in the emergency health services branch. That branch acted, when it heard, on items that we were misled on—we discovered that we were misled on. For example—this was not raised by members, but this came out through one of our communications officers through a paramedic: that the interior of the aircraft was not properly able to provide CPR. The ministry, through its emergency health services branch, launched an investigation immediately. That was in July.

In addition to that, it monitored its performance requirements through the performance agreement. The auditor has quite rightly identified areas where it should increase some performance indicators. That has been added in the amended agreement, and we will continue to enforce the performance standards that we're obliged to do. I think—

Mr. Frank Klees: So, Mr. Rafi, here's—I have another question for your emergency services branch.

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: On a point of order: Look, these witnesses are under oath. This is a little different than the usual kind of sessions that we have at public accounts. There is a clear principle of law in these kinds of hearings when parties are under oath that there's a special obligation on the Chair or the judge, if it happens to be a judge, or the committee members who are part of the hearing process, to permit a witness—and they're witnesses now because they're under oath, and all the consequences of not giving full and complete answers follow from that. But it is a clear principle of law that, in these circumstances when a witness—in this case, the deputy minister—is asked a question, he be allowed to answer the question fully as that witness sees fit and that it's not appropriate for either the Chair or members of the committee to cherry-pick and cut off the answer that a witness is giving under oath. What Mr. Klees is—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Mr. Zimmer, for—

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, just a second. Mr. Klees has asked a couple of questions, and he has just sort of stepped in and cut the witness off. That's not permissible.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, Mr. Zimmer, that's not a point of order, but thank you for pointing that out.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, with all due respect—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): —we can maintain cordial relations in this committee, and the questioners will give due time for those answering the questions to answer the questions.

Mr. Frank Klees: And we will do that, Mr. Chair. I would ask you to caution Mr. Zimmer to refrain from that kind of intervention. I know full well how to question a witness, and I know when my question has been answered. We know his tactic, and we know the tactic of the Liberal benchers—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, if we can just continue with the questioning. We have limited time here for these proceedings, so if we could please continue.

Mr. Frank Klees: I expect that I'll at least be given the time that Mr. Zimmer took—

Mr. David Zimmer: —the protection of the witness's right to fully answer the questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, let's—

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Zimmer, I know when my questions have been answered.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Let's continue.

Mr. Frank Klees: I want to ask this question of the deputy. Ornge acquired, at great cost—and we now find out that it was taxpayers' money because the $300-million offering that was put into the market to purchase helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft was guaranteed by the province of Ontario. That's how it was represented to the public. Those aircraft were purchased to deliver a service under the terms of the performance agreement. Did, at any time, the Ministry of Health inspect or have any indication as to whether those aircraft would be appropriate for the delivery of the services? If so, why not?

Mr. Saäd Rafi: I apologize for not facing the committee when you were asking the question.

The arrangement that the ministry has with this not-for-profit corporation, Ornge, is that we contract services that are stipulated in the performance agreement for critical-care land ambulance and air ambulance services. Before that organization was set up, as I mentioned, we had for-profit providers and a contractual provision for air ambulance services. We didn't stipulate what aircraft they would use; we stipulated what services we would get. So we don't stipulate the type of facility that a long-term-care home must build; we stipulate the regulatory requirements to provide safe services to the residents.

Our obligation is on patient safety in the carriage, either on land or in air, of air ambulance services. We did not stipulate the type of aircraft necessary.

Mr. Frank Klees: But I would have expected that the Ministry of Health would at least want to assure themselves that CPR could be performed in these helicopters that were being used to transfer patients. One would have expected that the medical director of Ornge would at least have inspected the interiors of those helicopters. I'm told that that medical director of health for Ornge hadn't even been on the inside of one of these helicopters until the media exposed the fact that CPR couldn't be performed.

Here's my question. We've lost all confidence in the Ornge executives. Why Mr. Sawadsky is still there as the medical director, I don't know. I'm sure Mr. McKerlie can answer that question when it comes his time, but the question that I have is where was the Ministry of Health, who have the responsibility to ensure that the equipment that's used, whether it's an ambulance or air ambulance, is in fact up to standard and can accommodate the service that has been contracted for? Where was the Ministry of Health?

Mr. Saäd Rafi: You're quite right. We were given that assurance by that same medical director that the interiors were sufficient, and it wasn't until a complaint was lodged via our communications centre on or about July 2011 that we discovered that that indeed was not true. We were misled. We launched an investigation. I understand that actions have been taken to get a short-term correction to the interior structure. That has been approved by Transport Canada, but I should leave that to Mr. McKerlie.

But, sir, we were misled. We did ask about the interior, and we were told it was sufficient and up to standard.

Mr. Frank Klees: In that case, I'd like to bring Mr. McKerlie into the discussion. With all due respect, Mr. McKerlie, you have a tough job, but I do have a question about this and Dr. Sawadsky. Knowing his track record, knowing that he failed to do his job, why is he still the medical director at Ornge?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: When I got there, I had asked for a recap of the medical interior issues on the AW139. There were a number of pieces of information that were available. I asked the medical director to recap them all. He went out and he made a complete list for us, which is the list that was subsequently published. He has done his job before and since, as far as I can tell. Bruce is still there, still working as a medical director for us and providing good service. I see no reason to let him go.

Mr. Frank Klees: You consider it good service to allow $9.5 million to be spent on a medical interior that doesn't even allow paramedics to perform CPR, for which he had responsibility? You consider that having done a good job?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: First of all, it wasn't $9.5 million. It was $6 million.

Mr. Frank Klees: Oh, I'm sorry.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Secondly, it wasn't his decision initially to approve the medical interior. He came after that. It was approved by some existing paramedics who actually used a modified version. The mistake was made by former management who outfitted 10 aircraft with the same medical interior before they ever flew one in service. That's a problem. We have worked hard with the engineers since then. We have worked with Transport Canada. We have a work-around solution which is approved to fly. We have been flying that over the last six weeks, and we're working now on a longer-term solution.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. McKerlie, I understand that Ornge at one time claimed that it was a member in good standing of the international Commission on Accreditation of Medical Transport Services, and I understand that that certification has been cancelled.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: We voluntarily withdrew in February. That's correct. It's not necessary for us, but given all the noise going on in the media around our membership, we felt it was easier for them and us to withdraw.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was that because you felt that once you were scrutinized, you wouldn't qualify for that accreditation?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: I don't know the answer to that, because we hadn't been scrutinized by them. We withdrew voluntarily.

Mr. Frank Klees: Would you not think that, particularly now, it would be good for you to have an accreditation and have a third party scrutinize your organization, and would you undertake to have that done?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: We have no less than seven third parties in there right now scrutinizing the organization, so I can assure you that we're getting as much oversight, probably, as this organization has ever had.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. McKerlie, I understand that an engine fire in one of the PC-12s took place last month. You're aware of that?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Are you talking about the Air Bravo incident?

Mr. Frank Klees: No, I'm not.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Sorry, you're talking about a PC-12?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: I'm not aware of an engine fire in one of our PC-12s.

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand that it happened on the ground. It's interesting that you're not aware of it. Perhaps you could look into it. What is interesting about it is that no one else knew about it either.

The other question I have for you is, at one time it was posted as public information—when I say public, I mean available to the pilots and the paramedics—when a particular helicopter was out of service or a particular base was out of service. That has now been removed from the website or from your internal communication. Is there a reason that you're taking these steps to actually reduce the amount of information that's available to your staff?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Actually, there's an increased amount of information available to staff, including when aircraft are out of service, when there are delays due to medic late starts and if there are weather-out situations. All that is provided to our staff through the ACC and online through Lifeline. So that information is available, and there is more than there has been in the past.

Mr. Frank Klees: I would encourage you to do some research on that, because that is not the information I have and it's not the information we're getting from your front-line staff—

Mr. Ron McKerlie: There has been a lot of misinformation, so perhaps you're not getting good information. I'd be happy to share the truth with you.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, it seems that the misinformation, up until now, has all gone the other way. The Ministry of Health is telling us that the reason they didn't do what they were supposed to is because they had all kinds of misinformation from Ornge. Where is the misinformation and where is the truth? I would ask you, what are you doing to get to the truth?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: I'd love to go back to my opening statement, which talks about what we have done since I have been there, in the nine weeks I've been on the job. Is that permissible, Mr. Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): There's about three minutes left in this round of questioning, so it doesn't sound like there would be time for your six minutes—

Mr. Frank Klees: In that case, I just have one more question for the minister. Minister, you know that we will agree to disagree on this issue. I only have one question for you. In your chronological description here of when you decided to take steps, you very clearly say that when I raised these issues on three different occasions in April, that wasn't enough for you to take any—in fact, you admitted you did nothing. Yet you decided that when the Auditor General, as an officer of the Legislature, brought forward a draft report to you, that tweaked your interest somewhat. Can you tell us why, when a member of provincial Parliament, your colleague in this Legislature, brings something forward, you would just ignore that?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Well, with respect, I did not ignore that. As I said in my statement, I did refer the issues you raised to the Auditor General, and as you have said, you also shared that information with the Auditor General.

I think it was important that I respect the work of the Auditor General. I knew his audit was ongoing, and I knew he would do an excellent job, as he always does.

Mr. Frank Klees: Minister—

Hon. Deborah Matthews: So I think what's important also is that you did ask a question about what triggered the activity—I think you called it aggressive action—that did take place. The key element that I think is important, everyone does understand, is that the board did resign, and I, with respect, say that I played a part in that decision, because I did have a meeting with the COO, with the chair of the board, where I made it very, very clear with them that their house of cards was about to fall, that we now were moving in on—we understood that there were problems at Ornge and that we were absolutely determined to fix them.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Minister. I raised that question—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about 30 seconds left, Frank.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. I raised that question in the Legislature because I wanted to respect your role as minister. Your role as minister, I thought, would be that you would immediately call in your ministry people who have responsibility for this and say, "Let's look into this," not defer it to an officer of the Legislature. With all due respect, the Auditor General has a role to play. It's not a proactive role. It is not an oversight role. The Auditor General's role is to come in and tell us what went wrong. The role of a minister is to ensure that it doesn't go wrong and to take proactive initiative to ensure that when a member of the Legislature brings something forward to you, the expectation would be that you take that seriously and you exercise your authority as minister, not defer to an auditor—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Mr. Klees. It's now time for the third party to ask questions.

I would just remind people, if they have phones on in the room, if you could please turn them off. They're interfering with our—or turn the ringer off, at the very least.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes, my question, just to begin with, is a yes/no question. If you can confirm, Ornge is—I mean, we all know this, but let's just put this on the record—essentially 100% provincially funded. Is that correct? I'll begin with the minister.

Hon. Deborah Matthews: The answer is no. It is not 100%. I will pass this to the deputy.

Mr. Saād Rafi: The majority of funding is from government, but it does have other sources of revenue, both foundational and otherwise.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, fair enough. Ms. Li, essentially—so it's not 100%, but close to the majority of it is funded through the province?

Ms. Patricia Li: That would be correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

The Ministry of Health, in general, has an obligation to oversee where its money is being spent. Approximately $150 million is the ballpark figure of how much money is funded towards Ornge, and one of your obligations is to oversee that. Is that correct?

Mr. Saād Rafi: Correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Rafi, that was—

Mr. Saād Rafi: I'm sorry. Pardon me.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Minister, that's correct?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Rafi, that's correct?

Mr. Saād Rafi: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And Ms. Li, is that correct as well?

Ms. Patricia Li: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: One of the essential elements of oversight is to know where the money is being spent, where it's being allocated. Is that correct, Minister?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: I know you want yes/no answers, but I'm afraid you're getting to where it gets a little more complicated.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

Hon. Deborah Matthews: We had a relationship with Ornge that was a contractual relationship. They had an obligation to deliver service. We gave them money to deliver that service.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So my question, specifically, is, a part of oversight, which is your obligation—you agree with me that oversight of Ornge is one of your obligations as the minister and as well, deputy minister, Mr. Rafi, and Ms. Li? Would you all agree that oversight is one of your essential functions and obligations and duties?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Absolutely, and that is why we've introduced legislation that gives us far more oversight than we had before. We have a new performance agreement that gives us significantly more oversight than existed before.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And one of the essential elements of oversight is to know where your money is being spent. That is a very important element of oversight. Would you agree with that comment?

Interjection.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: To the Minister, and also to Mr. Rafi and to Ms. Li.

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Within the confines of the performance agreement.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: But that is an essential element, knowing where the money is being spent?

Mr. Saād Rafi: Well, if you would accept that it's within the confines of the performance agreement, I would say yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

Now, the minister had already agreed to the statement—it's in her comments, so I'll direct this to Mr. Rafi and Ms. Li. To quote exactly from the comments made, "Two days later, on December 21, Ornge disclosed the compensation of senior executives to my ministry and revealed particularly outrageous compensation to then-CEO Chris Mazza.

"That's when I knew something was seriously wrong."

Mr. Rafi, would you agree with that comment that finding out that that compensation was, in the minister's words, "particularly outrageous compensation"—do you agree with me that that would be something that would raise alarms?

Mr. Saād Rafi: Perhaps, because the way that compensation was provided, it suggested that there were funds, public funds, being provided to the for-profit side. That was the trigger for the action of ensuring, under the performance agreement—to your previous line of questions—that the ministry was either not getting the information it was supposed to and asked for and did receive with respect to the performance agreement and the oversight role that it fulfilled at its core responsibility, and therefore that revelation—and indeed it was—was something that triggered that action.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And Ms. Li, would you also agree that the minister's comments with respect to the fact that the compensation was particularly outrageous, that that something that—when the minister found that out, that's when she knew something was seriously wrong—would you agree that that's something that would raise concerns, seriously?

Ms. Patricia Li: I think in the context of the performance agreement.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. I'm going to draw your attention to—Howard Hampton raised this issue November 2010, and he asked this question to Mr. Rafi. The question was, "Now I have a question. If he is the head"—sorry. The question initially was to Ms. Li: "Who runs Ornge?" Ms. Li answered, "Dr. ... Mazza. He's the CEO of the Ornge corporation." Later on, Mr. Howard Hampton asked the question, "If he is the head of Ornge, why does his name no longer appear on the Ontario salary disclosure list after 2007?" Further, the question goes, "Why would his name no longer appear on the salary disclosure list after 2007?" Mr. Rafi answers, "Again, I'll have to consult with the Ministry of Finance, who are responsible for regulating and determining who is included and who is not, and we'd like to get back to you..."

Mr. Rafi, did you get back to Mr. Hampton with regards to why his name was not on the salary disclosure?

Mr. Saād Rafi: Regrettably, the ministry was very late in responding to that request at the estimates, the last estimates presentation.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And so you did not get back to him on that?

Mr. Saād Rafi: That's correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. In fact, a request is made by Mr. Rosenstock of our office, a researcher with the NDP, and a request is made through the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. In that act, the request was this: "Any record explaining why Dr. Christopher Mazza, president and CEO of Ornge, is not listed on the 2009 public sector salary disclosure." The response to that, which was provided by the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care—the answer is:

"I am replying to your request....

"This is to inform you that a search was conducted in the legal services branch and 19 records were found responsive to your request. A search was also conducted in the emergency health services branch and 13 responsive records were found.

"However, we are not able to grant access to these records under the authority of sections 13 (advice to government), 19 (solicitor-client privilege) and 21 (personal privacy) of the act. Patricia Li, assistant deputy minister, and Janice Crawford, director, legal services branch, were responsible for this decision."

So I ask you, Ms. Li, why is it that you did not respond to this freedom-of-information request that wanted to get to the heart of why Dr. Mazza's salary was not disclosed when this, in your own words and in the words of the Minister of Health, was the largest red flag as to why there were some serious concerns in Ornge?

Ms. Patricia Li: I think that in terms of the records in the legal services branch—which is not within my purview, so I can't speak to that—and in terms of the records in the emergency health services branch, we do not really have detailed information. And I think that according to the act, there are certain disclosures of personal information that we could not have disclosed.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, and in either regard, would you agree with me that this issue was raised by Mr. Hampton in 2010, which was two years ago, and there was nothing done to follow up with Mr. Hampton's request, and this freedom-of-information request was presented to the Ministry of Health and there was no follow-up with regards to why Mr. Mazza's salary was not being disclosed, both to Mr. Hampton's question and the freedom-of-information request?

Mr. Saād Rafi: I've already said that we did not get back to Mr. Hampton. I don't agree that we did not respond to the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act request. I think you read, I presume faithfully, the response given by the ministry, and it applied the requirements under the legislation to indicate why information could or could not be provided.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I want to continue where my colleague just left off, the first one being that we're back in actually March 2010; that's two years ago pretty much to the day. The NDP starts raising a red flag about Ornge. We filed a freedom-of-information request specifically about the salary of Mr. Mazza that had disappeared from the sunshine list. We got told that there are 19 records found that won't be shared with us, in the legal services branch, and there are 13 records found in emergency health services that won't be shared with us.

Ms. Li, you were the one who signed off. In those 13 records that came from your office, none of them stated the salary of Mr. Mazza?

Ms. Patricia Li: I think that I would just have to repeat my previous answer: Under the freedom-of-information access requirements, there is certain personal information which, under the act, we cannot disclose. So we do respond to the freedom-of-information access requests in that regard.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I realize that you could not share them with us, and I will trust that you made the right decision, but you had access to those 13 records. You saw the salary that Mr. Mazza was being paid, and you did not blink an eye. But when my colleague asked you if the response from the minister—when she saw the number, she thought they were outrageous, and that prompted her to action. When you saw those numbers, what did you do?

Ms. Patricia Li: I think, just for the record, the reason that information, with respect to the 13 records, was not provided is not because I actually saw the numbers. They contained personal information which prohibited me from providing those particular records. But those records do not contain the compensation numbers of the individuals that you were requesting. So I do not have information on the compensation or any numbers related to it.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So we're in 2010; we file a freedom-of-information request asking you for the salary of Mr. Mazza. Your staff goes into the record and says, "We found 13"—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Point of order, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: None of us have this document that we're discussing. Would it be possible for you to table it so we can see what you're discussing?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Absolutely. We'll do this after.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: We've already read it into the record, though.

Interjections.

M^{me} France Gélinas: If the clerk wants to come and pick it up—

Interjection.

Mr. David Zimmer: No, no. You can't—we've got a witness under oath—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Excuse me, Mr. Zimmer. We have limited time. We'll endeavour to get it copied.

Mr. David Zimmer: Yeah, we've got limited time, but you've got to be fair to the witness, Chair. They're under oath. This is not—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Does everyone want a copy of that? We'll have to recess for five minutes to get it.

Mr. David Zimmer: I want a copy of it, and the witness should have a copy of it to see what we're talking about. You know, we're in a different world here when you have witnesses under oath. They're entitled to be treated fairly.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, we'll take a five-minute recess. We'll copy that and we'll be right back.

The committee recessed from 1332 to 1339.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If we could get the committee back in order, please.

The NDP have the floor. You have about seven minutes left for questioning, and I'll just say, so we don't have this happening going forward, that if you have documents, you might want to make copies for everybody ahead of time.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Very good. I may have to speak French if I have to speak that fast, but here we go.

I'm back to a document you now have in front of you but that I think you are quite familiar with; you didn't seem uncomfortable answering my question. Basically, we are asking for Chris Mazza's compensation. How come he's not on the sunshine list anymore? Your department undertakes a review and finds 13 records; none of them can be shared with us.

This request was made to you. Those records were shown to you. Yet the minister, when she saw the amounts, reacted. When you saw those amounts, what did you do?

Ms. Patricia Li: First of all, I wanted to just clarify that, under the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act, the records contain personal information in which the individuals were not paid through Ornge, the not-for-profit organization. I can assure you that those records do not contain any numbers that we subsequently were able to find out in December 2011.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you agree that the records exist. Would you be willing to share that with this committee?

Interjection.

M^{me} France Gélinas: She says that the record contains information, but that it contains personal information. So she agrees that those 13 records that were not shared with us do exist, because she just made reference to them as to what they contain and what they don't contain. I'd like her to table those records with this committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Minister, did you want to say something?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: I do, actually. I think people have to understand that we did not have access to those salary numbers, because they were employed through the for-profits, which are not captured under the legislation, the broader Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act. So we did not have that information.

It was only when I pushed the chair and the COO and when there was media scrutiny on that question that they finally did release those numbers. We did not have those numbers internally. We did not know what those numbers were until they voluntarily released them following significant pressure from me and from the public, thank you.

M^{me} France Gélinas: With all due respect—I appreciate your intervention—my question is about the 13 records that the emergency health services branch decided not to share with us through freedom of information.

Ms. Li confirmed that she's seen those 13 records. She made reference to what was in them and what was not in them. I'm asking her to table those 13 records with the committee. When could you comply?

Ms. Patricia Li: What we would do is take it under advisement and review the records again. After our review we will consider sharing with the committee.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. The clerk might have a few things to share with you regarding when the committee asks you to share documents, but I don't want to use my time to do this. We'll let you two have a conversation.

I'd like to go back—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Excuse me, could we have a motion specifying what you're asking for? It's not clear to me from the testimony I've been listening to that the documents that are listed have anything directly to do with Dr. Mazza's salary, which is the—

M^{me} France Gélinas: This is exactly what we're trying to find out. We—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If we can allow the third party to continue with their questioning.

M^{me} France Gélinas: We filed a freedom-of-information request. We're told that there are 13 records that cannot be shared with us. She confirmed that she's seen those records, because she made reference to what was not in those records; therefore, she's seen them. I'm asking her to share those 13 records with us. I will let the procedures follow due course, but I would ask for those 13 records that are referred to in her response to us, through our freedom of information request, to be shared with this committee so we can decide for ourselves whether those salaries were shared or not.

I'd like to move on before my time goes. So that happens—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Point of order.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I don't believe a motion is required, but the clerk does need to know exactly what the third party, Ms. Gélinas, is looking for.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, so read from the documents I just shared: "A search was also conducted in the emergency health services branch and 13 responsive records were found." Those are the 13 responsive records that I want shared with this committee.

Moving on, I want to go back. I've talked about—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you have about two minutes left, Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: We raised red flags on March 25, 2010—

Mr. David Zimmer: Just a second. The witness gave a qualified answer to that, so I don't want the member opposite or the committee to be under the mistaken impression that—

M^{me} France Gélinas: I think at this point they're quite willing to co-operate with us.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, the answer was she's going to go back, review the documents and see if those documents are something that she can produce. Is that the answer, as I understand it?

Ms. Patricia Li: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: So it's subject to the witness going back, reviewing the documents and making a decision based on advice that the witness will get on whether to produce the documents. So the committee ought not to leave here with the impression that the documents are coming.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I think we have our own Chair, Mr. Zimmer, and he can rule on those things. We held an election and elected—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So what you're asking for is fine.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you.

So, moving on, that happens on March 25, 2010. The NDP started ringing the alarm bell about what was going on at Ornge. We filed for freedom of access to information. Thirty-two records were found; none of them were shared with us.

Fast-forward, the same year; we're now in November 2010. It's time for estimates, a golden opportunity for us to ask questions. I'm subbed into committee so that Howard Hampton, who knows this file better than I do, comes to estimates. He asked you 46 questions about Ornge. For 20 minutes he drilled the minister—who was brand new at the time; she did the best she could—the deputy minister, who was kind of brand new also, and Mrs. Li—46 questions. For most of them, we got, "We will get back to you later. We don't know the answer to what you're asking, but we will get back to you later." Never was an answer delivered. The clerk wrote a letter to the minister asking for a follow-up to our questions, and yet we got no answers.

It seems to me that from November 2010, when we put on the record 46 questions about the dealings at Ornge, about the salaries, about the corporate structure, about the for-profit, the not-for-profit, everything that this scandal is about—we put questions on the record, 46 of them—to you, and we get zero answers. We get zero answers, zero action, zero reaction.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Ms. Gélinas. It's now time for the government to ask their questions for 20 minutes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, first of all, I'd just like to follow up on something that the minister said. She made reference to her reappointment on October 20 and being briefed on the auditor's report on October 27, but committee members are aware that the auditor submitted his report to the ministry in September. I believe the date—I'll go ahead and ask the deputy.

Mr. Jim McCarter: It was submitted, I think, in late September to the ministry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, so this was the first draft of the report.

Mr. Jim McCarter: Yes, basically a draft for factual clearance. Our work papers are not accessible under FOI. It's really a draft to discuss with the ministry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you for that clarification, Auditor.

So there's obviously a period here where the ministry has received the report, and there has been some discussion about what should have happened to the report once the ministry received it. If I may, I'll ask the deputy. Deputy, who actually received the report then, at that point, in late September?

Mr. Saād Rafi: I believe it's customary—and the auditor can correct me—but the director responsible, Ms. Klein, wrote to Patricia Li, submitting X number of copies on September 29 with that draft.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, and what would have happened to the report at that point?

Mr. Saād Rafi: In any circumstances we would, as is mentioned, examine that draft for factual differences, errors or even our differences, in some cases, of emphasis. We're provided an opportunity by the auditor to respond in writing with what changes we want, which are, of course, his to accept or not, and that's what we immediately proceeded to do.

It's also customary to brief me, in this case, on the contents, which took place in early October. We asked for a one-week extension, I believe, to submit our response to the draft. I believe we completed that in the time that we were given.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you submitted your response to the auditor about when?

Mr. Saād Rafi: The third week of October, I'm thinking. I see some nodding, so hopefully that's correct. I think that's correct.

Mr. Jim McCarter: We received it on October 20, so it was probably sent a couple of days earlier.

Mr. Saād Rafi: Yeah, so the third week.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: There has been some suggestion that when you got that—as I think those of us around the table are aware, this was during the writ period. There was an election on October 6, 2011. There have been suggestions made in the House that the minister should have been advised of the content of the Auditor General's report. Was the minister advised of the content of the draft report?

Mr. Saād Rafi: No, she was not. That was a function of the rules that we are given during election or writ periods. I exercise my judgment in that regard. If the election was not in place, given that it's a first draft, it would not be customary for, I believe, any ministry to share that draft in that form—because, and I'll use the term, it's in a rough form; it's a first draft—until you get to a point of understanding where the auditor's office wants to settle on certain elements. Then it's appropriate and, I think, quite customary to involve the minister's office in a briefing and to move forward on responses. Afterwards, when you get the penultimate or the second-last draft, then we have the opportunity to put our responses to those recommendations. There's a bit of discussion on that as well with the auditor's office, in that sometimes our responses tend to be a little bit longer and I think, in some cases, he would prefer them to be a little bit shorter, and there's a back-and-forth on that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I wonder if you could comment specifically on the writ period and what your direction is in terms of what information you share with the minister during the writ period—because there seems to be some confusion; clearly, the minister stays in place—and whether the relationship between the minister and the ministry is the normal relationship during the writ period, or whether there are some constraints put on deputies and staff in terms of the way you relate to the minister during the writ period.

Mr. Saād Rafi: Yes. It's both a customary and rules-based approach that says that one has to be very careful about interactions with minister's office staff who might remain in the office and/or the minister. Since all parties have gone through this before, I think a reason the members would understand is that I wouldn't want to be in a position that provides information that a minister would use to some advantage during an election campaign.

In addition, there is guidance provided on urgent or very routine items. Urgent items have a definition, and the interpretation of "urgent" has to do, for me, in light of such elements as there is some matter that is developing. I'll take an example to be a public-health-related issue, perhaps: that we've seen an emergent issue in a particular part of the province with some sort of—I don't want to say "outbreak," but some sort of activity that might be linked.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So SARS happens again.

Mr. Saād Rafi: Yes. The second piece, I would say, is if it's absolutely an emergency. It's customary to know that the deputy has the opportunity to contact the minister should those types of occurrences take place.

It was my judgment that the first draft of the audit report, considering I was briefed in early October, with the election days away—and not knowing the outcome, obviously, of whether (1) the party is re-elected and (2) the minister is reaffirmed in her role—that this was not something to share. We did share it with her office as soon as possible upon the installation or reaffirmation of the cabinet.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So, given the protocols that are set out during the writ period for you as a deputy by Cabinet Office, it was your conclusion that it would not be appropriate to share this information with the minister, whoever the minister might be, until there was a new minister reappointed—albeit it happens to ultimately be the same new minister.

Mr. Saad Rafi: Yes, that's correct. Also, the remedies available to us would require the input of the minister, and the remedies, as well, don't change from the first draft to the next draft. I think as the auditor has said, it is a very rough working draft.

In addition to that, there's a heightened sense of confidentiality during a writ period for, especially, audit documents. So there would be all manner of perhaps different interests wanting to see material like this.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Thank you very much.

Mr. McKerlie has been valiantly attempting to give his opening remarks. I'll cede a little bit of our time to Mr. McKerlie to make his opening remarks.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Thank you very much, and thank you to the committee, to the Chair and the members, for the opportunity to be here and to speak about the work that's been done at Ornge, particularly the current changes that are under way.

Let me start by saying that I don't endorse the actions that have been taken by the former leadership at Ornge. What has become quite clear in recent months is, there is a number of things that have happened, and that's the reason for this committee hearing. But I can assure you that I do not support or agree with those decisions, and an incredible amount of work has been undertaken already to begin fixing the problems and moving the organization forward towards a new level of accountability and transparency.

I don't come here to make any excuses or to apologize for the mistakes of the past. I'm here to speak to the promise of the future and to talk about the committed men and women who remain at Ornge for all the right reasons.

Ornge transports more than 19,000 patients per year, and the majority of these transports are north of Sudbury. In fact, nine out of 10 of our highest flight destinations are in northern Ontario—destinations like Kashechewan, Sandy Lake and Attawapiskat, as well as places like Thunder Bay, Timmins, Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury. Many of the patients we transport are critically ill and injured and need immediate transport to a specialty centre. The medics that I've had the fortune to meet are some of the most committed, dedicated and highly trained health care professionals in Ontario. We have pilots whom I've met who have worked for commercial airlines but now speak of the rewarding experience working for Ornge and flying some of the sickest and most seriously injured patients to hospitals for the care that they both need and deserve.

Next week, we will transition the last helicopter base from Canadian Helicopters Ltd. to Ornge, and I welcome these dedicated pilots and aircraft maintenance engineers who will be joining the organization. A number of these individuals have been part of the air ambulance program for decades, and I and the new board respect the number of years that they've already committed to providing medical transport and air ambulance service to patients in this province.

I joined Ornge on Thursday, January 12, and in a few short months I think we've seen significant progress. For example, the previous board of directors has been replaced with a volunteer board, and we continue to strengthen the executive management team. These two moves are critical to ensuring that Ornge has the right leadership in place to move the organization forward. There's a renewed commitment to putting patients first and to providing the best patient care for the people of Ontario.

We have a renewed commitment to fulfilling our mission, to rebuilding Ornge and to ensuring that it's a vital, dynamic and accountable organization that's well placed to meet today's challenges and those of the future. From our executive changes to changes in our front-line services, change is occurring at every level of the organization.

Among the changes under way at Ornge, we have bankrupted two of the for-profit Ornge entities and have begun the windup of nine additional entities.

The top six executives are gone, including staff who worked at one of our global, for-profit entities, and the former board of directors has been replaced.

We've brought in a transition team to assist with rebuilding the organization, reviewing processes and implementing key changes.

Addressing the Ornge helicopter medical interior issues, we have an interim solution to the medical interior issue certified by Transport Canada, and work is well under way on a longer-term solution.

A new, volunteer board of directors is in place with specialized subcommittees to support the organization during its transition and beyond.

The last of the rotor-wing base transitions happens later this week.

Demand for repayment from Dr. Mazza of his loans has happened, and we've taken steps to protect the interests of Ornge.

We have reorganized the Ornge communications centre.

We have negotiated an amended performance agreement with the Ministry of Health and begun implementing the changes required in reporting and compliance consistent with an increased level of oversight by the ministry.

We have sold non-essential assets, including the Orange County Choppers motorcycle that was in the lobby of our building and we have put two of the AgustaWestland helicopters up for sale.

We have sought voluntary disclosure from employees working for two of the Ornge for-profit companies to coincide with the 2011 disclosure release. We've posted salaries for 20 of those staff who earned more than $100,000 last year working for one of those for-profit entities, even though disclosure is not required under the public salary disclosure rules.

And these are just a few of the changes under way.

There is another component to Ornge that may seem obvious but that I think can be forgotten in the controversy surrounding this organization. I feel it's important to remind everyone about the dedication and commitment of the staff at Ornge. They work tirelessly to serve sick and injured Ontarians and ensure that they have a reliable, professional and compassionate medical transport service. As you can imagine, the negative attention the organization has faced in recent months has taken its toll on those who work there, and it's only fair to recognize the conditions under which many of our staff have been working. From those on the front-lines to behind the scenes, these few months have been very challenging for each of them.

Paramedics, pilots, aviation maintenance engineers, communications officers and the people who support the work they do have been deeply impacted by the actions of a few. The actions of a few former executives do not and should not reflect on the staff who remain at Ornge.

I have had the opportunity to meet with many staff and to visit a number of the bases around the province. I am continually amazed and inspired by the work that they do. Each of them comes to work to fulfill the mission of providing excellent patient care. In the last year alone, Ornge transported over 19,000 patients and flew over 6.2 million miles.

We have staff located at 12 bases across the province in locations from Toronto, Markham, London, Ottawa, Peterborough, Sudbury, Timmins, Thunder Bay, Kenora, Sioux Lookout and Moosonee. In addition, our standing-agreement carriers cover an additional broad area of the province. The paramedics, pilots, aircraft maintenance engineers and transport medicine physicians who work out of these bases are responsible for flying to some of the busiest urban centres and the most remote and distant corners of this province.

Ornge purchased 10 Pilatus PC-12 Next Generation airplanes and operates them from three fixed-wing bases in Thunder Bay, Timmins and Sioux Lookout. Ornge purchased 12 AgustaWestland AW139 helicopters and operates 10 of them from the rotor bases located in Toronto, London, Sudbury and Ottawa. Ornge continues to operate the Sikorsky S-76 helicopters from the rotor-wing bases in Thunder Bay, Kenora and Moosonee.

Ornge also operates a critical care land program out of Ottawa, Peterborough and Markham. As you would have read in the report, this program will be reviewed with the Ministry of Health in coming months.

We also operate a pediatric transport program, also out of our Markham location. Ornge's pediatric transport teams are comprised of paramedics and nurses trained in pediatric critical care, operating 12 hours a day, seven days a week. Although their primary vehicle is the critical care land ambulance, staff members are trained in all three modes of transport—fixed-wing aircraft, helicopter and land—any of which may be utilized, depending on the location of the patient, anywhere in Ontario.

The work Ornge does throughout this province could not be done without our valued partners in aviation, including the standing agreement carriers who conduct more than 40% of our air transports for us. These include companies like Air Bravo, Thunder Airlines, SkyCare, Wabusk, Commercial Aviation, Northern Air Solutions, Fort Frances Air, NovaJet, Skycharter, ExpressAir, Air Nunavut and Flightexec.

I must also mention our municipal partners who assist Ornge every day in ensuring our patients and crews receive ground transportation by the emergency medical services when required.

While we operate a land transport program, we are largely known for our air ambulance program. We believe we have an excellent fleet of aircraft. We are committed to the highest possible safety standards.

As you are aware, Ornge purchased a new fleet of helicopters, the AW-139. Introducing a new fleet of helicopters under any circumstances is a challenge. Under these circumstances, it has been extraordinary, and we continue to be under incredible scrutiny.

But I must reiterate that these aircraft are safe. There are 430 AW-139s in service worldwide. Twenty per cent of these are in EMS service, serving countries such as England, Norway, Australia, Italy, Spain and the Far East. Here in Canada, we use them in both Ontario and Alberta. To date, there have been over 70,000 flight hours logged by EMS operators worldwide. Our patients are safe. We have rigorous safety programs in place to ensure we respond to any concerns or possible safety issues as soon as possible.

I'd like to turn to what we're doing in concert with the Ministry of Health to address the previous problems at Ornge.

As you will be aware, the Ministry of Health and Ornge have entered into an amended performance agreement. This agreement sets clear performance indicators and will ensure that there is openness, transparency and accountability in all of Ornge's operations. It will ensure that what happened before doesn't happen again.

The amended performance agreement, ratified last week by the government and Ornge, will give Ontarians better air ambulance care by

- appointing a new patient advocate and publicly posting a complaints process;

- creating a new patient declaration of values;

- conducting annual surveys of staff, and members of the public, regarding their performance, and making this information public;

- improving the reporting of emergency dispatch information by including cancelled and declined air and critical land ambulance calls; and

- creating a quality improvement committee to advise the Ornge board, and publishing an annual quality improvement plan.

The performance agreement also provides taxpayers for more value for money by

- giving the ministry the authority to conduct surprise audits and unannounced inspections;

- linking the compensation of Ornge executives to public performance improvement targets;

—tying Ornge's funding to key performance indicators;

—giving the government control over any changes to Ornge's corporate structure and any sale of assets over a threshold of $100,000;

—taking tighter control over how Ornge uses government funding;

—giving the ministry the ability to recover funding, based on performance;

—ensuring full compliance with the Broader Public Sector Accountability Act; —requiring public reporting of expenses and restrictions on meals, travel and hospitality; and —requiring regular, detailed financial reports from Ornge and creating new financial planning controls.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about two minutes left.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Thank you.

In addition, the Ministry of Health introduced new legislation that, if passed, will provide a number of issues and protections, including protection for whistle-blowers who disclose information on an investigator, inspector or the government.

I'd like now to address the Auditor General's report and thank him and his team for the work they did last year. I understand the frustration that was faced by them when they were denied access to documents at Ornge. I want to reiterate our commitment to openness and transparency.

We have agreed to proceed on all the recommendations, and we have provided our responses in the report. We'll work with the Ministry of Health to ensure that we implement those changes.

Finally, I'd like to say I'm very proud of every person at Ornge, from the front-line paramedics, pilots and communications officers, to the corporate office staff, who are committed to the highest standards of safety and patient care. We welcome the service reviews of our service providers and the Ornge communications centre.

We've also initiated the review of current quality and patient safety initiatives by the quality-of-care committee of the board, under the supervision of Ornge board member and Sunnybrook president and CEO, Dr. Barry McClellan.

As we indicated in our responses to the auditor, we're committed to acting on all the recommendations, and they serve as a guide to us as we move forward with rebuilding Ornge and restoring trust.

I'd like to summarize my remarks by saying that we're committed to ensuring that taxpayer dollars are used prudently and that Ontarians are provided with an effective, efficient and high-quality medical transport service. These are commitments I take very seriously. I, along with all the employees of Ornge, am committed to delivering air ambulance services to the residents of Ontario at world-class standards.

There's a lot of good work going on at Ornge. It's going to continue. While the past few months have admittedly been challenging, I'm optimistic about the future of the organization and the positive changes that are under way.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Mr. McKerlie. We now move to the official opposition for questioning. Mrs. Witmer, you have 20 minutes.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

My question is to the deputy. I think, Deputy, I heard you say something in the nature of, you didn't want to tell the minister about the report that you had received because it was during the writ and you didn't want to give her any special advantage. I'd like you to maybe answer, as well, then, if that was the case and it was during the writ period, did you also advise the minister against—and I stress the word "against"—doing a multi-million dollar announcement during the writ when she announced, in her riding, new hospital money?

Mr. Saād Rafi: I was not consulted on that, so I did not give advice on that.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Thank you very much.

Hon. Deborah Matthews: I would like to speak to that, if I might, though.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Do you know what? I'm just going to continue with the deputy right now.

I guess what I would like to know from you, Deputy: Could you table with us the guidelines that you were acting under during the writ that helped you make the decision that you shouldn't inform the minister about the Ornge initial report?

Mr. Saād Rafi: I'm pretty certain I can, yes.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I would certainly appreciate that. Thank you very much.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: I would like to address a couple of issues in this round. I'd like to go back to the deputy on this issue that Ms. Witmer just discussed with him. I am really quite concerned about this concept that something as important as the information that was contained in the Auditor General's report on Ornge—that somehow the deputy would think that by apprising the minister of this and engaging her support and taking some action on that, that would be an advantage. Can you explain that to me?

Mr. Saād Rafi: I guess what I was trying to say was that I have no idea how something like that could be used—whether a different outcome would cause a different response. I exercise judgment against the rules and the conventions that I'm familiar with. That was what I based my decision on in terms of the criteria that I outlined in the previous question.

So the issue is perhaps less about whether that is used for advantage, but rather, did I feel it was appropriate to provide an early draft of an audit report during an election period. I determined it was not.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what action did you take in response to that draft?

Mr. Saād Rafi: What action we took was to, first, do a fact-check of the draft, prepare our response to the Auditor General's office—that went from Patricia Li—on several items of both fact and emphasis, if you will—intonation, perhaps. As I mentioned earlier, that it's up to the purview of the auditor to accept those. His office accepted some—I dare say, many—but not all. We also prepare our draft responses to the recommendations, to the best of our ability. It's understood that they are to be draft because we have another opportunity, at the second-last version of the report, to confirm those responses.

In addition to that, we continued to analyze what our remedies were and what solutions we had against not only the findings but against the tools available to us, as well as the performance agreement and how it was structured.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was there anything in that draft report that caused you to react, as saying, “We have to act with urgency on this particular matter”? Was there anything at all that concerned you?

Mr. Saâd Rafi: I will address that by—if I could just supplement my last response with one thing I forgot, if you don't mind, please, and that is, during this time, the three weeks that we are given to respond to the first draft, I think Ornge was continuing to debate and provide feedback to the auditor's office, and I believe they took another three weeks to respond. So the report really is not out of its first-draft stage, as far as we're aware, for some time.

Yes, there were aspects in that report that were actually quite surprising to us, because it was information we were not able to access nor was provided by Ornge. Some of the things that we saw in the auditor's report we did not get from Ornge.

Again, I think one has to look at context and timing as well. It's easy to sit today and say, “You could have done A, B and C.” But actually, the assessment that we took was that we had an organization that was not prepared to open its performance agreement. We had an organization that was not prepared to provide information to us. In fact, I think the auditor has said that he didn't even get all the information that he was asking for. So we had an organization that was not compliant with the ability we had at that point to get them to take action.

We could not remove their board; we didn't appoint their board. This is a contract we have with them. We could have ceased funding, but as I said earlier, I think that that would have been somewhat irresponsible to affect, potentially, patient care.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Deputy. I respectfully disagree with—yes, I understand the explanation. But with all due respect, when you see a report that contains the kind of information that the Auditor General brought forward, that clearly affects patient care, to allow yourself to be restricted within the framework of how you report or the number of weeks that you have to report, I can just tell you that I think that's indicative of a systemic problem within the bureaucracy. I would think that something that deals with practical issues, such as patient care—which, as deputy, you would have immediately taken action on and said, “Look, we can't allow these things to happen. We can't risk one life, if this continues to be allowed.”

Nevertheless, I want to move on to another issue.

Mr. Saâd Rafi: Chair, may I respond to that? Because I think the statement that's made is suggesting that I've turned a blind eye to patient care. I'm not sure where in the auditor's report there's an indication that one life was at risk.

Mr. Frank Klees: Really? Have you read it?

Mr. Saâd Rafi: Indeed, I have.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well let's talk about the dispatch issues. Let's talk—

Mr. Saâd Rafi: Yes, indeed.

Mr. Frank Klees: You don't think that by a dispatch being delayed or being cancelled because of staffing issues, that that doesn't put a life at risk?

Mr. Saâd Rafi: There is not an indication—

Mr. Frank Klees: We have a very different perspective on this.

Mr. Saâd Rafi: Pardon me. There is not an indication in that report that a life was put at risk. We exercise—

Mr. Frank Klees: You know, I would think with your experience, sir, that you could read between the lines.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Let the deputy respond, please.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, I can just tell you, I—

Mr. Saâd Rafi: I'm not in the business of reading between the lines. What I'm trying to do is to take the information that we've garnered and exercise our judgment against the performance agreement.

We sat down, we looked at that report and we examined the performance agreement. We changed our practices to unannounced visits—reviews, inspections. We asked the Ministry of Natural Resources to go in and do a review of the aircraft. We also examined that report. If there was an indication—and the auditor points out that the dispatch approach needs to be examined. It doesn't say, in my reading of it, that patient safety was put at risk. I think we would have reacted, based on the performance agreement, in that way.

I appreciate that you—

Mr. Frank Klees: Fair enough. I think that explains a whole lot of things, quite frankly.

Deputy, were you the deputy in April 2008?

Mr. Saâd Rafi: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who was?

Mr. Saâd Rafi: I don't know. I can't remember off the top of my head.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to refer to a letter that was sent to—actually, it was sent to the then Ontario Minister of Health Promotion, Margaret Best. I think the minister is familiar with this letter. It was sent by a Mr. Keith Walmsley, who was working at Ornge at the time. He wanted to reach out to the Ministry of Health. I'm just going to read from his letter: “I found out that a second set of books were maintained in November of 2007”—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Point of order: Could we have—

Mr. Frank Klees: Yeah, I'll have this for you.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Now.

Mr. Frank Klees: I don't want to lose my time. I will read it into the record.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees, we need to recess for five minutes to get a copy of that.

The committee recessed from 1423 to 1428.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So the opposition has two minutes left. Go ahead, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, I would like members of the committee to read these two letters, and I'll take a follow-up opportunity to expand on them.

What I want to do now that the deputy is back is refer him to page 38 of the Auditor's report, where he says, "However, we found that Ornge internally reported 20 'significant patient adverse events' in 2009-10 to its board of directors, including some that involved patient deaths. (Ornge defines a 'significant patient adverse event' as a critical or major occurrence that results in serious, undesirable, or unexpected patient outcomes with potential to negatively affect a patient's health and quality of life.)" And if that isn't a reference to patient safety, I don't know what is.

I think, Chair, this incident actually reaffirms why we need a select committee of the Legislature to deal with these issues. That would enable us to bring people forward who are front-line paramedics and pilots and dispatchers who could in fact help us to read between the lines. The auditor has been very effective at giving us factual information about the operational challenges and issues at Ornge. We need the front-line people to tell us what the implication of that failed dispatch system is and what we need to do to fix it. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much, Mr. Klees. Now on to the third party.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I'm going to begin with Ms. Li. A question I'd raise with you—or I guess I could begin with all three. Minister, Mr. Rafi and Ms. Li, would you agree with me that the issue of the for-profit string of companies and their organization would raise some concerns in your mind with respect to the proper governance or the proper use of resources at Ornge?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: I think that with the benefit of hindsight, the answer is yes. I think at the time, when clear assurances were given that no public money would be used, that money would actually flow into the air ambulance service serving Ontario patients, and given the assurances that there were no conflicts of interest—we actually support the idea of taking Ontario-grown expertise and selling it to a global market. We have several Ontario innovations for which there is a global market, so the idea that we could take our air ambulance expertise and sell it internationally was an advantage. Of course, in hindsight, we would have looked at it very differently.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And then specifically, I guess, instead of giving you a vague question, let me ask more specifically to Mr. Rafi and Ms. Li. Ornge Air, would you agree with me that the governance of Ornge Air, which was a subsidiary company connected and related to Ornge—that its for-profit operations would give some concerns with respect to the way Ornge was operating?

Mr. Saād Rafi: I would say it's very similar to the minister's response. In that time there was also, some months earlier, an express statement of exporting health care services by the government at the time. In addition to that, we don't have, because of those attestations and assurances—promises given—and we don't, through the performance agreement, have a line of sight into that organization.

But what we spent our time doing was looking at our core responsibility, which is how are patient activities being undertaken, be that response times, be that patient safety. We've heard from the auditor that we need to do a better job on response times and our performance indicators, and we're trying to respond to that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, I understand. Ms. Li, my question coming back to you then, is that Ornge Air—would you agree with me, whether or not Ornge Air was being run as a for-profit entity or whether it was being run as a not-for-profit entity, that knowing one way or the other would be quite important to you in part of your duty as overseeing Ornge and Ornge affiliates? Would you agree with me?

Ms. Patricia Li: I just want to answer that one. From my responsibility as managing the program and the air ambulance services that are contracted under the performance agreement, I think that what was given to us as information and assurances is that Ornge Air is providing air ambulance services, the services that we contracted for in the performance agreement, and there's no reason for me to determine their business directions about whether the entity is set up—we are only looking at it at the operational level, from a program oversight, from an operational level, from a service level.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would it benefit you in any way to know whether it was a profit-driven model or a not-for-profit-driven model? Would that benefit you in your ability to oversee the way that Ontario money is being spent?

Ms. Patricia Li: It was not communicated to me as a for-profit model or a not-for-profit at the time. It was only communicated to me that the Ornge Air ambulance is providing ambulance services.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So because Ornge Air is providing the ambulance services, would it benefit your ability to oversee it if you knew whether or not it was for profit or not for profit?

Ms. Patricia Li: I think it was stated by the deputy and the minister that in hindsight, had we had all the complete information, it probably would be more beneficial.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, that's fair. Now, in hindsight, actually—conveniently—Howard Hampton, on November 17, 2010, asked the question to you, Ms. Li. He said, "All right. Can I ask you, then: There's another entity called Air Ornge, or Ornge Air. Now, what is Ornge Air?" Ms. Li, you answered, "My understanding is that Ornge Air is an affiliate organization under Ornge that actually provides the operations, the air ambulance,” as you’ve indicated today. Mr. Hampton then asked you, “But my understanding is that Ornge Air is a profit-driven corporation,” and Ms. Li, you indicated, “I have to look into that.” There’s an interjection, “We’ll look into that,” and finally, Ms. Li, you indicate, “Yes, I will follow up.”

Ms. Li, did you follow up to find out what Ornge Air’s model was, whether or not it was a for-profit or not-for-profit entity back on November 17, 2010?

Ms. Patricia Li: I did follow up on that question, and I think that our process is to gather the information from Ornge, the organization.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And so what exactly did you do to follow up? And was there a letter or any correspondence sent to the committee at that time, which was the estimates committee, or was there a letter sent to Mr. Hampton?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: If I could interject for just a moment here—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: My apologies, Minister. I would love to hear from you at some point, but this question is very directed to Ms. Li, because the question was to Ms. Li. She was the one who responded by saying that she would follow up to Mr. Hampton, so I would like to hear from Ms. Li, if she—

Hon. Deborah Matthews: I think, as minister, I’ve got some information here that I think you’d be interested in.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I would love to hear from you, but I’d like to hear an answer from Ms. Li first. My apologies, Minister, but I’d love to hear an answer from Ms. Li. Did you follow up with Mr. Hampton? Did you follow up by letter? By phone call? Did you follow up with the committee?

Ms. Patricia Li: I did not follow up with Mr. Hampton. I just—

Interjection.

Ms. Patricia Li: It appears the ministry has not done that particular process.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Is there a reason why you did not follow up with something that you indicated that you would follow up on with Mr. Hampton or with the committee?

Mr. Saād Rafi: I think that’s a situation where the ministry has not submitted the responses; they were just submitted today. That’s regrettable, but it was not provided.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

Minister, you had something you were going to respond to with respect to this.

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Thank you very much. Yes, in fact, I have a letter here. It’s dated December 15, 2010. It’s from Ornge. It’s to your leader. It does outline very clearly answers to the questions about Ornge being—the structure, and answers to questions that were raised. So you did have the information that came from Ornge, which clearly outlined the for-profit structure, the establishment of for-profit organizations. It did answer, I think, many of the questions that were raised. That was dated December 15, 2010.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you.

Just one more question. So just to ask you this question—if you agree with this comment or not; I don’t mind either way. It’s to all three: Minister, Mr. Rafi, Ms. Li. Would you agree with me that, in terms of oversight, which is a part of your obligations, there was a responsibility to oversee Ornge both fiscally, patient-safety-wise, as well as the business transactions that were occurring in a quasi-public, non-profit organization? Do you agree with those three categories of oversight?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Within the context of the performance agreement, yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Rafi, do you agree with those three categories?

Mr. Saād Rafi: Then and today, if we had the knowledge that there would be a set of organizations set up that would be for-profit and that there allegedly might be private interests being undertaken at the expense of public interests, which is what the amended performance agreement, what the legislation and what the board and new CEO are trying to rectify, then it would have been highly advantageous for us to have foreseen, in advance, in 2005, that a performance agreement should govern a far more broad set of activities. We didn’t then.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. My question, then, is—

Interjection.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you very much. My question, then, is, were any requests made, from the time, Minister, you became the minister, until this scandal erupted—before the scandal erupted—were any requests made with respect to salary disclosures that were made in the form of writing, and that were denied, before the scandal erupted? Were there any financial reports or accounting or expenses that were requested and denied, and what was the form? Was there any patient care information requested? And, finally, was there any audit conducted or requested before the scandal erupted regarding the helicopters or the aircraft?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: I will pass this to the deputy.

Mr. Saād Rafi: I’m not aware of them, but my tenure is not that long. We would have to go back into our records, because I think, if you could give me a time frame that you’re interested in, then we’ll have to go back into our records to determine the answer.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Certainly. Just in fairness to you, when were you a deputy minister?

Mr. Saād Rafi: February 2010 to the present.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Before I continue on the line of questioning of my colleague, two quick questions for you, Mr. McKelvie. The first one is that on page 3 of the document you presented to us that you read into the record, you said, “Among the changes under way at Ornge”—the first change is, you had “bankrupted two of the for-profit Ornge entities and begun the windup of nine other entities.” Would you be good enough to share with us who those entities were and their relationship to Ornge, either right now, or table them with the clerk?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Sure; I certainly can do that. Just let me get to the names of them, because there are many similar-sounding companies.

The two we bankrupted were called Global GP Inc. and Global Holdings LP.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: On February 2, both of those two companies were petitioned into bankruptcy. That petitioning was uncontested. On February 12, a bankruptcy trustee was put in place. They continue, to this day, the process of liquidating assets, paying off creditors and winding down the organizations.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Very good. If you could table a full report of this, I would appreciate it—with the names of the nine other entities that are being wound down and their relationship with Ornge.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Would you like that now or would you like it tabled later?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Tabled later would be sufficient.

The next point that you made was that you “demanded repayment from Dr. Mazza of his loans” and took “steps to protect the interests of Ornge.” You demanded repayment from Dr. Mazza of loans. Do you know the size of the loans you’re asking for repayment on?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Yes. There was one made out of Ornge the not-for-profit for $500,000. The trustee is dealing with two additional loans: one for $450,000 and one for $250,000.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. When you demanded repayment of Dr. Mazza, how did you communicate with him?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: We sent a formal letter of demand to Dr. Mazza’s lawyer.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Could you share those demands with us, including who his lawyer is?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: I don’t have that information with me.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But will you share it with us?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: I will seek legal advice as to whether I can share it with you, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Try your best. We would really appreciate, at this point in the game, as much transparency and as much goodwill and co-operation as can be mustered.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: I can assure you, I always try my best.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Sounds good. All right. Coming back to what my colleague was talking about, we’ve established that the request for freedom of information, the first time we raised red flags, was in March 2010: two years ago, almost to the day. We got a response on June 2. Then we went back with a series of questions at estimates in the fall of that year—that’s almost a year and a half ago—asking a series of questions. Our questions were all targeted at how much Mr. Mazza was doing; what the for-profit entities that he had created were; what their role was; what their relationship was: the basic ingredients of this scandal we’re left talking about and that our auditor put out in his report.

Deputy, the question goes to you: When the clerk put out the questions that still were left unanswered, those questions were put to you, as to: “There is a list of questions from estimates that have not been answered. All of those questions regarding Ornge are in this document, and you agree that those were the outstanding questions.” All three parties agreed that those were the outstanding questions. We received answers to all of the questions that had been asked during health estimates that needed further work, but we did not receive a single answer on a series of questions that everybody had agreed were outstanding regarding Ornge.

Try to give me anything I could hold on to that would make me believe in the process. How could it be that everything else was answered in writing in due time, but the questions about Ornge got singled out and went missing? “The dog ate my homework” is not going to cut it.

Mr. Saād Rafi: I don’t have a dog—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Good.

Mr. Saād Rafi: —but if I did, I certainly wouldn’t feed him my homework.

I just want to make sure I understood your question, Madame Gélinas. Are you saying that it’s your understanding that the ministry responded to all the questions from the November 2010 estimates except the questions on Ornge?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I received a document that outlined all the outstanding questions from this series of estimates. We all agreed together that those were the outstanding questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about a minute left.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Out of those, we received answers. The part that is missing is that we did not receive any answers on the outstanding questions about Ornge. That’s the question.

Mr. Saād Rafi: Well, I think that what is clear is that, one, the ministry has not followed its own procedures.

Secondly, unfortunately, answers were not provided not just to the Ornge questions, but answers were not provided to other questions. Not only was it not even in a timely manner, but they just have not been provided, and they were provided very late before this session. That’s something we have to look into, and that’s something I regret.

But I just want to make the distinction that our lack of following procedures was not just somehow isolating the Ornge questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We’ll move to the government—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Mr. Chair, I received, as of seconds ago, answers to the estimates questions of 2010. I received them seconds ago.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Do you want to share those with the committee?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'm more than willing to share them with anybody. I have not read them, so I kind of want to make sure that once I have read them, I have an opportunity for questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, at a future meeting.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And could we have a copy of them too, please?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The government: Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I wanted to think about the legislation, because there have been a number of questions about the corporate restructuring that's going on since Mr. McKerlie arrived at Ornge. The legislation that the minister tabled has some things that are fairly self-evident in it, like investigation and supervision powers commensurate with the Hospitals Act and whistle-blower protection. But when I get into corporate law, not being a lawyer, my eyes glaze over.

In section 3 of the act, there are clauses which seem to be related to the Corporations Act that talk about certain continuing bodies and civil, criminal and administrative litigation and continuing processes and things. I'm wondering if we could get the layman's Coles notes about what that section of the legislation means, Deputy.

Mr. Saäd Rafi: Okay, certainly. Ornge continues to be a Canada Corporations Act corporation in the not-for-profit realm. There's a need for clauses in the Ambulance Act for what's called continuance. It's my understanding that in order to export out of a Canadian legislative environment into a provincial legislative environment, the department in the federal government that will have to determine whether that's possible, when Ornge makes an application to do so—I understand that the board has agreed to proceed that way. The federal government will look to see, are there similar elements in their legislation in a provincial piece of legislation? There are, but that provincial piece of legislation is not yet proclaimed.

So, in order for Ornge to be imported into provincial legislative authority and exported out of federal legislative authority—the not-for-profit component of the Canada Corporations Act or a separate piece of legislation—we need these clauses to be passed, if the Legislature chooses to do so, in that legislation.

If that doesn't happen, there are several elements that will not be possible for us to have—the government and the ministry to have—powers over Ornge as a corporation, because they'll continue to be governed under the Canada Corporations Act. That means that legislative authority on things outside the standards and regulations of the Ambulance Act will not be possible through a provincial piece of legislation. I hope that doesn't confuse people.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So for us to get full control over Ornge and to complete the transition which Mr. McKerlie is going through and to get Ornge regularized as a provincial corporation over which we have full control, we need this particular section of the legislation?

Mr. Saäd Rafi: I don't mean to correct you, but in order to have legislative authority over Ornge as an entity, we need this continuance piece so we can import Ornge's current status into provincial status.

The already-mutually-amended performance agreement provides some control provisions, as you probably know, that could be instituted because they have had agreement of the board. But the legislation provides the ability for the minister to issue directives, to appoint a supervisor—a special investigator—and to require the establishment of a whistle-blower policy. Some of those elements, such as directives, I believe—sorry, the whistle-blower piece—could still go forward without the continuance.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. And there's a couple of clauses here which talk about an existing cause of action, claim or liability—to prosecution being continued; civil, criminal, administrative, investigative or other action or proceedings being continued.

And again, somebody who can put it in lay language, corporate—like, have we got a lawyer here? In order for us to take any prosecution or litigation against the bodies that are being wound down, we need to have this legislation in effect to move things over, as it were.

Mr. Saäd Rafi: Sorry, I'm just checking. I want to make sure I get the—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, I understand that, because I'm asking questions that—

Mr. Saäd Rafi: Sorry, I'm going off memory now. I think that section refers to—any right someone had against that corporation as a Canadian corporation would still have rights against the corporation as a provincial corporation. So we're trying to demonstrate that this isn't trying to take away a supplier's right to bring action against that corporation. It would still continue. So the same provisions—and that's part of the continuance provisions: to demonstrate to the federal government, who's responsible for the Canadian Corporations Act, that we have a mirror set of legislative provisions to import them into.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So in order to complete the work of regularizing Ornge, it's really important then that we have this legislation in place in order to complete the corporate restructuring. Is that correct?

Mr. Saäd Rafi: Yes, but in addition, I would say that not only is that necessary, but it speaks to remedies prior to these actions being, in this case, put before the Legislature. There was no legislative authority over that corporate entity, the private corporate entity. The previous performance agreement—not the amended one—did not contemplate the ability to take out this organization, if you will, with notice, except for three years' notice. That notice, even if it were to be given, was obviously too long of a lead time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, thank you. I think that's helpful for us, because when we come to debate this in the Legislature, that's the part of the legislation which is very difficult, for those of us who are not lawyers, to appreciate what's being done here. So I think it's important for us to understand that there is some urgency with the legislation in terms of Mr. McKerlie being able to complete his work.

Is that correct, Mr. McKerlie? I see you nodding your head.

Mr. Ron McKerlie: That's our understanding, and we're moving forward to move from a corporation incorporated under the Canadian Corporations Act to one under the Ontario Business Corporations Act.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you need this to complete your work then?

Mr. Ron McKerlie: Well, I think, more importantly, that the ministry needs it to make sure that they can impose their will on us at some future time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Thank you very much, and I think we're beginning to see bells ringing. So if I could, Mr. Chair, at the end of the subcommittee meeting that we had the other day, I had indicated that there were some additional witnesses that the government would like to call, and the subcommittee was not amenable to that. So, just to give notice of motion, I do have a motion here to support calling additional members.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's fine. We won't deal with that today. I've also had members—it's obvious that we're going to need some more time. I've had Ms. Gélinas express a need for more time, Mr. Barrett has as well, with some of the presenters today. So it's something I would leave for the subcommittee to look at, to decide at a future meeting if we might have the deputy minister and some of his staff and perhaps Mr. McKerlie back to the committee.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Sorry, who was that you were suggesting come back?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Well, some of the presenters that were here today, including the deputy minister and Mr. McKerlie and Ms. Li—

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We can deal with that at subcommittee, Mrs. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Could we just clarify then that for next week you're going—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We're going to stick with the schedule that we have is the plan, so that we don't disrupt that, but at some future meeting you may be invited back here. But I would like to thank all the presenters for coming forward. Thank you, Minister and deputy minister.

The start time for next week is 9 a.m. on Wednesday. Thank you very much, committee.

The committee adjourned at 1500.

SUBCOMMITTEE REPORTS

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'd like to call this meeting to order. The first order of business—first of all, I'd like to introduce Catherine Beagan Flood, who's sitting beside me here. She's legal counsel for the committee.

Also, there is a fair amount of information that you'll find before you, and I don't know whether, Will, you would like to—

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, we'll do the subcommittee reports first and then Will will just point out what you have—the pile of paper—before you.

Liz, did you want to move one of the two subcommittee reports?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. I'll start with the first one, which is dated Thursday, March 29.

Your subcommittee met on Thursday, March 29, 2012, to consider the method of proceeding on the 2012 special report of the Office of the Auditor General on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services, and recommends the following:

(1) That witnesses be scheduled in 30-minute time slots on Wednesday, April 4, 2012.

(2) That the Honourable Michael Gravelle, Minister of Natural Resources, be removed from the witness list.

(3) That the committee clerk contact the Deputy Minister of Education to let the ministry know they will no longer be scheduled for Wednesday, April 25.

(4) That the committee clerk, in consultation with the Chair, be authorized prior to the adoption of the report of the subcommittee to commence making any preliminary arrangements necessary to facilitate the committee's proceedings.

I'll stop here, and then we'll vote on this and then deal with the other one.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. All in favour? Carried.

And the April 3?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. The second report:

Your subcommittee met on Tuesday, April 3, 2012, to consider the method of proceeding on the 2012 special report of the Office of the Auditor General on Ornge Air

Ambulance and Related Services, and recommends the following:

(1) That a letter be sent to all witnesses outlining the procedures, powers, privileges and witness protections afforded to those who may appear before the public accounts committee.

(2) That legal counsel be present at all hearings on the 2012 special report of the Office of the Auditor General on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services.

(3) That legal counsel provides advice as may be required by the Standing Committee on Public Accounts.

(4) That legal counsel distribute a letter to the Standing Committee on Public Accounts listing the potential areas where they could be of assistance during the hearings.

(5) That the committee clerk, in consultation with the Chair, be authorized prior to the adoption of the report of the subcommittee to commence making any preliminary arrangements necessary to facilitate the committee's proceedings.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): All in favour?

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: I want to speak to item number 3 on the subcommittee report before we vote on it.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Go ahead.

Mr. David Zimmer: Before we begin, Chair, I wonder if you might introduce the committee's counsel. Some of us have not met her yet.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Were you not here at the beginning of the meeting?

Mr. David Zimmer: I guess I was down the hall.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): This is Catherine Beagan Flood, who is counsel for the committee.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

I do want to speak for a few minutes, not on—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The only thing I'd say before you start, Mr. Zimmer, is that I could have you speak but I'd like to keep things on schedule as well for the benefit of those that are here before us.

Mr. David Zimmer: I don't expect I'll be more than five minutes.

Let me say at the outset that I'm not going to speak to any substantive issues before the committee, that is, substantive issue as to what went on or didn't go on in the Ornge scenario. I do want to speak to—and I particularly want to address my remarks to the inquiries counsel and I do want to speak then about matters of the processes of this committee, and in particular counsel's role at this committee.

Let me start my remarks—and I won't be more than five minutes. This inquiry raises very, very complex legal issues, issues surrounding what went on or didn't go on at Ornge. It raises complex legal issues because some witnesses before the committee, non-MPPs, are under oath. There is a parallel criminal investigation being conducted by the OPP. We have no knowledge of what's going on in that investigation or indeed where that's going to take us or who they're speaking to or not speaking to. I expect, in all probability, the likelihood of some complicated civil proceeding litigations that may, when this is all over, flow out of what went on or didn't go on at Ornge. So my questions and the issues that I want to raise are substantial about the process, in particular counsel's role.

In my view, the role of counsel is to advise the committee, give it counsel's best possible advice on an independent, non-partisan basis. Counsel, in my view, advises the Chair, takes questions from the Chair, offers guidance when asked and when not asked of the Chair and of the clerk of the committee, and indeed is available to all members of the committee, be they Liberal, Conservative or NDP, in how they can fulfill their duties and responsibilities.

Of particular concern are matters that may come before this inquiry and how those matters, depending on what this committee does with them or does not do with them, affect or may affect proceedings in the independent criminal investigation, potential civil proceedings dealing with the complex issues that we're dealing with here. So I have these questions that I'd just like to raise with counsel, about four or five of them, and perhaps she can assist us with them, or the Chair or the clerk.

I think we have to clearly understand, as members of this committee, the clerk and the Chair, the role of counsel and counsel's mandate. I can tell you that, as I understand it—and correct me if I'm wrong, Chair, or Mr. Clerk or Madam Counsel—you've been recently retained—that's what I'm advised—in the last few days or a week or so. Is that correct?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's correct. And the counsel has met with the subcommittee and the counsel has provided information, which you have before you, on how she thinks she can assist. But I think many of the points you make are the reason that we have retained counsel.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. So this issue came up about counsel's role and how counsel would fulfil that role in two previous inquiries before standing committees. One was the inquiry of August 1994, the Standing Committee on the Legislative Assembly, and the members of the committee there—MPPs Callahan, Chiarelli, Hansen, Harnick, Johnson, Marchese, Mathysen, Murphy, Waininger and Sutherland. Lisa Freedman was the clerk of the committee.

Now here's the important point: There were two counsels to the committee, Eleanore Cronk at Fasken and Calvin as senior counsel, and junior counsel William Hourigan, also at the same firm. As you know, counsel Eleanore Cronk was a distinguished lawyer who went on and now sits on the Ontario Court of Appeal.

In that inquiry—

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, if the member could get to the point, we have witnesses here. We have business to conduct. You haven't made a point yet, and it has been 10 minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: I appreciate that, Chair, but the role of counsel and what this committee has to do—we've got to get it right, because if we get it wrong, there are independent criminal investigations out there. There is complex civil litigation I expect to be pending, and what we do here, if we don't get it right, may compromise the independent criminal investigation and the work of the civil proceedings. So the investment of five or 10 minutes to ensure that we get it right is the right way to proceed.

In the two previous inquiries, they spent several days sorting out the role of counsel. I've got the transcripts here. I've asked the clerk to distribute the transcripts. You can see what then counsel Eleanore Cronk, now justice of the Court of Appeal, advised the committee as to what she thought the role of committee counsel was.

Similarly, with respect to the inquiry that was done by the Standing Committee on the Legislative Assembly dealing with Shelley Martel, there were another two distinguished counsels on that committee: Patricia Jackson at Tory, Tory, and Larry Taman, who went on to a distinguished role in government, as counsel of that committee.

He spent several pages—and they spent several half days, I think, of the subcommittee—sorting out what the role of counsel was to the committee. I think it's very, very important that counsel have the benefit of at least reviewing—and I've distributed the pages; there are four or five pages, I think—of that discussion of that counsel's thoughts on how the committee should receive the advice of counsel.

And I say that—

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, we've had this discussion. If the member thought this was so important, he should have brought this to our attention days ago when he had the opportunity to do so. None of us have an opportunity to review anything that you're bringing forward here today before we hear from witnesses. I'm suggesting to you, Mr. Zimmer, that what you're trying to do is simply rag the puck. We have witnesses here. We need to get to the business of what we're here to do. Table the information and we'll read it.

Mr. David Zimmer: I agree. We're here to get—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Point of order.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I did bring this information to the subcommittee yesterday and the subcommittee didn't want to discuss it any further, which is why we have a very vague clause number (3) in the committee report. So I'm sorry, but the process is, when we have a committee report where there's one clause under contention, this is our only opportunity to discuss it.

Mr. Frank Klees: We know full well what's going on here.

Mr. David Zimmer: Mr. Klees, in anticipation of your objection, I've done the research—

Mr. Frank Klees: You anticipated my objection?

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes, so I did the research last night. I've got about six questions that I distilled from the two transcripts of the two previous inquiries where those very, very distinguished counsels recognized the dangers of not getting this right.

We have people who are coming here under oath. They're entitled to be treated fairly, to protect their rights. Inquiry members, whether they're on the opposition side or this side, are entitled to know what advice they can call on from counsel and the like.

For a 10-minute investment, Mr. Klees, to get it right, how would you like it if we messed this up and later on, in a court proceeding, either civilly or criminally, there were rulings that because certain things were said or done or permitted to inquire here at this level, it jeopardized those proceedings? So let me just give you these—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Please get to the point, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, he's been at it for 15 minutes now.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, if you stopped interrupting me, I could get through it, Mr. Klees.

Interjections.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees, please let him make his point. I think this is important. Make your point, please.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you, Chair.

This is a distillation of what you will find in here, Madam Counsel. To what extent have you been briefed on the subject matters of these hearings? There are hundreds of millions of dollars at stake here, complex corporate reorganizations. I'd expect that you've at least seen the corporate structure of Ornge and all of that. Most counsels preparing for a complex hearing like this do need time to really adequately and sufficiently prepare so they can deal with matters as they come before this committee from witnesses, the Chair, the clerk or committee members.

The other counsels spent some time sorting out their role as independent counsel. Is it your role to determine whether witnesses are able to bring counsel with them to these hearings, and if so, what the role of a witness's counsel would be? Has thought been given to that? A lot of attention was paid to that in the transcripts. Have you made a determination, at this point, as to the rights of witnesses to attend with counsel and what role counsel can play?

Another question that came up: Considering that this committee has determined that all witnesses will be required to swear an oath, what's your view and what's your advice on determining at the outset whether, in fact, the witnesses have right to counsel, whether they should be advised of their right to counsel? What priority and how would counsel go about protecting the rights of witnesses if they appear here without counsel?

A number of our committee members have indicated the OPP investigation has to be the highest priority. Have you had an opportunity to assess, with the OPP, what the scope of their investigation is and how you will deal with matters should the OPP in its criminal investigation raise an issue that we ought not to go in that area or we should go in that area because it may jeopardize what they're doing?

Is your role as committee counsel to advise members of the appropriateness of their questions, having regard to the scope of the OPP investigation and the likelihood of civil proceedings subsequent to this hearing? Have you made a determination as to what types of questions members should avoid—avoid—asking witnesses to not jeopardize the OPP investigation and likely civil proceedings?

Lastly, there's going to be a large number of documents and a lot of testimony that amounts to matters that may or may not be subject to privilege or are protected by freedom of information. Is it your role to advise committee members as to how they should proceed in that regard?

So at first blush, it seems like just a relatively simple inquiry. We're going to be here; we're going to ask some questions of Ornge. But there are enormous consequences, as I've laid out, and I think I want to ask counsel—I want to be assured that counsel has essentially had adequate time to prepare in detail for her role in this committee and that she has had adequate time and can provide answers for those questions I've asked about how she will advise participants in this hearing.

I raise these questions both as an MPP and I raise these questions as an officer of the court, because I'm a barrister and a solicitor, and I have an obligation to speak to these matters both at that level as a counsel and as an officer of the court, as obviously you do, counsel.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for that, Mr. Zimmer. I'll ask our counsel—obviously you just gave many, many questions—whether she wants to respond a bit to it. But I would think that if she wants more time, you having just given all those questions, we can consider taking a recess as well. Do you want to respond, Cathy?

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: Yes, absolutely.

Mr. David Zimmer: And I've asked my questions all in the best sense of the word and in the interests of having a properly conducted hearing. Thank you.

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: Thank you, and I appreciate those questions. I think that you'll find there is a solicitor-client privilege memorandum that has been distributed to all members of the committee that addresses some of the questions that you've asked. There's also a letter that has been provided to witnesses, including witnesses scheduled for today, which also answers a number of the questions that you've asked.

To address the other matters, what I would recommend is that I provide to the committee another solicitor-client privilege memorandum to address the few additional issues that have come up in your questions today, or the committee could recess. But certainly, we've already addressed a number of the issues you have, and in light of the meetings that I've previously had with the Chair and with the subcommittee—

Mr. David Zimmer: May I ask, those issues that I've raised are not specious.

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: I'm sorry?

Mr. David Zimmer: The issues that I've raised are not specious issues.

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: I'm not suggesting that they're specious issues; simply, many of these matters have been addressed already in the memorandum that's provided by the committee. I am a bit concerned about giving privileged advice in public.

Mr. David Zimmer: Ah. Well, that raises things. So maybe we should have this discussion in camera. I ask—
Interjection.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, we have counsel here to seek counsel's advice. That's why the committee has retained counsel.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. We'll take a five-minute recess to discuss this.

The committee recessed from 0907 to 0915.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Could I ask the committee to decide on the subcommittee report, to adopt that, and then, immediately after, we shall go into closed session to further discuss the points raised by Mr. Zimmer.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just to make sure I understand what we're agreeing to, we'll agree to the subcommittee report that has item (3) in it, but then we will—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go into closed session to address—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —which is sort of a vague item (3), or would it be better if we recessed, discussed what we need to discuss and then possibly come up with—I guess what I'm looking for is, where is the outcome in terms of ability to flesh out number (3)?

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, okay. So that is another option. We could do it that way.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I think I would prefer that, because that gives us the option of fleshing out number (3) so that we have terms of reference when we come back from the in camera session.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So can we please decide on the subcommittee report minus point (3) then, please?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, that would be quite acceptable.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, I just want to—

Mr. David Zimmer: With the proviso—

Mr. Frank Klees: No. Mr. Zimmer—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Mr. Klees has the floor.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, it's very obvious what's going on here. You know, Mr. Zimmer came late to this meeting. There was information—

Mr. David Zimmer: One minute. The clock was wrong.

Mr. Frank Klees: No—8:30.

Mr. David Zimmer: The clock was running nine minutes late.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Zimmer, I let you speak.

Mr. David Zimmer: That's a silly argument. The clock was running nine minutes late.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer, please let Mr. Klees speak.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Zimmer, there was information at our desks that addressed most of the issues that you addressed in your delay tactic.

What is going on here, Mr. Chair, is precisely the reason that we called for a select committee of the Legislature, where the appropriate framework could be worked out, where the terms of reference could be worked out, where all of the issues that Mr. Zimmer addressed could have been worked out before we got into this situation.

We said from the very beginning that the public accounts committee is not the forum to review and to investigate the matters before us. It was the government, and Mr. Zimmer himself, in debate on the select committee, that made the point that this is all we need. Now he comes here and he delays the hearing. We have witnesses here who have come, who are prepared, have taken time out of their busy schedules to be here, and Mr. Zimmer shows up here to make the very arguments that we made in the Legislature as to why we need a select committee of the Legislature.

This is an insult to the people who are here, and what I'd ask Mr. Zimmer to do is to go back in the recess and tell his Premier that what is needed is a select committee. We're certainly prepared, Mr. Chair, to move that we defer these witnesses who have come here to a select committee so that we can get on and do this appropriately. But in the meantime, this is something that is an offence to this committee, and, Mr. Chair, I would ask you to see through what Mr. Zimmer is doing and ensure that we can get on with the business of this committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your point.

France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I have been on public accounts for a little while, and we've had contentious issues come before public accounts—you'll all remember eHealth—and we were able to continue to work together because we wanted to go to the bottom of this. Mr. Zimmer was there, Mrs Sandals was there, during those discussions.

This sudden change of tactic is really unpleasant. It's not productive and it's like—I understand they want to change the channel to something else than talking about Ornge. I guess they don't want to talk about Ornge, but this is what we're here to do.

They have, many, many times in the House, talked about the power of the public accounts committee, and most of this power comes from the fact that we all work together so that the good work of our auditor, of getting value for money, actually pans out to getting value for money for the people of Ontario. And, all of a sudden, to have this taken off on a tangent of legalese talk is not serving this committee well. It is certainly not serving the witnesses who have come. I am ready to ask those witnesses questions. I have no fear that any of the questions that I will be asking those people will run me or any of you into trouble. I say that we move ahead with what we had intended to do this morning. If we need more clarification as to how we will use our legal counsel, we can get back together next week during recess and have an in-depth briefing with our lawyer.

The people who are here today have been given their responsibility as to what being under oath means. The rest of it, to me, is business as usual. I will be asking the same questions of those witnesses that I have been asking every witness who has come to public accounts before. To sidetrack us, to recess, to make us basically not do our work is counterproductive to what we are here to do. We are here for the people of Ontario. We're here to make sure that they get value for money. There are people here today who have information that will help make light and will make sure we get value for money for the people of Ontario. This entire circus disgusts me.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, France. Liz.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: First of all, let me make it perfectly clear that there is nothing I would like to do more than to hear from Mr. Smitherman. I am absolutely delighted to hear from my friend Mr. Smitherman. But there are two precedents in recent memory for a committee hiring legal counsel. This is very unusual. In fact, it's got nothing to do with select committees. The Gigantes inquiry was a standing committee. The Martel inquiry was a standing committee. It's got nothing to do with whether it's a standing committee or a select committee.

When you look at what happened in those previous cases, the subcommittee took the time to work out in more detail exactly what the role of counsel is. The subcommittee then made recommendations to the full committee which had the role of counsel fleshed out.

We're just making it up as we're going along. I did suggest yesterday that, in fairness to the witnesses that were scheduled this morning, we should ask them to come back in a couple of weeks or to rearrange the schedule or something, because I didn't want this to happen. When the other two parties said, "No, we don't want to discuss the role of counsel in advance in detail," you leave us no option but to bring it to the floor of the committee. I would have been perfectly happy to work through this yesterday or to do a formal deferral of the witnesses, but it seems to me very strange that, when we're dealing with a report of the auditor where everybody seems to be in agreement that one of the issues is,

"Was the performance agreement thought out well enough in advance?" and now we're doing the terms of reference for a new enterprise, "Were they thought out well enough in advance?"—we're doing exactly the same thing here. We're going down a new road; we need to think out the terms of reference of legal counsel because it matters.

I have never, ever, been on a standing committee where the witnesses were sworn and where the committee had counsel. That changes the game. We need to sort out what the rules are and what the role of counsel is. I would note that yes, this appeared on our desk this morning, but from the point of view of the witness, the witness didn't get to read it until he was going out the door this morning and opened his email.

So, in fairness to the witnesses, we're also disadvantage the witnesses if they don't have a chance to look at the implications of being sworn in advance. I totally support the suggestion of the Chair that we go in camera and sort it out.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Barrett.

Mr. Toby Barrett: I have a motion that is before members of the committee. I wish to have this motion considered before we go forward with our witnesses.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We have business, obviously. We'll get to that, but at this point we're still discussing point (3) of the subcommittee report.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Certainly. Thank you, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just to pick up on something that NDP member France Gélinas said: Look, the public accounts committee is in fact the place to do this exercise. But for the public accounts committee—and this is the thrust of my submission—given all of the complexities that we have to deal with, what we have to do is get the ground rules right about how we go about this inquiry.

One of the essential elements of those ground rules is counsel's role. For instance, has counsel had a chance to read in detail, consider in detail, the close-to-200-page performance agreement, which is going to be essential to this thing? In the transcript from the Gigantes inquiry, there are 14 single-spaced pages of advice and decisions about how inquiry counsel Eleanor Cronk was going to proceed, and similarly in the Martel thing. I think that it behooves all of us to take the benefit of that advice, go in camera, sort out the ground rules and then proceed so we can really dig into this in a fair way, without jeopardizing the inquiries.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Jagmeet.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you, Mr. Chair. With respect to the role of counsel, it's very confusing or disturbing to me that if we didn't have counsel here today, if we hadn't hired counsel, we would've gone on with our inquiry, asked the questions, as we did on the first day of this committee when we had witnesses, and proceeded as normal. The addition of having counsel, who is—I think it should be very, very clear. Counsel has one role and one role only: to assist this committee in finding the truth. The committee's purpose is to search for the truth, to uncover what happened and to assess value for the money that was put out by the taxpayers. That's it. There's no complexity to that. We are here to find the truth. That's of paramount concern. As a secondary concern, counsel can advise us if an issue arises, and then that's the purpose of it.

To suggest that having counsel will delay the truth-searching concept of this committee—it's very disturbing and very concerning that Mr. Zimmer would raise that issue. There is no issue here. We have witnesses; we'll hear from them. If a legal issue arises, we have counsel; we can ask questions of her. That's it. There's nothing more complicated than that. The notion that having counsel would delay this hearing is so counterproductive and so contrary to common sense, it defies belief. I don't understand that at all.

Mr. David Zimmer: On the contrary, we want counsel—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, I think we all see what's happening here. I would like to make a motion that we dismiss counsel. We don't need counsel. What we need to do is get to the truth and move on, and I would like to make a formal motion that we dismiss counsel and that we retain her for the select committee when the government agrees to strike that. That is my motion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We would need that in writing, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'll put it in writing.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If you get that to the clerk, then we'll recess and print that and vote on it.

A ten-minute recess.

The committee recessed from 0928 to 0952.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, so the first order of business, then, now that we're back in session, is if we could get the subcommittee report, minus point (3)—

Mr. David Zimmer: Sorry, I can't hear.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): —the subcommittee report, minus point number (3), approved by the committee. We would then go to debate on the motion put forward by Mr. Klees.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So moved.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): All in agreement? Agreed. That's the subcommittee report, minus number (3), approved.

Okay. Now we have—Mr. Klees, if you want to move your motion.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, Mr. Chair, I move—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Point of order, Chair: There are four motions that are on our order paper for today. How does this one get precedence? If it's not an amendment to the subcommittee report, how does it get precedence?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): This directly affects our proceedings right now. The others do not.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts direct the clerk of the committee to dismiss legal counsel retained to provide advice to the committee, given that the committee is being unnecessarily delayed through concerns raised relating to the role of counsel. The committee is fully aware of its responsibilities and believes it is in the public interest to proceed with its scheduled business.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Comments?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I wanted to second the motion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay.

And just for all the TV cameras in the room, if you could please keep the cameras off the desks and not be filming any of the materials on the desks, please, we'd appreciate it.

Sorry, so you second the motion?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I want to second the motion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's not required.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. I can provide some commentary, then.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please do.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Chair—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sorry, Jagmeet. Frank, did you want to go first on this?

Mr. Frank Klees: If you don't mind.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: No, not at all.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, first, I want to thank Ms. Flood for the work that she has done so far for this committee. I appreciated the helpful memorandum. I certainly will be prepared to recommend Ms. Flood's services for the select committee when the government finally decides to get around to respecting the will of the Legislature with regard to that committee.

The motion before us is straightforward. It respects the fact that members of this committee are fully aware of their responsibilities not only as members of this committee in terms of how to conduct its business but also the sensitive nature of the issue before us.

There isn't a member of this committee who does not have extensive experience as a legislator in the various committees of this government, who does not understand the importance of respecting the parameters we discussed at length, not only leading up to this committee hearing, but also it was discussed in the subcommittee. We have witnesses here who have been called, who are ready to give us the information based on our questioning. I know that every member of this committee will in fact ensure that their questions respect the parameters of this committee and will respect the sensitivity.

My point with this motion is very simply to let Mr. Zimmer and the government members know that we see through what has happened here this morning. There was an opportunity for Mr. Zimmer to raise this informally with committee members. Had he been sincere in his words as he expressed them this morning—there was ample time to have this discussion, to bring the information forward that he tabled with us at the last minute here today. There was no reason to delay the proceedings. We could have had as many hours of consultation with legal counsel as we felt necessary.

It was very obvious that the government members don't want to have the discussion about Ornge. They don't want us to get on with getting the information from witnesses. Quite frankly, I believe that it is in the public interest for this committee, which has been struck for the purpose of reviewing the Auditor General's report as it relates with Ornge, to get on with its business. To do anything less, I believe, is quite frankly obstructing the work of this committee.

It's for that reason I brought that motion forward. I trust that members—members of the government side as well, who may not have been in on the play that Mr. Zimmer brought to this committee this morning, because I saw some surprised looks over there as well. This is an independent committee. It should not be a partisan forum. This is not about protecting anyone in this government; it's about getting to the truth. That's what this motion gives us an opportunity to do, and I ask members to support it. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Jagmeet?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I think we all agree that the spirit of this committee is to uncover the truth. We're here to question the witnesses who are here in attendance and the witnesses who will come in the future. Again, no disrespect to counsel, but if retaining counsel somehow presents an obstacle to getting to the truth, if having counsel being retained somehow limits our ability or delays our ability to hear from witnesses, then it's not in the spirit of this committee. We need to continue what this committee is here to do—continue its work. No disrespect to counsel, but if the presence of counsel is going to be used to delay or to slow down this process, then it's not in the spirit of this committee. That's why I support this motion.

With respect to witness protection, witness protection has been well covered in law. We know that there's whistle-blower protection that already exists. It has been well established by the Supreme Court of Canada. O'Brien and Bosc clearly indicate that witnesses who testify in committee are given immunity. That's something that's also protected by the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. That's already established. The law is very clear on that; we don't need any further clarification on that issue.

In terms of witnesses who are giving oaths, that's something that this committee has done numerous times. All throughout eHealth, there was testimony that was provided, that there was no—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: There was no oath, though.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I would respect it if I was not interrupted. You'll have your time to indicate what you want to indicate afterwards.

If there is someone who has provided evidence before this committee—it has happened during eHealth. There was no counsel present at that point in time. To request people to tell the truth is something that's very sensible; it's very obvious. They're testifying before a committee made up of members of Parliament. It would be very understandable for those who are testifying to be under an oath, to promise to tell the truth. We would ask no less of anyone. We assume that members will be telling the truth, and that's why we don't require them to give an oath.

It's my further submission that with respect to any criminal proceedings, there is no way that evidence that is adduced here would affect any criminal proceedings. They are going to go on as they go on. They will continue as they continue. What evidence is adduced here from the Minister of Health previously and from members of Ornge—their evidence will be kept protected by the whistle-blower protection, and that will not limit whatever the OPP is investigating. They can continue their investigation.

To suggest that we should end our discussion here, we should limit our discussion here, simply because we're afraid of any limitation on any criminal proceedings—we can continue with our discussion here, uncover the truth, do what we're here to do, and let the other investigation continue as it will.

My submission is, in conclusion, that we need to continue our work, and if that means dismissing counsel to continue our work, we should do so, so that the work of this committee can continue.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you, Chair. Look: Let me put the issue in very simple language. This committee ought not to fly by the seat of its pants when there's an ongoing, parallel criminal investigation, number one.

Number two: For Mr. Singh to make the statement, which just stunned me, that evidence given under oath at this committee can't be obtained and used to cross-examine witnesses and so on in other proceedings is wrong. I expect you must have skipped the evidence class.

Number three, to have another issue here, which is sort of hanging over—I'd be interested to get counsel's remarks on this. We've got two tiers of witnesses here. We've got civilian witnesses, non-MPP witnesses, who come and give evidence, and they're compelled to give it under oath, and all of the restrictions and parameters and so forth apply to what they can say and what they can't say, etc., etc. Counsel will understand that. Then we have the MPP witnesses, who are not under oath, who are treated differently and have a different set of parameters.

All I ask is that somebody—counsel, committee clerk, Chair—carefully consider those transcripts—the Gigantes and the Martel transcripts—and let us not proceed by the seat of our pants.

I want to ensure—and I'm speaking against Mr. Klees's motion. We do need committee counsel. We need the best possible committee counsel. We've got a distinguished counsel from a very, very distinguished law firm; she knows her stuff. But let's make sure that we get the ground rules straight so that we preserve the integrity of this committee's findings, whatever they may be, and we preserve them in such a way that they don't unwittingly jeopardize other proceedings which may arise out of the criminal proceedings. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you. I certainly support what Mr. Zimmer has said, but I think it is important to understand that the idea of hiring counsel was actually not an idea that came from any particular party. It was the clerk's suggestion that we hire counsel. The subcommittee met and we all agreed that that would be worthwhile because of the fact that this is unlike things that we have done in previous memory.

eHealth was mentioned. At the time we did the eHealth inquiry, there was not an ongoing criminal investigation. The witnesses were not sworn. This is the first time in my experience as an MPP that we have ever sworn the witnesses at a committee. When we did the Select Committee on Mental Health and Addictions, we certainly weren't swearing witnesses. So it isn't that select committee and counsel are one thing and standing committee isn't.

This is different from a situation we have ever been in before, and my concern is—and I raised it yesterday—that we need to sort out the role of counsel. We have never, within my term here—so that's over eight years—had a counsel at committee and have never talked about what we want the role to be. The terms of reference, I suspect, are somewhat different than we might have had in the past, and we need to sort it out, because in the possible roles of counsel is the issue of pre-screening questions from committee. I can't imagine Mr. Klees wants his questions pre-screened, so in my—you're looking very surprised, Mr. Klees. We need to sort out what's the role of counsel, which is what I was saying yesterday when the subcommittee first had an opportunity to do this. I suggested we needed to deal with what's the role of counsel.

We are spending way more time discussing whether or not we should have a discussion than actually getting on with the discussion. We could actually facilitate getting to the witnesses if we would just have a discussion about what is the role of counsel.

So I will move an amendment to the motion that is on the floor, and the amendment is "and that the decision to dismiss counsel to the committee not be determined until the committee receives an in camera briefing from counsel with respect to the potential role of counsel."

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Are you comfortable with that, or would you like a copy of the amendment? Members, are you comfortable with the verbal—

Mr. Frank Klees: I am, quite frankly, very comfortable with having a vote on that right away as part of—we'll vote on the amendment, and then we'll vote on the motion.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And speaking to the amendment.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes. Can you restate the amendment, please, as well?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: "And that the decision to dismiss counsel to the committee not be determined until the committee receives an in camera briefing from counsel with respect to"—I have to read my own writing here—"the potential role of counsel."

So what continues to concern me is that, in the subcommittee meeting, there was a list of possibilities that was presented to us. I asked yesterday that we go through those potential roles and determine in detail what it is that the potential role of counsel is. It seems to me that to start the hearings—I understand we already did a day with the deputy and the ADM and the minister, which was like our conventional public accounts hearing. But we're moving into a different realm where we've got external witnesses who are being sworn in. We really do need to determine where we expect counsel to step in, what her role is, if any, in advance. We need to sort it out, not at some case-by-case on-the-fly basis where we're going to be coloured by who the witness is. We need to have a neutral, non-witness influence discussion about what is the role of counsel.

That's all I'm asking for, that we have the discussion. We've wasted all morning thinking about whether or not we can discuss the discussion.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who's wasting time now?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Are you finished?

Mr. Ouellette—Jerry.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. You know, having been a member of this committee for almost five years and chaired many committees—and some of them were very controversial in the past—and sat through other aspects such as eHealth, we didn't have legal advice at that time nor did we have legal advice during the first presenters of this committee.

I do have concern regarding a precedent being set that any controversial issues found within the Legislature can be delayed by enacting actions such as OPP investigations for further actions of this committee. I believe, quite frankly, that one of two things is occurring: Either there is a lack of belief in the ability of the counsel that has been presented before us, in that they do not have the capacity to advise us with the correct movement forward, or it should have taken place already; or the full intent is to delay the committee's actions and recess this committee until such time as the OPP have completed a complete investigation.

I don't believe that it is moving forward in the best interests of this committee, and I think that we should move forward with the question that has been presented before us, Mr. Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: To the amendment: Of course, the other reason to give counsel a chance to do her work and brief us and find out what her view of things is, number one, so that counsel can fulfill her obligations to the committee and its witnesses that appear before it, and—and I say this with the greatest of respect—so that counsel can fulfill her professional obligations as a lawyer and an officer of the court and so on. I want to make sure that the counsel has every opportunity to digest and familiarize herself with this very, very complex matter.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'd like to call the question on the amendment and call the vote.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any further debate?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Recorded vote.

Ayes

McNeely, Moridi, Sandals, Zimmer.

Nays

Barrett, Gélinas, Klees, Singh.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): It being a tie vote, I will vote against the amendment.

Now I call the same question on the actual motion. All in favour? All opposed?

Once again, I will vote against the motion, the reason being that the full committee has already decided the matter of agreeing to hire legal counsel. So I'm maintaining the status quo of the committee.

The committee has already decided to have the hearings go on as well. I would suggest that we go into closed session so that we can decide the parameters of the legal counsel, so that we can continue with the work of the committee.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Chair, I do have a motion. When is the appropriate time this morning to present this motion?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We can come out of closed session at the end to look at your motion. Now we will go into closed session, so we will need to clear the room.

The committee continued in closed session from 1011 to 1230.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If I can call the meeting to order: First of all, I'd like to point out that there has been a change in the agenda for this afternoon for the witnesses that will be coming before the committee. We had an empty slot at 1 o'clock, so George Smitherman has offered to come back and present at 1 o'clock. Also, the chair of the board of Ornge is going to be presenting at 2 o'clock instead of Mr. Barry McLellan, board member, who is going to be called at a later date.

At this point, we have point (3) to do with legal counsel. Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, and just to note that we have sorted out the details of this in camera. I am pleased to move that legal counsel provide advice as may be required by the Standing Committee on Public Accounts.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Is there agreement on that? All in agreement? All agreed? Carried.

SPECIAL REPORT, AUDITOR GENERAL: ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE AND RELATED SERVICES

MINISTRY OF ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND INNOVATION

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our first presenter this afternoon is going to be from the Ministry of Economic Development and Innovation: Wendy Tilford, Deputy Minister. Are you present?

Did you want to be affirmed, Ms. Tilford?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Sworn.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sworn. Okay. Welcome to the committee.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Ms. Tilford, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Yes.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I was reminded by legal counsel that you did receive the "Witnesses Appearing before Standing Committee on Public Accounts" information binder?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Yes, I did. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We have half an hour in total, so that will mean there are five minutes for a presentation and then there will be eight minutes split amongst the three different parties for questioning. So, please, go ahead.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Good afternoon to the Chair and to the committee members. I'm Wendy Tilford. I'm Deputy Minister of Economic Development and Innovation. I was appointed to that position in December 2011 when the Ministries of Research and Innovation and Economic Development and Trade were merged. Prior to that, I was Deputy Minister of Economic Development and Trade. I was appointed to that position in February 2010.

The mandate of our ministry is jobs and the economy. We support the domestic and international growth of Ontario companies. We provide programs and services to foster innovation and we promote Ontario as the best choice for foreign direct investment.

I have no involvement with respect to the creation of Ornge, its structure or the delivery of its mandate. However, since the Ministry of Economic Development and Trade had some interaction with Ornge with respect to a 2011 trade mission, I thought the committee would appreciate some background on this.

The ministry—sometimes with partners, sometimes on its own—hosts about 60 trade missions annually. We have found it to be a very good method to introduce Ontario companies to new market opportunities.

In 2010, the ministry was considering, in partnership with the Canadian-Arab Business Council, a trade mission to focus on the growing health care market in the Middle East. Ontario is home to many innovative health care companies that could benefit from expanding markets. The mission took place from January 26 to February 2, 2011.

As with all trade missions, we promote the trip to as many Ontario companies as possible in the sector. There were 20 organizations on this mission, and Ornge was one of those companies. Ornge was represented by Lisa Kirbie, the director of regulatory affairs, and Paul Carter, the VP of sales and marketing.

While I interacted with all the companies on the mission at group sessions and receptions, the government program was separate from the business program. I did not meet with Ornge or any of the other companies individually during the development of the mission, nor did I accompany Ornge or any company on their business meetings in the Middle East.

As the committee is well aware, I was copied on the memo from Ornge dated January 19. While I do not have a detailed recollection of the contents of the memo, I do recall looking at it and noting that it focused primarily on Ornge's organizational structure.

As the focus of my ministry at the time was the trade mission and as the areas outlined in the memo were better considered by the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care officials who were already copied on that memo, I did not take further action on the memo.

A few weeks later—after the mission—in mid-February I received an email from one of Ornge's trade mission participants requesting a meeting. Our ministry meets with businesses in the province every week. I would always meet with a company that had participated on a mission, hoping to learn about mission outcomes and their opinion of our services. So I and two officials from our trade division met with Ornge in mid-March 2011. Ornge provided an overview of the company and their services. For our ministry, the focus of the meeting was to seek feedback on our export services to assist with the ongoing delivery of our trade mandate.

While I had no further involvement with Ornge after that meeting, the ministry had a few interactions, mainly focused on mission follow-up.

With that said, I would be pleased to answer any questions the committee has.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for your presentation. Just to explain the way we're going to do this: For the first presentation, we'll start with the opposition, then the third party and the government. For the next presentation, we'll start with the third party; the next presentation, we'll start with the government. Everyone will get equal time.

Who in the opposition would like to ask questions? Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Chair. Ms. Tilford, thank you for being here today. I have copies—you don't recall the letter you received, the January 19 letter—

Ms. Wendy Tilford: No, I said I did recall it.

Mr. Frank Klees: You do?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: But you don't recall the specifics?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Not the specifics.

Mr. Frank Klees: Clerk, could we have the letter distributed, please? The reason for that—I just want to refer you to a couple of points there.

Can I ask you, first of all, with regard to the trade mission: Who would have paid for Ms. Kirbie and Mr. Carter to attend that trade mission?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: All of the participants pay a $1,500 fee to be part of the mission. That particular mission was paid to the Canadian-Arab Business Council, and it covered ground transportation and various reception and meeting expenses they would have when they were in-market. Any other expenses incurred by the companies were paid directly by the companies who participated.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, so Ornge would've covered all of those fees, the accommodations—

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I'm sorry?

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you have any idea what the total cost would have been after accommodation? I'm assuming the $1,500 is the registration fee to be part of it.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: That's correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: Any idea what the overall cost would be?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: It depends, because each company makes their own arrangements.

Mr. Frank Klees: It depends on which hotel they're staying at.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: It does. They make those choices themselves.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. With regard to the letter—I think you've been given a copy now, have you?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Could we ask—please.

You were copied on this letter along with many others, including the principal secretary to the Premier; policy advisers to the Premier; the Deputy Minister of Finance; the Deputy Minister of Health; the Deputy Minister and CEO of Infrastructure Ontario; the chief of staff to the Minister of Finance; the chief of staff to the Minister of Economic Development and Trade; the chief of staff to the Minister of Health and Long-Term Care; the director of the Emergency Health Services branch; Dr. Christopher Mazza; Mr. Tom Lepine, who was the COO of Ornge at the time; and the entire board of directors.

You held, at the time, the role of Deputy Minister, Economic Development and Trade.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: You say you read the letter when you received it?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: No, I said I remembered receiving the package, but I don't remember all the details of it. I didn't go through it thoroughly.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can you just tell me how thoroughly you did go through it?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I read the executive summary, so I know in the executive summary enough there that was said that no public funds would be used for what Ornge was proposing. I knew that it dealt with changes to their corporate structure. I knew that it said that whatever they were doing aligned with the agreement they had with the Ministry of Health. However, I've never seen the agreement with the Ministry of Health, so it would be very difficult for me to assess whether that would be true or not. I also noted that it was addressed to the Ministry of Health, so I knew that they were the prime recipient on the letter.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you made the assumption that if the Minister of Health received this—and, I'm assuming, all these other people who were copied on it—that any details would be looked after by them? Is that right?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I also, as I said, received an email from Ornge with an invitation to meet, and they referenced that the Ministry of Health had been talking to them about this.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you meet with Ornge?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Yes, I did. I said I did meet with Ornge; I met with them in March.

Mr. Frank Klees: And they would have reviewed this letter?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: No, they didn't—

Mr. Frank Klees: What was the nature of that meeting with them?

1240

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I didn't know. I thought it was probably—in their email they referenced the trade mission, so I would have attended the meeting with the anticipation of talking about the trade mission. They did give a presentation that talked about their services. They talked about some of their service metrics and they talked about their organization.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did they in that meeting discuss with you their intention to put airlines out of business and take over and bring in-house all of the both fixed-wing and helicopter services that they were, at the time, contracting out to?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I don't remember them describing it that way.

Mr. Frank Klees: What would your reaction have been had they told you that?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Really, not knowing how the Ministry of Health's contract is set up with them, I wouldn't be able to comment on that.

Mr. Frank Klees: In fact, Mr. McKerlie, when he was here, referred to the fact that they have standing offer agreements. He listed a number of those companies. What he failed to tell us, and we'll follow up with him, is that some of those that were on the list, Ornge has actually put out of business because they brought in-house all of that service. They've decided to own helicopters. They've decided to own aircraft. In the past, those were contracted out to Ontario businesses who know the business, who were qualified.

Obviously, that in itself is a contribution to the economic development regionally as well as throughout Ontario. I just thought that given your responsibilities for economic development, that in itself may have been a red flag for you, or at least a point of discussion.

I'd like to refer you to appendix E, which is the last page of this letter. This attachment describes the corporate structure that Ornge had planned—

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Sorry, I just want to get my glasses out so I can see.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay—that Ornge was in the process of implementing. For someone who is involved on a day-to-day basis with corporate structures and economic activity—it's the very last page, appendix E.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes, Mr. Klees.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I have it now, thank you.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you see this when you got your copy of the letter?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: There were a number of complicated diagrams in what they sent me. I can't tell you if I specifically saw this one.

Mr. Frank Klees: If someone came in to you today and said, "Here's an organization that I am putting together to deliver air ambulance services in the province of Ontario," what would your immediate reaction be as you look at this diagram?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: That it's a complicated diagram, but other than the details of it and how it related to the agreement they had with the Minister of Health, I couldn't have commented.

Mr. Frank Klees: Would it have prompted you to ask some questions about why such a complex organization was necessary?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Not when I knew that the Ministry of Health was interfacing with the company on this, I wouldn't have.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you relied, as a deputy minister, on the Minister of Health to ensure that all of this was kosher?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I relied on the minister and ministry—I deal more with the ministry than I do with the minister—because they would have had the relationship with Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: And the responsibility of oversight, I'm assuming, right?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Well, knowledge of the contract and the contractual agreements that would be had with that organization, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you very much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Who would like to question from the NDP? France, go ahead.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you for coming. My first question will be quite brief. You've made reference to an email that you received from Ornge asking you for a meeting, to which you said you agreed to meet. Would it be possible for you to track down that email and share it with the committee?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Yes, it would.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, thank you. I would appreciate if you could do that.

The second question I have is that we know that Minister Papatello visited AgustaWestland, the company that sold Ornge its helicopters, and then they paid Ornge $6.7 million, in what looks much like a kickback right now. Do you know, when Minister Papatello met with AgustaWestland, if they discussed Ornge at all?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: So what I do know about discussions with the company that you referenced is the ministry and the minister had met them at the Farnborough air show in 2010. So I would have been present at that meeting. There was no discussion about Ornge. In 2011, at the Paris air show, there would have been a contact made there. I wasn't present at that, but my understanding was that there was no discussion about Ornge. And the minister met with the company when she was on a trade mission. I was not present on that one, but I understand there was also no discussion about Ornge.

The purpose of our interaction with that company was to attract them as a foreign direct investor in the province. So we were interested in them setting up some kind of training or manufacturing facility in the province. That was our interest in discussion with that company.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. In your capacity at Economic Development and Trade, you receive a memo from a publicly funded provider saying that they received a $5-million payout from a provider. Would that raise flags? When you deal with businesses where a business buys something from a provider and then the provider gives money back, have you come upon businesses that deal like that?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Are you referencing something that was in the January 19 memo?

M^{me} France G  linas: No. I'm referencing in the work that you do for the government—you deal with a lot of businesses.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I do.

M^{me} France G  linas: So when a business transaction looks like I buy something from you—like Ornge buying something from AgustaWestland, and then Agusta giving money back to Ornge—if you see those kinds of transactions going on between businesses, is there any comment you can make?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: How would I know about that transaction?

M^{me} France G  linas: You would have been told.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I wasn't told about that transaction.

M^{me} France G  linas: But if you were told, would you have any comments to make?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I would want to understand the terms of the transaction before I could comment.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. When you received the 35-page memo, were you surprised that you had been copied on it?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I get copied on a lot of material. I wasn't sure what the intent was of copying me on it.

M^{me} France G  linas: Did you ever clarify why you had been copied on it?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: No, I didn't, because many people were copied on it, and it was addressed to the Ministry of Health.

M^{me} France G  linas: So you received it, you read the executive summary and you put it aside?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I did.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. And you were comfortable putting it aside, because you trusted that the Ministry of Health was going to do the follow-up?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I didn't have any knowledge to be able to participate in that discussion, yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Good—is it still morning? It's afternoon. Good afternoon.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Good afternoon.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I just have a couple of questions with respect to your dealings, or any conversations you might have been involved in, with AgustaWestland. During that discussion when the minister was hoping to have AgustaWestland invest in Ontario or provide some sort of training facility or facilities to manufacture their product, their helicopters, here—

Ms. Wendy Tilford: As we do with many companies.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes, of course.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: They are a core business.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Certainly. What stage did those discussions get to?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: They were quite early in their discussions. We haven't landed that investment.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Was there any indication on behalf of AgustaWestland that they were interested in investing in Ontario?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: I think they were interested in many jurisdictions—nothing specific—and certainly listened to the merits of Ontario. Our job is to sell the province and the merits of the province.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Certainly. Was there any discussion about providing helicopters to Ontario in general, just providing the product itself?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Was there anything that AgustaWestland indicated they'd like to see in Ontario to make it desirable for them to invest in Ontario?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I have no further questions.

M^{me} France G  linas: No further questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much.

To the government: Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Mr. Chair, I don't have any questions—my colleague does—but I just want to take a minute, 60 seconds or so. This morning there was an exchange, essentially, between Mr. Singh, the member for Bramalea–Gore–Malton, and the exchange was about how taking an oath for citizen witnesses might differ from how MPP witnesses are taken.

Citizen oaths—obligations flow from putting their hand on the holy book of their choice, or affirming—and it's a very dramatic exercise—to tell the truth and so on. MPPs' responsibility to tell the truth flows from the legislative act and rules governing how they conduct themselves as MPPs. Both parties have an obligation to tell the truth. The point that I was trying to make was that it was more dramatic for a civilian witness to have a hand up on a holy book and affirm.

In the course of that exchange, Mr. Singh made the point that the obligations were the same. He was correct on that; I put a different emphasis on it. But I particularly regret my unfortunate remark that he'd missed his evidence school class. I apologize to Mr. Singh, the member for Bramalea–Gore–Malton, for that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. Are there further questions?

Mr. David Zimmer: No, I have no further questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you, Deputy. You made reference to the fact that Ornge was included in an Ontario trade mission to the Middle East. I wonder if you could give us a brief idea how firms are chosen to go on a trade mission.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: We advertise trade missions, usually electronically, to as many companies in the sector as we can, and companies respond by completing an application if they're interested. That's pretty much how it's done. There may be the odd firm that comes to us, that submits an application, and when we talk to them, we realize, in conversation with them, that they're not quite prepared to take this on yet, and maybe some seminars or something else would be a better vehicle first for them. But other than that, first-come, first-serve is the way we decide on who goes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. So that's really cut and dried: first-come, first-serve.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: Very, and in this case, because we did it in conjunction with the Canada-Arab Business Council, all the interaction like that—the submitting of the applications—was done to them. It wasn't even done to the ministry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, okay. So the application was actually made through the Canada-Arab Business Council, as opposed to the ministry.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: That's correct, and so was the payment.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So I'm thinking, then, that it's probably—well, let me just ask you the question. Were you instructed at any point by the minister or any of the minister's political staff to include Ornge on the mission?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: No, never.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Clearly, that would not be the case, because somebody else was making the decision anyway, not you.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: That's correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I know my colleague is curious about where you went on the—so I'll turn it over to my colleague here.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Moridi.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you, Mr. Chair, and thank you, Deputy, for taking the time and attending this meeting. Yes, my question is, as Ms. Sandals mentioned, which countries in the Middle East did this mission visit?

Ms. Wendy Tilford: We went to Dubai. Then we went to Abu Dhabi, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Qatar.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: It was a busy mission.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Yes. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any further questions?

Mr. Reza Moridi: No further questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much, Deputy, for coming and presenting to the committee today. We appreciate it.

Ms. Wendy Tilford: You're welcome.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Smitherman, apparently, is on his way, so I expect him here in the next few minutes. It's five to 1, by my watch, not by the clock on the wall, which is off by a lot.

We do have several motions before the committee. A number of them are to do with adding more witnesses, which is something—currently, we have lots of witnesses before the committee, and that's not something that I would call urgent.

We also have a motion to sit—I believe, a motion that Mr. Barrett wanted to put, with regard to hearings next week. So if you want to put that motion—

Mr. Toby Barrett: I would like to put forward a motion that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts hold meetings to call witnesses during the week of April 9 through April 12, 2012, and sit for up to two full days so that the committee may continue its debate and inquiry into the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge air ambulance and related services.

I would ask for a recorded vote as well, please.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any comment? Liz? And if I can just ask that, when Mr. Smitherman shows up, seeing as he sat here all morning, if we don't get to this, that we—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. And I'm not going to speak for a long time. I'm simply going to note that in the subcommittee report we passed this morning, we in fact effectively already added an extra day for the additional witnesses, and we have lost two this morning. We're making up one this afternoon in the free time period, but in fact, this morning, we already added a day. So I think that it's unnecessary to sit during the Easter week. This is really late to bring the motion. I know certainly on those days during Easter week, I'm fully booked.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any other comment? Mr. Klees—

Mr. Toby Barrett: I will mention as well that I will be getting a sub for next week. I don't know about the NDP, but that's kind of the reality of our work.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, as my colleague indicated, for those who can't be here, certainly parties can sub in members.

We've already lost a half a day thanks to the tactics of the government members. In fact, I have a number of additional people who have come forward who have indicated that they would want to testify. I would think that we would want to take advantage of every opportunity to hear from witnesses on this.

Certainly, I'm in support of this. I would hope that we would have the support of the government members on this.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any other comment? Yes, Liz.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just to note that we did lose an hour and a half this morning. One of the witnesses is being made up this afternoon in a half hour that we had available. The item that we spent an hour and a half on, with you arguing we shouldn't take time to discuss it, we actually dealt with in half an hour at lunch.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Yes, Chair, my only further comment is we do have a—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And the witness is here.

Mr. George Smitherman: I'm early.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Only by that clock.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If you want to have a vote on it, we can have a vote now, if you're all done speaking.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, I would just like to remind Ms. Sandals that her colleague Mr. Zimmer agreed that we need to get on with this, and he himself agreed that he would be willing to have hearings during the break week. I would hope that he would be consistent in his vote on this motion with what he said to the media.

Mr. Toby Barrett: The only thing I wanted to clarify is that all three parties have additional witnesses. I see the motions before me. For that reason, I request additional days of hearings.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Are we ready to vote on the motion?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Recorded vote.

Ayes

Barrett, Forster, Gélinas, Klees.

Nays

McNeely, Moridi, Sandals.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're abstaining, Mr. Zimmer? Is that correct?

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The motion carries. We shall notify the House leaders by letter requesting extra time during constituency week.

MR. GEORGE SMITHERMAN

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Now, I believe Mr. Smitherman is here. Mr. Smitherman, if you could come before. First of all, I'd like to apologize for making you wait the whole morning—

Mr. George Smitherman: Not at all.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): —not that you haven't spent a lot of time around this place, but I appreciate you—

Mr. George Smitherman: For the clerk?

I'm going to pour myself some water, if that's okay, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please do. Thank you for being flexible and agreeing to come back. Sorry to waste your time this morning.

Just to affirm, you did receive the information for a witness appearing before the Standing Committee on Public Accounts?

Mr. George Smitherman: I did, after the close of business last night. I looked at it briefly this morning.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay.

Mr. George Smitherman: I was going to bring my counsel, but he's in daycare.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The clerk will affirm you, Mr. Smitherman.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Could you just raise your hand? Mr. Smitherman, do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. George Smitherman: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So if you want to take five minutes for a statement and then there will be eight minutes for each of the caucuses to ask questions.

Mr. George Smitherman: Mr. Chair, I timed this carefully but I confess, I may be five or 10 seconds beyond, but not much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Great.

Mr. George Smitherman: Thank you for your consideration.

Ladies and gentlemen of the public accounts committee, it's my privilege to be here today. I cherish the principle of accountability and I support the idea that having more information in the public domain makes for better government, so I will gladly share the knowledge that I have. The context that I have is the 2003-08 period.

My motivation and actions during this period were to address well-documented risks to health and human safety. So even here in the midst of the firestorm, where it's clear Ornge had lost its way, we should be careful not to forget that Ontario possesses one of the world's most advanced medical air operations, with well-trained and dedicated front-line staff. It's a very expensive and essential element of our health care system that tries to help equalize access to care across a wildly large and difficult terrain.

Because we have this medical air transport capacity well integrated into our trauma system, it saves many lives. But the real trauma is the abuse of public trust perpetuated upon the people of Ontario. I take responsibility for not having detected this risk and therefore entrusting Dr. Mazza to build an integrated medical air transport system. Aided and abetted by a strongly credentialed board, stories have emerged of a hazy shell game seemingly designed to leverage a public asset for personal gain. If true, this was an abuse of the public trust and I regret not having had the prescience to eliminate such risks.

The better news is that we have a good system that is well resourced, and with the steps taken by Minister Matthews, a sense of purpose has been restored.

I can't tell you who missed their opportunity to act at first evidence that Ornge had gone rogue. The performance agreement had multiple mechanisms where the contract could be cancelled. This, coupled with the ministry role as paymaster, represents ample power to bring a rogue entity to heel.

The report commissioned in 2008 by the Ministries of Health and Finance, and prepared by Meyers Norris Penny LLP, a report which should be made public, provided a series of recommendations to the ministry. From what I am told, the ministry's response to this 100-plus-page report may have been lacking.

When I left the ministry, I was not aware of any accusations, and from the moment I left there, about 1,400 days ago, I have paid Ornge little mind. Had I known that there were swirls of scandal, I most certainly would not have taken the risk of bringing an external visitor to Ornge, as I did last fall.

When I become minister in 2003, we did not have an integrated system despite repeated calls from coroners' inquests and the media alike. Additionally, a 2003 accreditation review conducted by the independent US-based Commission on Accreditation of Medical Transport Systems recommended a system overhaul. A particular concern they cited was the absence of a clear line of authority amongst the dispatch centre, the base hospital and air ambulance operators responsible for service. We fixed that.

Other coroners' reports spoke to the risks being posed by the ministry's inability to validate the safety and maintenance of the fleet of private aircraft then contracted to do medical air transport. Today, Ontario has the most modern and efficient fleet just about anywhere.

At crucial critical care transition points, we implemented Ornge-staffed land ambulances to enhance the continuity of care for critically ill patients, thus improving their survival prospects while saving money for several municipal land ambulance services. Sometimes that transfer, across ferries, through traffic or over long distances, can take a long time. And when a situation is critical, minutes really, really matter. This is especially true in the north.

I want to provide just one example where a service enhancement was implemented in order to save lives, to buy some of those crucial minutes. Put yourself in the position of being the family of someone who just sustained a life-threatening injury in a snowmobile accident in Hornepayne and transferred via Ornge to Sudbury airport, and now set to endure the lengthy transfer from Sudbury airport to Sudbury Regional Hospital. Would you feel better knowing that a highly specialized Ornge critical care team was on hand to get your loved one into the specialized hands of the hospital?

I know that politics is always in the air here and perhaps more so in a time of minority Parliament, but I do ask that you consider just how your report will influence confidence in Ornge for the stricken hiker, the First Nations dialysis patient or for the car crash victim who lays wondering if his next breath will be his last.

Thank you. I look forward to aiding the committee's work in any way that I might.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Perfectly timed. We'll go to the NDP first this time. France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you so much for being here, Mr. Smitherman. It's a pleasure to ask you questions. It feels like I've done this before.

Mr. George Smitherman: I'm a bit out of practice, I'd have to say.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It's rather interesting that right now we have Minister Matthews as Minister of Health. On a number of occasions, it feels like she's throwing you under the bus. It feels like she's blaming you for a huge part of the scandal we're dealing with right now, from your failure to have an RFP when this was first contracted out to your failure to put together an accountability agreement that gives the Ministry of Health the leverage that it needs.

My first question will be: If you had stayed as Minister of Health, do you figure this scandal would have happened?

Mr. George Smitherman: Well, there are three or four questions rolled up there, and I look forward to having a chance to answer each of them. Personally, I said in my comments that I really think it would be important to get into the public domain this report that has been prepared by an outside consultant, because it was a crucial overview to the period of time that I was the minister.

When I left the Ministry of Health in 2008 and moved to another ministry, Dr. Mazza was making $298,000, was reporting that in complying with the sunshine list and the like, and the activities that went on subsequently were activities that were not to my knowledge. I cannot imagine a circumstance where I would have tolerated a situation where Dr. Mazza ended up making $1.4 million and where the organization lost its focus.

But the ministry bears a lot of responsibility for this because it is in the ministry, which had 8,000 or 9,000 employees, where on a day-to-day basis there are people who are paid to wake up and to focus on it. The real question I have is, at what point did they decide that they were dealing with what I described as a rogue entity, and what steps did they take at that time to bring it to heel?

It's my suspicion—but I'm only speculating, because it's beyond 2008—that this was even in advance of the time of Minister Matthews' arrival at the Ministry of Health.

M^{me} France G  linas: Interesting. If we go back to 2007—we'll be testing your memory there, but you were still Minister of Health at the time—you authorized a one-time $2.9-million funding bump to Ornge. Would you have done this if you hadn't known how much Mr. Mazza was being paid? If you didn't have information about salaries, would you ever agree to increasing a budget?

To the very best of my knowledge, in that time frame Ornge was operating well. Through the report that the provincial auditor has provided, we learn that the ministry did not have a grasp on the finances there. I think that that came as a surprise to all of us. That adjustment in their budget in that fiscal year—I don't have access to the ministry files to know what the motivation and justification for that was, but there were three things happening that may have been associated with it: the implementation of new critical care ambulances like the one I mentioned, which can be in service in a place like Sudbury; Ornge was responsible at that time for EMAT, the mobile hospital; and the implementation of a new angioplasty program at Thunder Bay Regional Hospital, which was forcing us to deploy an additional aircraft in Thunder Bay as backup, in case any cardiac patient required transfer to Duluth. Any one of those items might have been cause for that adjustment in the budget. But without more information from the ministry, I can't speak more; I could only answer in that way.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. Coming back to 2007-08, the accountant at Ornge—his name is Keith Walmsley—came to the ministry and said that Chris Mazza and others were in the process of creating this web of private companies, and in 2008 started to hide their salaries. The sunshine list that came out in 2009 did not have Chris Mazza on it.

Basically, this whistle-blower, Keith Walmsley, went to your ministry while you were minister. Did you ever talk to this man? Did anybody ever—

Mr. George Smitherman: No. And where did I learn about this? I learned about this in a Toronto Star story. I believe the gentleman himself says that in retrospect he realizes he should have gotten that letter to me.

But this is part of the reality of the Ministry of Health: 350,000 pieces of correspondence addressed to the minister every year—some number like that. Former Minister Witmer would be aware of those volumes.

This was intercepted at the ministry level, and really begs the question, as this was an early warning and the gentleman seems to have been quite articulate in the representations he made—where the ministry in a sense intercepted this. I think it started at the Ministry of Health Promotion, if I'm right, and made its way over to the Ministry of Health. Until I read that story in the Toronto Star, I had not been aware of that gentleman's point of view. But in the ministry, they clearly were.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

M^{me} France G  linas: In your statement, you did say that you went back to Ornge last fall. Except for that visit, have you had any other dealings with Ornge for 1,400 days since you were not Minister of Health?

Mr. George Smitherman: Yes. On one other occasion I attended a meeting at Ornge, which was focused on the philanthropic side. They were looking for ideas about how they could gain some financial support from the broader community, associated with the equipment outfit for the helicopters. I don't recall the time frame of that, but that was the only other involvement I had, and I did that just as a private citizen, you know, giving them an hour of my time and offering some suggestions.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. You said that if you had found out that Chris Mazza was making $1.4 million, you would have acted, and thought that this was not acceptable. In 2008, his salary was never put on the sunshine list. Shouldn't there have been reaction from the ministry sooner—actually, it's in 2009 that we find out about it. You're gone by that time, but when you saw that Mr. Mazza was no longer on the sunshine list, wouldn't you have asked one of your staff to check that out?

Mr. George Smitherman: Time frame: The sunshine list is produced in the final days of fiscal 2007-08; within two or three months, I leave the ministry; the sunshine list for the subsequent year would be prepared later in the year. But I do think that is a particularly egregious action that should have sent a warning signal across somebody's desk. And I really think for me, increasingly I ask myself at what point did the people in the ministry, who on a day-to-day basis wake up with the responsibility to focus on matters related to ambulance—what was their reaction to that?

I did not know about that until I read all these stories in the paper only recently, and like I mentioned before, I certainly wouldn't have ventured to Ornge last fall with an external visitor in tow to get myself embroiled if I knew there were all these swirls of scandal.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. Could we move to the government now?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. Sorry that you've been here twice today, but we're glad we've got you up here now.

Mr. George Smitherman: The company is nice.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We're all charming, aren't we?

When you were appointed as Minister of Health in 2003—you make some reference to problems in the air ambulance system. Could you describe those a little bit more? What were you told when you got the briefing?

Mr. George Smitherman: Sure. Really, it was that coroners' reports and other independent bodies and the media, over quite a lengthy period of time, had come to the conclusion that air ambulance as we knew it was too fragmented. To their credit, I would say, the previous government—I believe it was my direct predecessor, Tony Clement—had brought the eight ambulances together in a base hospital program. Prior to that, we had the circumstances of the ministry running dispatch and doing some work on the relationship with private aircraft contractors, and we had eight different helicopters, all in the budgets of eight different hospitals around Ontario. Minister Clement took the step to consolidate all those aircraft under one base hospital program at Sunnybrook Hospital with Dr. Mazza as the medical director.

I think that was a good step in the right direction, but you can imagine all the stories that have been written over time about the circumstance where dispatch and operations are not in the same organization. Our intentions in moving forward were to create an integrated system, and despite all the failings we know about, which mostly were seemingly about trying to leverage this now integrated system, I believe that the system we have in Ontario is a very good one and is better protection of human health and safety than it was in 2003 when I became minister. And it's my fervent hope that this can be restored as a sense of pride and confidence for the people of Ontario.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: It's interesting, because I think I was on public accounts when the auditor's previous report came in, and he was looking, not at Ornge, but at the pre-existing system. I think the auditor's findings in that previous report—the auditor is nodding at me—were that he described many of the same problems you're describing now.

Then how did we get from identification of the problems to the creation of what eventually became Ornge? It was initially the Ontario air ambulance system.

Mr. George Smitherman: I hope someone will come back to this question of sole sourcing versus RFP, because those who insist on the idea that there should have been an RFP are proponents for the privatization of that service. If you look at it, we were actually bringing the service in-house to a not-for-profit entity which had features and attributes quite similar to hospitals: independent capacity to choose their board of governors; substantial elements, almost all of it funding from the ministry; and the capacity to raise some resources on a philanthropic basis to augment the public resources that were available. The initiative was to create an integrated service on that basis.

It was not in the pattern of the Ministry of Health to house entities like that inside. This is, I think, an important insight in terms of how the model emerged.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So it's almost as if what you were doing was setting up something that was more on a hospital model as opposed to a private contract. I mean, it's—

Mr. George Smitherman: Well, we saw these as our assets. We saw these as public assets. It wasn't about taking a public asset and throwing it out there to a CEO and their board to try to reap some reward out of it; no, not at all. And if you look at this agreement—which lots of people have spoken about, but I'm not sure that many people have actually read—this is, in a certain sense, a playbook for the bringing together of assets, roles and responsibilities that until that time were fragmented and across the landscape.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: When I think about the legislation that has now been tabled, where the minister is suggesting that some of the powers she has with respect to hospital boards and importing some of the language that's in the hospitals act into the air ambulance act, that's actually reasonably consistent with the original approach you were taking to it.

Mr. George Smitherman: Obviously, she's in a situation where she's operating retrospectively and where, perhaps, the same lawyers who advised me in drafting this are now advising her in drafting that. I don't know that, but ministers come and go and deputies come and go, and the ministry staff stays there forever and ever—for a long time. And the institutional memory they have is an important protection for the public, but only if they actually choose to use it well.

I have no doubt that there's an opportunity to look retrospectively and say, "Well, we could have had that," or "We could have had that," but from a review of this and from knowing that the ministry was practically the whole paymaster for that organization, I don't draw the conclusion that the ministry's hands were tied in bringing this what I refer to as a rogue entity to heel.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes left.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, I've got two minutes left.

I guess that one of the elephants in the room, then, is that as the new service was being developed, what sort of a role did Dr. Mazza play in the conversation then, as it was being developed, the new vision?

Mr. George Smitherman: Well, undoubtedly—and this is where I've said candidly that the responsibility that I bear is that this individual—and again, some people will try to suggest that I invented him. Of course, he was running the base; he was, in Ontario, the most knowledgeable individual with respect to the operation of medical air transport that we had. It was—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So when you referred to Minister Clement setting up an air base, it was him who actually had the air hospital under—

Mr. George Smitherman: Dr. Mazza had been running one helicopter as the medical director from Sunnybrook Hospital since 1996. So it was natural that he was there in the pecking order and that he should be relied upon in helping to bring a model forward.

Again, I go back to the question that if you look at it from the time that I left, to the very best of my knowledge, the amalgamation of services, the elimination of fragmentation and the creation of an integrated organization had been the focus. And I take responsibility for not having seen the risk that people might have ulterior motive, but then the question I ask is, the people who wake up every single day in the Ministry of Health, when did they first get an inkling that something was going awry and what steps did they take then? That's an area where I don't have as much information as I would like to have.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you very much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Smitherman, first let me thank you for the statement that you made that you regret not having had the prescience to see what was coming. You're actually the first person to take responsibility, and I just want to thank you for that.

I want to ask about the performance agreement. I've read the performance agreement. There are a number of schedules in that performance agreement, and I do think that apart from some of the things that may have been missing there, what that performance agreement did do was give you, the minister, and the ministry the authority to intervene, the authority to oversee. In fact, it was very explicit; that original performance agreement was very explicit that the ministry has a responsibility to develop certain delivery requirements and standards, together with Ornge.

I want to ask you this: Knowing what you know about that agreement because you signed it, when you determined that something might not be right, what steps would you have taken, as minister, to ensure that the requirements and the standards of that performance agreement were being met?

Mr. George Smitherman: The first part that's important here is, like I said, the context that I speak to most knowledgeably is 2003-08 and in that time frame I was not made aware by the ministry or outside interests that something had gone awry there or that the thing was off the rail or gone rogue, to use the language that I used. You've enjoyed the privilege of serving as a minister, as have I. It seems to me that the combination of powers—some power is that which is given by way of legislation or by a signed agreement. Much of the power that a minister can exercise is the power of persuasion, of the use of a bully pulpit, of embarrassment as required. And the third bit—and this is what I referred to in a Toronto Star interview as kind of this sugar daddy role—if I'm in a circumstance as a government minister where my ministry is funding the lion's share of an entity, I feel, notwithstanding whatever deficiencies retrospectively a lawyer might have found, I've got a bit of capacity to bring a wayward organization to heel. And I ask myself the question, what went on? And that's why this report, which has not been public, I think is an important one. It may, in fact, say things that are not helpful to me in the grand scheme of things, but it was a report that took a hard look at the early days of operation of Ornge, and I wonder where that went when it got to the ministry.

Mr. Frank Klees: In the final analysis, had you been the minister, you would have found a way to intervene and to bring this rogue organization to heel.

Mr. George Smitherman: Only in the circumstance—the only way, of course, you know—

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Thank you. I'd like to move on to another very important point.

Mr. George Smitherman: But with respect, that wasn't my complete answer.

But I would say this respectfully to the member: Yes, of course, any one of us wants to say that we would have done that. But I was there with four and a half years of institutional memory—four and a half years. So of course, on the day after four and a half years, I had all that institutional memory to apply. But then another minister came, and yet another one, and then the current minister.

My only question is this: You can only act if you have the information. Who had the information and what did they do with it is a question which I don't think—at least I, personally, don't know enough about it. I know people in the ministry had information. When did they actually send the signal that the entity had gone awry?

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. I'd like to move forward to early November 2007. At that point in time, the Ministry of Finance made a very specific effort to bring the financials of Ornge under the Ministry of Finance, into its consolidated statement. When the Ministry of Finance took that initiative, I understand that Ornge, through one Alfred Apps, with Don Guy's assistance, put forward the case that those financials should not be included for very specific reasons. I also understand that that message was sent to Mr. Jamison in the Premier's office via Jennifer Tracey.

Now, I happen to believe that this represented a turning point, because had the financials of Ornge been included under the Ministry of Finance, the appropriate oversight would have been there, even if the Ministry of Health failed. The Ministry of Finance would have, in fact, ensured that there was the appropriate oversight, and certainly questions would have been asked.

I want to just put this on the record: that in February 2006, former Deputy Minister Sapsford was asked—in fact, he was asked the question by the member from Kitchener Centre, Mr. Milloy, at the time—what is the relationship between Ornge and the government? Deputy Sapsford at that time explained it very concisely.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: In his words, "The relationship between the new corporation and the ministry is what I would call a transfer payment relationship." It's because the Ministry of Finance saw that, as well, that they wanted to incorporate those financials into the Ministry of Finance.

Can you tell me, what pressure was brought to bear, through Mr. Guy and through Mr. Apps, to ensure that that consolidation did not take place?

Mr. George Smitherman: The matter that—firstly, I’ve never heard that before, so I can’t shed any light on that. But I would say that for all of that, to my mind, it does not separate the Ministry of Health and the staff of the Ministry of Health from their oversight responsibilities.

I take your point that that might have been an added layer, and maybe that is an early signal, but it’s not a circumstance that I have any information about.

Mr. Frank Klees: I assure you, we don’t want to let anyone off the hook. The primary responsibility clearly was the Minister of Health and the Ministry of Health. My point simply is, based on the information we have, that there was political interference that actually allowed Mr. Mazza and those at Ornge who wanted to “leverage,” as you put it in your own words, public funds for their personal means. It was that political interference that actually brought down the barriers that would have prevented that, and I was just hoping that you might be able to shed some light on that. You say you knew nothing about it. Perhaps Jamison can help us when we talk to him a little bit later.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for coming and being so patient this morning.

Mr. George Smitherman: That’s it? Time flies when you’re having fun. Thank you so much for the chance.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thanks for coming before us.

Mr. Frank Klees: Could I just ask Mr. Smitherman: If there is some other information that we would like to follow up with him on, would he be willing to come back and spend some more time with us?

Mr. George Smitherman: Well, as I understand it, if this committee sends out a message that it wants to hear from me again, it’s not a matter of whether I’m willing or not. But of course, spending the day here with all of you today has refreshed my interest in Queen’s Park, so if it aids the committee in their effort, then most certainly.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. I appreciate that.

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair, just on a point of order while we’re waiting for the next witness to come in—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I don’t know whether we’re waiting. We’re ready for the next person.

Mr. David Zimmer: Anyway, Mr. Klees made reference to a meeting and a document between Apps and Steeve, and then he implied that he’s going to raise those matters with Mr. Jamison Steeve, which I expect is about to happen now. I think we should have that document in front of us.

Mr. Frank Klees: I made no reference to a document. I have my personal notes, and Mr. Zimmer has no access to that.

OFFICE OF THE PREMIER

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Let’s move on to our next presenter. We have, from the Office of the Premier, Jamison Steeve, principal secretary to the Premier, who is here for the next half hour or so. You have five minutes to make your presentation, then there will be eight minutes amongst the three parties questioning you. Did you receive the “Witnesses Appearing before Standing Committee on Public Accounts” information?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I did. I received it last night.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. Our clerk will swear you in.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): If you just want to raise your hand, Mr. Steeve: Do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I do.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Please go ahead.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: My name is Jamison Steeve. I am the principal secretary to Premier Dalton McGuinty.

I want to thank you for the opportunity to appear before this committee. It is my understanding that this committee has been struck to consider the special report of the Auditor General on Ornge. I thought it would be helpful to this committee to provide a brief history of my employment and a quick outline of my roles and responsibilities in government in my opening statement.

I graduated university with an honours Bachelor of Arts, a Bachelor of Education and a Bachelor of Laws. I began my professional life as a lawyer in the litigation department at Fasken Martineau. I practised law there from 2001 until December 2003.

In January 2004, I joined the office of Minister Jim Bradley, then Minister of Tourism and Recreation, as his legislative assistant. I held that position until September 2004. In that role I was primarily responsible for preparing Minister Bradley for question period.

From September 2004 until October 2007, I was the health policy adviser in the Premier’s office. During that time, I also held the health promotion and seniors’ policy portfolios. In my role as policy adviser, I focused on broad policy development and policy decisions in the area of health. In particular, I focused on key health results like the reduction of surgical wait times and improving primary care. My work over those three years also included involvement in the development of legislation, like the LHIN bill and drug reform.

Following the election in 2007 and the swearing-in of a new cabinet, I was hired as chief of staff to Minister George Smitherman, Minister of Health and Long-Term Care. I held that position from November 2007 until June 2008. During that time, I was responsible for the day-to-day administration of the minister’s office, focusing our efforts on reducing emergency room wait times, lending shape to the government’s negotiations with doctors and working with the minister and the ministry to finalize a budget for the Ministry of Health. During my time as chief of staff, I had a staff of approximately 30 people.

Since June 2008, I have served as the principal secretary to the Premier. In that role, I am primarily responsible for the development of public policy government-wide. I work with cabinet, caucus and the public service to develop and implement the government's policy and legislative agenda. In addition, I have an active oversight role on particular strategic documents, like the budget, the fall economic statement and any throne speeches. I have a staff that fluctuates between six and eight people who have carriage of several policy files.

Based on the questions I have seen in the House, it is my understanding that I am appearing before this committee primarily because I was one of the recipients of the letter addressed to Minister Deb Matthews from the chair of the board at Ornge on January 19, 2011. I am happy to speak to that issue or any other questions that you may have.

From someone fiercely interested in and responsible for the development of good public policy, I think there are many important lessons we can learn from the situation at Ornge.

This committee is looking into what happened at Ornge because the Auditor General's investigation revealed some significant areas of concern. Although there were a number of accountability mechanisms in place with respect to Ornge, it is clear that they did not work.

As Minister Matthews has stated, we as a government could have, and should have, done a better job. I believe that the minister has taken strong steps to remediate the situation at Ornge and move the organization forward so that it serves the needs of Ontario patients.

The larger public policy question I know that we in Ontario will all have to wrestle with is how to develop appropriate accountability mechanisms as we look for ways to provide top-quality government services efficiently.

I'll be pleased to answer any questions this committee may have. Thank you for your time.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. The government will have the opportunity to ask questions first.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I wonder if we could go back, then, and think a little bit about your time from 2004 to 2007 as health policy adviser. Can you describe a little bit more about your role then, and I guess whether or not you would have intercepted with Ornge in any significant way during that point?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Certainly. My role at that time, for any health policy adviser in the Premier's office, would be to help develop the policies that are coming through committees and into cabinet and shepherding those issues as they go through our processes of being considered by cabinet and caucus.

I would say a lot of my interactions on policy files would also have been around key health results. We would have our health results team, involving briefing the Premier and preparing him for how we were achieving things with respect to surgical wait times, primary care reform, namely 150 new family health teams, the acceleration of medical school spaces and whatnot.

My interaction with Ornge, the file, would have primarily been through the development of the legislation. I didn't have direct involvement in the creation of the accountability agreement or the performance agreement that's been the subject of much of the conversation, both here and in the House, as that's something that would go to treasury board and deals more appropriately with accountabilities and financials. I would deal more with those items, at that time, that dealt with public policy, that went through policy committees and then into cabinet.

During my time from 2004 to 2007, I believe I met with Ornge once, basically as the organization was being set up, and getting a sense of what services they were going to be providing.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So it would have been at the policy level as to, as you say, what services would Ornge be delivering and what would be the change in delivery from current services? It was at that broad policy level.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: At a broad policy level within the health sphere, as opposed to my current role, which would have more of the broad policy across government. But no, there is very little operational aspect related to the health policy role.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If we can go on, then, to your current role as principal secretary to the Premier, are you, as principal secretary to the Premier—and I think you've just answered this question, but let's be specific. Do you get involved in operational issues at the ministries in your role as principal secretary?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Typically not. What I would say is, my involvement is more on the basis of making sure that we're driving forward the government's agenda in working with caucus, cabinet and the Premier. There are operational elements that are going to come forward in any particular policy submissions—the delivery of a tuition grant, those types of things—but on the day-to-day aspects of how something is delivered by way of a public good from a ministry, no, I would not get involved in those matters.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So in the example you give of the tuition grant, it would not be that you're spending a lot of time on the operational issues related to an existing file or initiative; it's that you're looking at what operational issues might be involved in a new program like the tuition grant and ensuring that the operational issues around that have been dealt with as part of the policy submissions to cabinet?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: In that instance, I would say that's correct. I think on the day-to-day, that's far more a responsibility of the minister's office and the ministry, which would have been my experience when I was chief of staff at health.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, thank you. And one of the issues that has certainly arisen is, when the auditor prepared his draft report and sent a copy to I think it's the assistant deputy minister—or the director?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Yes, to the assistant deputy minister.

Mr. Frank Klees: Of health?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Of health, yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So when that draft report went to the assistant deputy minister, relevant assistant deputy minister at health, would you have been forwarded that report?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No, I typically don't get involved in the draft reports from the Auditor General. My work, as it relates to public policy development, usually comes on the release of the report where there are typically numerous recommendations on how public policy or aspects of government can be improved.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But there wouldn't be an issue of you having seen that draft or, for that matter, the drafts of the other two reports that went to ADMs in health about the same time—a bit earlier, maybe, but the same thing. You were saying—

Mr. Jim McCarter: We would have had another 15 value-for-money drafts that went to another 15 ministries. We do about 15 a year; that's just part of the normal process.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And you wouldn't have seen any of those?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No. The draft reports are typically, as I say, dealt with at a different level. This is the first time I've had a chance to meet the Auditor General, so no, my involvement on draft reports is nil.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Nil. Okay. That's very useful for us to know.

You did make reference to the letter, and I'm sure that people are interested in your response to the infamous letter of January 19, on which you are copied. Do you want to tell us a little bit about what would have happened when that letter arrived in your correspondence pile?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a couple minutes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That's fine.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Certainly. I get a series of correspondence on a daily basis, whether it be email or letter. I was one of many parties copied on the letter, as has been noted in this committee. I was not the direct recipient of the letter. It was addressed to Minister Matthews.

Also, Mr. Alfred Apps had called me in December to ask if I could set up a government-wide briefing for him to come and talk to various ministries. I didn't think it was appropriate for me to do that. I recommended that he contact the Ministry of Health to set that up. I think that's probably what gave rise to the letter being addressed to the Ministry of Health.

When I received the letter, I knew that a briefing was taking place. I reviewed the first couple of pages, understood that the briefing and the letter were more for informational purposes and knew that if items were to arise that were necessary to be flagged for me, they would be by those people who were being briefed.

So, number one, my approach to the letter was similar to that which I am c.c.'d on a series of letters, and number two, since I knew a briefing was taking place and I was dealing in the context of January of any given year—in January 2011, cabinet briefings, cabinet agendas, drafting the legislative agenda for the final session of our second mandate, a budget and, I think at the time, negotiating an MOU with the city of Toronto for a new transit deal.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And we won't get into that one. That's another story. Thank you.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Absolutely.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Liz. Frank?

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to go back to the performance agreement. You said you weren't integrally involved in developing that performance agreement, but you also said that you would have become familiar with it when it made its way to Management Board of Cabinet for the submission.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No. I'm sorry. I believe what I stated is that typically when something goes forward to Management Board or treasury board, the policy advisers are more responsible for those items that are going through policy committee and/or cabinet. So I was aware that something was going forward to treasury board, but that would not have been my direct responsibility as a policy adviser.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you never saw the performance agreement?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I have no recollection of seeing the policy agreement, no.

Mr. Frank Klees: I would like to follow up with you on the issue I raised with Mr. Smitherman and get your perspective on this. Again, I really believe that all of this could have been avoided—the scandal side of this—if the financials had had proper oversight.

You've heard the description that Deputy Sapsford gave when asked at this committee back in 2006 how he views the relationship between Ornge and the Ministry of Finance. His response was that, given that some $115 million is being transferred from the government to Ornge, in his view this is a transfer agency. Do you agree with that characterization?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I believe that what has been put forward, both at this committee in these hearings and again probably by former Deputy Sapsford at the time, was that there was a contractual relationship with Ornge and there was a flow of money for the provision of particular services. So I think that's probably a fair characterization.

Mr. Frank Klees: Based on that, it was the Ministry of Finance that saw that arrangement, looked at what was happening early on in the game, in terms of how the financials were being organized at Ornge, and they made the approach, as I understand it, to bring those financials under the auspices of the Ministry of Finance, into its consolidated statements, as it does with every other transfer agency.

The information that I have is that Ornge strongly objected to that. Because they weren't getting anywhere, they retained the services of Alfred Apps and Don Guy, who, according to information that was given to me by someone who was there at the time—through their efforts they contacted you, and that message, that they don't want to be overseen by the Ministry of Finance, was sent to you through Jennifer Tracey, who you know. And I assume that you were working with her in the Premier's office before she went to Ornge, right?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: She had worked in our communications department, in the Premier's office, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: What do you recall about that message that was sent to you?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Upon hearing you mention it in this committee, I have no recollection of any interaction; Jennifer Tracey would call me on occasion, far more on communications aspects as they related to Ornge. I have no recollection of their concern of being consolidated on to the government books. And even at that, I have no recollection of moving on any information that would keep them off of the government books.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you agree that that was the right thing for the Ministry of Finance to do, to at least make the effort to bring those financials under the Ministry of Finance?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: That would be a question for the Ministry of Finance and what they were trying to do from a financial perspective. That would have been beyond my scope and something I would have relied deeply on the Ministry of Finance's advice.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you never discussed Ornge with Don Guy?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you ever discuss Ornge with Mr. Apps?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I did. As I said, my most recent conversation with Mr. Apps around Ornge would have been in December 2010, when he contacted me and asked me in my role as principal secretary to set up a cross-government briefing for what was contained in the letter of January 2011. At that time, I advised him that it was not appropriate for me to do so, and it wasn't something that typically fell within my job description, to set up cross-government briefings. I encouraged him to speak with the Ministry of Health, as that is who the direct relationship was with, and he went about doing so.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was Mr. Apps registered as a lobbyist at the time?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I'm not aware if he was or was not. I know that, upon review of the letter in preparation for this committee hearing, there are statements in the letter that they are in no way lobbying.

Mr. Frank Klees: As you observe the debate in the House on this issue, as someone who was present at the Ministry of Health, as someone who's been integrally involved in policy development, I'd be interested to know from you whether you believe that the Ministry of Health, as we heard from the auditor, did in fact fail in its oversight responsibilities?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I think we as a government, from top to bottom, could have done a better job. I think that's what the Auditor General pointed out in his report. I think that the performance agreement that was set up—I think you, in the previous comments, felt that it was substantial enough. I think what we've learned is that there were actions and behaviours that took place beyond the scope of the performance agreement; that the government, both ministry and ministers alike, once we became aware of situations, moved on them swiftly. Obviously, our oversight needs to be improved, and that's what we're trying to do with the new performance agreement and the new piece of legislation.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm certain you reviewed this file extensively. Can you tell me how many former staff, either in the Premier's office or ministers' offices, went to work at Ornge—some of whom are still there? Can you tell me that?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I've definitely reviewed my interactions on the file, sir, in preparation for the committee, but I can't answer your question. I have no idea how many former staff—ministers' offices or Premier's office—work at Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can you think of one?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: You named one: Jennifer Tracey is a former Premier's office staff who, I believe, still works at Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: You can think of no one else?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No. There was a former staffer—

Interjection.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Thank you.

There was a former staffer, Scott Lovell, who—

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was his role in the ministry before?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: He worked in the minister's office, not the ministry. He was stakeholder relations under Minister Smitherman. I'm not sure what his position at Ornge would have been.

Mr. Frank Klees: No one else?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Frank Klees: Interesting. Thank you very much.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Not at all.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, and thank you for coming before the committee today—sorry. We have the NDP now to go. Go ahead.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Good afternoon.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Good afternoon.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I just wanted to ask a question about your oversight. You helped with the initial set-up of Ornge: Is that correct?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No. I would be involved in the policy development that led to the initial legislation around Ornge, but I think it would be an extension of my role to say that I helped in the initial formation of Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure. So you were involved in the policy development, but not the actual implementation of the Ornge organization.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: That's correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. In the policy set-up, what was your involvement with the policy set-up?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: My involvement would have been dealing with policy as it came through committee and to cabinet, and providing information to the Premier as it came through.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Specifically with respect to Ornge, what was your input in terms of Ornge policy development?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: The role of a policy adviser in the Premier's office versus that in a minister's office is more of an oversight role. The direct creation of materials would come more from the ministry and the minister's office level. Mine would be more of a commentary and/or input at a higher level rather than the creation of it at the ground level.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So what was your input, then, on a high level with regard to Ornge?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I don't have any recollection of any dramatic input into the document. It seemed that we were consolidating a number of services into one not-for-profit entity for the purposes of improving both efficiency and patient safety.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And did you have any input, then, in terms of how the care was to be delivered or the way it was to be organized?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When this was set up, you were chief of staff to Mr. Smitherman. Is that correct?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No, that's not correct. I was chief of staff from November 2007 until June 2008, and I believe the time frame that you're talking about is in the 2005-06 era.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's right. In terms of oversight, are there any policy considerations in terms of how one should oversee an organization such as Ornge?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I think many of those policy considerations are addressed in the Auditor General's report. I think you're looking at issues of service provision, the expenditure of the public dollar, as well as, in health care in particular, the outcomes that are achieved by way of the service.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Were any of these considerations—to your knowledge, were they ever executed in terms of, were there any requests made to follow up with Ornge in terms of their patient care or their salary disclosures or any sort of demands? Were any demands made that you're aware of?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Based on the roles that I have held in government since I've worked here, those would not be issues and items that would come across my desk, so I can't speak to the question.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: At any point in time, did information regarding salary disclosure or the lack of salary disclosure with respect to Ornge come across your desk—just that issue in general?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No. When I was chief of staff—I stopped in 2008, as I said—I believe, based on the information that's come forward to this committee in the last year, that Dr. Mazza was on the sunshine list, and after that, in my role as principal secretary, the inclusion or exclusion of folks on the sunshine list isn't necessarily something that would come across my desk.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When did this issue reach the Premier's office in general, the Ornge scandal?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I would say probably post-election in 2011, when we had the issues and the stories both in the Toronto Star and in the questions being raised in the House, more and more alive to the issue. Obviously, we'd had the Auditor General's review taking place, I believe, as of late 2010. As items started to become more clear as to possible malfeasance happening at Ornge, I think that's when it became aware to the Premier's office in general.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Before this scandal broke in the news, just to give you one more opportunity, was there any information or any inkling of anything going on at Ornge that crossed your desk that would have been in the Premier's office before what you've indicated, the post-election period after October 6?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: In my time on both the health file and then as chief of staff, there was nothing that had come to my attention about the service levels or anything happening at Ornge that would give rise to concern. In my time as principal secretary going forward until post-election, I believe there were some questions in the House raised by Mr. Klees in April 2011. Did that come across my desk? Not necessarily, but I think obviously when something is raised in the House, it becomes an issue, definitely, for the minister, if not folks who deal with legislative affairs in the Premier's office.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. I just have a final question and then my colleague will take on.

In 2010, this issue was raised by Howard Hampton in the public accounts committee. Were you aware of the question being raised about salary disclosure? And was there anything that your office did?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I was not made aware of the questions being raised in estimates. That's typically something that would be dealt with more by legislative affairs and issues management.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Thank you.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You said that Mr. Apps called you in December 2010.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Any idea why he would call you?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Certainly. I would say for two reasons. Number one, my role is one that often gets those types of requests for meetings with the Premier, for briefings, who should they contact within government. And number two, as I stated in my opening statement, I had practised law at Fasken Martineau, so while I didn't practise with Mr. Apps, I would have been a known entity to him as someone who was a junior associate there for almost two years.

M^{me} France G  linas: Did he leave you with any impression whatsoever that he was using that previous knowledge and influence to try to gain what he wanted from you?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Two aspects: Number one, I think I'd take exception to the notion of previous influence. He would know me from my interactions at the law firm. But, no. He thought that it was a good place to start, was my sense, in an effort to try to brief across government on a series of issues. I advised him to talk to the Minister of Health and that the Ministry of Health was the best way to go.

M^{me} France G  linas: When he talked to you, did he make any statements regarding his involvement with the Liberal Party?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No.

M^{me} France G  linas: He didn't introduce himself as to what position he had within the Liberal Party?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No.

M^{me} France G  linas: Do you know?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: At the time, I believe he was president of the federal Liberal Party.

M^{me} France G  linas: You knew this when he called you?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: You were in your present position when Minister David Caplan was asked to resign. When you were there with the Premier, did you ever ask the Premier to let Mr. Caplan go?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No. I wouldn't have that type of authority or influence. At the end of the day, that's a decision of the Premier.

M^{me} France G  linas: So Mr. Caplan found himself embroiled in a scandal not much different than what we're going through right now and the Premier asked him to resign. And you knew nothing about this?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: No. I knew that the process was under way, but the question previously was if I had advised the Premier to ask for Minister Caplan's resignation. That was not advice that I gave.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. Have you spoken to the Premier about Ornge?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I have spoken to the Premier about Ornge, yes, primarily in my role as principal secretary in the development of policy going forward, particularly in response to the Auditor General's report, the drafting of the next performance agreement and the drafting of the legislation. That would be the primary way that I would speak with the Premier about Ornge.

M^{me} France G  linas: When was the first time you talked to the Premier about Ornge?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Two ways: Number one would have been in my interactions back in 2005-06 in the drafting of the legislation and the creation of the policies that were going through committee and through the cabinet. Speaking to the issues that are central to the discussion here at this committee, the first time I would have spoken with the Premier probably would have been in December 2011 or January 2012.

M^{me} France G  linas: After Mr. Apps called, did you make any calls or—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We're out of time, I'm afraid.

M^{me} France G  linas: That's just a yes or no question.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Go ahead with that.

M^{me} France G  linas: After you talked to Mr. Apps, did you send an email? Did you make a phone call? Did you do any follow-up regarding his request?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I contacted Mary Lowe, who was the chief of staff at the Ministry of Health, and advised her that I thought she would be the best person to arrange the briefings that Mr. Apps was looking for.

M^{me} France G  linas: Can I have a copy of that email?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: I called her.

M^{me} France G  linas: You called?

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. Thank you for coming in today.

Mr. Jamison Steeve: Thank you.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just while we're getting organized for the next witness, just a point of order, which is really in the nature of asking some advice from counsel, because I expect this will come up from time to time.

In Mr. Klees's round of questions, he posed a question with this premise: "I happen to know from someone who told me such and such," and then, based on that, put a question to the witness which sort of said, "I know this from so and so." He didn't disclose the name or how he got that information and he used that as the basis of a question to the witness. So that's in the nature of using a hearsay statement, if you will, to ask a question or contradict the witness.

Is that something that, in your judgment—the name of that person, or if it's a document; for instance, someone says, "I've seen a document that," and then puts a question—this committee should have, the identity of that person or the copy and identity of that document, to help the work of the committee?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Cathy?

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: Does the committee want me to provide my response at the moment in public or do you want me to send you a privileged memo on that issue?

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, I'm more concerned to get the answer so that—and I expect it may well come up in the future—we can deal with it then. I mean, Mr. Klees has already asked his question, set it up like that. So what's the best way to deal with this to ensure that we're being fair to everybody and all the members of this committee have the background documents that any of us, on either side of the House, are basing our approaches on?

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: So two points: First of all, the rules of hearsay don't apply within this committee in the way that they would in a court of law. So questions that rely on hearsay or on information that was obtained from someone else could be put to a witness here.

In terms of whether the name of the individual needs to be provided or the name of the document needs to be provided, I think if the witness requires more information—we have told the witnesses that they are free to ask for clarification of a question, so they are aware of that. If other members of the committee feel that a document is needed by them, they can certainly ask the Chair for direction that a document be provided.

Mr. David Zimmer: Would it be open to—I accept your second point. One question on your first point: Would it be open to a committee member if a question, as Mr. Klees raised earlier—I mean, you're telling us that the witness could say, "Well, who told you that so I can respond to it intelligently, carefully." Could a committee member say, "Mr. Klees, who told you that so we can do our homework?"

Mr. Frank Klees: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, I'm asking the counsel, and that's why we've engaged the—on the first point.

I think you've said the witness could ask for the identify of the—

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: What I've said is if a witness requires clarification to be able to respond to a question, they're entitled to ask for that clarification. The Chair can then rule if there's an issue about that. Similarly, a member can ask for a document and the Chair will rule.

These issues are more issues of procedure of the legislative committee than strictly legal issues, given that the rules of hearsay don't apply here.

ORNGE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If we can call our next witness, please, Mr. Ian Delaney, the board chair of Ornge. Welcome to the committee, Mr. Delaney.

Mr. Ian Delaney: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Did you already receive the "Witnesses Appearing before the Standing Committee on Public Accounts" information?

Mr. Ian Delaney: A horrifying document. Yes, I did.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Good. Thank you for coming today. We appreciate it. The clerk will swear—

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Delaney, if you could just raise your hand.

Do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. Ian Delaney: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have five minutes to make an opening statement, and there are eight minutes for each party to ask questions of you. So please go ahead.

Mr. Ian Delaney: Thank you. I'll be very brief, not much of an opening statement.

I am the chair of the new board of Ornge, which has been in place for two months. This is, as members of the committee may know, a volunteer position. I was very honoured to be asked to do this. Similarly, the board that has been selected, I can certainly assure the members of this committee, is a very high-quality board. These are dedicated people who in the last two months have undertaken an enormous amount of work to begin to move the Ornge organization forward in a fashion that would make Ontarians proud. That's all I have to say for the moment.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. The PC Party gets to begin questioning today. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Mr. Delaney, for your time. I'm tempted to start off by asking what the share values are, but I won't do that.

First of all, thank you for your volunteer efforts. It's a huge job that you have, and I'd like to start by asking from whom you got the call, to begin with, to invite you into this role.

Mr. Ian Delaney: Well, I'm not entirely sure how my name came up, but the call came from one of the Premier's assistants, whose name I cannot remember. I've never met the person face to face.

Mr. Frank Klees: You know the Premier personally, do you?

Mr. Ian Delaney: No, I don't.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you know anyone in the government personally?

Mr. Ian Delaney: No, I don't.

Mr. Frank Klees: You must have some sense—you must have asked, "Why are you calling me?" What was the response?

Mr. Ian Delaney: I didn't ask that question. I was quite pleased to get the call. I stepped down in early January from my primary occupation as the chief executive and chairman of Sherritt International Corp., which is the place where I spent most of my time. I'm still the chairman of that organization, but I've given up most of my day-to-day duties, and I'm assuming it came to someone's attention that I might be looking for gainful employment.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to ask about your role as chair. What is your mandate? What is it that you've been asked to do?

Mr. Ian Delaney: I've been asked to chair the company in conventional fashion and terms, and the board of directors is responsible for oversight of the operations of Ornge; the formulation, together with the ministry, of strategy; and to ensure the strategy gets implemented in light of the operations.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was the formal process of your appointment and the appointment of the other members of the board?

Mr. Ian Delaney: The previous board—let me say at the outset that I have very little knowledge of what went on prior to the appointment of the current board. I made it very clear to the minister at the time that I had no interest in presiding at an inquest; I was more than happy to take on the challenge of moving the corporation forward. So my knowledge of what went on before, other than with respect to tidying up several of the corporations in this complex structure, is pretty much what's in the Auditor General's report and in the press.

So, narrowly, the previous board was asked to resign, and my understanding of the legal position of that would be that they were asked to resign, and nobody could compel them to resign by the very nature of the corporate structure. So they volunteered to resign, you would say, and at the same time the six new members of the board agreed to voluntarily be appointed.

Mr. Frank Klees: More specifically, my question is, who appointed you?

Mr. Ian Delaney: The minister. The minister asked us to serve.

Mr. Frank Klees: But there is a formal process. Do you have some documentation? Was it an order-in-council appointment? I'm trying to get a sense here of what the line of responsibility is.

Mr. Frank Klees: Just for clarification, you're saying by the minister as the sponsor?

Mr. Ian Delaney: Yes, as the stakeholder, if you will.

Mr. Frank Klees: I don't understand. The previous structure I understand—or I think I do. The members appointed themselves—

Mr. Ian Delaney: Yes, as directors.

Mr. Frank Klees: —as directors, and they volunteered to resign?

Mr. Ian Delaney: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: That structure is still there, the corporate structure?

Mr. Ian Delaney: It's slightly changed now, but—

Mr. Frank Klees: Now they're resigned, and you're saying that the minister appointed you—

Mr. Ian Delaney: As members.

Mr. Frank Klees: —as members.

Mr. Ian Delaney: I don't mean to be too vague on the point. I'm sure there's a lawyer in the room who's more competent at this than—

Mr. Frank Klees: Feel free to just say you don't know. What I'm concerned about is that we're coming out of a mess—

Mr. Ian Delaney: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: —an entangled mess, and hopefully, we're bringing some clarity to the new structure.

Mr. Ian Delaney: Well, let me talk about the new structure, if I can.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mr. Ian Delaney: The old structure was cumbersome and lent itself to behaviour that was less than transparent.

Mr. Frank Klees: In that case, could I—

Mr. Ian Delaney: I would like to answer the question. May I?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, please.

Mr. Ian Delaney: I think it's useful for general knowledge.

The better and more appropriate structure would be to shift the federally chartered not-for-profit organization to a provincially chartered not-for-profit corporation. That's a two- or three-step process, which we are two steps into at the moment. The ultimate position would be to have Ornge, the top Ornge company, as an OBCA corporation. That gives the provincial government more ability to intervene directly, which it couldn't do in a federally chartered corporation to the same extent.

We have to go through a two-step process at the federal incorporation. The third step will take place sometime in the next 30 or 60 days, which will result in the Ornge corporation, the top corporation, of which I am the chairman, being an OBCA corporation with a much clearer line of authority by the minister to the corporation.

Mr. Frank Klees: I just have one very quick question, if I might.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very quick.

Mr. Frank Klees: Public companies and other private companies—there are certain liabilities that a director takes on when they accept an appointment.

Mr. Ian Delaney: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Could you just comment very briefly on what obligations you, as the chair of the board, and your new directors have taken on? What liabilities do they take on in their new roles?

Mr. Ian Delaney: Well, there are very real liabilities. We are the first line of defence, and we are charged with executing those responsibilities. Failure to do that does expose us to liability. It's like any corporation anywhere. The directors are responsible for outcomes.

In most of the cases, there's no personal liability other than for certain specified acts: wilful bankruptcy and things like that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you intend to pursue—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. I'm sorry; you're overdue of time. If we can move on to the NDP. France.

Mr. Ian Delaney: Sorry. I'm enjoying the line of questions.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Hopefully, I'll be just as enjoyable.

You come from Sherritt, a very well-diversified global company. Ornge is a fraction of the size of Sherritt, where you come from, and certainly is far less diversified than where you used to work. Given that, would you describe Ornge's previous corporate structure as understandable?

Mr. Ian Delaney: I am no stranger to complex corporate structures.

M^{me} France Gélinas: We know that.

Mr. Ian Delaney: So I certainly understood it. It was a structure which lent itself to a lack of transparency, both by virtue of being a federally chartered not-for-profit corporation and then by virtue of having arm's-length corporations apart from that. It's certainly not the most complex corporate structure I've ever seen, but it did differ in a couple of ways. One is that on many of these subsidiary corporations or related corporations, the board of directors of the top company also served as directors of these subsidiaries or related corporations.

In any of the structures that I would ever work with or set up, we wouldn't allow that because that causes the board itself to have differentiated interests. And so while some of those corporations endured today and must endure for some period of time simply because they hold licences or other things which can't be transferred instantly, we've cleaned up most of the completely redundant corporations. But the better business practice would be that the board of directors of the top company only serves as directors of the top company. In all the other corporations, the boards are populated by staff and you really treat them not as corporations; you really treat them as divisions so that you have an undifferentiated interest in the top board.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Aside from, as you said, to take away from transparency and giving the ability to move money around, could you think of a useful purpose for the corporate structure that was developed at Ornge?

Mr. Ian Delaney: Usually when these corporations are set up, they are done to either isolate liability, minimize tax. They're typically set up for some kind of advantage. I think the—I don't know; I wasn't there—the nomenclature that has evolved is the for-profit and the not-for-profit. Splitting them into the for-profit and not-for-profit clearly was a business intent, to conduct a business away from the principal federally chartered corporation.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you see nothing else. Would you recommend some kind of a modified structure like this for Ornge right now?

Mr. Ian Delaney: No, not right now.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Is there any purpose that this could serve?

Mr. Ian Delaney: No. Our task for the next couple of years is very straightforward application of basic business principles to rebuild the leadership of Ornge and re-establish the credibility of the corporation. Our first and foremost preoccupation is safety; secondly, it's efficiency, so we have to spend a great deal of time on the oversight in those two areas, but the more fundamental building process that needs to go on in the next two years is a new class of leadership and reaffirming the brand.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So this idea that the knowledge skills that have been developed in air ambulance in Ontario could be exported to other areas so that Ontarians would benefit from this—this is no longer on?

Mr. Ian Delaney: In the short term I don't believe it is, because in the short term I don't believe we have the credibility.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And have you ever contributed to a political party?

Mr. Ian Delaney: Yes, I have.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And which one was it?

Mr. Ian Delaney: Years ago, not recently, to the Liberal Party.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just touching on that corporate structure: This is, for all intents and purposes, a quasi-public institution, the fact that it's primarily funded through the public. If you were to see this corporate structure in something that was a quasi-public institution—first of all, do you agree with me that that's a fair assessment, that it's a quasi-public institution?

Mr. Ian Delaney: No, I think it's a public institution. There's nothing quasi about it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, fair enough. Nothing quasi about it—that's even better. Then given that it's a public institution, did that corporate structure—if you looked at that, would that raise some concerns that there's something going on here that doesn't make sense?

Mr. Ian Delaney: At arm's length? I don't think it would. As I say, I'm no stranger to complex corporate structure. Goodness, I don't even know.

In various of my companies, I suspect a number of corporate entities—they vary by jurisdiction, they vary for tax effect, they vary because you want to isolate liability, you want to isolate a problem. Sometimes you have differentiated ownership in subsidiary corporations, partnerships and the like.

So there's nothing a priori in looking at that organizational—that corporate layout that would have said to me this is inappropriate. Clearly, when you delve into it, as your committee has learned and only from what I know in the papers and the Auditor General's report, all was not as it seemed.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: One last question and then I'm going to leave it over for my colleague.

Being a public institution, should it have been set up the way it was set up, in your opinion?

Mr. Ian Delaney: Well, it's an interesting—well, the—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. Ian Delaney: The concept of a charitable organization to do this is not a new model. I don't know for a fact, but I suspect that people were looking out to western Canada, to the province of Alberta, for instance, to the STARS model, their Shock Trauma Air Rescue Society, which is also a charitable organization—very successful. It's been going for 25 years. It's an organization with whom we are trying to get some exchanges of information set up. I suspect it was the model. The STARS organization, in order of magnitude, is 70%, 72%, 73% funded by donations, and I think that was the original model for Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Thank you very much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have 30 seconds.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. We know that Dr. Mazza owes a lot of money to Ornge. How much effort and what kind of effort are you putting into getting in touch with Mr. Mazza so that he pays his debt to Ornge?

Mr. Ian Delaney: I'm putting zero effort into it. It's in the hands of lawyers.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It's in the hands of lawyers? Okay. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. To the government, Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just following up on that last line of questioning—not about Dr. Mazza but about corporate structure because you're obviously much more comfortable with corporate structures than most of us on the committee. When I looked at the organization chart, I found it bewildering, but I think what I hear you saying is that, as somebody who's familiar with looking at complex corporate organizations, you didn't find it unusually bewildering, that the structure in and of itself was not a red flag.

Mr. Ian Delaney: No. In and of itself, it wasn't. As I did mention, however, the one thing that instantly would have been a red flag was the fact that you had different directors serving on different organizations, and that sets up differentiated interests on the part of the top board, which is not a structure that I would tolerate.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. But just looking at the org chart—

Mr. Ian Delaney: Just looking at the corporate structure itself, no.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —didn't necessarily send one off in a rage?

Mr. Ian Delaney: No, no.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Because I think for those of us who aren't used to org charts, we look at that org chart and say, "Oh, my goodness," but that's more a reflection on us than it is on the organization. You can say yes; it's okay. I won't be insulted.

Since you were appointed as the chair, obviously there have been a number of things that have happened, but two of the significant things are, there has been a new performance agreement signed, there has been new legislation tabled, and I'm sure you're quite familiar with the new legislation. How do those two things change the relationship between the ministry and Ornge?

Mr. Ian Delaney: Well, it gives the minister and the ministry much more authority to intervene in the event that they are uncomfortable with outcomes. It troubles me not at all. I think the new performance agreement is perhaps overly restrictive in some regard, but it's a natural consequence of going from one that didn't work to a slight overcorrection the other way. But it troubles me not at all because at bottom, it deals with transparency and integrity, and I can assure you, having worked with our board and from my own standards and the standards that we have agreed to adopt as a board and the natural inclination of the other board members, that our own particular standards would transcend anything the minister might want.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And how important is that legislation in terms of shifting those accountability structures that were in place in the past and will, if the legislation is passed, be in place in the future?

Mr. Ian Delaney: Not at all, really. It provides the ability for more direct intervention, quicker intervention. It does give the ministry more rights to information audit and the like, but that is not in any way at odds with the basic operation of the business, and I don't anticipate it's going to be in any way a drag on our board, simply because our board has higher standards than that performance agreement.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So from the point of view of the operation of Ornge as currently structured, or as currently evolving, it gives you the flexibility to be an excellent ambulance service, it gives the ministry the opportunity to have the accountability, if needed—and I'm not accusing you of in any way attracting the need, but were anything in the future to go off the rails, it gives the ministry additional opportunities to step in.

Mr. Ian Delaney: It does, and none of that is troubling to me by way of operation. There's a modest increase in expense in terms of reporting and monitoring, but in the main, it's certainly not a drag on what our board considers to be our challenge and our opportunity, frankly.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You made reference to having relatively little interaction with the previous problems at Ornge, but I'm wondering if in your role as board chair, since you've been there, whether you've seen any indicators that the previous management at Ornge had deliberately misled, deliberately provided misleading information to the minister or the ministry?

Mr. Ian Delaney: I don't; I'm being intentionally obtuse on these points. At the present time, if there is a drag on management, I think we've got five sets of auditors in there looking at different things. It makes the current operation a little tedious, but I have no interaction with those auditors, and other than reading the Auditor General's report, I have no particular knowledge.

To the extent that you stopped the problems, the problems have been stopped. The corporate structure has been clarified, a redundant corporation has been put into bankruptcy, management which were found to be wanting have been sent away. So our immediate priorities are new leadership, getting new leadership—always, always, always subordinate to the safety factor. But I must say that we've got good material to work with. Our board is completely engaged. Many of our board members have travelled as far afield as Sudbury and Thunder Bay to get right down on the ground and look at issues and talk to people. I, myself, have talked to pilots and paramedics from Toronto, Timmins and Thunder Bay. Before the passage of many more months, I think our entire board will have been to all our bases for an on-the-ground session with front-line people. The front-line people are marvellous. They are dedicated—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute and a half.

Mr. Ian Delaney: We have absolutely no concerns at all about the dedication and professionalism of our front-line people. Our pilots, our mechanics, our critical care, our advanced care people are all committed and they are all terrific. We have the benefit of one of the most modern fleets of aircraft in the world, and all of the questions and issues associated with the Pilatus aircraft and the AW139—this is something I do know; I do have a little specific knowledge. These are very successful aircraft and the most modern aircraft, the most modern fleet of its kind and the largest fleet of its kind anywhere on the planet. So we have real material to work with. I don't foresee any issue at all in re-establishing the credibility. It's very straightforward—not simple, but it is straightforward, what needs to be done, and our board is just committed to doing it.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you very much for your presentation, and thank you very much for coming back this afternoon. We appreciate that, you rearranging your schedule.

Mr. Ian Delaney: I'm available at your pleasure.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. We very much appreciate that you came in, Mr. Delaney.

Mr. Ian Delaney: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our last presenter today is Cathy Worden, chief of staff of the Ministry of Economic Development and Innovation. Welcome.

Ms. Cathy Worden: Thank you.

Mr. David Zimmer: I was going to ask him while I had him here why, when I drive down through the cities and towns of North America, do I drive down one week and it's a Sheraton Hotel and I drive down the next week and it's become another hotel and another hotel? But I didn't get a chance.

Interjection: I think it wasn't the Sheraton. It was the—

Mr. David Zimmer: Oh, I thought he said Sheraton.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No, it's Sherritt International.

Interjections.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Just to confirm, you've received the "Witness Appearing before the Standing Committee on Public Accounts" information?

Ms. Cathy Worden: That's correct. I have, yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. And the clerk will swear an oath, then.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): If you'd just raise your hand, Ms. Worden.

Do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Ms. Cathy Worden: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And the NDP gets to go first this time.

M^{me} France Gélinas: She has no statement?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Oh, sorry.

Ms. Cathy Worden: I do have a statement.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a five-minute statement and then the NDP will go first.

Ms. Cathy Worden: Thank you.

Good afternoon, Mr. Chair and members of the public accounts committee. I would like to provide a brief opening statement, and then I would be happy to answer any questions you may have.

My name is Cathy Worden and I currently hold the position of chief of staff to the Minister of Economic Development and Innovation.

From April 2010 until November 2011, approximately 19 months, I was honoured to work for the Premier of Ontario as a policy adviser. In my role as policy adviser, I had several areas of policy responsibility: transportation and transit, infrastructure, economic development and trade, research and innovation, and intergovernmental affairs.

My duties as a policy adviser included providing the Premier with strategic policy advice regarding the policy areas for which I was responsible, liaising with other offices here at Queen's Park, outside stakeholders and different levels of government, and, on occasion, I was required to travel with the Premier. I reported to the Premier's principal secretary and, on occasion, would report to other senior staff, including the chief of staff and our director of policy.

Regarding the January 2011 document from Ornge, I would like to make the following observations:

I have no recollection of receiving the January 2011 document from Ornge. I had many areas of policy responsibility while working in the Premier's office, and health policy and Ornge as an organization were not part of them. My only association with Ornge and the Ornge document of January 2011 is that I was c.c.'d on a document that was addressed to the Ministry of Health and did not fall under my areas of responsibility.

After seeing my name in the paper several weeks ago regarding the Ornge document, I did a search of my documents and email records. While I have no recollection of receiving the Ornge document, my records show that I sent an email to my colleagues in the Premier's office on January 31, 2011. The email simply indicates that we had all received the same document.

Finally, I had no further contact with anyone on this document. The document was addressed to the Ministry of Health, and the minister has taken action.

I would be happy to answer any questions you have for me.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. And now it's time for the NDP to ask questions. France.

M^{me} France G  linas: All right. You saw that you were copied on this document. You've now seen everything that has come about with Ornge. Looking back on this document and on the role that you played, why do you figure you were copied?

Ms. Cathy Worden: I can't speak to the intention of the individuals who wrote that document and who sent it. That's not something that I can speak to. I'm here to speak to the facts that I know and am aware of, and that's not something that I can speak to. You would have to ask the people who sent that document.

M^{me} France G  linas: So you have no idea?

Ms. Cathy Worden: Again, I can speak to what I know in terms of—

M^{me} France G  linas: I'm asking you your ideas.

Ms. Cathy Worden: I understand. I think you're asking me a hypothetical question, and as I stated in my opening statement, health policy and Ornge as an organization were not part of my responsibilities.

M^{me} France G  linas: You're not helping yourself here. I'm asking you, do you have any ideas why you were c.c.'d on this letter in January?

Mr. David Zimmer: Just a point of order: Perhaps, counsel, this is the sort of thing that we can seek your advice on, the appropriateness of that question.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): It's not a question of the law, so you, as a witness, can answer what you're comfortable with, and if you have a question of our counsel, feel free to ask.

Ms. Cathy Worden: Absolutely. I understand the intent of the question. I don't know why I was c.c.'d. The only thing I can surmise—and I know that my current deputy minister, Wendy Tilford, was here earlier today and there were some trade missions. I can only surmise that that might be the only reason, but I can't speak to the intent. As I noted in my opening statement, health policy and Ornge as an organization weren't part of my responsibilities. I had had no dealings with Ornge as an organizations previously, at all. That was my first interaction, being CCed on a document that was addressed to the Ministry of Health.

M^{me} France G  linas: Do you know anybody at Ornge?

Ms. Cathy Worden: No, I do not.

M^{me} France G  linas: You don't know anybody? Okay. Have you been contacted by anybody from—we'll start with Alfred Apps. Has he ever contacted you regarding Ornge?

Ms. Cathy Worden: No. I have no recollection of any contact from him on Ornge.

M^{me} France G  linas: No? Have you ever spoken to the Premier about Ornge?

Ms. Cathy Worden: I have not.

M^{me} France G  linas: Not since the scandal came out? Never?

Ms. Cathy Worden: I have not.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. That's all for me.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Have you had any contact with Alfred Apps just in general terms?

Ms. Cathy Worden: No, I don't know him.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And at any point in time were you aware of Ornge and its for-profit schema or schemata in terms of corporate organization?

Ms. Cathy Worden: I was not. The first instance was when I saw things in the media and specifically with my name associated with the document.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And in the Premier's office, are you aware, in general, of when the issue of Ornge came up?

Ms. Cathy Worden: No. I would state I'm no longer in the Premier's office. I'm now the chief of staff to the Minister of Economic Development and Innovation. And no, when I was in the Premier's office, for my time there, I had no discussion about Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. So it's fair to say that when you received that email you were CCed, you don't recall it, per se. You sent out a letter or an email on January 31.

Ms. Cathy Worden: Correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Who did you send that out to?

Ms. Cathy Worden: I sent that to the principal secretary, the Premier's health policy advisor and the assistant to the principal secretary.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you be able to table that email, that correspondence?

Ms. Cathy Worden: Yes, absolutely. I don't have it here with me today but absolutely, yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, certainly. And why did you choose those people to send the email off to?

Ms. Cathy Worden: Again, I'll go back. I actually don't recall receiving the document, but if I had to think of my mindset, perhaps I looked at who was also CCed on that document, and those would have been my colleagues at the time in the Premier's office that were also included. That's what I can imagine my headspace was.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sorry, who was the health policy advisor?

Ms. Cathy Worden: It was an individual named Dan Carbon at the time.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. That's fine. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well, on to the government.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: No questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No questions? Okay, very well. And for the opposition, Mr. Ouellette.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: I see we're getting questions.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You didn't know you had any, did you, Jerry?

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Well, not for this individual, no.

Did you have any involvement with the trip to the Middle East or the trips that were brought forward in the past?

Ms. Cathy Worden: I did not.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: You did not. So there was no involvement at all with even the air show that took place as well?

Ms. Cathy Worden: I did not.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Okay. Do you have—and I believe you mentioned your deputy was here earlier on—any expenses that may have been incurred by individuals within the minister's office regarding the trips abroad that involved going to the Middle East and that? We would hope that you might be able to forward us that information. Do you understand what I'm asking?

Ms. Cathy Worden: I'm so sorry; no, I didn't understand the question.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Okay. The trips that went to the Middle East that the deputy spoke of earlier on: Can we get copies of the expenses of the individuals who were in attendance from your ministry, or from the minister's office, to be brought forward so that we may be able to review those and the possibility of any actions that may have occurred at that time?

Ms. Cathy Worden: To the Chair and to the member, I can absolutely speak with officials and endeavour to do that. I have no problem making that request, of course.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Have you or any of your staff met with the officials from AugustaWestland?

Ms. Cathy Worden: The honourable member would know that staff and the minister etc. have changed since the previous election, so what I can tell you is that I have not met with any of the members of the company. I think the deputy was here earlier and provided details on that. I couldn't speak to that. I don't believe any of my current staff in the minister's office have met with the company. We've had no interaction with them.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: So from your recollection, nobody in your current staff had those. Were you aware of any previous staff members who had those meetings as well?

Ms. Cathy Worden: With the company?

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Yes.

Ms. Cathy Worden: No. Again, I can't speak to it. I think the deputy provided information. I'm sure she and members of the previous minister's staff could give details, but I can't. I don't know when they met, who they met, if they met. I apologize.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: Thank you very much. I'm not sure if my colleagues have questions?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: No, Mr. Chair, I have no questions for this witness. I think we have some motions, and I defer the time to get that business done.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very good. Thank you very much for coming before the committee today.

Ms. Cathy Worden: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The first motion we have is one from Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You would like me to read it into the record, Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts ("the committee") direct the clerk of the committee to request the attendance of the following individuals as witnesses in relation to the committee's consideration of the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge air ambulance and related services: the member of provincial Parliament for Oshawa, the member of provincial Parliament for Whitby-Oshawa, the member of provincial Parliament for Simcoe North, the member of provincial Parliament for Dufferin-Caledon, and the member of provincial Parliament for Nickel Belt.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Any discussion on that? Debate? France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Am I in a conflict of interest to vote?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Good question. Just give us a second here; the clerk's thinking.

We're just going to recess for one minute so he can check—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Well, I think the vote will go through anyway, so I'm going to abstain, just in case, and my colleague will vote for it, and that will be the end of that. How's that?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, that's fine.

Any other comments?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Recorded vote.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can I just ask you to read that motion again, please?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sure. Go ahead.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Ms. Sandals moved that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts ("the committee") direct the clerk of the committee to request the attendance of the following individuals as witnesses in relation to the committee's consideration of the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge air ambulance and related services: the member of provincial Parliament for Oshawa, the member of provincial Parliament for Whitby-Oshawa, the member of provincial Parliament for Simcoe North, the member of provincial Parliament for Dufferin-Caledon, and the member of provincial Parliament for Nickel Belt.

Mr. Frank Klees: If I might, Mr. Chair, I'm prepared to support that on the proviso that the member agrees that we add the Premier to that list.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That will have to be a separate motion.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, I move an amendment to that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Then could you please produce that in writing?

Mr. Frank Klees: Gladly.

Mr. Chair, I'll read my amendment.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Will you read it into the record, please?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: I propose the following amendment: That the Premier be added to the list of MPPs to be requested to attend as a witness to the committee hearings.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. We'll need to take a short recess, two to five minutes, to get this printed.

The committee recessed from 1447 to 1452.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Any further debate or can we get—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I actually have another amendment, if I may. Actually, it's my motion. Mr. Zimmer has an amendment. I misspoke.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer has decided to make an amendment.

Mr. David Zimmer: I've got to speak with my subcommittee member here.

I move this amendment to Mr. Klees's amendment.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay.

Mr. David Zimmer: That the leader of the official opposition and the leader of the third party be added to the witness list.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We'll need that in writing.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We need to take another recess to get this printed.

The committee recessed from 1454 to 1458.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll come back on the record. We are now adjourned.

The committee adjourned at 1458.

*The committee met at 0833 in room 151.*SPECIAL REPORT, AUDITOR GENERAL:
ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE
AND RELATED SERVICES

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If we could get started, we need to go into closed session for discussion right off the bat, so if I could ask media and others to leave the room.

The committee continued in closed session from 0835 to 0856.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'd like to call the committee to order and I believe, Ms. Sandals, you have something to start the committee.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you. I move unanimous consent that the amendment to the amendment moved by Mr. Zimmer, the amendment moved by Mr. Klees and the main motion with respect to witnesses moved by myself all be withdrawn.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Is there unanimous consent? There is? Agreed. So those motions are withdrawn.

SUBCOMMITTEE REPORT

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Now we have the subcommittee report. Ms. Sandals?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you.

Your subcommittee met on Thursday, April 12, 2012, and Monday, April 16, 2012, to consider the method of proceeding on the 2012 special report of the Office of the Auditor General on Ornge air ambulance and related services, and recommends the following:

(1) That legal counsel not meet with any witnesses or witness counsel prior to their appearance before the Standing Committee on Public Accounts.

(2) That when the committee clerk confirms a witness's appearance before committee he will also state, "It would be inappropriate at these hearings to indicate that you have spoken to the police with respect to Ornge."

(3) That the committee request that all hearings be held in committee room 151.

(4) That the committee clerk, in consultation with the Chair, be authorized prior to the adoption of the report of the subcommittee to commence making any preliminary arrangements necessary to facilitate the committee's proceedings.

I move adoption of the report.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any debate? All in agreement? Agreed. That report is carried.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OF ONTARIO

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our first witness this morning is Peter Wallace, secretary of the cabinet, head of the Ontario public service. If you could please come before the committee. Welcome

Mr. Peter Wallace: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our clerk will have you do the oath.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Could you raise your hand, Mr. Wallace? Do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. Peter Wallace: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. You have five minutes for an opening statement and then there will be about eight minutes each for the various parties to ask questions. Please go ahead.

Mr. Peter Wallace: Thank you, and I'll be pleased to review my statement and obviously pleased to answer any questions the committee may have.

Good morning. I am Peter Wallace. I'm the secretary of cabinet and head of the Ontario public service. I started my current position on December 17, 2001. Previous to that, I'd been a public servant for approximately the last 30 years. Prior to my current appointment, I was the Deputy Minister of Finance and secretary to Ontario's treasury board from September 2008. I've also had the opportunity to serve as Deputy Minister of Energy, deputy minister responsible for policy in the cabinet office, as well as various positions with the Ministry of Natural Resources, Management Board and other ministries.

I'll focus my quite brief remarks on three technical areas that are under the purview of the Ministry of Finance and I believe may be of interest to this committee. These are public salary disclosure, the procedures associated with the consolidation of various entities into the province's reporting books and the ministry's role with respect to internal audit and the internal audit process.

Starting off with the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act: This is an act that is administered by the Ministry of Finance. The act, as I think the committee is aware, outlines a series of technical criteria and that, in turn, imposes an obligation on applicable organizations and individuals to disclose any compensation, essentially T4 compensation, over a $100,000 level.

The obligation is on the reporting entities. The information is collected through the line ministries, consolidated and published, made available by the Ontario Ministry of Finance. There is always some considerable year-to-year churn in the numbers, as both individuals come on and off the list, as well as organizations appear or change status and are no longer eligible.

Secondly, I'd like to talk about the consolidation of entities. I understand this has been an issue of some interest to the committee. To provide some background on this, in, I think, 2005 the Public Sector Accounting Board altered the accounting standards applicable to provincial governments; and this change in the accounting standards, largely a technical change, altered the reporting entity associated with the government of Ontario and in fact considerably expanded the reporting entity.

The consolidation changes in criteria were essentially technical. They respect a view of an accounting construct. The act of consolidation—and in this case, Ornge was consolidated into the province's books earlier—does not change in any way the practical control of the organization. The fact that the organization is consolidated into the province's books doesn't change at all the practical governance mechanisms through which operational control is normally exercised. That's through performance agreements and other oversight arrangements. This is an important construct, because as the construct of consolidation expanded dramatically in the middle of the last decade, a large number of organizations have come on to the province's books as part of the consolidated entity, and these have historically exercised a very significant degree of operational independence from the province.

So hospitals, school boards and organizations that function almost completely independently from the government of Ontario, such as pensions, pension bodies, healthcare of Ontario pension plan, for example, are technically consolidated into the province's books and are part of the reporting entity, although the province exercises no effective operational control over those entities. The simple fact that they're consolidated does not alter the controls. I think that's accurate, Auditor; that's my understanding.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I think that's a good summary, Mr. Wallace.

Mr. Peter Wallace: The third point I'd like to cover is internal audit, which is a vital management function in the Ontario public service, and it's one we take extremely seriously. The internal audit division is headed by an assistant deputy minister who reports to the Ministry of Finance, to the Deputy Minister of Finance, for administrative purposes. And there is a clear protocol, a clear understanding that the work of the office of the internal auditor is not influenced or altered by the Deputy Minister of Finance. So the reporting of audit findings, the routine and non-routine activity of internal audit, is not generally shared with the Deputy Minister of Finance. The reporting relationship is a consolidated one that facilitates a relatively efficient administrative relationship but is not intended as an operational or policy relationship. Internal audit remains functionally independent, and this is an important construct. It's designed to be functionally independent from the guidance of the Deputy Minister of Finance, and in that context the Deputy Minister of Finance would obviously not receive, as an ordinary course of business, reviews of specific audits of any type.

The last point I'd like to cover is that, as the committee is aware, I was one of 14 individuals copied on a January 19, 2011, letter from Ornge. While I have no recollection of receiving and reviewing the letter, a subsequent request was received by my office from Ornge asking for attendance at a meeting. I was not available for that meeting, but officials from the Ministry of Finance did attend a briefing provided by officials from Ornge. It is my understanding that this was primarily a technical conversation, that Ornge was showing the government what it had done in terms of a bond issue and a handful of other points.

The ministry did review the material provided by Ornge, did engage in a technical conversation. The focus of the conversation, I am informed, was on the potential risk to the Ontario credit from the bond issue undertaken by Ornge, and obviously, from a Ministry of Finance perspective, any time you have a transaction occurring, any transaction, you want to undertake a certain amount of due diligence to be assured that that transaction does not expose the province's credit to any incremental risk.

Assurances were provided both in the direct documentation provided by Ornge, the January 19 letter, and in that subsequent meeting to indicate that the province's credit was fully insulated from the bond activity undertaken by the entity. That was a clear focus of the Ministry of Finance and the Ontario Financing Authority, to ensure that the province remain insulated from any incremental risk.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If you don't mind wrapping up, we're a little—

Mr. Peter Wallace: I'll be happy to wrap up. I will simply conclude by saying that I do remain, obviously, exceptionally concerned by the findings of the Auditor General. I am acutely aware of the need for the government of Ontario to continuously drive for more efficient operating models, including operating models that are not traditional, that involve other groups into the delivery of public services, including core public services. But we must always, as the Auditor General's report reminds us, remain absolutely vigilant to proper accountability structures, proper control structures, proper performance agreements and other mechanisms.

I'll be pleased to answer any questions the committee may have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, and we'll move to the official opposition to begin with. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Mr. Wallace. I'd like to move quickly to the issue of the $300-million bond offering. I find it interesting that you say that you were satisfied that, as you put it, the credit of the province was "fully insulated" from any incremental risk. Can you share with us: What did you rely on for that insulated risk?

Mr. Peter Wallace: I appreciate the question. The reliance was not by me directly but by officials from the Ministry of Finance, from whom I've obviously subsequently sought information. The meeting, as I understand it, and the correspondence from Ornge, as I understand it, refers retrospectively to bond issues that have already occurred.

We have, in the Ontario Ministry of Finance and the Ontario Financing Authority, fairly substantial experience in bond issuance and in the relationship between bond issuance and organizations with which the government of Ontario has some type of ongoing financial or other relationship. So we relied on—as I understand it, asked questions about three core areas.

The first is the actual documentation provided to me through that letter, which articulates—I believe provides a fair number of assurances that the activities being undertaken by Ornge were both consistent with the performance agreement and outside of the financial relationship with the province. So there's a clear written record that establishes that.

The second part is that there was a series of questions or dialogue at the meeting that confirmed those written assurances.

The third, and from a slightly more pragmatic perspective, is that this is an issue that had, as I understand it, already taken place. It had been reviewed. It had been placed on the market. The market would have seen in the documentation—would have been able to form a judgment that there was no provincial guarantee associated with that, and it would be my understanding from that that this would be a reasonable level of oversight with that type of entity, given that the issue had already occurred.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Wallace, I'd like to ask this: Have you seen the offering memorandum that was used to float the—

Mr. Peter Wallace: I have not reviewed the offering memorandum.

Mr. Frank Klees: You have not. Did your ministry officials at any time review that offering memorandum, knowing that $300 million was being floated on the open market?

Mr. Peter Wallace: Three hundred million dollars was being floated on the open market by an entity that we were given concrete assurances—and I appreciate the question. But $300 million was floated on the open market in response to a structure that insulated the province of Ontario. What this means is that if Ornge defaulted on its obligations or if the entity defaulted on its obligations—unlikely, but nevertheless a scenario that needs to be considered—there is, as we understand it, no recourse back to the province's credit. That would be the primary concern from an Ontario Ministry of Finance perspective.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Wallace, I've read that offering memorandum. There are repeated references to the government of Ontario, repeated references to $150 million of revenue flowing directly to Ornge, repeated references to the security. In fact, the rating that was attached to this public offering relied almost exclusively on the fact that it was the government of Ontario that was standing behind this offering. I find it quite disconcerting at best that we have such a major public offering taking place with the very clear guarantee of the government of Ontario, and Ministry of Finance officials were not aware.

Can I ask this: Was the Minister of Finance made aware that this offering was being floated before it was?

Mr. Peter Wallace: I apologize, but I need to spend a moment with the language you used. I discussed the notion of incremental exposure to the province's credit. The core construct, as I would understand it and as the financial professionals would understand it, is whether or not, in the event of default, additional incremental obligations would accrue to the province. I of course have no understanding of the way in which rating agencies or investors would have made the decision. That is, frankly and fundamentally, their business, and any construct associated with that would be purely speculative on my part. I do know that the core issue in any bond relates to the security. There is no recourse, as we understand it, and we were given concrete assurances that there is no recourse, back to the province's credit associated with any incremental obligation incurred by the entity.

Mr. Frank Klees: Let me ask you—

Mr. Peter Wallace: I apologize for exploring that, but I do need to answer your question.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about a minute and a half, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I do need to answer your question, which is, I am not aware of any briefing to the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. At the end of the day, is the province of Ontario now responsible for the $300 million that is out there in bonds? Is the province of Ontario now directly responsible for the interest payments and, ultimately, the repayment of the capital of that $300 million?

Mr. Peter Wallace: If the entity known as Ornge is unable to fulfill its financial obligations which it incurred through a separately structured subsidiary transaction with bondholders who read and reviewed a prospectus, there is no incremental risk, I understand, from a legal construct, to the province's credit. The entity, as I understand it, has not been altered by the very appropriate governance changes that have been put in to provide additional fiduciary oversight.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Wallace, anyone reading that offering memorandum will draw the conclusion that it is the province of Ontario that is standing behind that bond offering, that it's the $150 million of annual funding that will sustain that entity that issued—because there were no other assets. There was no other revenue in that entity that was floating those bonds. So for anyone to accept that there would be no incremental risk to the province of Ontario is outrightly irresponsible. My question to you is, who at the Ministry of Finance—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time.

Mr. Frank Klees: —will be held responsible for that?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We have to move on, I'm afraid.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I will be clear—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, go ahead and answer the question.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I was through much of this period the Deputy Minister of Finance. If there is accountability associated with that, those accountabilities would rest with me as the Deputy Minister of Finance and as chair of the Ontario Financing Authority.

I will say that in those roles I had the opportunity and privilege to work with individuals well known to Mr. McCarter and others who are professionals in the world of corporate finance and the world of public finance. In that construct, we have considerable experience with the offering of credit facilities by a wide range of private, public and quasi-public entities. We have considerable experience with offerings by entities of the broader public sector that do, in fact, retain and attract risk back to the government of Ontario.

So while I appreciate your view and I appreciate your reading of the prospectus, we will, frankly and with respect, have undertaken a different understanding on the basis of a clear written document from the entity and on the basis of appropriate due diligence concerns. You may feel that investors would have had a different view. Our understanding legally—the assurances we sought were that this was a separate, insulated entity. It doesn't mean we like it. It doesn't mean it's something that's a best practice. It does mean that from the perspective, "Does this attract incremental legal risk?" which is the appropriate standard when confronted with something that has already occurred, there was, as we understand it and as we were assured, no incremental risk. That structure remains intact.

Bondholders do not have—and this would be an important legal issue—we would retain and we would be accurate that bondholders do not have direct access back into the provincial credit.

This is also critically important from a broad policy perspective, because we continually strive for mechanisms, for partnerships, that make our business more efficient. As we strive for those, we do need access to private credit. Being able to maintain the distinction between private and public credit remains of vital importance.

We do not put ourselves into the minds of potential readers of prospectuses; we put ourselves into the minds of the government of Ontario. From a government of Ontario perspective, with respect, we were assured—we understand factually—that there is adequate insulation from the province's credit.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. We move to the NDP. France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: And make sure that I get my full 10 minutes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, you will.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Good morning. The first thing I would like to know is when you were first made aware that Ornge had for-profit subsidiaries.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I'm not cognizant of when I became aware of that. The point in time at which information was presumably provided to me that would make me aware of it was the January memorandum. Unfortunately, I frankly have no recollection of that memorandum. It was actioned by my office, so it is quite lengthy and one of a fair number of copies. So I would have become more aware of it when media coverage and the Auditor General's review intensified, and it became a subject of broader interest.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So can you give me a date when it became of broader interest and hit your radar?

Mr. Peter Wallace: No, I'm afraid I cannot.

M^{me} France Gélinas: A range of time? Was it just before Christmas? Was it last summer when the auditor started—actually, was completing—his work?

Mr. Peter Wallace: If I'm forced to speculate on a range of time, it would be someplace between late January and, let's say, June 2011. In terms of the specific question, which is the creation and mechanics of creation of a for-profit subsidiary, that's a fairly specific question, and I—

M^{me} France Gélinas: No, I didn't ask that question. I asked, when did you become aware? So you became aware between January 2010—

Mr. Peter Wallace: 2011.

M^{me} France Gélinas: —2011 and June 2011. Did you speak to anybody about this when you became aware? Did it raise any red flags to you?

Mr. Peter Wallace: The simple existence of a subsidiary of any entity is, frankly, not uncommon—

M^{me} France Gélinas: So it didn't raise any red flags for you? When did it raise red flags for you? When did it become an issue for you?

Mr. Peter Wallace: The issue is frankly not one of corporate structure but corporate behaviour. We have a wide range of organizations. I appreciate the nature of the question, but it is vitally important that we, from an Ontario public service perspective, be open to finding better ways of delivering public services. It is not remotely uncommon for broader public sector institutions to create subsidiaries to try and extract value from other areas of public service activity. This is done routinely by other areas of the broader public sector. So the mere creation of a subsidiary or an entity would not, in the general rule, raise red flags.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But I'm asking you, when did it become an issue for you? Is Ornge an issue for you now?

Mr. Peter Wallace: Of course Ornge is an issue for—

M^{me} France Gélinas: When did it become an issue?

Mr. Peter Wallace: It presumably became an issue at the time when the question of behaviour of the corporation—

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'm looking for dates.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I'm afraid that I don't have the specific dates associated with that. I'm afraid that I do not keep a diary that indicates what dates I became aware of specific issues—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Give me a range.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I believe I already have. I've said, you know, my understanding—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, so since 2011. So when this became an issue—like you said it is, Ornge is an issue; it became an issue between January 2011 and June 2011—who did you speak to about this?

Mr. Peter Wallace: I would have spoken to officials in the Ministry of Finance. I would have spoken—

M^{me} France Gélinas: The minister himself?

Mr. Peter Wallace: I have no recollection of a specific conversation with the minister on this.

M^{me} France Gélinas: If something is an issue, wouldn't it be reasonable to assume that the Secretary of Cabinet talks to the minister? Do you talk to the minister, ever?

Mr. Peter Wallace: I was the Secretary of Cabinet; of course, I talked to the minister. I was the Secretary of Cabinet following December 11; during most of the relevant time period I was the Deputy Minister of Finance.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you talk to the Minister of Finance when you were deputy minister?

Mr. Peter Wallace: I talked to the Minister of Finance—

M^{me} France Gélinas: If something is an issue, would you talk to the minister about issues?

Mr. Peter Wallace: I generally do discuss issues with the Minister of Finance, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So is it reasonable to assume that you talked to the Minister of Finance that there was an issue at Ornge?

Mr. Peter Wallace: It is reasonable to assume that if there were specific issues that were raised with me that related to the responsibilities of the Ministry of Finance—if, for example, we had information that did expose the province's credit or information that was different—

M^{me} France Gélinas: But you did say that you became aware between January 2011 and June 2011. You described it; you recognized that Ornge was an issue. There was an issue. It is your job to let the minister know. So it is reasonable to assume that you talked to the Minister of Finance. Ornge was an issue between January 2011 and June 2011.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I'm trying to be helpful here, but—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Gélinas, if you could let him answer the question please.

M^{me} France Gélinas: He's too long in his answer and tells me a whole bunch of things I don't want to know.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I am trying to be helpful, and I apologize.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just a second, just a second, a point of order.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No point of privilege; let's continue here.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I explained to you the time frame and I explained to you my mechanism by which I became aware of this. Was information of public knowledge? Information of public knowledge, for example, that the Auditor General was conducting a review—I would have become aware of that, not through an internal audit mechanism, not through some other mechanism, but frankly through the same mechanisms that others became aware of it—through allegations about corporate behaviour.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, I want—

Mr. Peter Wallace: But those allegations about corporate behaviour were broadly known and I would not have felt compelled to share information broadly known specifically with the minister. I could reasonably assume that the minister would read the papers in the same way that I would read the papers.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. I want to talk about disclosure, that the NDP filed a freedom-of-access-to-information about the lack of disclosure of Dr. Mazza's salary. The freedom-of-information went to your ministry, and basically we got back that they couldn't share anything with us. The fact that we filed a freedom-of-access-to-information, that we asked specifically what had happened to Dr. Mazza, would that have been flagged to you in any way?

Mr. Peter Wallace: I have no recollection of it being flagged. It would normally not be flagged. I have no direct knowledge of that. But in general, the questions are phrased. We are under obligation—we take the obligations extremely seriously—to provide any responsive records. In this instance, there presumably would be no responsive records. In the absence of responsive records, we would send a response indicating that there are no records that we can disclose, simply because we do not have that information.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. We have a document called "Indicators of Control," dated 2008, from the Ministry of Finance, that states, "We feel the government can effectively govern the financial and operating policies of Ornge." You were the deputy minister at the time.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Excuse me, Ms. Gélinas. Do you have a copy of this document you're referring to?

M^{me} France Gélinas: It's in the newspaper. It's a quote from a newspaper.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If the government members want to see it, then we need to be able to see it.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It's in the press clipping that was circulated to us when the good people did their work. Remember? They gave us a package of information about Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I'm going to stop the clock now, because we're being interrupted—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If it was in the legislative research package that was sent around, that's fine. Continue.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Chair, I stopped the clock at 7:41. I'd like it to resume now and not have any of this time count against us.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, I take care of the clock. Continue, please.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you.

So, basically, a document from the Ministry of Finance says, "We feel the government can effectively govern the financial and operating policies of Ornge." You were the deputy minister at the time. Did you feel confident that you could govern the financial and operating policies of Ornge?

Mr. Peter Wallace: Two constructs here: First, this preceded, as a technical point, my appointment as the Deputy Minister of Finance, as I understand. Secondly, and far more fundamentally, the consolidation process occurred over a very large number of entities, over a relatively accelerated period, a time at which we took entities such as hospitals, school boards, pension plans and a variety of others and included them into the province's reporting entity. This was reflecting a set of technical accounting changes that changed the accounting definition of control. There was, in fact—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time. I would just let all the members know that if you're finding you don't have enough time, you do have the ability to call a witness back at a future time. We are out of time now. We'll move to the government, please.

Mr. Peter Wallace: I would like to be helpful on this point, if I can.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: On a point of order, Chair: You know, these proceedings are difficult enough given the limited time frame that we have. The constant interruptions by members of the government committee members here—I would ask that we have an agreement that you, as the Chair, have the responsibility to ensure that these proceedings are carried out in a way that is appropriate. We don't need either Mr. Zimmer or Ms. Sandals acting as referee. I would ask you, as the Chair, to take control of this committee—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I have the ability to do that, thank you very much. In the interests of time—

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair, just a second. I want to refer to the rules and the memo from the counsel, just on

Mr. Klees's point. Counsel addressed how the procedure—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer, that's a privileged memo, so please don't refer to it. If we can—

Mr. David Zimmer: I ask you to look at page 6 on the procedures for members if they object to a question and the procedures that we have to follow. It's at page 6 of counsel's memo.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We know about that.

Now, if we could proceed to the government, who would like to do the questioning on the government side? Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you very much. I appreciate your patience and your very clear answers. Forgive me if I refer to you as deputy, because that's how I'm accustomed to it.

We seem to all be taking advantage of your knowledge as Deputy Minister of Finance and I wonder if we could go back to the issue of consolidation, which is very complicated.

If you could explain to us, (a) is Ornge consolidated on the province's books, and (b) why is Ornge consolidated on the province's books? When did that happen and what's the consequence of that happening?

Mr. Peter Wallace: Thank you. I'm going to treat it, frankly, as an extension of the last question and try and be helpful in terms of, I think, the intent of the past question as well.

Consolidation is an accounting construct by which an entity is brought into another entity's reporting books. It's used in a variety of subsidiary contexts; it's used in a variety of others.

In 2005, the Public Sector Accounting Board, which sets the standards for provincial government, broadened the standards—altered the standards to broaden the number of consolidated entities. As part of that, there has been a fairly extensive conversation that involves the office of controller in the Ministry of Finance, line ministries, from time to time the Office of the Auditor General, in understanding the application of these new standards.

The application of the standards themselves and the shift in the standards is of no practical consequence in terms of the reporting relationship, oversight or other aspects. This is not by any way of an excuse, just simply that consolidation as it exists in a reporting entity construct is not an indicator of anything else. For example, we have no visibility—no reporting relationship, no visibility into the corporate structures or governance or other mechanisms used by pension boards, as an example, nor would we want to regulatorily have that type of relationship.

In the specifics of the situation of Ornge, while this occurred prior to my appointment as deputy, I understand it to have been a bit of a grey area, and I think probably the Auditor General may be of help in this: that there are arguments that speak to consolidation of Ornge in this construct, and they include the very high proportion of funding that Ornge derives from the government of Ontario, the fact that it is, for practical purposes, almost completely reliant on government of Ontario funding. That is one set of criteria.

There are other criteria that are used in the PSAB documentation that speak, for example, to the right to appoint a board of directors and other mechanisms. So we have universities that are largely funded by the government of Ontario but excluded; hospitals that are largely funded by the government of Ontario but included. The subtlety relates to the specific acts, the specific points around the right to appoint boards of directors and others. It's not a no-brainer conversation. It's not remotely surprising—in fact, it's normal—to see differences of opinion about whether or not an entity is consolidated. In this case, the entity was deemed to be consolidated. The arguments on one side were seen ultimately to be a little bit stronger than the arguments on the other side. That decision is made, in general, by the office of the controller in the Ministry of Finance, after consultation with others, including the Office of the Auditor General.

I realize that it is tempting, and I think logical, to understand that this represents a shift or represents the acquisition of broader responsibility for an entity, and there are other reasons to be concerned about the government's responsibility for Ornge—I'm not taking this away from the point at all—but it is not something that relates to the mere fact of consolidation, and I think, Auditor, I'm within the zone of accurate on that.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I think that summarizes it pretty good.

You asked about the date too. It was consolidated for the financial statements for the year ended March 31, 2008, so the decision to consolidate was probably made sometime, I'm guessing, early to mid-2007—to consolidate Ornge.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, thank you. And just one follow-up question. I take it from what you've said, then, that it's perfectly normal to be having a discussion between the Ministry of Finance, the controller and the Auditor General and the entity itself about whether or not it should be consolidated and how that should happen, that as we moved into the PSAB rules, this conversation around what and how and when to consolidate is a pretty normal conversation?

Mr. Peter Wallace: It has occurred countless times. There are often differences of opinion reflecting different senses of the criteria. Initially, organizations are often surprised to learn that they may be consolidated. They generally are not—you know, from time to time uncomfortable with that concept until they understand that it is simply inclusion in the reporting entity and is, from a governance standpoint, of no practical ramification.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And if we could turn to your current role as secretary of cabinet, I believe you said you were appointed secretary of cabinet on December 11. What would your larger role, then, in dealing with the larger issues around Ornge rather than—and I'm thinking here of the governance issues. How has that evolved since you have become secretary of cabinet? What changes have occurred since then?

Mr. Peter Wallace: So it was December 17, I recall. That's a small adjustment.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, okay. Sorry.

Mr. Peter Wallace: Not especially relevant.

In any organization that is as large as the government of Ontario—in fact, in almost any organization—there is always some real risk of inappropriate behaviour. That can occur within the organization, it can occur with transfer payment partners, it can occur with corporate entities with which we have a relationship.

The two issues that are most vitally important on this are vigilance, understanding what we've done to mitigate risk, and learning, going forward from any risk that was realized. We have to recognize that as government gets smaller—and we are a government that is getting smaller. We are looking forward to occupying a smaller share of gross domestic product than we have in the past. We are committed to efficiency. That will mean doing business in a very different way. The risks we are exposed to in a large, bureaucratically structured, hierarchical organization are very different than the risks we accept when we enter into more complex, sometimes more efficient—hopefully, more efficient—relationships with other service providers.

It is absolutely critical that we become alive to and increasingly vigilant about the nature of transactions that we perform, that we undertake adequate due diligence, that we have effective control and that the use of taxpayer resources simply must be subject to adequate protections so that if we do become concerned, on the basis of any information whatsoever, that an entity of any description may be behaving inappropriately, we have powerful mechanisms and powerful tools—audit, decision rights, governance changes—to allow us to put those issues to rest as quickly as possible and that we are not at risk of any type of behaviour that delays or obfuscates or imposes additional timing issues for decision-makers.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time right now.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just one point, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, go ahead.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Mr. Klees mentioned having possession of the offering memorandum on the bond issue from Ornge. I wonder if that could be tabled.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's a public document.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees, do you mind tabling that?

Mr. Frank Klees: I think Ms. Sandals can get it from the library in the same way that I did.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay.

Well, thank you very much, Mr. Wallace, for your presentation. I appreciate it.

Mr. Peter Wallace: Thank you.

WILDEBOER DELLELCE LLP

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Now I'd like to call Alfred Apps forward, please.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Good morning, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Good morning, Mr. Apps. We'll begin with an oath.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): The Bible is at the table there with you. Do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Just to confirm that you received the notice to witnesses appearing before the committee.

Mr. Alfred Apps: I did. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. You have five minutes for an opening statement and then it will begin with the NDP with the first round of questions.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Mr. Chairman, honourable members, I'm pleased to have this opportunity to appear before this committee in relation to your inquiry into Ornge. Your job is to get at the truth and I'm in a position to assist you. For the public interest to be well served, my presentation and your interrogation of me should take much longer and be much more detailed than 30 minutes allow. Serious issues of public policy and public administration are at stake, vitally important questions of justice and reputation where individuals are concerned are also at stake. I'm happy to answer your questions today and I will return in the future as frequently, as long, as often, as you desire. This is important public business.

On conclusion of these brief opening remarks, I will circulate a summary of my personal and professional background, as well as a detailed overview of the legal work I did in relation to Ornge so that you'll be in a better position to contextualize and evaluate my testimony.

Like each one of the many professionals from the many legal, financial and accounting firms involved with Ornge, my ability to respond in recent weeks to the seemingly endless string of allegations in the media has been severely circumscribed by professional duties of confidentiality to Ornge and, because I and my colleagues are lawyers, by Ornge's right to claim privilege in relation to its communications to us and our advice to Ornge. You've convened these hearings and Ornge has now waived those rights.

This is fitting and appropriate. The government and people of Ontario have every right to learn the truth about what the legal, accounting, investment banking and other financial professionals did for Ornge, on behalf of Ornge, and why we did it.

I do not have the personal knowledge required to address certain matters. My exposure to Ornge as a lawyer began in 2007, was intermittent and focused on specialized work related to corporate structuring and structured finance. The original separation and establishment of Ornge and the original set-up of its charitable foundations and for-profit subsidiaries preceded my involvement. I cannot speak with direct knowledge about the total compensation of management or how it was paid. I was not made aware of any management loans until after they'd occurred. I was not involved in providing advice on salary disclosure under the sunshine laws.

I was aware of the marketing services agreement with AgustaWestland and, based upon what I understood, saw absolutely nothing inappropriate about it. But I did not advise on it, play any role in negotiating it and was not involved in documenting it.

For the record, I also want to be clear that I have no knowledge of any wrongdoing, criminal or otherwise, in respect of anyone associated with Ornge.

Let me provide a very brief overview of five key matters I can address:

(1) The government entity reporting discussion, which the secretary of cabinet just so capably addressed, of 2007-08, has been characterized as a matter related to the government's substantive oversight and control of Ornge. This is a red herring. Nothing could be further from the truth. Ornge's financial statements, including in respect of its for-profit subsidiaries, were always audited by KMG, provided to the government and included in the public accounts.

The debate was never about substantive consolidation; it was about accounting consolidation only, and there is a huge difference. Ornge had always presented and audited its financial statements as a non-share capital corporation—a charity—as it was required to do. Consolidation required its financial statements to be presented in a second and additional format to comply with the special accounting policies of government entities.

We, at Fasken, were advised that the extra bookkeeping, reporting and professional accounting services required were going to cost Ornge significant dollars that would have to be diverted away from patient service. Ornge's only objective in questioning the need for accounting consolidation was to avoid unnecessarily wasting taxpayers' money, because it believed that the relevant accounting policy, which was open debate, if properly applied to Ornge, did not require such consolidation. Ornge nevertheless complied with the request, and accounting consolidation has continued to this day. The extra costs have been incurred for several years. But to be clear, accounting consolidation has done nothing substantive other than increase Ornge's costs. It contributes absolutely nothing to increased disclosure, enhanced oversight or government control.

(2) The $275-million 2009 bond issue: This has been characterized by some of the media as something that was prejudicial to taxpayers because it enabled Ornge to apply funds to improper purposes and for the benefit of private interests. It has even been hinted that it was improper for Ornge to use public funding to service those bonds. These interpretations are patently wrong. They reflect a misunderstanding on basic matters of corporate finance.

Ornge is engaged in a capital-intensive business with a serious cost-of-capital challenge. It requires aircraft vehicles and ground assets to provide its services to Ontario. In deciding to purchase its capital assets—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left for your statement.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Sorry?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): One minute left for your statement.

Mr. Alfred Apps: In deciding to purchase its capital assets with low-cost-rated debt financing rather than leasing them from third parties at a considerable markup or profit to those third parties, Ornge was able to significantly reduce its cost of capital over the long term, generating considerable savings for its operations for years to come. The financing was entirely standard in format, conventional in structure for transactions of this sort. It was clearly and only in the interest of the taxpayers of Ontario. With more time, I would be happy to elaborate. The government was fully informed before the bond financing was undertaken and raised no objections.

(3) The 2011 reorganization leading to the establishment of the for-profit businesses under Ornge Global has been completely misunderstood and misconstrued, both by the press and the Auditor General.

The for-profit structure was created to serve two primary purposes: insulating and protecting Ornge, Ontario and its taxpayers from new-venture risk and attracting private capital required to finance these ventures that Ontario clearly supported but did not want Ornge to vest taxpayer dollars in. The structure was not in any sense a private empire or conglomerate or web of companies designed to reward private interests.

I'm probably out of time. I've got another page on this—

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: I wonder if the committee would consider—Mr. Apps said he had five points he wanted to address in his summary, whether we might, if I make the motion, allow him to continue through his points—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer, why don't we just let him continue?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I've got one page left.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Finish your page, please.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Thank you, Chair.

Mr. Alfred Apps: The structure was not in any sense a private empire or conglomerate or web of companies designed to reward the private interests of Ornge management. It was a conventional, bankruptcy-remote, private-equity, limited-partnership investment structure that those experienced in private equity investment would easily recognize and understand as commonplace, and one that put management's upside incentive—clearly, I want you to understand this—dead last, not first.

The province of Ontario and the investors would have received $65 million before the management got a cent. Any potential benefits flowing to management were performance-based, highly contingent and deeply subordinated to the interests of the Ontario taxpayer and the private sector providers of debt and equity capital. With more time, I'd be happy to elaborate. The government was thoroughly informed in respect of this reorganization before it was completed, and raised no objections in respect of it.

(4) The credit lease transaction of 2011 in respect of Ornge's head office property has likewise been misunderstood and misconstrued by both the press and the Auditor General. It did not siphon money away from taxpayers to benefit the private interests who own the for-profit companies, nor was it unusual or mysterious. In fact, transactions just like this are concluded every day in the marketplace by companies of all sorts for compelling reasons that I would be pleased to elaborate on.

Analogies are never perfect. In fact, this is not perfect at all. But from a layman's perspective, it wasn't much different than increasing your mortgage to finance sending your kids to college. Importantly, the transaction was based entirely on an independent opinion about fair market rental rates from a leading national accounting and financial advisory house, PricewaterhouseCoopers—something that has never been reported in the media and, curiously, was casually dismissed by the Auditor General.

The credit lease transaction was a financing designed to benefit Ontario taxpayers, not harm them. With more time, I'd be happy to elaborate. The government was thoroughly informed in advance of the transaction and the use of proceeds, and raised no objections.

(5) It has been said that Ornge and its lawyers, including me, misled the minister and the government. This, you will understand, is offensive in the extreme, particularly for someone of my personal background, my long history of civic engagement and my hard-earned professional reputation.

The record actually speaks for itself. To the extent of all matters within my knowledge, the board and management of Ornge more than did their job, and the government was thoroughly, painstakingly and, in all cases, truthfully briefed in advance of Ornge taking any of these actions. If the government had ever raised any objections to anything, I am confident that Ornge would not have proceeded.

Ornge was a great Ontario company with an extraordinary global future. It has now become a case study in the failure of public administration, not, in my opinion—and it is my opinion—as a result of lack of transparency, process or governance on Ornge's part or, frankly, from any lack of oversight or control on the part of the government, but as a result of the fundamental absence within parts of the public sector of the required skill set and competence in commercial and legal matters to properly understand and manage public-private partnerships.

Unless and until we get this right, necessary efforts to offload funding from the taxpayer to the private sector will be met with misunderstanding and confusion and, as such, become politicized and unable to attract investment and doomed to failure. There are excellent examples of success in this area right here in Ontario that we need to apply more broadly.

Thank you for your attention. I would be pleased to take your questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We'll move to the NDP. Who in the NDP would like to question? Jagmeet?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes.

Thank you very much, Mr. Apps. Mr. Apps, specifically, if you could just highlight some very succinct issues, what was the problem with Ornge and what are the issues concerning Ornge?

Mr. Alfred Apps: The only issue—and I don't have the competence to address it—that I have seen, based on all of my reading of all of the newspapers and my knowing the facts as I know them, is the salary that was paid and whether or not that was appropriate. Everything else I've read is frankly wrong.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You indicated that the government was thoroughly briefed on every aspect of Ornge before any step was taken.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: How do you know that?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Because I participated in those briefings as a lawyer, reporting on the structure, how Ornge was insulated, what the rating agency thought of the structure. In fact, what we did in terms of structure was proven out. When the whole thing was blown up, the one thing that was preserved was Ornge Ontario with its rating reaffirmed, without impairment. The point is, what we focused on was explaining to the government why that would happen under any scenario and why it was insulated from venture risk.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You indicated that you briefed the government and you were present during those briefings. Who did you brief and who was present?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I've got a detailed record of every briefing that I participated in.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you be able to just—

Mr. Alfred Apps: I can just give you a high-level overview, and if you want more detail, I'm happy to give it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you be able to table that detailed—

Mr. Alfred Apps: Sure, I'm happy to table it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And it's in document form?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Yes. Actually, the summary that I'm going to circulate of the legal work I did for Ornge describes all the points at which the government was briefed. It's about a six-page summary.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you.

You've heard the allegations that there was some misconduct on your behalf, that you misled—it seemed that you were thrown under the bus a bit on that.

Mr. Alfred Apps: I think the minister justifiably felt misled, but not by Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Who was she misled by?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I believe that the draft report tabled by the Auditor General in November was so riddled with error and confusion that if I'd been the minister and I had gotten it and relied on it, I would have had the same reaction, coupled with the information about the salary.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. That's all. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: It's rather interesting to hear you say that the only issue, in your view, with Ornge is the salary paid, I take it, to Mr. Mazza?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I don't know anything about salaries. I learned about the salary—see, I'm not an employment lawyer. I was aware what his base salary was. I wasn't aware of all this other stuff. It kind of hit me like a ton of bricks until I had the opportunity to think about it and reflect on it. But I learned about it at the time it became public knowledge.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You were aware of his base salary, and what was that?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I'm not aware of what his base salary was in 2010, but in—and I'm not sure I've got my years right, so forgive me, because I haven't got the document right in front of me. But it was $500,000, which didn't seem to me, given the extraordinary work he was doing—it didn't seem to be out of line at all.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Now that you know that it's $1.4 million, any comments as to—

Mr. Alfred Apps: I'm not competent to respond to that question. I wasn't involved. I understand that the board had outside compensation experts advising them. I'm not going to try to substitute my business judgment for theirs, because I wasn't there or a part of the discussions. So I don't really have an opinion on that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. In your briefings, was the Premier ever present when you briefed the government about Ornge?

Mr. Alfred Apps: No elected politicians were ever present in any briefing.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Was this by design, or had you ever asked?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Ornge made it clear, with my assistance, that we wanted to brief the government, wanted to brief it broadly—finance, health, economic development and trade, the Ontario Financing Authority. We obviously left it to the government to decide who should go to those briefings.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So if you never briefed any elected official when you briefed the government about Ornge, did you ever talk to any elected official about Ornge?

Mr. Alfred Apps: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Never?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Never—well, sorry. At a cocktail party, I actually had a chat after the bond issue with the Minister of Finance, saying how successful the bond issue had gone, but that was it.

M^{me} France Gélinas: That was the only time you ever talked—

Mr. Alfred Apps: Yeah. I have never met with the Premier on this, or his staff. I have never met with the Minister of Health on this. I have never met with the Minister of Economic Development and Trade on this. The answer is no.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Did you ever talk to any of the staff in their office?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Yes. Only in relation to setting up briefings.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So when Jamison Steeve says that you called him to—

Mr. Alfred Apps: I've read Jamison's testimony, and it's absolutely correct. We never talked about substance. We simply—my question was, "So there's a lot happening here. They want to brief the government. What's the right way to go about it? Should it be a common briefing, including of members, or should it?"—I can't remember the exact terms of the email. And his response back was, "Start with health and we'll go from there."

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. When did you first learn that salary disclosure had not been done from Ornge?

Mr. Alfred Apps: It was never part of my work. I wasn't—I mean, I did know they weren't disclosing their salaries, but it wasn't something—I don't remember when I would have actually become aware of that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Is this something that you would have raised with Ornge as in—

Mr. Alfred Apps: No. Nowhere near my area of activity or responsibility.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you didn't care?

Mr. Alfred Apps: No. Fasken's wasn't the employment or labour counsel. And I wasn't the lawyer at Fasken's who advised on this question; others did.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How much money did Fasken make from Ornge?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Well, this may surprise you, but I'm not—I was not the billing partner or the relationship-responsible partner for the file. I was actually just a guy who came in on the specialty team to deal with issues of my area of expertise.

I have no reason to believe that what's been reported in the press is, in general, inaccurate, although I think there were lots of related inaccuracies, because I think those numbers were provided to Ornge. But I can't get into the detail of it except to say that that was for a very broad range of work, of which mine was a subset, over a, I think, six-year period, in circumstances where Ornge had been extraordinarily active on a number of fronts as it got itself up and running.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did Chris Mazza ever attend Liberal fundraisers when you were there, or are you aware—

Mr. Alfred Apps: I have no idea. I would like—may I elaborate on my relationship with Dr. Mazza?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Sure.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Because it's been—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Okay. Well, it's been fundamentally misdescribed in the press. He was like any other corporate CEO of a client. We had a friendly, courteous and professional relationship. We were not close. There were extended periods of time when we had no contact, when I wasn't working with Ornge. I've never been to his house. We've never socialized. I ran into him at one hospital charity one night. So we had a relationship that was completely normal, not the way it has been characterized in the media.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How much money did you make from Ornge?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I'm glad to clarify that too, because the Toronto Star suggested I was a partner of Fasken Martineau at the applicable time, and I wasn't. Because I had been elected president of the Liberal Party of Canada, I withdrew from the partnership. I became a salaried employee of the firm, with no stake in its fees. More importantly, Ornge was not—I said I wasn't the responsible partner or the billing partner.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'm looking for an amount.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Do you want to know how much I earned as a salary?

M^{me} France Gélinas: How much did you make from Ornge?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Personally?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yes.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Nothing, zero.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You were never paid?

Mr. Alfred Apps: No, the firm was paid, and I earned a salary at the firm, but I wasn't a partner of the firm. I wasn't paid on the basis of Ornge billings. I had my own practice, my own clients, my own billings, and prior to withdrawing from the partnership in 2009, I was compensated in accordance with my financial performance on that. After that, I went on a salary because it was inappropriate for me, in my judgment, to be both the president of the Liberal Party of Canada and a partner of the firm.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. We'll move to the government members.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you.

executives there, is it not unusual to move the salary away from the senior corporation?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I'm going to be blunt. I am not knowledgeable in this area of law, and I'm not going to give you an opinion. That work was done by a completely different set at Fasken's. It actually, I think, was done even before I was involved. I've never looked at the statute. I don't understand how the statute applies. I don't know what the circumstances were at the time, and I never advised on it.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. So, in that case, you've said that you weren't the responsible partner.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Right.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Can you share with us who was?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Yes, certainly. I'll share anything you want. The responsible partner—I don't know the exact dates or details, but it shifted back and forth. Originally, it was a retired partner, before the separation, who was on for Sunnybrook, named George Glover. Then, I think for a period, it was Lynne Golding, who has played a very—I think she has been counsel on a number of matters through the piece and done outstanding work for Ornge. Then it was Cindy Heinz, and Ornge, because it was trying to reduce its legal fees, brought her in-house.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So she eventually went from Fasken's to Ornge as a direct in-house?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Right, because she was the one who was principally responsible for what I'd say was the ongoing day-to-day operational advice, commercial law generally, so, routine agreements, health law issues, regulatory law issues. As a cost-saving strategy—at least as I understood it—they asked her to come in-house so that they could reduce their legal fees.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, and who would currently, then, be the responsible partner?

Mr. Alfred Apps: As you know, I left the firm, and I'm not certain I can answer that question.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So we'll have to ask Lynne Golding?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You also spoke to the issue of the billing partner. Would that be different from the responsible partner?

Mr. Alfred Apps: It depends. The responsible partner is sometimes the billing partner, but—and I'm just talking about internal practice at Fasken Martineau—sometimes the billing partner is someone who is not the overall relationship partner but someone who is billing in certain areas because, for whatever complexity or technical reasons, they want to make sure that they review and sign off on the bills.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So would the responsible partner oversee the billing partner?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Yes. But in most cases the responsible partner is the billing partner.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. You referred to the fact that you weren't the expert when it came to human resources and employment issues. Who would have been the partner who was responsible for the HR and compensation sort of negotiations?

Mr. Alfred Apps: On employment and labour law issues with Ornge—because Ornge had unions as well—we didn't act. That was Hicks Morley. But on the issues of—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So Hicks Morley would have done the management-side labour negotiations?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Look, all I know is that we weren't involved. I know that Hicks Morley were generally involved as employment and labour counsel to Ornge. I can't speak for what they did or didn't do.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay.

Mr. Alfred Apps: On the issue of regulatory compliance—that is, the issue of compliance and salary disclosure—that was something we advised on.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And that would have been which partner?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Mr. Guy Giorno.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I know that my colleague has some questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer, go ahead. You have three and a half minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Are you in a position to say why you left the firm?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Absolutely. I had intended to leave the firm in June of last year on the expiry of my term as president of the Liberal Party of Canada. In connection with that, I had taken on several board positions: at Pacific Mortgage, as chairman; at Byron Capital, as chairman; and on several other boards as a director.

As a partner in a big firm, it is a problematic thing to be on the boards of clients. I had decided that I was enjoying that, and I wanted to move out. But then the federal election came, the convention got delayed till January and it just made sense to do it then, after I stepped down in January, at the fiscal year-end of Fasken's, which was January 31.

I started talking to firms about what I was thinking about and where I was going to go, and ultimately I decided to go to a 45-person law firm that I helped to found 25 years ago. It used to be called Wildeboer Apps. My brother is there, I know many of the partners and I have the freedom there to both practise law and serve on boards. But it was a decision of long standing that got upended by the federal election.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll now move to the PC Party.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Do we have any—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Do you have any other questions? You have two minutes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: The other issue I would want to raise that I think the committee needs to deal with is that Mr. Apps mentioned tabling documents. Can we just put an asterisk around the conversation with counsel re tabling documents?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, and I believe Will has noted the documents that are to be tabled.

Any other questions from the government members? No? Okay, we'll move to the official opposition. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Chair. Mr. Apps, a bold defence of Ornge. You've just given us an indictment of the government. You've made bureaucrats look like village idiots. You've undermined the Auditor General here in your comments. It seems that the only people who know what they're doing are you and the professionals and financiers who put the deal together.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Absolutely incorrect. There's great expertise in this government. There's outstanding expertise at Infrastructure Ontario in managing public-private partnerships. There's outstanding expertise at the Ontario Financing Authority. These are people who have developed the skill sets to understand capital markets issues, investment banking issues and structuring issues. I would not be condemning bureaucrats generally.

Mr. Frank Klees: I think that if you take the time to read the Hansard record, you'll realize who you threw under the bus. Nevertheless, you acted on behalf of Ornge, I understand, in the capacity of lawyer, adviser, spokesperson and lobbyist.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Mm-hmm.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you register as a lobbyist?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I never lobbied.

Mr. Frank Klees: You never lobbied?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Not once.

Mr. Frank Klees: You just said you did.

Mr. Alfred Apps: No, I didn't. I never lobbied this government for anything in respect of Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: How do you define "lobby"?

Mr. Alfred Apps: It's defined in the act. Do you want me to get the statute?

Mr. Frank Klees: You did nothing that comes close to lobbying?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Nothing.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you ever arrange meetings with elected officials for Dr. Mazza?

Mr. Alfred Apps: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: I have a memo here from you, directed to Dr. Chris Mazza, and I'm happy to pass it around. Clerk?

It is from Alfred Apps, on Fasken Martineau letterhead: "Talking points for Dr. Chris Mazza: Lunch with Minister Smitherman," and it goes on, providing Dr. Mazza with considerable detailed direction in terms of what he can and cannot say during his lunch with the minister. Did you arrange that lunch with the minister?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I don't believe I did.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Sorry, do you have evidence that I did?

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm asking you.

Mr. Alfred Apps: What time frame is this?

Mr. Frank Klees: It's your memo.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Smitherman was the minister, so it's years ago. You can forgive me that my recollection isn't perfect.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, fair enough. My question to you: You mentioned that you never had discussions with the Premier on this. In point number 10, you advise Dr. Mazza—

Mr. Alfred Apps: I don't have point number 10.

Mr. Frank Klees: You advise Dr. Mazza, "My advice: Downplay meeting with the Premier, perhaps not even mention it at all—you happened casually to meet him at a reception last month and had a general chat about successful transition at Ornge."

Interesting instructions, and on the last point, number 11—I trust you have that—"I will call you separately this morning to report on contact with the minister."

Now, you clearly said earlier that you never met with elected officials. Can you explain the difference between what you've told us and what is explicit in this memo?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I know that the contact with the minister was not personal contact of mine, but this—when did Minister Smitherman finish his term as Minister of Health?

Mr. David Zimmer: Just about a year before the election—

Mr. Alfred Apps: In any event, this is a long time ago. I'm happy to undertake to you, Mr. Klees, to go back through my records and get back to you with whatever it is I was referring to there.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. I appreciate that.

I understand that you introduced Don Guy to Ornge. What was the purpose for you making that introduction?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Actually, it was at the time of the consolidation discussion that Peter Wallace was going over and that I mentioned in my thing. It was related—there were actually two periods which we sought Don's advice. He was out of government by this time, had his own consulting firm. There were two periods we sought Don's advice and assistance; basically a brainstorming process to make sure that we were anticipating and thinking about the issues from the government's perspective appropriately. It was really trying to understand what the stakeholder perspective would be.

Don had a very broad overview of the thinking of government and he was very helpful in providing us the benefit of his judgment and his advice.

Mr. Frank Klees: Through whom did Don Guy bill his time for his lobbying?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Through Fasken Martineau.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. And how much was he paid for that?

Mr. Alfred Apps: I wasn't the billing lawyer so I don't know.

Mr. Frank Klees: Would it be possible for you to—

Mr. Alfred Apps: Can you ask Ms. Golding to—I can't undertake on behalf of Fasken Martineau anymore.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mr. Alfred Apps: But I know that Ms. Golding will be co-operative.

Mr. Frank Klees: Now, you did mention that it was at the time of the consolidation.

Mr. Alfred Apps: That was the first stretch, and then there was a later stretch.

Mr. Frank Klees: The information that we have is that the initial move on the part of the government to consolidate Ornge's financials was proposed by Ministry of Finance bureaucrats. I also understand, and maybe you can confirm this, that the reason that you brought Don Guy on board was to help fend off that attempt by the ministry to consolidate because you were going into this bond offering and you didn't want to have any interference. Is that correct?

Mr. Alfred Apps: Absolutely not.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Two minutes.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Can I respond in detail on this point? I think it's—okay. In fact, Ornge contacted me to say, "We're going to have somewhere between half a million and $1 million of additional costs. Is there anything we can do about this?"

I pulled out the Public Sector Accounting Board policy 1300, took a look at it and realized that this was really a grey area in the case of Ornge. It wouldn't be if the new legislation were enacted, which establishes so much tighter control. It would not be a grey area anymore at all. But at the time, it was a very big grey area. So it seemed that it was worth some investment to determine whether or not this had to occur.

I got involved, with Ornge's consent, a top public sector accounting guy from PricewaterhouseCoopers on the technical issues, together with me, the CFO of Ornge and Don Guy on the policy issues.

Really, what Don Guy's advice was—and I made the point earlier, it was a red herring. It had nothing to do with the debt issue. In fact, the government at the time, in a letter, made clear to us that consolidation or no consolidation, it wouldn't impact our ability to issue the bonds. So that wasn't the issue.

But what Don Guy was able to do was actually persuade us, "Don't die on this hill. I've got a sense of what the government's about here and why they want to do it and it doesn't have any impact anyway." And ultimately, that's what we concluded, even though it did have a cost impact.

Mr. Frank Klees: So he was actually successful in managing away the government's concerns here.

Mr. Alfred Apps: For Ornge. He was successful in helping me explain to Ornge why consolidation was not actually even a significant issue from a substantive or governance or independence perspective.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We're out of time, I'm afraid.

Mr. Frank Klees: If I could just wrap up. We will certainly have you back.

Mr. Alfred Apps: I'd love to come back.

Mr. Frank Klees: What you have effectively done today is confirmed that the government of Ontario was fully informed of everything that Ornge was undertaking, including the bond offering, the scheme of for-profit companies. They were fully apprised, fully briefed and did it anyway.

Mr. Alfred Apps: And they made the right policy decision in any event, and I'm sorry that they got bad information and advice later.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for your presentation this morning, Mr. Apps.

Mr. Alfred Apps: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We have this morning been a little bit behind schedule, so the committee will need to decide on whether there's enough time to start with Mr. Shortill. If we did, we only have nine minutes, so I would suggest that we reschedule Mr. Shortill and apologize to him—I'd like to apologize to Mr. Shortill, because this is the second time he has made arrangements to come before the committee.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I've sort of lost track of—I thought there was some reference to tabling documents. Are there any documents being tabled?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): There is one document that is going to be tabled.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): He didn't have it with him.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): He didn't have it with him.

So we're going to start at 12 o'clock this afternoon, and we'll adjourn now.

The committee recessed from 1017 to 1218.

COMMITTEE BUSINESS

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, I would call this committee to order. I believe we have a motion from Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, thank you, Chair. I'll read this motion into the record.

I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts report to the House requesting that the House authorize the Speaker to issue his warrant for the appearance of Chris Mazza, former president and CEO of Ornge, before the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, in room number 151, Legislative Building, Queen's Park, Toronto, at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, May 16, 2012. That if necessary the warrant can be served to Dr. Chris Mazza's attorney, Roger D. Yachetti, Q.C.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for that. I just have a comment on the procedure, and that is that the only concern—and I'm not going to comment beyond this—is that in the past the procedure followed by various standing committees when requesting the authorization of the House for the issuance of a warrant has been that the committee would communicate with the individual or individuals on at least two occasions and have two refusals in front of them. I understand that has been the procedure in the past. We have not followed that procedure up to this point. I'm laying that on the floor, and whatever the committee decides is the appropriate course of action, so be it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Speaker, if I might? I think that we're all in agreement that Dr. Mazza should be called. We are running out of time. We only have one day a week of hearings. We're bumping up to the Legislature rising. I think that we have enough information. Dr. Mazza has been advised that there is an interest for him to appear, and I would recommend to the committee that we move forward, if we pass this motion, so that we can get the debate in the House under way.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Further comment? Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just to say that we are in agreement. The public motion to invite Dr. Mazza to appear has been on the public record for quite some time, and I think it is important that we move ahead in trying to get him in here to testify, because ultimately, he's the key person that we need to talk to.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I would agree with everything that has been said, that we start the procedures with the Speaker's warrants immediately. That does not preclude us from continuing to connect with Dr. Mazza and invite him to come, but the procedures for the warrants have to be started today.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just a question to the clerk: That business about making two requests before, is that a condition precedent to issuing the Speaker's warrant or not? Because if it is a condition precedent, then by the rules you can't issue the warrant until—if the request has been made, and then if a lawyer gives him bad advice, that the condition precedents were met, the warrant is of no validity and then you're going to be behind a month. I just ask the clerk if—you better be careful about that.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): It's precedent or procedure that's been followed in the past. However, it's not necessarily stopping the committee from—

Mr. David Zimmer: So it's a protocol, not a condition precedent?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Correct.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Any further debate? Seeing none, all in favour? Carried.

Then we'll go to Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I have another motion that I would like to table, if I may.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: This is with respect to witnesses.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We do have two other motions as well. We'll table it, but then if we can get on—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you're going to deal with the other two first?

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We don't have time to discuss them right now because we're going to get on with our afternoon's proceedings, but if you want to table it, that's fine.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: No, we're not debating any of them right now.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Can I save one copy?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just so I can advise my fellow members, this is a motion to have Kelly Mitchell to appear, because it turns out that he was simultaneously on the board and being paid as a consultant at Ornge, which would seem to attract some attention from the auditor.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH AND LONG-TERM CARE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Now, for our first witness this afternoon, we have, from the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care, Malcolm Bates, director of emergency health services.

Mr. Bates, if you could please come forward. I understand you've already sworn an oath.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I have indeed.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So just remember that you are under oath. And you've received the letter with the advice for a witness appearing before the committee?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. You have five minutes for an opening presentation and then the government will go first with questioning this time.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Thank you very much. Good afternoon. My name is Malcolm Bates. I'm the director of the emergency health services branch of the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care.

Thank you for this opportunity to address the Standing Committee on Public Accounts with respect to the Auditor General's report on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services.

Today, I'll focus on what steps the ministry has taken and is taking to respond to the issues raised by the Auditor General, in particular with respect to patient safety.

Emergency health services is charged with exercising some of this oversight over Ornge. The oversight conducted by the branch includes the requirement for certification which Ornge must undergo every three years. This is augmented by unannounced inspections and by investigations of complaints. In addition, the Ambulance Act contains multiple standards related to documentation, patient care and storage of controlled substances that each operator must adhere to. Ornge is also required to submit ongoing financial reports and audited statements.

Until late in 2011, many indicators led the emergency health services branch to conclude that Ornge was providing good and financially effective service. A comparison of land and air ambulance costs showed that Ornge's costs were in line. A comparison of investigations conducted in land versus air ambulance also showed that Ornge was in line. Ornge passed its certification reviews.

A review conducted by an external audit firm found that Ornge was using provincial grant funding economically, efficiently and for the purposes intended.

Thanks in part to the information uncovered by the Auditor General, we now know that Ornge misled the ministry on a number of occasions. Furthermore, in January 2012 Ornge itself informed the ministry that the organization had deliberately inflated the number of patients transported over the years since it had assumed full responsibility. The ministry had relied upon these reports to assess requests for funding.

As a result of these revelations, an amended performance agreement with Ornge is now in place. The agreement includes more stringent and detailed monitoring, control and reporting obligations on the part of Ornge. Ornge is required to submit a number of operational reports to the ministry monthly. For issues affecting patient safety and for complaints and investigations, Ornge must provide information to the ministry immediately. The ministry will then assess the need for further investigation.

As well, the performance agreement provides for a greater emphasis on performance standards and includes enhanced key performance indicators with expanded reporting requirements. Under the amended agreement, Ornge's funding and executive compensation are tied to performance improvement targets set out in an annual quality plan, as is the case for other transfer payment agencies, including hospitals. And new provisions link Ornge's performance during one year with funds provided by the ministry in the next year.

The ministry has also taken action to ensure that Ornge's internal investigations protocol will be improved. In this regard, the ministry's manager of investigations has provided advice to Ornge quality assurance staff on investigative techniques and will be providing additional training for them in the area of good investigative methods.

With respect to aviation safety, the Ministry of Natural Resources has recently initiated a safety review of Ornge's rotary-wing ambulance operation. These steps build on recent achievements by Ornge's new leadership team, appointed in January of this year, to provide trustworthy administration focused upon safe delivery of air ambulance services in Ontario.

Once again, thank you for the opportunity to speak to you, and now I'd be pleased to take questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Thanks for that. The government gets the first opportunity to ask questions.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That's because my mouth is full, right?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I knew I'd get in trouble when I stole a cookie.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): When you're ready.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Mr. Bates, you've been with the emergency health services, the branch, and specifically the air ambulance responsibility for a number of years. If we go back into the history of all this, what concerns were there that first prompted—and maybe you could outline to us how it used to work and then the creation of Ornge or OAA, whatever it was initially called. How did we get from “here was the old structure, here were the concerns, and here's the new structure”?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Yes, of course. Prior to 2006, when Ornge assumed full responsibility for air ambulance services in the province of Ontario, the Ministry of Health was in fact responsible totally. The Ministry of Health utilized several different components to provide air ambulance service, one of which was the administration, which was with the ministry; one of which was dispatch, which was operated by the ministry; one of which was the aviation and the paramedic services, which were outsourced to contracts in the private sector; and one of which was a base hospital, which was provided by Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre.

In 2003, there was an approach by Dr. Mazza and his team requesting that the air ambulance service be consolidated, and that is putting together all those various parts—the dispatch, the base hospital, the aviation, the paramedics—into one consolidated unit. At that time, Dr. Mazza and his team made a presentation to the Red Tape Commission.

The Red Tape Commission looked upon that very favourably, and it was moved forward to the point at which legislation was, I believe, drafted, and the intent was to change the Ambulance Act to allow for this type of consolidation of air ambulance in 2003.

At that point in time, the election occurred, as many of you probably remember, and a new government came into place. The initiative by Dr. Mazza and his team continued under the new government. Dr. Mazza was in fact the lead for the implementation of this consolidation and all aspects of it, and the staff of emergency health services and other parts of the Ministry of Health were directed to work with Dr. Mazza to ensure that he had sufficient information in order to proceed with the consolidation initiative. The government approved the consolidation with Ornge taking full responsibility. In 2005, a performance agreement was negotiated. In 2006, the performance agreement was signed between the ministry and Ornge, at that time called the Ontario Air Ambulance Services Corp., and they took over full responsibility for all provision of air ambulance services in the province of Ontario.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Early 2003 would be before my time here, so just to go back then, at that point Minister Clement would have been the Minister of Health, and there was a Red Tape Commission. So Dr. Mazza actually put forward the proposal to consolidate, and the Red Tape Commission, which was more—just reading headlines, I think, more of a political investigation—concurred with that, and you actually got so far as drafting legislation to fulfill the consolidation prior to October 2003?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: The government drafted the legislation.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Sorry, you weren't drafting, but legislation was being drafted—

Mr. Malcolm Bates: That's correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —prior to October 2003; would that be accurate?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: That's right. It was not finalized and it was not passed.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Well, I'm presuming it was never tabled, given that the Legislature wouldn't have been sitting after June or something 2003, but the legislation was being drafted, not by you, but by somebody else, prior to October 2003?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I've got my timeline sorted out?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: You do.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I then was on the scene and I do recall that the auditor did a previous report on air ambulance service, so that previous report on air ambulance service would have been with respect to the old model of air ambulance service, which you described. Is that correct? I don't remember the year.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I've got the timing here. We did it around 2005. Just at that time, a couple of our recommendations dealt with the need to establish better lines of authority, and I think there had been an accreditation review, which also indicated there was a bunch of different people delivering the service, and there needed to be more clear lines of authority. So I think in response to the recommendation at that point, the ministry came forward and said they were looking at establishing this corporation, and about maybe nine months after that, the committee actually had a hearing and we discussed those issues.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yeah, because I actually think I first met you at that hearing—

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I believe so.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —when we were looking at that. So the accreditation report, then, what would have—you both seem to be helping me out, which is fine. When would the accreditation report have been made available or received by you or the government, whomever?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: In the year 2002-03.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, so that was probably the accreditation report would have prompted the previous government to have a look at this, and then the auditor's report followed along in—

Mr. Jim McCarter: Subsequent to our audit in July 2005, that's when the ministry announced the creation of this corporation to basically establish the air ambulance service, and the accreditation review was started in late 2003. I think it probably reported in 2004.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Thank you for the timelines, because I think that helps us understand how the conversation sort of evolved.

So, with the creation of the air ambulance of Ornge—I'm going to call it Ornge even though I know it wasn't that on the first day. What actually then changed as a result of the creation of Ornge initially?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Subsequent to the announcement by the minister that Ornge would be assuming responsibility and the performance agreement signed, Ornge in fact assumed full responsibility. The base hospital was in fact moved from Sunnybrook to Ornge. Ornge assumed the contractual arrangements with the private contractors that provided air ambulance service and the paramedics. Ornge took over the air ambulance dispatch centre and assumed full administrative responsibility and control over air ambulance services in the province.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. And Dr. Mazza had the air ambulance base, hospital base, at Sunnybrook, and then Dr. Mazza would still have been obviously the CEO in charge of the air ambulance base when it moved to Ornge.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: That's correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I think I'm being told that my turn is up. Thank you very much, Mr. Bates.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, thank you, Ms. Sandals. Now we move to the official opposition. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. I appreciate your overview. I'd like to go directly to the issue of the consolidation that was anticipated by government.

The term "consolidation," as it was intended under the previous government, to my knowledge, did not mean that Ornge, or whatever the air ambulance entity would be, would get into the business of purchasing a fleet of aircrafts. The consolidation that was intended was to ensure that the oversight and the lines of authority were consolidated, that there was in fact a response to the previous audit that indicated very clearly that there were some weaknesses in the system that needed to be addressed. Would you agree with that?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I would agree with that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. What has happened since then is that the term "consolidation" somewhere along the line became interpreted by somebody, and obviously it was Dr. Mazza—clearly, we heard this morning that a very brilliant lawyer who understands the complexities of corporate structure came up with a scheme that would not only consolidate operations—dispatch and so on—but would go beyond that and would begin to internalize the actual ownership of a fleet of aircraft and would take on the responsibility of hiring paramedics. Would you agree with that?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Well, I'm not sure I would characterize it as a scheme, but in fact what you're saying is probably correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. You've made reference to the performance agreement. I have read the original performance agreement. I know you're intimately familiar with it. That performance agreement sets out very clearly lines of responsibility.

Nowhere in that performance agreement that I can see, unless you can point me to it, does it in any way relieve the Ministry of Health, and specifically the emergency health services branch responsible for air ambulance or ambulance services in the province, of its oversight responsibilities. In fact, there are very specific references to reporting that's required, to oversight responsibilities. Would you agree with that?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I agree that the Ministry of Health and the emergency health services branch have and had oversight responsibilities and that oversight responsibility was basically set in line by the Ambulance Act, by the performance agreement and by the transfer-of-payment accountability directive.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes. You made reference to the fact that one of the responsibilities that the emergency health services branch has is to investigate. I believe that you referred as well to unannounced visits. If you're going to do the job properly then obviously you want to do those investigations in such a way that you show up, no different than Revenue Canada or others. How many of those kinds of unannounced inspections took place under the emergency health services branch at Ornge since its implementation?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Well, I think it's important to think about the total perspective of oversight. That includes investigations which are formal investigations, that includes unannounced inspections, and that includes what we call certification, which is a very thorough, comprehensive overall review of ambulance operators that we perform every three years. We perform an initial one, which was done with Ornge. We perform one three years thereafter, which was done with Ornge. We have another one subsequent coming up in the month of May of this particular year, a comprehensive overview of over 100 aspects of ambulance service that are looked at by a peer group of people within the business, within the industry, who understand, who are experts in the provision of air ambulance services.

Mr. Frank Klees: So specifically, my question was, and perhaps—if I could ask you to go back and provide the committee with the information about how many unannounced visits were made to Ornge for the purpose of doing the inspections; if you could do that.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Yes, of course. But I should clarify a little bit. There are more operators than just Ornge that we have to do—

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: There are contract operators, standing agreement operators as they are called, particularly in northern Ontario, who provide aircraft and air ambulance services for the assistance of Ornge when necessary, when Ornge aircraft are not available or when the patient condition dictates that a standing agreement operator will be used. We also do those types of reviews. Before you can provide air ambulance service or any type of ambulance service in the province, you must be certified. They're all certified by our branch.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, how much time do I have left?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a little over two minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. The certification issue: One of the very disconcerting aspects of what has taken place is that somehow the responsibility for certifying and for training paramedics and, in fact, for certifying other operators was somehow morphed over to Ornge itself. I'd like your opinion as to the appropriateness that now, under this current structure, we have an air ambulance service that actually is self-inspecting, self-certifying and is training and also certifying its own paramedics without third party oversight for that responsibility. Can I get your thoughts on that?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Yes, of course you can. Perhaps I'll correct something, all right?

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, please do.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: All paramedics in the province must pass certification. They go through community college or a private college to gain their paramedic certificate. Then they must pass the examination set by the emergency health services branch. They all do that. They're all checked as well for background material so we know—all 7,000 paramedics must register with us, including all of those at Ornge. We certify those paramedics. We certify the operation of Ornge and all ambulance services in the province. You are correct in the sense that the responsibility for paramedics and the supply of paramedics was, in fact, transferred by the government to Ornge in 2006.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. And what about the other operators? Is there a certification process that Ornge has responsibility for to certify other providers?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have just 30 seconds.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I can only interpret what you're saying, sir. Ornge would look at their contractors and review those. But they are not the certification group; that is the emergency health services branch. We are the only certifiers of ambulance services in the province of Ontario. You cannot operate an ambulance service—Ornge or any other ambulance service—without a certification approval from the emergency health services branch.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. Time for the NDP. Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Good afternoon, Mr. Bates.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Good afternoon.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Bates, you were specifically responsible for the oversight of Ornge, amongst other organizations as well. Is that correct?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: We are responsible for some of the oversight of Ornge, not all of the oversight of Ornge. Bear in mind there's a great deal of oversight on Ornge, including what we're doing here today.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Perfect. So part of your oversight would involve patient care. Is that correct?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And part of it would involve the financial, in terms of how much money is being spent and where?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Well, financially, yes, in terms of the coherence of Ornge with the budget that is provided to them.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Perfect. In terms of just the set-up of the way your ministry works, do you regularly check in with or report to the Minister of Health?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Directly to the minister?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And how would you convey your findings or any issues with the minister?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: It is a bureaucracy, as you've been told, and we provide information through, at various times, our ADM, executive lead, but at this particular point in time, it's the assistant deputy minister of the direct services branch.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. So you would check in with the ADM.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And the ADM would then, presumably, pass the information on to the minister.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I could not tell you—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's fair. Did you ever receive any financial reports outlining the cost of salaries or other costs associated with Ornge?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: That is not the mandate of my branch.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Did you ever receive any reports on the cost incurred with respect to the ambulances—or the helicopters themselves?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: That would be the responsibility of Ornge itself. As long as they provide service under the performance agreement, they have the decision-making as to how they provide that service.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you ever oversee the way they provide their services by reviewing any documentation or reports provided by Ornge to you?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Oh, absolutely. They provide numerous reports to us under the performance agreement, and under the new performance agreement, many more reports are required.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you notice anything that was awry in those reports that you received?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I don't know what you mean by "awry."

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you notice anything wrong with the reports that you received?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Yes. As I indicated in my opening remarks, Ornge misled us.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And how did you realize that along the way?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Ornge, in January of this year, provided us directly with a notification that they had falsified the number of transports that they had made over the years, which we had counted upon. And, I might say, the Auditor General also counted upon the information from Ornge, because his data source is the same as our data source, and that's Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In January of what year?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: In 2012.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. I'll pass it on to you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. The first question I'd like you to answer is that we were provided, at the end of March of this year, a couple of weeks ago, with answers from estimates that dated from a year and a half ago. In estimates in 2010, we asked 42 questions about Ornge but were never given the answers until March of this year. Did you know that there were 42 questions about Ornge in estimates that usually your branch would have handled?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I did not know that you had not received information, because when we are asked for information, we provide it as quickly as possible.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you were never told that there were outstanding questions from estimates that had directly to do with your division?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Did you know, since we were given answers in March, that somebody had given us answers to those questions in March?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: When we provide information, as this gentleman rightly said before, we provide it, if you want to call it, up the line. We provide it to our assistant deputy minister, and where it goes from there is basically the responsibility of another part of the ministry.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In your years of service as a civil servant, you're aware of the process called estimates, where the minister comes and usually the minister, the assistant deputy minister, and sometimes the people—directors—also come.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In previous years, when there were questions asked at estimates that needed to be answered, was your division ever called upon to answer questions?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Very rarely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Very rarely because no question pertained to your area?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: That's correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. And this time, questions pertaining to your area—you were not made aware of them.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: If we are asked to provide information on questions of any sort, we provide that information.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Were you made aware that we had filed a request for freedom of access of information regarding the salary of Dr. Mazza?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. When you supervise the budget of Ornge—that is, looking to make sure that there's coherence between what Ornge is doing and what the budget document does—does this document ever talk about salaries?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were you surprised when you saw that the salary of Dr. Mazza was $1.4 million?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Of course.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In your view, do any of the other transfer payment agencies in your division have salaries in the millions?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I hope not.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Have you ever seen anybody else in a transfer payment agency being paid over a million dollars?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I've read about Ontario Hydro.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But within your division?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No? It doesn't happen? All right.

Would you say that you noticed an improvement in air ambulance services after 2006, after we went to Ornge?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I cannot honestly say I saw an improvement, but on the other hand, I did not see a deterioration.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were there any indicators that you had to monitor to see if there was going to be an improvement?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: There were many indicators, one of which was investigations, as we talked about previously, and a number of investigations in Ornge, as I also said previously, did not deviate from a trend that we would expect to see. It did not deviate from that that we saw in land ambulance service. It was totally normal until 2011—the latter part of 2011 and—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have one minute left, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Right now, the former Minister of Health and the Minister of Health are laying the blame for what happened squarely in your division, that the bureaucrats did not do their work, did not flag things up to the ministry, which is why this scandal was allowed to continue for so many months, so many years. Do you agree with that?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I can only tell you that the staff at the emergency health services branch, for which I am responsible, have acted totally appropriately and performed rigorously the oversight available to us and to them, including, as I said, the Ambulance Act provisions, the performance agreement provisions and a transfer payment accountability directive.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So when Mr. Apps comes and says that you did not have the competence to supervise this agency, do you agree with this?

Mr. Malcolm Bates: I have no way of saying anything about Mr. Apps, other than I can say to you that the people within the emergency health services branch are very capable. They are, in some instances, ex-paramedics. They have experience—in fact, air ambulance paramedics. We have financial expertise. I would tell you that they are totally capable of doing the job that is put before them.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. Thank you for your testimony today.

Mr. Malcolm Bates: Thank you.

AGUSTAWESTLAND PHILADELPHIA CORP.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our next witness will be Louis Bartolotta, executive vice-president of AgustaWestland Philadelphia Corp. Welcome. You've received information for a witness testifying before the committee?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And I believe we have an oath to do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Sir, the Bible's in front of you there. So, Mr. Bartolotta, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have five minutes for a presentation, and then the three parties will have an opportunity to ask questions for eight minutes each.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Thank you, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee. As I was just introduced, I'm Lou Bartolotta, and on behalf of AgustaWestland, allow me to express our appreciation for allowing us to appear before you today.

Our company history is one of hard work, ingenuity, focus on the customer and, through these elements, success. AgustaWestland is a world leader in the manufacture of turbine-powered helicopters, serving both commercial and military customers around the world.

Today, over 4,500 AgustaWestland helicopters are in service in over 70 countries; 2,000 of them are serving in armed forces and military roles, and this includes the Royal Canadian Air Force's fleet of AgustaWestland Cormorant CH-149 search and rescue helicopters, whose 442 Squadron of Comox just won the SAR award—the search and rescue award—for operational rescue excellence at the 2012 Shephard's Search and Rescue conference. Our congratulations go out to them.

Another 2,500 of our helicopters are serving in commercial and public service roles, including aeromedical, offshore oil support, general utility, and police and municipal applications. More than 300 of our helicopters serve in the aeromedical field, and today over 80 AW139s serve in aeromedical and search and rescue roles in 16 different countries.

Ontario's health care system and the role Ornge plays in it are held in high esteem, so I think you can imagine how proud we were in August 2007 to be among those manufacturers to receive a request for information from Ornge in its bid to replace its aging helicopter fleet. And we were even prouder in March 2008, after a rigorous selection process and a demanding contract negotiation phase, to be awarded the contract by Ornge to provide the next generation of modern helicopters to serve the citizens of Ontario for the next 25 years and more.

That process and that contract brought out the best in our company. The operational, delivery and certification demands defined by the Ornge team caused us to organize our internal resources even more effectively than before and to work seamlessly with external organizations such as Transport Canada and the FAA of the United States to achieve the contractual obligations, including certification of the 139's full ice protection system. This optional system, which allows the helicopter to operate in known icing conditions, is a first for an aircraft of this size. It was a wonderful challenge that faced us and one we were certain we would successfully meet, which we did.

We already had a winning aircraft in the AW139. Starting before its first customer delivery in 2004, the 139 had been met with unprecedented acceptance by the world's commercial, public service and military operators. Capable of carrying greater payloads greater distances in instrument and VFR conditions over its competitors, the 139 really is one of the great success stories of our company.

As testimony to that success, we will be delivering our 500th AW139 at the Farnborough air show this summer, and we expect the fleet operational hour level to reach or exceed the 500,000 flight-hour level by that time.

So with this selection of the 139, the citizens of Ontario are being provided with the best helicopter available to serve their aeromedical transportation needs. They are joining other prestigious Canadian operators of the 139, including the Shock Trauma Air Rescue Society of Alberta—and by the way, in 2013 they're moving into Saskatchewan as well—and London Air Services of London Drugs.

When AgustaWestland was given this opportunity to work with the province of Ontario, with the Ornge air ambulance model and with the 139, it was clear to us this was a winning combination, a wonderful brand and something well worth working together on to export beyond Ontario, both inside and outside of Canada.

Many countries today are eager to take a proven model such as yours and put something like it to work for their own citizens. And that concept is in line with one of our core values. Whenever possible, we believe in working in partnership with our customers and in supporting mutually constructive endeavours. For example, when AgustaWestland—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about a minute left for your opening statement.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Fine.

For example, when AgustaWestland was asked to contribute to the Ornge Foundation, we did so willingly. The same goes for the 2010 announcement of the Ornge-

AgustaWestland Endowment Fund for aboriginal learners, based in Thunder Bay and provided through Confederation College, to encourage aboriginal students to pursue careers as paramedics and pilots. These examples are no more than what we have done in the past with other programs we believe in.

In closing, yes, we are very proud of our affiliation with Ornge air ambulance, the Ministry of Health, the province of Ontario and with our service to the citizens they represent. We're grateful to be playing our part. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for that. The official opposition goes first in this round of questioning. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Chair. Thank you, Mr. Bartolotta, for being here. Could you tell me about Finmeccanica? How is that company related to Agusta?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: How is Finmeccanica related to Agusta?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Finmeccanica is the shareholder of AgustaWestland. It's a very large consortium of companies in the Italian industry. It is, I believe, the second-largest industrial conglomerate in Italy.

Mr. Frank Klees: So is it appropriate to characterize it essentially as the holding company of Agusta?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: It's the main shareholder of AgustaWestland.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who is Pier Francesco Guarguaglini?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Guarguaglini?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: He was the past chairman of Finmeccanica.

Mr. Frank Klees: And where is he now?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I suppose in Italy; I don't know.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was his position with Finmeccanica?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I believe he was chairman.

Mr. Frank Klees: Why did he resign?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I don't know.

Mr. Frank Klees: You don't know?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Well, if you're alluding to the reports in the press, he resigned his position back—I'm not even sure—six months ago, eight months ago.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Bartolotta, we all have access to information. It would be helpful and I think in your best interest if you just were forthright and told us why he resigned.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I think I just told you that I really don't have information on that. I couldn't add anything to what you might have read in the press.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, I understand there were four investigations. Prosecutors exposed a system of patronage, slush funds, bribery and kickbacks at this company. Because of that, the chairman resigned. Does that help you remember?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Sir, you're talking about reports in the press. I can only tell you I have no more knowledge of what went on at Finmeccanica at that level than you do.

Mr. Frank Klees: I find that very hard to believe.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Well, I'm—

Mr. Frank Klees: However, it's your testimony under oath, and we'll see where this takes us. Do you know the name Lorenzo Borgogni?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: No, sir, I do not.

Mr. Frank Klees: He was Finmeccanica's director of external relations, who also resigned after a flurry of media reports that he was being investigated in a slush funds case that involved bribery of politicians, kickbacks of deals. You know nothing about this?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: No, sir, I don't. You have to understand, AgustaWestland is one of many companies within Finmeccanica. You're speaking about a holding company that resides in Italy, and I don't have direct information any more than you do.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, the reason that I thought it was important that we have this discussion is because you're well aware that the Auditor General's report makes reference to a very interesting payment by AgustaWestland to Ornge, some $6.7 million, very, very interestingly, a short period of time after a multi-million dollar purchase was made from Agusta. Those of us who have some knowledge of how business works immediately looked at that payment, and the flags went up. It sounds like a kickback to many of us. How would you characterize it?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I find your insinuation and allegation insulting to me professionally and to my company, and I have nothing further to say towards your statement. This—

Mr. Frank Klees: What was the $6.7 million paid to Ornge for?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I'm not sure—

Mr. Frank Klees: What did you get in exchange for $6.7 million?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Perhaps you'd like to tell me what $6.7 million we're speaking about.

Mr. Jim McCarter: We mentioned $4.8 million relating to—I think it was providing some marketing assistance. I'm not sure about $6.7 million; maybe there was another $2 million. We did mention there was a $4.8-million marketing agreement, I think. Does that ring a bell?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, marketing services agreement, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what did you get for that? What did Ornge do for it?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Two things are important to understand about the Ornge program; one is the value for money that the citizens of Ontario have received in the purchase of these aircraft. There is no finer aircraft available today to provide this service to the citizens of Ontario. Distinctly different from that, you have, as I mentioned in my opening statement, a remarkable organization in Ornge. The depth of knowledge, of medical skills, of operational protocols are world-class—

Mr. Frank Klees: Really?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: You have not—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: May I finish?

Mr. Frank Klees: You have not been in touch with Ontario—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees, please let him finish.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Thank you. The marketing services agreement that we have with Ornge, which was $4.77 million, was a strict contract-for-services relationship. They are responsible for providing to us a series of reports, which they've done, to a degree, before all of this, unfortunately, blew up, to help us better understand where in the world there would be similar models that might be helpful for us to pursue—I'm speaking more generally, but where countries might have a requirement for aeromedical transportation, where the Ornge model might fit. We felt that their expertise was superior to anything else we could find in the marketplace, so we have a contract with them to provide those services and those reports.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute and a half, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. The rigorous RFP process to which you referred, I understand, took about 30 days from the time that the RFP went out to the time that it was closed. Do you consider that rigorous?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Really?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's incomparable to any other RFP process that I have come across. There isn't anyone in the industry who considers that rigorous. I have to say, sir, that you don't leave me with a good feeling about the relationship between Ornge, the people who were involved in transacting the deals. We will have many more questions for you.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I appreciate it

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. The NDP, who would like to ask questions? Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Good afternoon, sir. So just to follow up with some questions on that, those services provided. Do I understand correctly that it's $4.77 million—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, sir.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: —in exchange for reports that were provided from Ornge to AgustaWestland?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And the nature of these reports, can you just clarify that?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: The nature was basically a sequence of identifying what they saw as areas of the world where a model such as Ornge's would be appropriate to pursue; a prioritization of opportunities is the best way to put it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure. How many reports were received?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Two.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Two reports?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, sir.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And how long were these reports?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: How long were they?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In length, in terms of—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Oh. I don't know specifically, but let me take a—I believe the first phase, phase 1, may have had 80 pages to it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And how far in between were they provided?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: They are sequential. They were to run from day 1 through 180, 181—six-month periods.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Six-month periods?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And the agreement, how long was that agreement for?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: It was for 500 and whatever—180 times—540 days.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, 540 days. So the $4.77 million reflects 540 days in which they would provide reports at six-month intervals?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, sir.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. At any point in time did AgustaWestland or any representatives meet with Mr. Mazza directly?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Certainly.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And in those meetings, were there ever any elected representatives present?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: No, sir, not that I recall.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. All the meetings that were involving the purchase of the helicopters, were they all conducted in Ontario or were any conducted in—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: No, sir. They were held in Philadelphia, where we have, obviously, our North American facility. We have 535 employees producing two lines of aircraft, including the 139. They were held here in Toronto, and they were held in Italy as well.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Thank you.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. You'll understand by the line of questioning that the reason you're here today is because I put your name on the list, and the reason I put your name on the list of witnesses is because of what the auditor is just talking about, the fact that the Ontario government—I'm an elected official—has given Ornge millions of dollars to purchase helicopters.

Then we see that Ornge gets a contract from you. We have made a purchase—"we" as in taxpayers' dollars of Ontario have made a significant purchase with your company, and then you turn around and purchase services from us.

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair, just on a point of order.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I thought we were done with those things.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, wait a second. You haven't heard what I'm going to say. Chair, I'd like to move in camera for a couple of minutes before we continue on this.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, we will go in camera for a few minutes, if we can halt your testimony, please. We will go in camera.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Do I go back here?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Leave the room at this point, please.

The committee continued in closed session from 1312 to 1326.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your patience, Mr. Bartolotta. We'll continue now with the questioning of the third party. Ms. Gélinas is going to restate the question she was last asking. She has about five and a half minutes left to ask you questions.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Sorry about this little interlude there.

We all got to decide who we wanted to call; I picked you. The reason I did that was because when I read the Auditor General's report, we can see the amount of taxpayers' money that has been paid to your company, to Agusta. Then we see Agusta buying services from the same entity that had bought services from you. The optics of it looks suspicious.

When you went and wanted to purchase services at Ornge, did any of them raise concerns that the optics would look bad, given that they were a government-funded agency?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: No, ma'am.

M^{me} France Gélinas: They never did?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: No, ma'am.

M^{me} France Gélinas: At your end—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Neither did we see it as something that would be viewed as such. It was a very honest, straightforward contract for services.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Are you aware of the corporate structure of Ornge?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Not intimately.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Do you know that there is part of Ornge that is a not-for-profit agency and there are some other parts of Ornge that are for-profit agencies?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I'm learning as we go, yes, that there are a variety of structures within Ornge.

M^{me} France Gélinas: When you purchased those services from Ornge, did you know which Ornge company you purchased them from?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: The perception or the optics, to use your word, of Ornge to us was that it was Ornge and then Ornge Peel and then different names. BNY, I think, came out of it.

We had received notification from Ornge that they were establishing certain companies—not that they were for-profit or not-for-profit; just that they were incorporated under the laws of Ontario. So it didn't really—not that I say it didn't matter to us. We were confident that whatever was being structured was proper and that the same people we were dealing with with the one entity were in the entities that were being created. So it didn't really cause too much concern.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So did you know which one of those entities you were purchasing services from?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you remember the name?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Ornge Peel, I believe, was the one with the marketing services agreement.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So the marketing services agreement was signed with Ornge Peel, but the people you had been dealing with for the purchase were the same people that you were now purchasing services from?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Well, the officers, the people signing the contracts were Dr. Mazza, Maria Renzella; I believe Tom Lepine was on some of the documents. It was familiar faces, let's put it that way.

M^{me} France Gélinas: They were familiar faces that—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, people we knew.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. You know that Ornge has been dismantled, that Mr. Mazza is gone, that the entire board has been fired and a new board has been put into place. Did you know that they are under investigation right now?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: I understand the board voluntarily resigned. Of course I understand—that's why we're here—that they're under investigation.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I just wanted to make sure.

So you saw no red flags when a company that you had just done business with—you go back and do business with them. Is this something that you've done in other parts of the world?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, ma'am. Absolutely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, because we read the papers, just like everybody else. I'm reading "The Unravelling of Belgian Kickback Scandals," in which your company is named all over the paper. It looks very much like what happened in Ontario, where a purchase was done with your company and then a return purchase is then done, with your company purchasing services from executives in the Belgian government. Do the two transactions look alike to you?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Ma'am, I don't believe that was—

Mr. David Zimmer: That is just a patently unfair question, to take some situation—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You don't have the floor.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know anything about the transaction that happened in Belgium with Agusta?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Do I know anything about the transaction? Ma'am, I don't think I was even with Agusta when the sale of the aircraft to Belgium took place. I'm not sure. It goes back quite a few years, we're talking about.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have 30 seconds left.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. We have an issue here in Ontario where our Auditor General has told us that the people of Ontario have not gotten value for the money that the taxpayers have invested. Some of that money has gone to your company, and some of that money has gone from your company back to holdings of Ornge.

If there is anything you can share with us as to whom you paid that money to and the type of report you got, if there was a request for proposals or sharing the contract—anything that would put that piece of the puzzle at ease, I would encourage you to do this because, right now, the optics in Ontario are not good. The people who were at Ornge, the people that you were used to dealing with, are also having a tough time. Anything you can do to show us that this was a legitimate transaction—you got $4.77 million value of money for the services provided—please share that with us, because right now the optics are—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Can I take that back with me and review and get back to you on that?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, you may.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): It's time for the government to ask questions. Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: As Madame Gélinas pointed out, her party had asked for somebody from AgustaWestland to be called, and I think it was actually your company's choice that you would appear as the witness, Mr. Bartolotta.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, ma'am, it was.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I wonder if you could explain to us what your direct involvement was, because we got the impression it was because you were the person who was directly involved.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes. I'm executive vice-president with the company, and I was the lead in the negotiations with Ornge.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Your name would appear on contracts?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, ma'am.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. So you were directly responsible, then, for the negotiations?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: One of the things that comes up in the Auditor General's report, which I think has received some attention from a lot of us, is the fact that there were 12 helicopters purchased. There are various numbers that float around as to the number that were actually required, but they tend to range, I think, more in the range of, six to 10 absolutely maximum were required, and it's clear that 12 were purchased. Did that come up at the time in the negotiations, an explanation as to why there were more helicopters being ordered than were actually required?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Ma'am, as a supplier of aircraft it's not up to us to address that situation with the customers. It's the customers' decision about how many aircraft they're going to buy for their needs, and then we do our best to respond to the request.

By the way, the contract was for 10 with two options, and then the two options were exercised within the option period of the contract.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So, in fact, there were ultimately a total of 12—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, but it was 10 plus two—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —but it was 10 plus two options, which may be why the numbers that are reported don't always quite add up.

When a helicopter leaves Agusta, is it a shell or have you already done any of the interior configuration? Obviously, the bulk of them ultimately ended up being air ambulance configuration, but some of these helicopters ended up being a passenger configuration. When they leave Agusta, are they a shell or do you know which way they're headed?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Generally speaking, a customer—any customer, I'm speaking of—can take a variety of configurations at delivery. It can be what we would call green, with very little done to the aircraft except the basic fabrication of it; it can have some additional avionics put into it; it can be painted or not painted; it can have an interior that we're supplying. There's a wide variety of configurations.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: In respect of the 12 that were ordered by Ornge, how were they delivered in terms of configuration?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Ornge had everything done by us to the aircraft except the interior. The medical interior was a separate contract that they took care of, independently of us. Except for whatever a customer does—as I said, it's not unusual for a customer to go to a third party for an interior—we have to make certain that the two marry up for the plumbing, if you like; for the electrical and other components of the aircraft to marry up to the vendor supplying the interior.

With Ornge, I believe it was that 10 aircraft went ready to receive their medical interior. During the delivery process—I don't know where we were in the process of what number of aircraft—Ornge asked us to take the last two and put them into another configuration, which was more or less a standard configuration, a utility configuration.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And that would be the last two that were the option—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, ma'am, 11 and 12.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —11 and 12 left you ready to be used as passenger or something—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: They were not aeromedically configured; they were the standard seating.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: They weren't configured. So what would be particular about the first which left configured? Are you saying that the wiring is different, or lighting, or whatever?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: They're ready to receive—how can I use an analogy—take a house, and you're having somebody come in and put in a new kitchen, with a lot of plumbing. You've got electrical and water and waste. To receive that, you have to put certain things into the basic house, and then the person finishing it is going to come in and fit to finish. That's what we're talking about. So when we delivered to Ornge, they were painted, avionics—I'm not sure—we did have additional avionics installed; and it was ready to go to the completion house. So we delivered to Ornge, and then from there, Ornge had a contract with a third party and they took the aircraft home.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Can we talk a little bit more about—because you've been asked considerably about the charitable contributions. I understand that large corporations often make charitable contributions, but how do you arrive at the decision-making? What decision-making went into deciding a $2.9-million contribution to the charitable foundation? Because that's almost $3 million—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, ma'am. Oh, we know. We understand.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Even for a big company, that's a big contribution. So how did you go about deciding to make this really big contribution to a charitable foundation that was, to put it mildly, not a very well established charitable foundation?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: It was sometime after the contract had been signed. We were approached by Ornge, by Dr. Mazza, to consider—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So this was post-signing of the contract?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, ma'am; well after. He explained the foundation—by the way, when we talk about this size of money, about $2.9 million, obviously it goes upstream. We have a lot of people who are cognizant of what's going on and involved in any decision like this. But basically, the foundation's purpose was explained to us. In raising the awareness of Ontarians to Ornge and to help people contribute to the foundation, which is, I guess, the best way to express the description of the foundation by Ornge to us, we felt that the program itself is something we believed in—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So how did they describe the program? Because I think that's something that—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: The foundation?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yeah, the foundation, because I think that's something that in fact is quite unclear to the Ontario public: What was the foundation actually supposed to be doing?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: As I recall, the foundation's purpose is to raise the awareness of Ontarians to Ornge and to solicit more people to fund the foundation so it gains, I guess, some fiscal strength.

But it was really the raising the awareness of the Ontarian that we were interested in. If it was something that hadn't been done in the past and it needed to be done, and we felt it was appropriate that we would support something like that, as I said before, we willingly supported contributing to it. It is a large sum of money, but we thought it was well worthwhile.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Did you think of this in terms of something like a hospital foundation, where you know that when you contribute to a hospital foundation, they use it to buy more beds, more equipment?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Yes, ma'am.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So what did you think when you found out it was used to purchase really expensive motorcycles?

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: That's not exactly the way—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That's not—

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: No.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Well, explain, then.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Okay. The foundation had a number of different, let's say, opportunities they wanted to pursue with using the foundation's money to just do that: Raise the awareness of Ontarians about Ornge.

One of them was—I don't watch the show very often, but it's Orange County Choppers, and there's a lot of synergy: Ornge, Orange of Syracuse—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Chopper, chopper.

Mr. Louis Bartolotta: Chopper, chopper.

The actual amount of money that went to that—I think most of that went to the production of the television show. They only have 12 of the shows per year of all the motorcycles they make, and I think they probably make one a week or two a week or whatever it is. The production of the television episode is where most of the money went to.

The motorcycles were, I think—I'm going to take a guess and say they were $50,000 or $40,000 apiece, something like that. It was about that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We are out of time. Thank you very much for taking the time to come before the committee today.

MR. TREVOR HARNESS

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our next presenter is Trevor Harness, former aviation training officer with the MATC, Ministry of Health. Welcome, Mr. Harness. You've read the information for a witness testifying before the committee?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Yes, sir.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, very good. Our clerk will do an oath.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Harness, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to the committee touching on the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Trevor Harness: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have five minutes for an opening statement and then the parties will ask questions.

Mr. Trevor Harness: Thank you.

Mr. Chair and members of the committee, thank you for inviting me here today. I am a former member of the Ministry of Health's air ambulance Medical Air Transport Centre and Ornge. In my 11 years working at air ambulance, I served as both a fixed-wing and helicopter flight controller, aviation trainer and member of OPSEU's local executive. I am a former police officer and certified police dispatcher and both a fixed-wing and a helicopter pilot. I have also got an extensive background in customer service, operational management and business operations, including setting up three communications centres.

As someone who is dedicated to my job, I was one of the many employees who were fired from air ambulance for attempting to stand up for patients and taxpayers during the creation of Ornge. I took incredible pride in my job and I am thoroughly disgusted at what has been allowed to happen to our air ambulance services in Ontario. It is a disgrace and an absolute abuse of taxpayers' money and, more importantly, their trust.

Part of my role here today is to give a voice to current and former employees, people who are and were dedicated to providing the highest, most professional level of air ambulance services to the citizens of this province, many of whom were bullied, harassed, ignored and terminated.

Although attempts were made to warn the minister of this growing crisis, they were all ignored by the Ministry of Health, the emergency health services branch and even the Auditor General's office. With nowhere else to turn, we collectively made a decision that was in the best interests of taxpayers and patients. When the ministry chose to look the other way and failed to live up to their responsibilities, our team was put into action.

The creation of Ornge and the subsequent for-profit entities has jeopardized the health care of citizens across this province. A monopoly by design, the cost of Ornge affects not only the public but numerous stakeholders, including hospitals, nursing stations, private aviation providers and hundreds of employees. People lost their jobs, people lost their lives, companies were forced out of business. Taxpayers' money was squandered with no care or concern. All the while, vital aircraft sat on the ground, with the excuse that the organization didn't have enough funding.

Ornge was an experiment gone very wrong, an experiment whose responsibility lies solely with the Minister of Health, the Ministry of Health and the emergency health services branch. As far back as 2006, attempts were made to alert them to problems developing with the creation of Ornge. Not one person followed up on credible leads and factual information. They chose to ignore the warning signs and failed to perform any due diligence. All senior management and members of the various boards of directors are equally responsible and culpable for the destruction of air ambulance services in Ontario.

Greed was the guiding principle in their decisions, decisions that benefited a select group who had no conscience about making a profit on the backs of sick and injured patients requiring emergency air transport.

Even more disturbing are decisions surrounding safety and service provision that were being made by unqualified individuals who were solely recruited for their ability to agree with management.

The organization itself was built on a culture of fear, intimidation and harassment. Anyone who questioned any decision, policy or procedure was dealt with swiftly, from immediate dismissal to threats of legal prosecution. Many hard-working, responsible and dedicated employees found themselves forced out of a job they were committed to, and no one would listen at the Ministry of Health, whose job it was to oversee this vital emergency service.

Nowhere else are the consequences more evident than in the communications centre, the heart of air ambulance operations. From here, emergency calls are received and life-saving flights are planned. Seconds count. Having the right people, the right equipment and qualified, experienced leadership means the difference between life and death. Yet again, the Minister of Health compromised one of the most essential components of air ambulance operations.

Today, the reputation of Ornge is one of failure, mistrust and scandal. A once proud and efficient organization is now an international disgrace. Their credibility has been lost and the damage has been done.

The problem is the business model itself. Simply changing the performance agreement or proposing new legislation is not the answer, nor is bringing in expensive consultants with absolutely no experience in Ontario's air ambulance program. Ornge is broken and cannot be fixed. Air ambulance is not a business; it is an emergency service and needs to be run like one. It requires specialized skill and experience. In this business, seconds count.

Today, there are still individuals at the organization who were actively involved in the design and subsequent demise of the air ambulance program. These individuals were architects of the culture leading to this catastrophe—individuals who have proven repeatedly that they have no idea what they're doing yet are still being grossly rewarded for their incompetence.

The public employees and stakeholders have all lost faith in the Ministry of Health. Contrary to what the minister may state, there is no confidence in the organization by front-line staff. They are frustrated, tired and mentally exhausted at the absence of qualified leadership and real change.

Respectfully, the Minister of Health and her staff are completely out of touch with the reality and the magnitude of this emergency. To use appropriate terminology, air ambulance is in critical condition.

Under the current structure and leadership, a once proud and reliable emergency service is now on a course to collapse. It is a rudderless ship that is destined for failure. Left to continue down this path, air ambulance services will not only get worse but the liabilities will continue to grow. For too long, inaction has led to tragedy.

You didn't listen to us before; please listen to us now. Lives depend on it.

Thank you once again for the opportunity to present to the committee, and I'd be very happy to answer any questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Mr. Harness. The NDP will go first this time. Who would like to ask questions? Mr. Singh?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Mackie, thank you very much for coming here today and thank you very much for the introductory comments.

Mr. Trevor Harness: Mr. Harness.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Pardon?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Mr. Harness.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: My apologies, Mr. Harness. Sorry, my notes are mixed up.

You indicated that you had already notified people before about some of the problems. Can you just explain who you notified and what the problems were that you highlighted?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Yes. On April 5, 2008, I was contacted by my manager at Ornge at the time—it had already done the transition over—regarding a call where a child had died. The child had died in the hospital, and our move of the patient to the hospital was done without incident, but it was one of the natural processes where they were doing an inquest.

During the Ministry of Health investigations—a woman by the name of Wendy Kerrigan was conducting the interview. Having been a police officer, I was aware of my rights and the process, and I was opposed to having members of the management team invite themselves to be part of this interview. It was done on tape, and at the end of it, Ms. Kerrigan asked me if I had anything that I wanted to share. I told her, in front of the management, that I did, but that I wanted to talk to her in private regarding some incidents. The manager at the time asked to see me out in the hall. The head of investigations—I apologize; I forget her last name—Debra, a former police officer, works as one of the investigators with Ornge. She demanded to know what I was going to tell them. I reminded her again of both her background as a police officer and mine, and that she was in a position of obstructing justice at this point. She subsequently stopped persisting to want to know what I was going to tell her. Ms. Kerrigan was then hassled, for lack of better terms, by Sandra Wilkie, who was the manager of the com centre at the time, and they wouldn't allow me to talk to her.

I subsequently went back to my operational desk. Within 30 minutes, I was called to one meeting. We were incredibly busy, we were short-staffed. I had a suspicion of what they were up to and I was allowed to return to my desk only to be recalled, this time to go with the head of operations, Al Stephens, up to meet Rhoda Beecher, who was the VP of human resources.

Again, I asked her what this was about. We ended up in a boardroom with Chris Mazza and he had nothing shy of a temper tantrum because I refused to tell him what I was going to tell the Ministry of Health. He advised me that he was going to grab the tape and he was going to find out, and his words were that nothing goes outside this house. I persisted in holding my ground. He had a shouting match and walked out of the room and never came back.

Within an hour of that I was suspended, and I cautioned everybody along the way, from the VP of HR to the manager of HR, that what they were doing was not only against our collective agreement, it was against the Employment Standards Act and it was against the Human Rights Code.

I was sent home. I asked why they were suspending me; they insisted they weren't suspending me. I was subsequently fired within 48 hours.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Could you just highlight some of the problems that were occurring at Ornge? If you could give me a list of some of the main problems.

Mr. Trevor Harness: They are endless. From the starting of operations, Ornge was, is and is continuing on down the path of having incompetent individuals running that organization; people with no qualifications whatsoever, people who have no qualifications in air ambulance.

The computer systems that they're using are not conducive to air ambulance operations. In this business, as you can appreciate, we don't have the luxury of pulling off to the nearest cloud to figure out things. We have to make decisions very quickly or people are going to die. The computer systems are part of the problem.

The quality assurance is a huge problem. They have an individual who is in quality assurance and has no idea what she's doing whatsoever. She's been doing that job for two years, yet the Auditor General's report identifies 12 separate areas where they couldn't even track something as simple as the number of ground ambulance transfers they did.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: With respect to your correspondence, you said you tried to communicate some of these issues with the Minister of Health.

Mr. Trevor Harness: Yes, I did.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: How did you do that and when did you do that?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Starting on April 6, I made several phone calls to the Ministry of Health, trying to get through. I did that for approximately three days. I was in touch with OPSEU, which was our union at the time. I could not get any answers from anybody, any headway whatsoever. At one point, OPSEU had contacted their legal department to actually bring Ornge in front of a courtroom because this had been happening on numerous occasions and they wanted to actually finally get this out in front.

After that, I personally contacted the Auditor General's office and spoke to one individual on two separate occasions because, as you can appreciate the nature of this, I was served with legal papers threatening to sue me if I spoke about anything.

I was advised by the Toronto Star that I was one of eight employees that were followed by private investigators hired by Ornge.

So you can imagine the atmosphere of trying to get information across. When we finally realized that we were getting nowhere, no one was going to listen, we turned to several media outlets and that's when we started essentially our own investigation.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So this is April 6, 2008?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you ever send any correspondences, like a letter or an email, to the Minister of Health saying, "Listen, Ornge has got some serious problems"; anything of that nature?

Mr. Trevor Harness: I sent my suspension notice, which is five pages long, to the Ministry of Health and never got a reply.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Thank you.

M^{me} France G  linas: Just to keep on your train of thought, you outlined a number of deficiencies within Ornge. In your view, did the corporate structure that was put in place of having the not-for-profit and having other—did that help patient care in any way, shape or form?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Absolutely not. I spent the last year and a half investigating Ornge and their structure, and our team had tracked approximately 14 for-profit companies right from scratch—and this, believe it or not, is right off of Google. We use media sources.

The for-profit companies were there for one reason and one reason only: They were there to line the pockets of the same individuals that put themselves on all of the for-profit boards. The Ornge non-profit, the actual air ambulance operations, were put at jeopardy, for a lack of better terms, by the interests, which included sourcing out business, we investigated, down as far as Miami, Florida. So the effort that should have been put into the actual air ambulance, taxpayer-funded operations of providing helicopters and airplanes, was basically a distraction for the management. They were more concerned with figuring out ways to make money, to get shares, to get bonuses, versus the fact that your helicopters are not staffed with appropriate paramedics; you have aircraft sitting on the ground. At one point there was a Thunder Bay helicopter that sat on the ground for five days in a row because they said they didn't have funding to staff the aircraft.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you have a minute left.

M^{me} France G  linas: When you say the same people that were all—would you name those people?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Well, the first one that comes to the list is Rainer Beltzner. He is the chair, or was the chair, of Ornge non-profit; also of the Ornge Foundation and of J Smarts. His name appeared on the top of the list of every single for-profit company. Chris Mazza's name also appeared on the majority of them, with the exception of one. Even Alfred App's name appeared on a holding company.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I'm just going to ask one quick question. You said there are some people who were involved in the design and the destruction that are still involved now. Can you name those people as well?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Yes. There are numerous. There are literally every base manager. Steve Farquhar, who was Tom Lepine's—the former VP of operations—number one man on the job. These were people that designed the policies and the procedures that were put into place; Sandra Wilkie, who apparently was in charge of quality assurance for two years, and, as the auditor pointed out, there's major deficiencies. And these people are all making in excess of $120,000 a year plus bonuses.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. It's now time for the government. Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: You used the expression “we investigated” Ornge. Your investigation went on for a year. You made some reference to investigating something or a trip to Miami or something?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Yes, sir.

Mr. David Zimmer: How many people were on your investigative team?

Mr. Trevor Harness: On a reserve side, 28.

Mr. David Zimmer: And can I have their names?

Mr. Trevor Harness: That, unfortunately, you cannot.

Mr. David Zimmer: Why not?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Because, as with any intelligence and investigation, part of that is anonymity and we have to respect that.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right.

Mr. Trevor Harness: Just so you know, most of these people are still currently working either as paramedics or in the communications centre.

Mr. David Zimmer: Who's the lead investigator. Is that you?

Mr. Trevor Harness: I would say yes, that would be myself.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. Can you give me some of the names on the investigative team?

Mr. Trevor Harness: The only names that I can tell you would be Kevin Donovan of the Toronto Star, Paul Bliss of CTV, and, believe it or not, they have no idea that they are part of the team. They have been contacted over the last year and a half under different aliases—

Mr. David Zimmer: Sorry. I just want to understand this. So Kevin—

Mr. Trevor Harness: Kevin Donovan is the reporter for the Toronto Star.

Mr. David Zimmer: And Bliss? What's his name?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Paul Bliss from CTV did—

Mr. David Zimmer: And they're on your investigative team but they don't know they're on your investigative team?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Exactly. They've been spoken to under different aliases.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, would they be surprised to know that they were on your investigative team?

Mr. Trevor Harness: No. Not at all.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, then, why don't you tell them that they're on your investigative team?

Mr. Trevor Harness: If you're going to have an investigation where intelligence comes in, you're relying on a lot of trust of a lot of people with information.

Mr. David Zimmer: How can someone be on a team, whether it's an investigative team or a baseball team or any kind of team, without knowing it?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Well, this isn't a baseball team. This is an investigation into corruption, and when you're dealing with these kinds of investigations, you have to do what we commonly term as undercover work. I operate under three different alias names. People have no idea they've spoken to me in the past—

Mr. David Zimmer: Can you tell me what your alias names are?

Mr. Trevor Harness: That I cannot.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. Can you—thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, now my head is splitting. So this is an undercover intelligence team, and I think you said 28 members, but the two that you named didn't know that they're part of the team. How many of those other 28 members know they're part of the team or don't know they're part of the team?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Ninety-nine per cent of them know they're part of the team. The only reason those two don't, as you can appreciate, is, because we're dealing with contacting people right up as high as vice-presidents of companies, we can't simply say, “This is what we're going to do. We want to put it on the 6 o'clock news tonight.”

For example, the situation with CPR in the aircraft, where they couldn't do CPR: Those photographs were provided through the team by paramedics that are working still. As you can appreciate, they are in fear for their jobs if they're ever discovered.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You mentioned that you've taken trips to various places to do this undercover investigation, so this is quite a large undercover investigation you're describing here. Who would be funding this undercover investigation?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Believe it or not, nobody. There's not a single person, including myself, that got paid a dime.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And what are the qualifications of your undercover investigators?

Mr. Trevor Harness: When you talk about undercover investigators, you're talking about—it comes down to one essential word, and that is “trust.” If they trust me with the information, that I'm not going to reveal their identity, that I'm not going to pass on their IP address with an email, they're going to provide you with accurate information. The second you violate that trust, you will not get that source, very much like in policing; you will not get that source, that information you're looking for. It has taken us a lot of time to build up the trust of employees both current and former, members of various corporations, to give us information so that we can connect the dots so that we can put this information forward which you have read about in the newspapers, no doubt, on several occasions.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So are you claiming, then, that you're the source of all the information that has been in the media?

Mr. Trevor Harness: No. I would say that I'm one of probably—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Or your team is the source?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Not the entire source. I certainly don't want to take anything away from Kevin Donovan; he had an entire team of reporters working on it, and they did a lot of their own investigations as well.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Mr. Zimmer has a question, and then if we have some time, I have some more.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: You're not prepared to share the names of your investigative team with this committee. Would you be prepared to share that information with, say, the ongoing OPP investigation?

Mr. Trevor Harness: If they asked me, I would certainly quantify those, and they would appreciate that there is a privilege there with informants. If we can provide any information, certainly.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, I thought we had an agreement around this table regarding this issue. Mr. Zimmer raised it a number of times himself and now puts his foot in it.

Mr. David Zimmer: It's a process, not substantive. I just asked if he'd share the information.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Are you finished, Mr. Zimmer?

Mr. David Zimmer: I'm done.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I guess, given Mr. Klees's role in all this, is he knowingly or unknowingly on your team?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Mr. Klees was one of the first individuals that I spoke to about a year and a half ago and forwarded a lot of the information to, as we did attempt to make contact with several other MPPs. I even tried, at one point, getting in touch with the Minister of Health herself, and couldn't get a response back on a couple of different occasions. They wouldn't even let us get past—I asked to speak to her assistant. I said, "I understand you're not going to put me right through to the Minister of Health, but let me qualify what I have to say," because our intent is and has always been by the team to fix this mess. Nobody is getting any compensation; nobody is getting any perks from anybody. Everyone here truly has a dedication for patient care. We've lived our lives to it.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You talked about how you were Googling people, so in trying to prepare for today, I Googled you, and I came up with something called Regional Air Support and Rescue, RASAR. Your name came up as associated with that. Could you explain to us what that is?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Yes, that's a charity that I set up, as a helicopter pilot, to—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So this is a charitable, non-profit helicopter business?

Mr. Trevor Harness: It's not a business; it's a charity. It's a registered charity.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And what does this charitable helicopter business do?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Well, what we're in the process of doing is we have a fundraiser that is going this October. Our foundation is set to purchase a small helicopter that is going to be made available to emergency services in the GTA, that in the event a child goes missing or a patient wanders away from a medical facility, we would provide the aircraft and two of us pilots free of charge to that municipality.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you don't actually have a helicopter.

Mr. Trevor Harness: No. I fly through another base.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So this thing exists on the website but it doesn't actually provide any—because it says it's air support and rescue. So at this point, it's a name, and you're trying to raise money—

Mr. Trevor Harness: That's correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —but it doesn't actually provide any service, even though—

Mr. Trevor Harness: Not as of yet, no.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you're collecting money and getting—as a charity, but you're not actually providing any service?

Mr. Trevor Harness: No, that's incorrect. We're not collecting any money right now. As I said earlier, in October of this year we have a major fundraiser that's going to generate about $600,000 net, and that money, in October, will be used to purchase the aircraft.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. And now we'll move to the official opposition. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Mr. Harness, I want to thank you for, first of all, being here, and for all of the work that you have done. Through you, I want to thank the other front-line people, pilots and paramedics, who have had the courage to come forward and provide us with information. Without that, we wouldn't be here today, so I just want to thank you for that.

Mr. Trevor Harness: Thank you.

Mr. Frank Klees: I also want to make it very clear that the objective that we have here in this committee is, first of all, to review the Auditor General's report, and it's the Auditor General's report that confirmed many of the things that you brought to our attention. Apart from the financial irregularities, which we're not going to get into here because there is a criminal investigation into those, what is particularly concerning to us are the operational issues, some of which you refer to. The Auditor General, in his report, indicated that there are some 20 incidents that were reported back to the board of Ornge; a number of those involved patient deaths. I think, as I hear you, as a professional, what motivates you and has motivated you is precisely that—that we now have an air ambulance service that is dysfunctional at best.

You have heard the Minister of Health boast about a new CEO, a new board of directors, a new performance agreement, and that all will be well. I'd like to know from you, based on your knowledge of what is actually happening on the front line at Ornge, how encouraged should we be that we're on the right track here?

Mr. Trevor Harness: Not at all. Ornge is a model, as I mentioned earlier, that is broken. I am very familiar with the structure of STARS, Shock Trauma Air Rescue, out in Alberta. They have been running for 26 years. There was a vague attempt to model Ornge after the STARS model. You can't duplicate that. Air ambulance, as I mentioned, is an emergency service. You cannot run an emergency service, respectfully, with a board of directors and with individuals who may possess a private pilot's license and believe, again respectfully, that they have a knowledge of aviation.

Just recently, it was announced by Ornge that they are going to hire the former head of Toronto EMS, Bruce Farr, on a six-month contract for consulting. Now, respectfully, he has 30 years' experience and I'm sure he does know something about ground ambulance operations. Unfortunately, he knows nothing about air ambulance operations. And that's been the case with all of the senior managers and middle managers. They may have the best of intentions, but they do not have the operational knowledge of being able to select aircraft, know which aircraft to send, how to manage a comm centre. The communications centre alone, since 2006, has had seven directors. They have no idea what they're doing, and when they either give up and quit and/or get fired, they get replaced by somebody else, up to the current person, who was trying to learn what they do on the job by putting pieces of paper taped to a window asking employees to put their ideas up on how air ambulance should be run. I think at this point we're looking for a little bit more leadership than that.

Mr. Frank Klees: You refer to the quality assurance issue.

Mr. Trevor Harness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: And around that, one of the issues that we have heard about quite a bit is Ornge's mandated delay policy.

Mr. Trevor Harness: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Could you elaborate on that for us and tell us what the impact of that policy is on patient health?

Mr. Trevor Harness: That had a huge impact. When it comes to helicopter operations, contrary to what people may think, that a buzzer goes off, as you see on TV, and people go running to the helicopter, it doesn't happen like that. Previous to Ornge, as soon as a helicopter call came in—this is why you need qualified, very experienced people dispatching these aircraft, unlike today. You need to know weather, you need to know fuel, you need to know operations, you need to know capabilities, and you need to get that aircraft in the air immediately, as seconds count.

At one point, Ornge attempted to put a 10-minute delay policy into place. Their justification for it was that it was going to help save on the cancelled-call ratio that they were experiencing. In my personal opinion, that's a cover for trying to save money. You cannot have a scene call response with a car accident or a train wreck—and I'll give you an example.

Outside of London last year in a town near Glencoe, a 24-year-old male in a pickup truck was struck by a train and dragged approximately 300 metres. He was trapped underneath the train, still alive. Anybody with half of training in aviation would know that if they're calling and they're saying, "This guy's alive under a train," there's a pretty good chance you need to get that helicopter in the air pretty quick.

At that point, they had their 10-minute delay policy that said that if a ground ambulance was within 10 minutes of reaching that scene, you're to weather-check the helicopter, tell him about the call, the area, but do not launch it. So when the ground ambulance showed up on this call, they looked at this guy under the train and, as you can imagine, said, "Oh, my goodness, we need a helicopter." They're out in the middle of nowhere.

In comes another policy from the Ministry of Health which is actually a good policy. When they finally mobilize this patient into an ambulance, the rule is, if you do not see the helicopter on final approach, you have to start heading to the closest hospital. In Glencoe, there is nothing. It's nothing shy of a clinic. So they transported the patient there. You've got to remember, the golden hour is now ticking.

The helicopter was subsequently called. The accident happened at approximately 10:45. The helicopter was not wheels up, in the air, until 11:20. By the time they got to what they call the "modified location" and back to the London hospital, it was 12:40. The flight from their base to that scene and direct to London Health Sciences would have been no more than 30 minutes.

This patient subsequently died, and I'm not suggesting for a minute that the 10-minute delay response was the sole contributing factor, but you have to agree that you'd have a better chance of survival getting to a hospital faster.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Mr. Harness, in your attempts to contact the minister, and you were unsuccessful in doing so—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you're on your last minute, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Did you inform anyone else in the minister's office or at the Ministry of Health about your attempts or about what your concerns were at any time, and if so, when did you make those contacts, and do you remember who you might have been able to contact?

Mr. Trevor Harness: I attempted several direct contacts by phone. Nothing ever came back. I do have a contact in the ministry, and I have relayed all my concerns for the past year and a half to this individual. I am aware that some information has been met with success and some has not.

Mr. Frank Klees: But that information or that individual, you can't disclose, or can you?

Mr. Trevor Harness: No, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: I think, Chair, that what we're hearing today from Mr. Harness confirms the need for a select committee. I think it's very obvious that there are many front-line people who would want to come forward. They're intimidated from doing so. We've heard from Mr. Harness that ongoing concerns are very much still there, and I think it's our responsibility to ensure that we create a forum where people can come forward safely and confidently, with the appropriate whistle-blower protection, so that we can in fact restore confidence in our air ambulance service, which is really the objective, first of all, of the Auditor General's report and of the Legislature.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your comments, and thank you for your presentation today. We are out of time for your presentation.

ONTARIO AIR TRANSPORT ASSOCIATION

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our last presenter this afternoon is going to be Mr. Bob Mackie, who is director of the Air Transport Association. Mr. Mackie, welcome.

Mr. Bob Mackie: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Just to confirm, you've read the information provided to witnesses testifying before the committee?

Mr. Bob Mackie: I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, very well. Our clerk will go through the oath with you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Do you have the Bible?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Mm-hmm.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Mackie, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Bob Mackie: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well, you have five minutes for presentation and then we'll go to questions.

Mr. Bob Mackie: I'll read quick.

The Ontario Air Transport Association is a voice for Ontario's commercial air carriers, including those who supply air ambulance service to the Ministry of Health through Ornge. As certified and licensed air ambulance carriers, these carriers have been the backbone of the provincial air ambulance service for decades.

I have been involved myself in the air ambulance system since 1978. I have witnessed the system mature from very humble beginnings to where patients are now transported in ministry-licensed ambulances.

The system continued to improve until 2006. The number of air ambulance bases and aircraft has severely dwindled under Ornge. For example, where northwestern Ontario once had five communities with a fixed-wing air ambulance base, there are now only two.

It is impossible to summarize in only five minutes what has transpired since 2006. Really, a hearing or inquiry should be called to allow witnesses sufficient time to bring forward the whole story.

The government announced in 2005 that it was appointing what we now call Ornge to work with the ministry "to streamline our air ambulance system." The mandate was to increase service, have a single point of contact and medical oversight. Absolutely nothing in this announcement indicated that there would be changes to the actual procurement of air ambulance services. The air carriers welcomed this announcement, as it was going to streamline the system.

On February 23, 2006, Deputy Minister Sapsford confirmed before this committee that the actual delivery of aircraft would continue to be done under external contract. He also stated "that the Ministry of Health isn't in the business of flying helicopters, maintaining them and so forth. It's a specialized business that others can provide on a contract basis, I would argue, more effectively and more efficiently than we could ourselves." We agree.

In that same meeting, Malcolm Bates confirmed that there were in fact competitive processes to secure air ambulance services and that Ornge was required to follow those processes. He also agreed with the statement "It's a specialized business."

The government's initial announcement; testimony to this committee by various government officials, including the deputy minister; the committee's report and recommendations to the House with respect to the auditor's report of 2005; and the actual performance agreement with Ornge confirm that there was never any intent for Ornge to start its own air service. In fact, the report to the House states: "Services are to be provided on a contract basis through external operators, with the expectation that this approach will be more effective and efficient."

What really happened, however, is to the detriment of the existing air carriers and, it would now appear, the Ontario taxpayer. How this came about is even more shocking.

In 2007, Ornge issued an RFI to the air carriers. Unlike previous RFPs, this RFI requested detailed proprietary and confidential information. No contracts were to be awarded. The carriers were told in a vendors' meeting that Ornge wanted this information to gain a better insight into cost drivers. When queried as to what would happen if a carrier did not reply to the RFI, it was bluntly stated that since the carrier was not working in a collaborative manner with Ornge, they should not expect Ornge to work in a collaborative manner with the carrier. Some call it blackmail.

The RFI closed on June 29, and shortly after, on September 17, what we now know as Ornge Global Air was incorporated as a for-profit corporation with Mazza as one of the directors. It appears that Mazza took it upon himself to start his own airline, using perhaps fraudulently obtained information as well as taxpayers' money to do so. He then gave his new airline business, without adhering to government procurement guidelines—in other words, he gave his new airline our business and we were actually forced to help him.

He continued to conspire to eliminate the contracted carriers. He raided our staff, made it difficult to get paramedics trained and went so far as to tell some paramedics that if they wanted to upgrade their skills, they had to come and work for him.

OATA has repeatedly brought these and other abnormalities to the government's attention. Meetings were held in Thunder Bay with representatives from Minister Gravelle's office, MPP Bill Mauro's office and Ornge. As well, a letter to Minister Caplan in 2008 expressing continued concerns went unanswered by the ministry, referring us back to Ornge, the very organization that we were trying to bring to the attention of this government.

It now appears that the new board is not familiar with its own mandate and the government has forgotten the mandate as well. Mr. Delaney spoke to this committee about how dedicated the front-line people they have are. Absolutely, we agree; they used to work for us.

OATA specifically recommends that Ornge must return to and focus on its original mandate. Ornge Global Air was never part of that mandate and must be shut down.

The supply and operation of fixed-wing and rotary-wing aircraft must be tendered in an open and competitive bidding process, as was the government's stated intention.

As noted in the auditor's special report, neither Ornge nor Ornge-contracted consultants found any significant issues with the carriers. These carriers provide Ontarians with a service that puts emphasis on patient care and safety, and provide it at a very reasonable cost to the taxpayer.

I'd be happy to take questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Thank you. It's time for the government to go first. Ms. Sandals?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you. When you say you hope that Ornge Global will be wound down, I'm presuming you don't simply mean shutting it down, which is happening. What is it that you see happening?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Well, I think we're all in a pickle here now, quite frankly. It's allowed to manifest itself because you do have Ornge Global Air now, and they are—because they've put other carriers out of business, have taken the medics and so on, there definitely needs to be a period of transition to go back to where the aviation services go back to where they belong in the aviation community.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you're recommending that all air service be provided by the standard offer agreement providers?

Mr. Bob Mackie: There used to be two really different ends. There was the critical care, which was a dedicated contract, and there was the helicopters. Actually, helicopters were operated by Canadian Helicopters Ltd. until just recently—a few months ago, right? So those Ornge helicopters you see flying through the air were not operated by Ornge; they were operated by Canadian Helicopters. The dedicated fixed-wing contract was operated—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So what are you suggesting then? I'm sorry; I'm just trying to understand. You're suggesting that the service be automatically returned to Canadian Helicopters?

Mr. Bob Mackie: No, I believe that the operation of the equipment and whether or not that involves the sale of the existing equipment to the operator or lease—I mean, that would have to be determined, but the operation of the aviation assets should be returned to the aviation industry, who know what they're doing.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And the paramedics and the folks who are actually—so you're talking simply about who flies the aircraft, who owns the aircraft. Is that what you're talking about devolving?

Mr. Bob Mackie: I'm in the flying business and, very briefly, the company that I'm involved with—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Which is?

Mr. Bob Mackie: I'm the president of Thunder Airlines. We used to provide advanced care as well as primary care service to the province under a standing agreement situation. We were the largest advanced care carrier, for example. As a matter of fact, in Dryden I had a base which didn't cost the government a penny if they didn't use me, staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week, with advanced care people, and it worked quite well.

Under Ornge, of course, that's gone. But as far as the medics go, the original mandate, I believe, back in 2005 to 2006 when it was sent over, was that certain medics would come under the umbrella of Ornge. I have no issue with that—the critical care and/or even perhaps the advanced care.

Primary care—the vast majority of patients in the province are actually moved as primary care, and there's no need for that, necessarily. They're not now under the umbrella of Ornge. They actually work for the operators.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you're less concerned about who the paramedics work for; you're concerned about who's flying the aircraft, be they helicopter or fixed-wing.

So your members are, then—helicopter aviation services and airplane aviation services are your members?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Members are primarily the fixed-wing industry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay.

Mr. Bob Mackie: There was really only one operator, as we know, in Ontario that was flying—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —who was doing helicopters.

Mr. Bob Mackie: Yes, exactly.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So your members are, for the most part, then, the fixed-wing operators.

Mr. Bob Mackie: That is correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So your members, then, have lost that contract—no, there are still some of them.

Mr. Bob Mackie: There's a few left.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: How many of your members still have contracts?

Mr. Bob Mackie: I would say there's perhaps four.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And how many of your members have lost the contracts?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Well, let's see here: Way back when, in 2005, we lost a total of six.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And how many of your members have contracts? Of the four that still have contracts, are they still the same size of contract?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Oh, absolutely not. Thunder Airlines, with some decisions that were made in 2006, we elected—as I mentioned, we had advanced care bases, including on-site, which mirrored the government's critical care. That all got shut down overnight when Ornge simply changed the protocol and decided to move the responsibilities for paramedics. In order to what? Quite frankly, we suggest that it was probably because he was running out of money at the early stages. He put that onus on—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: He?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Mr. Mazza. He put that onus on the various hospitals. So all of a sudden, all of these highly skilled paramedics that we had, trained and certified by Ornge, weren't being utilized any more.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So let's go back, then, to your members, though, who you're here to represent. You used your own example. So how much revenue, then, in contracts with the Ministry of Health or with Ornge, as the case may be over the years, would you have lost?

Mr. Bob Mackie: I think probably in the neighbourhood of—I would be shooting from the hip, and I really don't like to do that, but in 2006 down to 2007, my company probably lost about $4 million to $5 million.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And you're saying that your members would be typically losing multimillions of dollars?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Yes, absolutely. My company is a little bit more heavily involved with the advanced care, so there's a much larger investment just in equipment and training and so on. But, yes, everybody who was doing advanced care definitely got the pinch.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. So in the model that you're proposing, obviously if there's multiples of you, the tens of millions of dollars, then, would be returned to your companies.

Mr. Bob Mackie: Well, you say model, but I just go back to: What was the original mandate? I'm just saying, go back to the original mandate that the government specified that they were going to do. We were all in agreement with it. They were going to look after the medics; they needed direct medical oversight. We had this system where you had different base hospitals throughout the province.

Like I say, I've been very involved with the air ambulance, starting off as a pilot back in 1978, and I saw good things happening. And probably one of the biggest good-news stories was when they did this. They're going to centralize us; this makes sense. We had no issue with it, and they were supposed to continue the contracts. We expected—we'll call it the fixed-wing dedicated contract, which is for fixed-wing service in Sioux Lookout and Timmins; they've since added the machine in Thunder Bay due to the angioplasty there at Thunder Bay Regional, and the same thing with the helicopters. But the operation of those was to continue—the medics were supposed to go in those operations under the umbrella of Ornge, which was fine. They actually got downloaded from the ministry back in about 2000, which was a mistake. So they just went back to what the original plan was. It morphed from that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We're out of time?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes. So we'll move to the official opposition. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

Mr. Mackie, thank you very much. I think you've helped to crystallize a good part of the issue here for us.

Again, to go back to a fundamental point: That was the vision of consolidating the service and centralizing certainly many aspects, particularly the oversight and the management of that. That was at the heart of that original mandate and announcement, and it's what would have been achieved through the original performance agreement. It was all there.

Mr. Bob Mackie: It was all there and it looked great.

Mr. Frank Klees: What went wrong, as you've pointed out, is that someone decided to take that vision and essentially morph it into a very self-serving business strategy. It was, I believe, never the intention to create another Ontario fleet of aircraft owned and managed by the province of Ontario.

Mr. Bob Mackie: That's right. There's at least no documentation that I can find where the government made any decision that they were going to tell the air operators in the province of Ontario, who supply services not just to the Ministry of Health but various other government agencies, that they were going to put them out of business. That was never announced.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to get to the impact on patient care that that decision had and, actually, if we allow it to continue, will continue to impact patient care. Could you tell us how many bases were in place in Ontario prior to this Ornge decision and how many are in place now, and the impact that that has on actually reaching patients within the appropriate time frame?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Sure. For the record, as I mentioned in my little spiel there, it went from five fixed-wing bases in northwestern Ontario down to two. We now only have Sioux Lookout and Thunder Bay. Red Lake, Fort Frances and Dryden have gone by the wayside.

In the rest of the province, we no longer have Hearst, Kapuskasing, Sudbury, North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie, Kingston, Toronto Island, London or Toronto Buttonville. Those were all places that had fixed-wing air ambulance service.

Just so recently as this past fall, when the operator out of Fort Frances actually moved his operation to Manitoba, there was a need to get a patient out of Fort Frances. Well, being the fall, the weather's not very nice. If you fly, you know that quite often you can take off but you can't land. It took two days to get that patient out. If that operator had still been there, there would have been no issue.

Mr. Frank Klees: So there's a significant impact on patient care.

Mr. Bob Mackie: Absolutely.

Mr. Frank Klees: Apart from the fact that the government has essentially moved in and stripped a lot of independent businesses of their business and the economic loss that goes along with that, we have the impact on the other side, on patient care.

Mr. Bob Mackie: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can I ask you this? This has been scrambled now. How do we unscramble this mess? Is it a matter of—and I think Ms. Sandals asked the question earlier. She said, is it just a matter of returning it to the place where it was or, I'd suggest and I'd like your thoughts on this, that one option is that we do what hasn't been done before—at least under Ornge—that we respect the procurement process of the province of Ontario and say, "Look, you people who are in the aviation business, come forward under an appropriate RFP, tell us what your expertise is, tell us what it is that you can do to deliver and restore confidence, restore the actual services that we need, and do so under a competitive process so that we know we're getting the best value for our dollar." Is that a reasonable option for us to consider?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Absolutely. Obviously there's going to be a transition period. We just can't leave the people of Ontario without an air ambulance service—that's obvious. But yes, I mean, the air carriers are more than willing, able and capable of doing exactly what you said, including the rotary wing.

Mr. Frank Klees: I've heard, and perhaps you know better, that there are a number of pilots who have left Ornge, there are others who are contemplating leaving, and the reason is that they do not have confidence in the management level at Ornge. The implication of that—could you talk to us about that? If you don't have the pilots, and there are only so many pilots in Ontario, what's the implication to our air ambulance service?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Well, I can't speak directly to the number of pilots leaving Ornge, because I just hear rumours and innuendoes, but obviously, that also happens in the industry as far as pilot movement goes.

I think, like anyone, they're nervous. They're seeing what's going on. They're seeing this hearing going on, they're reading the Toronto Star and watching the TV, and they're seeing things. So yes, they've had issues with their management, they've had issues with their senior management—some of that has been changed. Unfortunately, part of the problem, from my perspective, is that—I mean, with all due respect to Ron McKerlie, he got parachuted into a pretty big mess, but it wasn't one of the normal messes that he was usually set to clean up. This is the aviation business. I've been in it for 35 years, and I've seen lawyers and I've seen doctors quit their practices because they wanted to start an aviation company. None of those are in business today.

Mr. Frank Klees: Including Dr. Mazza.

Mr. Bob Mackie: Apparently. You know, Dr. Mazza—I've actually known Chris Mazza since the mid-1990s, when he first became involved, because I was sitting on a committee for the Ministry of Health that was as a result of the air ambulance review. And even back then, all he could talk about was, you know, how he loved this particular aircraft, the PC-12, because he actually went down to Australia and flew a little bit with the royal Australian flying doctors, I believe it's called. So he had a vision, I mean, he definitely had a vision, and I was sold. I was sold up to 2006, and I did see improvements up until that point. But it was when he became—how shall we say—in charge and fiscally responsible, it kind of went downhill.

Mr. Frank Klees: So what was lacking was the accountability mechanism to oversee what was an original vision that actually should have, and could have, worked?

Mr. Bob Mackie: As I said, the mandate as announced by the government in 2005 was sound. It was sound. It just—somehow it went from this, it went from Deputy Minister Sapsford saying, "We're not getting in the aviation business. We're going to fix this so that we know how to send these airplanes out, and helicopters, know how to dispatch them, know how to get them back, know that the medics are well-trained, know that it works and clicks, but leave the aviation part of it to the aviation professionals." Suddenly, somebody thought—at least from my perspective—"I have an opportunity to start an aviation company." That's what happened. But people are taking that as they accepted the fact that he did that. There is nothing, at least that I can find—and I would love for somebody to point out to me where the government changed direction, what decision was made, who made it.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time for the opposition.

We move to the NDP. Who would like to ask questions over there? Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you very much. Mr. Mackie, thank you for taking your time.

Mr. Mackie, if you could just highlight, if you could just break down the specific areas where Ornge fell short of providing patient care and why the Ornge model was worse than the pre-existing model where the aviation was left in the hands of the independent carriers?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Patient care—well, where am I going to start with that? I'm a pilot, first of all, and I operate an aviation company. We are definitely concerned about patient care, because we are also a licensed, certified air ambulance company. However, all of our medics, and actually Mr. Bates mentioned today—I'm just going to fit this in here—that the Ministry of Health certifies and licenses paramedics. That's absolutely true, but didn't go so far as to say that you don't fly for Ornge unless you're also trained and certified by Ornge. That's another process that's on top of that. So it's not just that some land paramedic can get in the back of an airplane or even anybody who has written the provincial exam. There's another step.

Patient care: In a lot of aspects, as far as the ability, the number of functions that paramedics, especially critical and advanced care paramedics and even to a certain extent primary care paramedics, are allowed to do has increased over the years, without a doubt.

Where patient care has probably gone backwards is that we are no longer—I believe part of the mandate was to increase availability of air ambulance in the province. I think I just named 13 bases that were now closed, so that, in itself, has to hurt patient care. You have Ornge aircraft now based—and fewer aircraft. So these aircraft that you now have left have to fly that much further. It's not uncommon for my company to get called up to leave Thunder Bay to go pick up a patient in Moosonee to take them to Timmins.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. You expressed some concerns about what was going on in Ornge. You expressed those concerns to the Minister of Health; is that correct?

Mr. Bob Mackie: One of our members wrote a letter to Minister Caplan.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When was that letter written and what was the content of it? Basically, what was said?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Well, I can submit that, if you like—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yeah, that would be great.

Mr. Bob Mackie: Or not.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Perhaps if you could table that—

Mr. Bob Mackie: Yeah, I can table the correspondence to that end, sure.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Certainly, and to save time, you can do that at the end.

Mr. Bob Mackie: That's fine.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Do you know roughly when that was written?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Well, it was 2008. I believe it was in the summer of 2008. It took months for an answer to filter back, and it actually got to the minister's office through Minister Gravelle's office locally in Thunder Bay, and then forwarded to Minister Caplan.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So you mention Mr. Gravelle. What was Minister Gravelle's involvement? Did you complain about Ornge to Minister Gravelle?

Mr. Bob Mackie: We were complaining—we had numerous meetings; one meeting actually where Ornge attended with counsel, in Thunder Bay. Minister Gravelle himself was not there. He sent a representative of his office there.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And what was discussed at that meeting?

Mr. Bob Mackie: The operators—and these, by the way, include operators who are not air ambulance companies, but saw problems—helping—or on the horizon, I guess. The very same thing—what's the government or a government-sanctioned entity getting into aviation? You're going in, you're being a competitor with private enterprise, and you're stealing our people.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So you expressed that concern with a representative of Minister Gravelle's office, with Ornge officials there, with counsel and with yourself?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And did you address any concerns with the actual quality of the care being reduced and problems with Ornge itself?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Quality of care, no. No patient care issues were really brought up in those meetings, no.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: It was just the conflict of interest or—

Mr. Bob Mackie: It was a conflict of interest, and it was against what was the mandate. And I'd like to go so far as to say is—they were sneaky how they did it. Can I be blunt?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yeah.

Mr. Bob Mackie: Very, very sneaky. As I mentioned, the RFI that came out, that vendors' conference was at the Sheraton Hotel at Pearson airport. The operators were just livid in that meeting: What are you doing? We had to give our contract fuel prices, which are highly, highly confidential. With our contracts that we do with Imperial Esso, we had to turn that over to Ornge or we wouldn't get any more further contracts. Like, what's with that?

Then they also went on to—you know, "Oh, no, we're not buying airplanes. We just want to do this so we get a better understanding of the aviation industry." Meanwhile, I'm on a safety board with the National Business Aircraft Association. I'm in Orlando, I think it was 2006 or 2007. There's people down there already shopping for helicopters and fixed-wing airplanes. I mean, aviation is a small business. They started making noises that they were shopping—like, we knew the same day.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Just to build on that, you were concerned with Ornge getting into the aviation business. Was there a cost savings associated with the previous plan versus Ornge's plan?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Well, let me put it this way. You had 13 more bases. You had an advanced care, 24-hour base in Dryden. You had more advanced care service. You had all these aircraft. I think Malcolm Bates in 2006 said there were 25 aircraft available at any given time, and they were only spending $97 million. That's a far cry from what's being spent today.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, that's excellent. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you have a minute and a half.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Just a few questions. Am I right in thinking that the Ontario Air Transport Association actually wrote to Minister Matthews, the present Minister of Health, in May 2011? That would be about a year now.

Mr. Bob Mackie: Yes, that's correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you remember the content of this letter?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Not precisely. It was the president of the association that sent it out. I've read the copy, but I've had—you'll have to bear with me. I've got about 180 hours worth of research just into the last few weeks. But I can actually give you a copy of that letter. I don't have it with me here today, but I can put my hands on it.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I would really appreciate if you could table it.

In your experience and knowledge—you know what's going on with Ornge right now. It has become a scandal. I take it you read the papers just like the rest of us and watch TV like the rest of us. Did you see this coming?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And when did you see this coming?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Well, I probably saw it coming three, maybe four, years ago. What we saw was a house of cards being built, and this house of cards had no way of sustaining itself. It was going to collapse. It didn't collapse exactly the way I thought it was going to, but it was not sustainable with what they were doing.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Could you tell me some of the pieces of the house of cards that you knew about?

Mr. Bob Mackie: Well, the fact of the matter is—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left.

Mr. Bob Mackie: —and I think the previous person mentioned it, unfortunately you have, again, an aviation company being run by people who didn't know an awful lot about aviation.

It was also obvious because as time went on—we see on September 16, 2007, that he's starting a for-profit company. As a matter of fact, I was in a meeting with Ornge in Thunder Bay. The operators were there that have been called by Ornge. They had their counsel there.

They had the head of the MAC at the time, which was Dr. Bruce Sawadsky, there, along with Rick Potter.

It came up in the meeting—I forget how, but they were trying to say, “We want all this information. We want to work with you.” And I asked them, “What about 878”—I forgot the number now—“Canada Inc.? What's this?” And they had no idea. The counsel had no idea. So this was the for-profit company that you guys just incorporated a few months ago, okay? It's going to be Ornge Air, because we know that you've applied for an operating certificate. We know that you've applied to the Canadian Transportation Agency for an operating licence. This is all public knowledge.

So it was like they could go about and do whatever they wanted, with no oversight and no accountability to anyone. I actually laugh about this. Somebody just yesterday said, “How is that?” My answer to them, as simplistic as it is—I said, “You see it's a nice blue sky out there? They could walk into the room and tell you that that's a purple sky and you were expected to believe it. It was their way or no way.”

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for your testimony today. We appreciate you coming.

A couple of items before the committee wraps up. Next week on the 25th, I'm informed by the clerk, we have plenty of people to ask to come before the committee from our existing list, so the clerk is going to work on lining those people up. We would start at 8:30 a.m. on Wednesday so that we have some time to deal with the motions etc. I anticipate a subcommittee meeting to look at future witnesses as well. The two people we missed today, Tim Shortill and Barry McLellan, will be scheduled as the first two people on Wednesday.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do we have time for me to bring forward two motions? They're just witnesses that I'd like to have called.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We have a number of them. You can table them with the committee and we will deal with those next Wednesday.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. I'll do that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. This committee is recessed.

The committee adjourned at 1450.

*The committee met at 0830 in room 151.*SPECIAL REPORT, AUDITOR GENERAL:
ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE
AND RELATED SERVICES

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'll call this meeting to order. We do need to go in camera to discuss a couple of issues that have come up, to begin with.

The committee continued in closed session from 0830 to 0900.

ORNGE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll start this morning, then, with our first presenter, Barry McLellan, board member of Ornge. Thank you very much for being so understanding, having been bumped twice from presenting. We appreciate you coming in this morning and changing your schedule.

Just to confirm, you've received the letter about information of a witness testifying before the committee?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I did.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Our clerk has an oath for you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): There's a Bible on the witness table there for you.

Mr. McLellan, do you solemnly swear that the evidence that you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I do so swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. You have five minutes for an opening statement, and then we'll go to the three parties for questioning.

Dr. Barry McLellan: I appreciate having been provided with the opportunity to make an opening statement. In fact, I do not have a statement this morning. I feel that the best use of time is to provide as much time as possible for questions and me to be able to advance the process.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's fine. We'll split the time amongst the three parties. We'll start with the official opposition, and you have 10 minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you for being here. At the outset, let me thank you for taking on a huge challenge.

As someone with an extensive background in the medical field and health care delivery, I'm sure that you haven't taken on this responsibility lightly. You are the president and CEO of a major hospital?

Dr. Barry McLellan: That's correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand that you're getting paid approximately $700,000 for that responsibility. Is that right?

Dr. Barry McLellan: That's correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: What is the operating budget of your hospital, and what is the total staff complement there?

Dr. Barry McLellan: The total operating budget inclusive of all sources, including research, would be just over $850 million per year. We have just over 10,000 staff, including part-timers, and that does not include the medical staff or volunteers.

Mr. Frank Klees: What is the operating budget for Ornge, and what is the total staff complement there?

Dr. Barry McLellan: The total operating budget is in the range of $150 million. I actually don't know the current full-time staff complement, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Approximately?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The Auditor General has comments on it.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I think it's about 400 people, Mr. Klees, if that helps.

Dr. Barry McLellan: I was going to say "just short of that," but I'm sure it's in that zone, Mr. McCarter.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Thank you. So when you compare, Mr. McLellan, your pay and the scope of your responsibilities to the $1.4 million received by Dr. Mazza and the comparative 10,000 staff to some 400, how would you describe the decision of the previous board in approving that pay package for Dr. Mazza?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I'm not sure I can really comment on the decision-making of others. It is fair to say that that is a significant salary compared to others in comparable positions, Mr. Klees. I was not party to any of that discussion. I'm not sure exactly what discussion did or did not take place, but it has been pointed out, and I don't disagree, that that is a very large salary.

Mr. Frank Klees: Would you have voted in favour of supporting that compensation package if you were on the board at that time?

Dr. Barry McLellan: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. McLellan, I understand that in addition to the typical responsibilities that come with directorships, you've also taken on the task of heading up a committee to address patient safety issues at Ornge, strengthening the on-scene process, resolving the medical interior issues of the helicopters and also conducting a review of all of the policies. That's what was reported. Can you confirm that? Is that the task that you've taken on as a director?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I am the chair of the quality committee, Mr. Klees. Originally, it was called the quality of care committee, but with the new performance agreement it will be changing to the quality committee. In that position, as a director at Ornge, as a board member, we have oversight for quality issues. That does include the medical interior issue. It includes many other quality issues as well.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's a huge undertaking. How much of your time is actually being taken up with that ominous task?

Dr. Barry McLellan: Do you know, it's quite variable week to week, as you might expect. It is not an insignificant amount of time. I would say that in a week it could be as much as 15 to 20 hours, and then other weeks it is less.

Mr. Frank Klees: You are familiar, obviously, with the Auditor General's report. You've seen some of the very specific references to the concerns about quality of care and response time. You are familiar with the Auditor General's specific reference to the fact that over 2009-10, in that particular year, some 20 incidents were reported back to the board. Some of those involved the deaths of the patients. Obviously quality care and quality and service delivery are a concern.

What are you doing in your capacity to reach down into the front lines? Whether it's paramedics or whether it's people in the dispatch area, whether it's pilots who have been very frustrated, based on information that we're getting—certainly members of this committee have been getting feedback from that front line in terms of the inability that they have to actually get the job done. What are you doing to reach out to those front-line people to get their input into what went wrong and what needs to be done to restore confidence in that service?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I'm going to address the specific aspects around what we are doing. I just have to indicate that I've no reason to question the specific dates that you gave in the Auditor General's report or the numbers, but without having the report in front of me—I'm not suggesting you want me to validate those; I'm unable to do so without the report in front of me.

Mr. Frank Klees: I trust the Auditor General.

Dr. Barry McLellan: I think it was context, and you're more interested as to what we're actually doing.

Mr. Frank Klees: Right.

Dr. Barry McLellan: The quality committee has identified three major issues for management to focus on, and the reason that we have chosen three and the specific issues relate to priority and the fact that there are other quality issues that may be of concern, but we want to ensure that they're addressed in a way that we can make progress around individual areas and not as management to take on too much, which would not be in the best interests of patient care.

The three areas that we have identified through our committee for major initial focus include staffing—and staffing relates specifically to critical care paramedics and advanced care paramedics. We are concerned that we are not fully staffed. This is particularly of note in north-eastern Ontario and northwestern Ontario. As a result of this, there are certain calls where we don't have the appropriate level of paramedic in order to provide optimum care. That staffing issue is the number one quality priority.

I don't want to suggest that pilot staffing is not also an issue, but the major concern is the staffing as it relates to paramedics. That's number one.

Number two is the interior issue. You mentioned that earlier, Mr. Klees, specifically as it relates to the AW139.

The third is the quality of information that's being collected around individual calls, and I'll even extend that to certain calls where Ornge is unable to respond. I can indicate that there's even a greater concern beyond that, because we believe that there may be circumstances where hospitals are not even putting a call in to Ornge because of previous experience where Ornge has been unable to respond.

Those are the three areas where we are asking management to focus their initial attention.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to just spend a little bit of time on the interior design. I had a discussion with Mr. McKerlie when he was here about that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees, you have about a minute left.

Mr. Frank Klees: Time flies. Let me just put it this way. There's a medical director at Ornge today: Dr. Sawadsky. My understanding is that it was actually Dr. Sawadsky who was the medical director and had responsibility for oversight. One of those issues of oversight was the medical interiors; that he signed off on those medical interiors. I was told that as the medical director he had not even been inside one of these helicopters to determine the appropriateness of it, yet he signed off. I questioned why Dr. Sawadsky, with that background and with that record, continues to be the medical director. Mr. McKerlie said, "Well, he's doing a good job." I don't know that that was a good job.

Could you just very briefly comment on the role that Dr. Sawadsky had in approving those interiors and whether, in your opinion, Dr. Sawadsky, keeping in mind that your role is to restore confidence at Ornge, should remain in that position?

Dr. Barry McLellan: There may be an opportunity from others who are asking questions to address what we're doing about the medical interiors. The reason I raise that, Mr. Klees, is that as a board member who was appointed at the end of January, we're focusing on the go-forward. So I'm not really in a position to comment on what took place prior to that, the decision-making, but what I would say is that for all management—that would include Dr. Sawadsky in his role as chief of staff—what is most important is that they're able to function with the appropriate governance model in place, which we believe now is in place. We have discussed this with Mr. McKerlie, and we believe that we do have appropriate management staff in place now with an appropriate governance model to be dealing with the work that needs to be done now and going forward. I've not heard otherwise from Mr. McKerlie in his role as interim CEO.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. If we can move to the NDP; who would—Jagmeet?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure. Thank you, and good morning. I just want to start off with some areas. You've addressed the three areas of concern: staffing, interior issues and the quality of information that, I guess, is received regarding the calls. I just want to go into some more detail: exactly, if you could summarize a more expansive list of what was actually wrong with Ornge. I understand these are the three areas that you're narrowing in on, because it's hard to narrow in on everything, but what were—if you can give me a little bit of a list—some of the issues that were at Ornge when you took over as one of the members of the board?

Dr. Barry McLellan: If I could just clarify, this would be specifically around quality-of-care delivery, Mr. Singh?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes. Sorry, I should have clarified: the delivery of the care and the quality of that care.

Dr. Barry McLellan: I'll give some context, and then I'll try and answer your question with respect to other matters that may be in front of the board. It is absolutely critical in a province like Ontario that we do have an aeromedical transport system. We have great distances between organizations. We have the need, in order to get patients directly from scenes to trauma units, and it's absolutely essential.

We do have some very good paramedics and pilots who are doing excellent work each and every day. From the board perspective, we wanted to ensure that there was oversight for all aspects of quality of care. One of the early questions was: Did we have appropriate information coming forward in a timely fashion in order to appropriately assure ourselves that high-quality care was being delivered? I've mentioned the quality of information. That deals with the timeliness of information being brought forward to the board as well.

Around individual incidents, reporting of incidents: As best as we can tell, information is being brought forward to the board through critical incident and sentinel incident reporting. We do have issues with respect to, as I've indicated, the staffing, interiors, and the overall quality and timeliness of information. Otherwise, we're really getting information sent to us from management about other individual issues. I'm more than happy to address any of them. There's not a specific list beyond those top three that we're monitoring. I would indicate that we are comforted by the new performance agreement that in the schedules lists many different areas that will be monitored going forward. There's nothing specific in those areas that I wanted to flag for you this morning, Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's fine, then. I'm just going to ask you some questions on hiring, and then I'll pass it over to my colleague. With respect to hiring, who hired you for your position at Ornge, or who was involved in your appointment as a member of the board?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I was contacted by the deputy minister, Saâd Rafi.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, and was it your understanding that Minister Matthews had some input in that?

Dr. Barry McLellan: My understanding is that the minister did have input into that, yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, and did she contact you directly herself, as well?

Dr. Barry McLellan: Prior to the board having its first meeting, I was contacted by Minister Matthews, but I can't say that that related to the decision-making process.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, and just with respect to oversight, when you took over or when you were involved, the new performance agreement was not even contemplated yet. You still had the ability to oversee what was going on at Ornge, as a board member, and to review the quality of care and to assess that. Is that correct?

Dr. Barry McLellan: Yes, just as—if I was to use a comparable situation—the board at my hospital, through the quality of care committee, receives information from management on quality, yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. I'll pass it over.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you for coming. It's a pleasure to see you.

I wanted to know: Right now, when the board meets, I take it that you keep minutes of those meetings?

Dr. Barry McLellan: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: When the board needs to meet in camera, do you keep minutes of the in-camera meetings?

Dr. Barry McLellan: There is some recording of in-camera discussions, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. When the previous board used to meet, did they also keep minutes?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I have not gone back and looked at any minutes of the previous board meetings.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. The secretary who keeps minutes—is it the same one who used to keep minutes before?

Dr. Barry McLellan: No, it is a new secretary who is keeping minutes now.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Since the new board has been put in place, have you reported back to the Ministry of Health?

Dr. Barry McLellan: The board chair has had discussions with both the minister and the deputy following our board meetings. I'm not clear as to exactly what has been communicated.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. It's not a function of the board to make sure that a reporting relationship is done back to the ministry?

Dr. Barry McLellan: There are regular communications between the board chair on behalf of the board. I'm just not party to those communications, so I don't know exactly what has been communicated.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. You know that your hospital is now under FOI, freedom of access to information, since January of this year, as is—

Dr. Barry McLellan: Yes, I'm aware of that.

M^{me} France Gélinas:—every hospital in Ontario. Ornge is not. Would you allow freedom of access to information for information that is presently at Ornge, or is this a discussion that you would be willing to bring to the board?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I'm not in a position to respond on behalf of the board, related to your question. I think you asked what my position would be on that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Correct.

Dr. Barry McLellan: That's a matter that has not yet been discussed at the board; it's a matter that could be discussed at the board. The decision about how one would respond to requests for information is different than what would otherwise be a legislative decision as to whether Ornge would be included or not.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You've been in trauma care for a long time, and you've had to deal with transport of trauma patients to your hospital certainly for some time now. You've mentioned, when answering my colleagues, that some hospitals are reluctant to call Ornge because of previous dealings with the air ambulance. Are they reluctant because the dealings were not positive?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I have only heard anecdotally—so that does need to be qualified—that some hospitals, particularly in northwestern Ontario, have not been calling Ornge for certain circumstances because, in previous times, Ornge was unable to respond. That's something that we want to understand better, and the way to better understand that is to go out and to speak with those hospitals, to actually survey them, and that is something that will be done in the future. But I have to indicate that the concern we have is based on anecdotal information only.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

I note that your hospital, Sunnybrook, was interested in leveraging some of its knowledge, skills etc. abroad. Is this something that you have pursued?

Dr. Barry McLellan: Yes, we are continuing to pursue international opportunities.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Had you ever pursued any of those international opportunities with Ornge?

Dr. Barry McLellan: In fact—and there's maybe a bit of context for this—as the country's largest trauma centre, and first trauma centre, much of what we are looking at around international opportunities focuses on trauma. As such, the individuals that we're meeting with are very interested in the entire system of trauma, which includes aeromedical transport. So we did have discussions with Ornge, in previous years, about how we may be able to work together on some of those international opportunities. Nothing has come of that, but we did have discussions with Ornge.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And were those discussions regarding Brazil and Kazakhstan, or—

Dr. Barry McLellan: Those are the two specific examples that I'm aware of, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But nothing came to fruition. At the time, when you were looking at exporting Ontario skills and working with Ornge to bring a package of trauma expertise, do you know which branch of Ornge you were dealing with?

Dr. Barry McLellan: No. We were just dealing at a general level with Ornge at the time. If there were specific discussions between our lead for international work with any specific division, I wasn't aware of that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. It's now time for the government to ask the questions. Who would like to ask? Reza, go ahead.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Thank you, Dr. McLellan, for taking the time and appearing before this committee. Dr. McLellan, patient safety and public safety are very important for us, as members of the Ontario Legislature as well as government, on this side. I'm sure it's very important to you as well, as a doctor, as CEO of Sunnybrook Hospital and also as a member of the board of Ornge. Since your appointment to the board of Ornge about three months ago, could you explain to us what immediate steps you have taken and the board has taken to address patient safety as it relates to Ornge's operations?

Dr. Barry McLellan: Right. One of the first important steps was the creation of a quality committee, and we used the framework of the Excellent Care for All Act, as it relates to hospitals, in order to establish that committee. That led to reporting between management and the quality-of-care committee. In my role as chairing that committee, I had meetings with management in order to deal with the same type of reporting as exists in our hospital between our quality-of-care committee and our board—so, between management and quality-of-care committee, quality-of-care committee and the board. From my perspective, that was the logical oversight model and the logical reporting through to the board itself.

As I indicated in an answer to one of Mr. Klees's questions, we prioritized what we felt management should be focusing on initially. Importantly, when one is dealing with matters of quality of care, you need to have a trusting relationship between management and the board, so that one is sure that incidents of concern are being reported through and that if there are concerns on the part of management, they're clearly brought forward to the board. Much of our work has been developing those relationships, getting to know those who are involved in monitoring and reporting on care, so that we can be confident that any issues of concern are being made available to the board.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you, Dr. McLellan. Dr. McLellan, there has been some discussion in the past that because of a certain design flaw on these helicopters, the paramedics weren't able to conduct CPR on patients when they took them to the helicopters. Has this been addressed in the past, this problem, this issue?

Dr. Barry McLellan: This was a significant concern, and it had to do with the height of the stretcher in the interior of the helicopter and the ability of paramedics to access and treat a patient, which would include not only CPR but perhaps advanced airway management, intubation, other procedures.

Now, there are really what I'll describe as three phases around dealing with the interior issue. The first was to ensure that patient transport was going to be safe until we dealt with a longer-term solution. That resulted in a change in transport position for certain patients, and that was dealt with quite quickly, once the concern was brought to the attention of the board and to management.

The second phase is that by changing the pedestal design, we are able to have to have transport which is beyond what I would call the workaround that I've described for safe transport until we actually look at a formal redesign of the interior, which I'll call the longer term or phase 3. We're just in the process now of implementing phase 2.

I had a recent meeting of the quality of care committee held at the Toronto Island base so that we could see what was being proposed. I had a chance to see it, review it with paramedics and the medical leadership, and it is a very logical step in the minds of those who are treating patients, as well as the board.

The third will be a longer-term redesign of the interior. That's going to involve looking at what other systems and jurisdictions are doing, and that will likely go on for many more months.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you very much, Dr. McLellan. There have been reports that at Ornge there were some issues in relation to poor dispatching. Has this issue been addressed in terms of patient safety since you have been appointed to the board?

Dr. Barry McLellan: There are a number of aspects to the dispatch of an aircraft. It includes getting good-quality information early on, processing that information and then having the aircraft dispatched. All of those phases are being looked at. Some of it requires new technology, new software information around collecting information on the calls and processing it. Some of that is still being worked on, but all of those individual components are currently being addressed.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you. There have also been reports, Dr. McLellan, that at Ornge there was a shortage of paramedics, as well as the shortage of pilots. As a result of one shortage of paramedics, then patients couldn't receive the necessary care, and because of the shortage of pilots for shift work, some of the helicopters couldn't be in service. Have these issues been addressed since the three past months you have been appointed to the board?

Dr. Barry McLellan: They are being addressed. There still is an overall shortage of pilots. There still is a shortage of critical care and advanced-care paramedics. Management is working to address both the pilot and the paramedic staffing issue. It is not addressed yet, but they are being addressed.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you again, Dr. McLellan. Would you please tell us about your medium- and long-term strategies at Ornge to address the issues which already exist, and also the future planning and strategies for the improvement of the service of Ornge?

Dr. Barry McLellan: Right. Ultimately, you would like a system where you have fully staffed aircraft who can respond to calls in a timely fashion, recognizing that there are still times down the road when, as a result of weather or an aircraft already being involved with a call, there will be challenges in being able to deal with high-quality transport for each and every circumstance. It doesn't mean that good quality can't be provided, but there are certain circumstances where it's going to take longer to get an aircraft to a patient. One has to accept that in this system, and it's no different than that in other systems.

We're trying to put together a comprehensive, quality monitoring process in place which would parallel that of what exists in a hospital environment, and that is a medium- to longer-term strategy because we don't have all of the building blocks currently in place, but we have strategies in place to deal with them all.

Some of the issues that I've addressed, and I'll use the staffing issue around paramedics: That's going to take more than a year in order to address. That takes time to train paramedics, to get the right level of staffing. So some of those are longer-term strategies, but we do have a plan and working with management, and if I was to summarize, it would be to have the same type of quality oversight for Ornge as what exists in a hospital, such as Sunnybrook.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you have 30 seconds left.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you. Dr. McLellan, I understand that you were a member of the coroner's review of air ambulance services some years ago. Could you briefly tell us the outcome of that review?

Dr. Barry McLellan: I was, in fact, the chief coroner. I did not actually lead a review myself, as chief coroner, into air ambulance services. The coroner's office may have done so, over time. I did not actually lead that investigation.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. Thank you for coming in today. We appreciate it.

Dr. Barry McLellan: Thank you.

MINISTRY OF FINANCE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our next witness is Tim Shortill, chief of staff, Ministry of Finance. Again, Tim, thank you for coming today. I know you've twice been bumped, so I appreciate you being flexible.

Mr. Tim Shortill: No problem.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have received the letter for those presenting to the committee?

Mr. Tim Shortill: Yes, I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, thank you. Our clerk has an oath for you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Shortill, if you could just raise your hand, please. Do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have five minutes for a presentation.

Mr. Tim Shortill: Thank you, Chair, committee members. Mr. Auditor General, nice to see you. Good morning. My name is Tim Shortill, and I'm the chief of staff to the Minister of Finance.

I thought I'd open with a brief description of my background. I started at Queen's Park with MPP Gerard Kennedy in 2002. Then in November 2003, I became the executive assistant to MPP Linda Jeffrey. After a year with Ms. Jeffrey, I moved to municipal affairs and housing, to be a senior policy adviser to Minister John Gerretsen, in December 2004.

In April 2006, I moved to the Ministry of Tourism, as a senior adviser to Minister Jim Bradley. In December 2007, the minister asked me to be his chief of staff, a role I served in until January 2010, when I moved to my present role with Minister Dwight Duncan.

Having been called here, my involvement likely stems from media reports of having been copied on a letter from Ornge to the Minister of Health in January 2011. I do not recall receiving that letter, and am only aware of the letter through those media reports that state I was copied. I did not read the letter and do not currently have a copy of it. I've had no other contact, either through meetings, email or phone calls, with Ornge.

I did, however, participate in a meeting in the fall of 2010 with Mr. Alfred Apps, formerly of Fasken Martineau, who was representing Ornge. It was a brief meeting, lasting no more than a half-hour. The purpose of this meeting, as I recall, was a presentation from Mr. Apps suggesting Ornge was a success story that the government should promote. This meeting occurred during the preparation of the fall economic statement in 2010, and since Ornge was not part of the fall statement, I took no follow-up action after that meeting or at any point since. I do not recall any discussion at that meeting of any of the issues that the Auditor General raised in his report.

With that, I'm pleased to answer any questions that the committee may have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. It's time for the NDP to go first. Who would like to ask questions?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure, I'll start.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you. Good morning, sir.

Mr. Tim Shortill: Good morning.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just building on that last point that you raised, you indicated that Alfred Apps met with you and had a presentation on Ornge and that it was a success story. Is that correct?

Mr. Tim Shortill: Those were his words, yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Those were his words. So his presentation on Ornge, I take it, in terms of the success story and why it was a success—it was the layout, or the way in which Ornge was organized, with a number of subsidiary for-profit companies blended with the ostensibly public company. Is that correct?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I don't have a perfect recollection of the details of the meeting. I do not recall any discussion of any subsidiaries or the organizational makeup. My brief recollection of that meeting was, as I stated, Mr. Apps felt that Ornge was a success story and encouraged the government to promote that. But with respect to the specifics that you asked, no, I don't have any recollection of a discussion of the organizational makeup of Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure, thank you. And if you could say very briefly, what was he indicating to you, if you can recall, that was the success portion of Ornge? What was he suggesting?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I don't have perfect recollection of that. I think he felt that the provision of service that Ornge was providing was a success. But in terms of what he felt met the definition of "success," I think, is a question better put to him, as I don't have perfect recall on that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Certainly—not what he was thinking, but what you recall he was telling you, is all I—

Mr. Tim Shortill: Yeah, it had to do with the provision of service, in that Ornge, in his words, was a success in that respect. Like I said, I don't have any recollection of the organizational makeup.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's fine. Thank you.

I'm just going to move on to, just in general, oversight that your ministry is involved with.

Mr. Tim Shortill: Sure.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Your ministry is obviously very involved with the sunshine list. That's a component of—

Mr. Tim Shortill: I don't know if I'd say "very involved." The tradition that has grown over the years is that the Ministry of Finance is responsible for compiling the information that is gathered through the requirements of the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act. The ministry then makes that compiled information available both on the ministry website as well as in hard copy. It's possible we even produce a CD copy—I'm not aware—but definitely the website and a printed version.

Aside from being responsible for those within the ministry that fall within the requirements of the sunshine list, the Ministry of Finance's responsibility doesn't extend any farther than simply compiling the information.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. In compiling that information, one of the purposes of compiling that information and presenting it to the public is to offer some transparency to Ontarians about where public money is being spent. That's essentially the purpose. Would you agree?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I won't propose to give an opinion on the purpose—that was for the members of the Legislature when the bill was passed—but I don't see any reason to disagree with that statement.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. In doing so, would you agree with me, then, that the fact that a publicly funded institution like Ornge, which, for all intents and purposes, was primarily 99% publicly financed—that the fact that someone like the executive and other members of that organization did not disclose their salary, were not a part of the public salary disclosure—was that something that raised any concerns in your ministry or to you?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I'm not aware if it raised any concerns within the ministry. With respect to myself, I'm not sure I'm best qualified to opine on whether or not the requirements or someone meeting those requirements is a concern. I think that is a question that's best put to the responsible ministry from within which Ornge reports.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. So your opinion would be that the Ministry of Health, being the ministry that's directly involved with Ornge, would have been the ministry that should have been concerned about the salary, as opposed to the Ministry of Finance?

Mr. Tim Shortill: No, I wouldn't say that's my opinion. I would say, my opinion is that your question is best put to them.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Was there an impediment to receiving information from Ornge because of the nature of it being a federally incorporated charity or because of its charity status?

Mr. Tim Shortill: That's a question that simply is beyond my expertise and probably best put to ministry officials. I'm not aware of any impediment myself.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: My last question, before I pass it over to my colleague, is just regarding freedom-of-information applications or access-to-information requests. Did you receive or did your ministry receive any notification that there were a number of freedom-of-information applications or access-to-information requests made in 2010 regarding the salary of executives at Ornge, specifically Mr. Mazza?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I'm not aware, but to be perfectly honest the way the FOI system works is that there's a division within the ministry that processes those, so I think that type of question is probably better put to those that administer the FOI process. I'm simply too far removed from that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And who are those people?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I don't actually know them by name, but there is a division. Each ministry has an FOI coordinator, and it would be that person who would have a better understanding of what FOI requests were made and how they were administered.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Last question, following up on that: Who do you think would be the best FOI coordinator for this particular issue? Would it be the Ministry of Finance or the Ministry of Health?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I don't know. It all depends on your specific question and where the initial request went to. Sometimes requests are passed from ministry to ministry, depending on who actually holds the records. In this case, I'm not actually sure where the records reside.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute and a half left.

M^{me} France Gélinas: A minute and a half? Oh, well. Okay.

So you had a 30-minute meeting with Mr. Apps in the fall of 2010. Who else attended that meeting?

Mr. Tim Shortill: It was Mr. Apps, myself and Alex Mazer from my office, who's my director of policy. My recollection is that it was just the three of us. It was about a half-hour, but I won't say exactly 30 minutes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you recall where that meeting took place?

Mr. Tim Shortill: Sure. It took place in my office, which is the seventh floor of the Frost south building.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How often do you meet with law firms that represent an agency of the government without having that agency present?

Mr. Tim Shortill: Oh, I don't know how many times I have—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, so go back, from today back. When was the last time you had in your office—like yesterday, the week before, the month before. When was the last time you met with just a lawyer representing a transfer payment agency of the government?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I have no recollection of that. I mean, it was a significant number of people in the course of the year. I'm not saying I haven't, but I simply don't have any recollection of when the last time—

M^{me} France Gélinas: But certainly not last week, yesterday or this month. It's not something—

Mr. Tim Shortill: I can say definitively it was not yesterday.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. You don't, on a regular basis, meet with a lawyer and nobody else. Who had set up the meeting?

Mr. Tim Shortill: My recollection is that Mr. Apps or someone from his office requested the meeting. It was certainly not my initiative.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Was the meeting requested with the minister, and you subbed in, or was the meeting requested of you?

Mr. Tim Shortill: No. As I remember, the meeting was a request of me. So whether or not it came to me directly or to my assistant, I can't remember, but the request was to meet with me directly.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you are out of time, I'm afraid.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Could you look back, through your assistant, to find that out, please?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I'll endeavour to do that and provide it to the clerk.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. And if we can move to the government for questioning. Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: I have five questions. I just want to confirm—ask you: In your role as chief of staff, finance, did you have any direct responsibility with respect to Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care health policy?

Mr. Tim Shortill: No, I do not have any direct responsibility for health care policy. Within my office, there is a health care adviser, but on a day-to-day basis, I do not get directly involved in health care policy.

Mr. David Zimmer: And again, as chief of staff, finance, can you comment on what your level of engagement, direct or indirect, was with the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care?

Mr. Tim Shortill: Just on an overall basis?

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes, as opposed to direct responsibility. What was your level of engagement with issues coming up in the Ministry of Health?

Mr. Tim Shortill: Sure. I don't so much have direct engagement with the Ministry of Health on issue management. I would say that my level of engagement with the Ministry of Health on a yearly basis is probably most acute during the budget formation process, simply given the size of the Ministry of Health's budget. I would still, even in that case, characterize my role as indirect involvement with the Ministry of Health during the formation of their budget process, but I would say, on a yearly basis, that is the extent of my involvement.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thirdly, again, as chief of staff, finance, did you have any direct or indirect engagement with Ornge?

Mr. Tim Shortill: No, I had no direct engagement, other than the meeting with Mr. Apps, which could be characterized as indirect engagement. To the best of my recollection, that's the only time I've had any engagement with Ornge.

Mr. David Zimmer: With respect to the meeting with Mr. Apps in the fall of 2010, it lasted about half an hour?

Mr. Tim Shortill: That's my recollection.

Mr. David Zimmer: So from your point of view, at the end of the 30-minute meeting, what was the end result of that meeting?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I would say there was actually no result of that meeting. The request that Mr. Apps had or the opinion that he had was not being contemplated for the fall economic statement.

The preparation of the fall economic statement is a consuming process, and to the best of my ability, I try to prioritize my time. Because we had no contemplation of any mention or involvement of Ornge in the fall economic statement, I simply took no follow-up action, other than, probably, a thank you to Mr. Apps. But I never actioned anything or took any follow-up steps after that meeting.

Mr. David Zimmer: I want to come to this issue that's come up recently about the $275-million bond issue. Again, in your capacity as chief of staff to the Minister of Finance, perhaps you can answer this. It's been raised by opposition parties that with respect to the $275-million bond, the province, if you will, is somehow on the hook should the bondholders find themselves in a position of not getting paid back. Can you comment on that issue?

Mr. Tim Shortill: Sure. I'll comment to the best of my ability. I'm not, by any means, an expert in securities policy. I know that the secretary of cabinet was before the committee last week and asked was these similar questions. He is in a far better position than I to answer those questions, and I simply have no additional information other than what Mr. Wallace provided.

The information that has been provided to me by ministry officials and reiterated both by Secretary Wallace and Minister Duncan is that the province had no incremental risk to its debt by this bond issue of Ornge. Beyond that, I simply do not have the expertise to offer up any more insight or opinion on this matter.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you. My last question: Coming back to the meeting with Mr. Apps in the fall of 2010, after that meeting, as you said, there was no take-up on your part as chief of staff or by the minister/ministry. Was there any further contact with Mr. Apps to follow up on his initial idea of including something in the fall economic statement with respect to Ornge?

Mr. Tim Shortill: To be clear, he wasn't requesting any mention in the fall economic statement; he was simply requesting, I guess, some mention at some point by the government. But to answer your specific question: No, I had no follow-up, no further contact. I'm not aware that my assistant did either. It was, so to say, the last of it.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Thank you, Mr. Shortill.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll move to the opposition. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you very much. Can you tell me, Mr. Shortill: When did the Ontario air ambulance file first come to your attention?

Mr. Tim Shortill: Sure. It probably first came to my attention, frankly, through media reports. So it would be tough for me to pinpoint a time frame, but I think it's fair to say, when the media started to generate more and more stories, whenever that time period was, probably within the last six months to a year, that's when it came to my attention.

Mr. Frank Klees: When was that 30-minute meeting that you had with Mr. Apps?

Mr. Tim Shortill: My recollection is, it was during the preparation of the fall economic statement of 2010. We deliver this statement in November. It would have been unlikely for me to have taken a meeting in November, so close to the statement. We generally begin work in early September. So, if I had to pinpoint a time frame, I would say September or October of 2010.

Mr. Frank Klees: Media reports about Ornge didn't happen until the end of 2011.

Mr. Tim Shortill: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: You just said that you first became aware of Ornge when you read about it in the media.

Mr. Tim Shortill: Sure. I was differentiating between Ornge as an organization and the issues that the Auditor General's report brought to light. I did not become aware of the issues until the media started reporting it. Ornge, as an entity, as a provider of air ambulance service—I couldn't give you a time frame, but probably for a few years I've been aware of its existence.

Mr. Frank Klees: In an email dated December 7, 2010, written by Mr. Apps to Jamison Steeve, he asks specifically that you and—

Mr. David Zimmer: Is that the—

Mr. Frank Klees: It is. You have it, yes. He asked specifically that he, Mr. Steeve, invite you to attend a briefing. Did Mr. Steeve ever follow through on that? Did you get invited to that meeting?

Mr. Tim Shortill: No. I'm not aware of the email. I'm not aware of having been suggested to appear at any meeting, nor did I appear at any meeting.

Mr. Frank Klees: The purpose of that meeting was pretty substantive. It was a major undertaking on the part of Ornge and had some significant implications, as Mr. Apps said in that email, to the broader government. Specifically, he mentioned—

Mr. David Zimmer: Just a second. Mr. Shortill, did you have a chance to see the email?

Mr. Tim Shortill: No, I have not.

Mr. David Zimmer: In fairness to the witness, can somebody give him a copy?

Mr. Frank Klees: Fair enough. This is the email that Mr. Apps provided in his submission to the Integrity Commissioner when he was asserting that he wasn't lobbying.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Just a second, Mr. Klees. Do we have a copy of this email?

Mr. Frank Klees: Why don't I provide a copy of that here so that we don't have to waste any more time.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well.

Mr. Frank Klees: Here it is.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I think our clerk has it as well.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you have it as well?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Is this the one you're talking about?

Mr. Frank Klees: The December 7 one. No, this one.

Mr. Apps specifically referred to the fact that there would be significant impact, and it would be important for the Ministry of Finance to participate in that. I'm surprised that something like this, where the request was made directly to the chief of staff to the Premier asking that you attend something as far-reaching as this, number one, you were never contacted—or you say that you weren't; I'm not suggesting that you were—and that you wouldn't be present at a briefing like that. Does that surprise you at all?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I have no comment. I didn't—

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer, you don't have the floor. Please let the questioning continue.

Mr. David Zimmer: But this is a witness protection issue.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No. Continue, please.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, I think he should have a couple of minutes. It's a three-page memo, single-spaced. He's seeing it for the first time. All the memos have a context. He should have a chance to read that so he has a context—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): As I stated, you don't have the floor. I will ask our presenter: Please take the time you need to read it over and let me know if you have any concerns.

Mr. Tim Shortill: Sure.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm assuming, Chair, that—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll give the witness time, please.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, how much time do I have left?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two and a half minutes left.

Mr. Frank Klees: Is this encroaching on my time?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, it is.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, that's inappropriate.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. We'll stop the clock and allow him so you'll get your time.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm assuming you're stopping it retroactively.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Retroactively, yes. So you have four minutes.

Mr. Tim Shortill: I'm ready when you are, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. So my point simply was the fact that Mr. Steeve was specifically asked to invite you. You didn't get the invitation and so you know nothing about that meeting.

Mr. Tim Shortill: I have no comment.

Mr. Frank Klees: The 30-minute meeting that you had with Mr. Apps—you made reference, in responding to my colleague, that the request that Mr. Apps had of you was not being contemplated in the fall economic statement. So Mr. Apps came to see you with a specific request?

Mr. Tim Shortill: Yes. In answer to the member's question over here, I don't believe his request was any mention in the fall economic statement. That's not my recollection. It was just that government, at some point, should promote, in his words, the success story of Ornge. It just happened to occur—the meeting—during the preparation of the fall statement. Because, frankly, that was my priority at the time, and because we weren't contemplating any mention, I took no follow-up action.

Mr. Frank Klees: But look, he wasn't about to organize a meeting with the chief of staff to the Minister of Finance without having a specific purpose for that and a specific ask. And so the ask that he made of you in that meeting was what?

Mr. Tim Shortill: As I've mentioned, he felt Ornge was a success story and something the government should promote—no recollection of anything more specific or broader than that.

Mr. Frank Klees: So he came to you, representing Ornge, with a very specific request that the government of Ontario should promote the successes of Ornge. Is that correct?

Mr. Tim Shortill: That's my recollection, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Would you consider that lobbying?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I don't know. I think the question of whether or not that's lobbying is a question better put to someone who has more expertise in the definition of lobbying. I'm more used to lobbying being requests for funding, to be truthful, at the Ministry of Finance. So I won't say it is or it isn't. I'm probably not qualified to make that definition.

Mr. Frank Klees: You mentioned that Alex Mazer was attending that meeting. He is your assistant?

Mr. Tim Shortill: He's the minister's director of policy.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm assuming that both of you, or either one of you, kept notes of that meeting. Could I ask you to table those notes with the committee, please?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I've done a search; I have no notes of that meeting. I don't recall Mr. Apps providing any written paper either. If he did, I don't currently have those records. That's not unusual for me; I'm not an avid note taker. But in preparation for today's appearance, I did do a search of my records, and I simply don't have any. I'm more than willing to undertake a secondary search, though.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, if you would check with Mr. Mazer. It would be very, very odd for a chief of staff and someone of Mr. Mazer's capacity that no notes are taken at a meeting, so—

Mr. Tim Shortill: I don't think it's odd for me. As I mentioned, I'm not an avid note taker. I try as best I can to—

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm assuming Mr. Mazer probably is.

Mr. Tim Shortill: Pardon me?

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm assuming Mr. Mazer is, and—

Mr. Tim Shortill: I can only speak for myself.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. I would ask the clerk to follow up with you—

Mr. Tim Shortill: Absolutely.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're on your last minute, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. There are a number of other issues that I need to follow up with you, and we look forward to having you back.

Mr. Tim Shortill: Absolutely.

Mr. Frank Klees: One last question: Since that meeting, have there ever been any other occasions when Mr. Apps contacted you, spoke with you directly, regarding Ornge? And did you report to the minister on your meeting with Mr. Apps?

Mr. Tim Shortill: I don't recall discussing with the minister my meeting with Mr. Apps. That's not unusual either. I don't report to the minister all the meetings that I take. So I don't have any recollection of that, and it would not be unusual.

In answer to the first part of your question, I've had no contact with Mr. Apps since that meeting, to the best of my knowledge, through email or phone. I've had no contact with him in person since that meeting. In fact, the last time I saw him was here at committee last week.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you have—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. Mr. Klees, you can invite him back for another time, but you've used your time.

Thank you very much, Mr. Shortill, for coming for the committee; it's appreciated.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH AND LONG-TERM CARE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our next presenter is from the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care: Carole McKeogh, deputy director, legal services branch. Welcome. You have received the information for someone presenting to the committee?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk has an oath for you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Ms. McKeogh, if you could just raise your—thank you. Do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have up to five minutes for a presentation, and then there will be questions from the parties.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Good morning. My name is Carole McKeogh. Since 2003, I've been a deputy director with the legal services branch of the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care. I became involved in providing legal services for the ministry in connection with Ornge in January 2012. At that time, I was asked to prepare an amended performance agreement between the ministry and Ornge. This amended agreement was signed by both parties on March 19, 2012. I was also involved in the development of the proposed amendments to the Ambulance Act.

In my view, the amended performance agreement and the proposed legislation, if passed, provide a strong and effective response to address the concerns identified in the Auditor General's report on Ornge. I would like to speak to you briefly about these two initiatives.

The amended performance agreement is comprised of the following three elements: first, the technical material in the original agreement, signed in 2005, which had not changed and which was carried over into the amended performance agreement; second, the transfer payment agreement template, which was prepared by the Ministry of the Attorney General's commercial lawyers' group. The province of Ontario has many transfer payment arrangements across all its ministries. The template serves as a best practices document that is adaptable to different ministries and projects. The third component of the amended performance agreement consists of additional elements which are specific to Ornge and which I will outline briefly.

In response to the Auditor General's recommendations, the amended performance agreement contains additional key performance indicators and increased reporting requirements.

The amended agreement contains a statement of principles which Ornge must follow in providing its services. These principles include the requirement that Ornge's operations will support exclusively the provision of air ambulance services on a not-for-profit basis. It contains a number of elements relating to quality improvement and patient relations, which mirror the requirements in the Excellent Care for All Act. This legislation currently applies to public hospitals. Its provisions are made applicable to Ornge through the amended performance agreement.

Under the amended agreement, a number of actions by Ornge require the ministry's prior approval. These include the purchase of real estate; incurring debt; the sale of assets, subject to a specified threshold; as well as any changes to Ornge's corporate structure.

Ornge is required to post a broad range of information on its website, including its complaints process, its quality improvement plan and its conflict-of-interest policies.

I have also been involved in the development of Bill 50, An Act to amend the Ambulance Act with respect to air ambulance services, which received first reading on March 21, 2012. The proposed legislation, if passed, would provide the province with many of the same powers for intervention in the public interest which currently exist for public hospitals under the Public Hospitals Act.

In my view, there is a useful comparison to be made between public hospitals and Ornge. Both hospitals and Ornge are non-profit corporations. They are both charities with volunteer boards. They both provide essential health services to patients and are funded almost entirely by the province.

However, in the case of public hospitals, the legislative framework includes the power to intervene in the governance of a hospital through the appointment of a hospital supervisor, who can assume all the powers of the board and the corporation. This is viewed as an extraordinary power of intervention which exists to protect the public interest. It is an important safeguard which has been included in the proposed legislation for Ornge.

However, it is important to note that it will not be possible for the province to exercise this power of intervention with respect to Ornge until it is continued as an Ontario corporation. Currently, Ornge is incorporated under federal legislation.

To conclude, the amended performance agreement and the proposed legislative changes were introduced in response to the issues at Ornge identified by the Auditor General. They were designed to increase Ornge's accountability and transparency, and to protect the public interest.

Thank you again for this opportunity to address you, and now I would be happy to take your questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We go to the government first. Mr. McNeely.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Thank you, Ms. McKeogh, for being here today. A lot of the information that I was seeking has come out in what you've presented, but I would just go over some of it. You obviously read the Ornge air ambulance and related services special report of March 2012. Would you just expand on what the major changes are in the performance agreement that we were presented here by the clerk on April 3, 2012? It seems to be quite a heavy document. What would be the three significant changes that have been made from the old agreement?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Well, I think the "principle" statement is very important. It sets out a number of principles and provides that Ornge shall perform its obligations under the agreement in accordance with them. Firstly, aviation safety and patient care are paramount. Ornge's operations will support exclusively the provision of air ambulance services and related services on a not-for-profit basis. Its operations will be transparent and accountable to Ontarians; full accountability for the use of public funds; public reporting on performance, measured according to the key performance indicators; and full commitment to quality improvement activities.

The amended agreement contains additional key performance indicators and increased reporting requirements. To enhance accountability, it requires more detailed reporting of financial and operational information in order to assess the quality and value of the service provided by Ornge, and it contains stronger audit and inspection powers to verify that information. Ornge's demonstrated ability or inability to meet the key performance indicators in the amended agreement is a factor in determining its funding.

As I mentioned, a number of provisions from the Excellent Care for All Act were included in the amended performance agreement, and these include a quality committee; patient satisfaction surveys; a patient relations process, including a patient complaints process and a patient advocate function; a declaration of values; annual quality improvement plans; and performance-based executive compensation. These are all taken from the Excellent Care for All Act, which currently applies to public hospitals.

Mr. Phil McNeely: I think that's good detail on the additional information that we're going to be getting. Certainly we're here because of the audit and inspection powers of the ministry, or that's my opinion. How are those being changed under the new agreement?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: The audit—under the 2005 performance agreement, the ministry was permitted to make on-site inspections only twice a year, and under the amended performance agreement, this has been changed to provide for inspections at any time throughout the year.

Mr. Phil McNeely: The position of taking on debt that occurred in the past—you mentioned that. What are the limits on that debt etc. that they can take on without ministry approval?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Any debt incurred—

Mr. Phil McNeely: Any debt?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Any debt—I just have to check the agreement briefly here, if you'll give me a minute. I think there's an exception for routine business transactions; for example, purchase of gasoline.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Was there a limit on that?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: No.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Okay. The important part, of course, is for the ministry to be able to scrutinize the budgetary performance, and that wasn't a strong part of the first agreement. Has that been strengthened a great deal?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yes, I think so. There are extensive budget requirements in connection with providing a proposed budget, having it reviewed by the ministry and approved by the ministry; financial reporting and operational reporting as well. The reporting requirements are quite extensive.

Mr. Phil McNeely: This proposed legislation to say that the laws governing ambulance in Ontario—you mentioned those in your first statements. What are the changes that will be coming into the air ambulance legislation that are important?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: As I mentioned, it imports a lot of the public interest safeguards which are found in the Public Hospitals Act currently and which apply to hospitals: the power for cabinet to appoint provincial representatives to the board of directors, and those provincial representatives will have all the powers of a board member; the power for cabinet to appoint special investigators and supervisor, as I mentioned in my opening comments. These actions are taken where cabinet considers it to be in the public interest, and the legislation contains the same public interest test, very broadly worded, that is found in the Public Hospitals Act.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Are you aware with the hospitals—how does this provincial investigator part work? How does that work with the hospitals? Has that been used in the past?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Those amendments to the Public Hospitals Act were introduced in 1981, and I think they've probably been used in the range of maybe 15 or 20 times since then. I'd be happy to provide that information, if the committee would like to have it.

When cabinet appoints an investigator, it's viewed, as I've mentioned, as an extraordinary power of intervention—only in the most serious circumstances where there are concerns about governance or financial management or quality of care. We had an example of it recently in the case of the Windsor Hôtel-Dieu Grace Hospital. It's a very effective mechanism.

Mr. Phil McNeely: So you're quite pleased that the new agreement, the new legislation, will put the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care in the proper position in being able to make sure what's happening is happening for the good of the people, the public of Ontario?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I think those are very important safeguards that are very appropriate in this case, yes.

Mr. Phil McNeely: I have no other questions. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left, Mr. McNeely. All finished? Okay, thank you.

We'll go to the opposition then and—

Mr. David Zimmer: Just one second. Thank you very much—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer, I haven't recognized you, but I'm happy to—

Mr. David Zimmer: I'm sorry.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: My apologies, Chair. Thank you, Mr. Klees, for the heads-up on the document. Presumably you're going to question the witness on the document, and it's just a partial document because the last sentence is, "I am not at all certain that...." and the rest of it's missing. So we need the—

Mr. Frank Klees: It's all I have.

Mr. David Zimmer: Through you, Chair, to counsel: If you're going to put a document—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): He can ask questions on this document and the email that—

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, I want to hear from the counsel on that. You can't put half a document to a person and ask them questions on it.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Would counsel like to respond?

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: It's for you to rule, not for me to—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. This is fine. Mr. Klees can ask questions on this. There's an email document beside you there, if you want to have a look.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll now go to the official opposition for questioning. Do you want to take some time to read that first?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Sure.

Mr. Frank Klees: Please, not on my time.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We may have to have the witness come back, but yes, I won't count your time. And I will use the same strategy for all people who—

Mr. David Zimmer: That's fine. Thank you.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, my first question relates only to the first paragraph of this email.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll give the witness a chance to read it and then we'll start.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yes, I'm fine.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ready?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You can go ahead.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Your role as the deputy director of legal services branch: You've held that position since 2003?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I have.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you see the email that I've put before you. Can you tell us who Mel Springman is?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Mel Springman was a senior lawyer of our branch and was with the branch for many years. He retired December 31, 2010.

Mr. Frank Klees: A respected individual, no doubt, within the ministry?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: You reported to him, did you?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: No. Mel was one of the counsel in our branch.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. The email that you're looking at is from Mel Springman and it is addressed to a number of people in the Ministry of Health. You are copied on it. He starts his email off by saying, and I'll read this into the record, "I continue to have serious concerns respecting the substance and tone of the MB-20." For those who aren't familiar, those are documents, submissions to cabinet for approval of a policy. "These concerns are a legacy and reflection of the concerns I expressed to you from the outset of this initiative, particularly in terms of successive decision documents and implementation documents."

The fourth paragraph down, he goes on to say, "Whatever one may think of the final recommendation in the MB-20 on air ambulance reform, for me the various incarnations of that document have consistently stood on rather flimsy, indeed sometimes misleading, grounds."

My question to you is: Receiving a document like this with an opinion from a senior lawyer in the ministry, what was your reaction when you read this?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I'm just looking at the date, because I don't recall this email particularly.

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Let the witness respond.

Mr. David Zimmer: —it's solicitor-client privilege. The letter is advice to the minister.

Mr. Frank Klees: It is not advice to the minister.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Please continue.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I think that's a good point, though. It is legal advice to ministry staff.

Mr. David Zimmer: It is, and counsel, I would like your advice on this as a member of committee. You've heard my objection to further comment—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll get comment from legal counsel, then, Mr. Zimmer.

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: As I previously indicated to the committee, with respect to solicitor-client privilege, it is within the rights of the committee to require a witness to answer a question, even if it requires them to divulge information that is solicitor-client privilege. However, solicitor-client privilege is an extremely important, fundamental legal principle in the Canadian legal system, and therefore, traditionally, legislative committees have kept in mind the importance of that legal principle in deciding whether or not to require a witness to answer questions that would require them to divulge privileged information.

Mr. David Zimmer: Does the witness have the right to decline to answer?

Ms. Catherine Beagan Flood: It is for the committee to decide whether to require the witness to answer.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, if I might?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: I am not asking for any specific comment relative to any of the details or recommendations of this email. I am asking the witness to simply provide her response to what she, as someone who was director of the legal services branch when she saw this—what her reaction was. I'm simply asking that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I would ask the witness, if you wish to discuss this in camera, we can go in camera, if you're not comfortable answering the question that Mr. Klees is asking.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I'm prepared to answer the question just in terms of my own reaction to this email. The people copied were Dianne Dougall, who was the legal director at the time; Janice Crawford, a deputy director; and myself, a deputy director. So he was copying, basically, the management team at the legal branch. Then other lawyers who were involved in the file—the email was addressed to his clients. I don't specifically remember this email. I do know that Mr. Springman had concerns about the MB-20 submission. I wasn't, however, directly involved in the file or providing legal advice for reviewing the MB-20 or anything like that. It was probably intended more as a heads-up that there was an issue.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Were you involved in the drafting of the original performance agreement?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I was not.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you review it at any time?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: In January 2012, when I was asked to prepare the amended version.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. You're familiar with article 15 of the original agreement, I'm sure. That is the article that provides suspension rights to the ministry. It gives the ministry the right to enter the premises and suspend the operations of Ornge if they feel that they have reason to do so. Can you tell me what the difference is between the current performance agreement and the original performance agreement with respect to those rights of the ministry to investigate and to suspend operations?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: They're identical.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. You're also familiar with legislation that provides the ministry the right to enter any medical facility. I believe it's under the alternative medical facilities act? Or help me with the actual name—

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Are you talking about the Independent Health Facilities Act?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, the Independent Health Facilities Act.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're on your last minute now, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: That act, if you could just confirm for me, gives the ministry the right to enter and actually to appoint a supervisor. Is that correct?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Now, I'm sorry, I don't know that offhand, but Ornge is not an independent health facility.

Mr. Frank Klees: It is not?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: No. An independent health facility under that act is a very particular type of facility that's licensed under that act, and Ornge is not covered by that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Could I ask you to do this for me? Could I ask you to review that legislation—

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: —and provide us with an opinion regarding that? The reason I say that is that my reading of that is, because it refers to ambulance as well—and Ornge, I believe, was actually appointed a base hospital, and my understanding is that because it was designated a base hospital that it falls into that category.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I wonder if you're thinking about the Health Facilities Special Orders Act rather than the Independent Health Facilities Act.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, you know, I'll take your advice on that, and if you could look at both of those pieces of legislation. The reason is—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You are out of time now, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. If you would do that, I'd appreciate it, and I'm sure members of the committee would benefit from that.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: My pleasure.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If we could move to the NDP, please.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Can I just add one comment in response to that?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please do.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Both article 15—well, article 15 applies to the ministry taking control only of communications services, not the entire Ornge, and it is in the case of a threat to patient safety, and the same applies with the Health Facilities Special Orders Act. There are very stringent tests dealing basically with patient safety. So I am happy to provide that information.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much.

Jagmeet.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you for being here. Who is the FOI coordinator for the Ministry of Health?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Sorry, I can't remember his name right now.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, and in 2010, would it have been the same person?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: It might not have been. I'd have to check into that for you.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Did you receive any of the FOIs that were requested on behalf of the NDP in 2010?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: The FOI requests?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes.

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I did not; I'm sorry.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Were you aware that there were FOI requests made by the NDP in 2010 regarding Ornge?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Not at that time, no.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And now you are aware of that?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Are you aware of what protocols are followed normally when an FOI request is made?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: In a general sense, I am.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And if your ministry receives an FOI request, what's the procedure that's followed?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I think that the FOI office sends the request to the branches that it considers may have information in response to the request and requests them to respond.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Do you know if there's any reason why we didn't receive an answer to our 2010 FOI request until 2012?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I don't; I'm sorry.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Does that strike you as peculiar, that it takes two years to receive a response?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: It does seem long.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. I'll just pass it over to my colleague, briefly.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you.

I take it that you've seen a few performance agreements before?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You do a lot of them?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Some.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You do some?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yeah.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Would you say that it has been heard of that the ministry would change an existing performance agreement?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: It doesn't happen that often.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But it has happened?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: I can't think of it offhand.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It could happen?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: It could happen.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It could happen. Okay. When you were asked to change the performance agreement for Ornge, that was the first time that you had any contact with Ornge?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yes. I had heard comments about Ornge in our office, but I had not worked directly on the file.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who in your office worked on the Ornge file?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: That would have been Mel Springman originally, and a second lawyer in our office who worked with Mel, Bill Georgas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And Bill Georgas is still there?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Yes, he is.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Why didn't they go back to do the modification to the performance agreement?

Ms. Carole McKeogh: Well, it was really more of a workload issue. I think the branch wanted, first of all, a more senior lawyer working on the amended performance agreement, and I was the one who had the time available.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'm afraid we're out of time, and I do recognize the NDP didn't get their full time. If the committee decides, it can request to have Ms. McKeogh back again, but you were short by five minutes on your time.

Thank you very much for coming this morning.

We're recessed till this afternoon.

The committee recessed from 1025 to 1232.

MR. RAINER BELTZNER

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'd like to call this meeting to order and welcome our first presenter of the afternoon, Mr. Rainer Beltzner. Mr. Beltzner, you've received information about a witness coming before the committee?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I did.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. I believe our clerk has an oath for you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Please put your hand on the Bible in front of you. Thank you. Mr. Beltzner, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well, thank you. You have five minutes for an opening statement and then the three parties will have some time for questions.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Good afternoon. Thank you for providing me with an opportunity to come and speak to you today in relation to your inquiry about Ornge.

I began with Ornge in 2004 and served as the non-executive chair of Ornge's board of directors until January of this year.

From the outset, significant changes were needed in order to establish Ornge as a viable unified entity. This was achieved under the guidance of a highly dedicated, hard-working and independent board. I'm proud to have had a role in Ornge's work and remarkable achievements.

There was and remains a significant funding gap between current service levels and demand for Ornge's services. This applies, of course, to most health care services in Ontario. Ornge, therefore, engaged in a combination of fundraising and for-profit initiatives, much like any hospital would do. The objective was to supplement government funding. These initiatives were known to the ministry. Ornge took considerable steps throughout this process to ensure that the government was always informed.

In order to put this funding strategy into effect and receive investor support, the initial corporate structure of Ornge had to be reorganized. This was driven to ensure that the benefits would flow to Ornge's air medical transport system. The relative complexity of the new structure resulted from the need to meet a number of interrelated legal, tax, economic, and accounting objectives. All of these steps were pursued only after the board had received and considered outside legal and accounting counsel that confirmed the legality of the proposed venture, its compliance with the performance agreement, and its practicality from an economic perspective. The board also took considerable steps to ensure that (a) Ornge was insulated from any downside risk; (b) the integrity of operations would not be compromised; and (c) the use of all government funds was restricted to the benefit of Ontario's air medical transport system.

On the last point, I'm compelled to reiterate my position and the instructions conveyed to management by the board. The board's absolute, unequivocal directive to Ornge management was that no public funds were to be used for the operations of the for-profit side of the company. Any such use would have been made without board knowledge and in direct contravention of the board's directive to management.

Throughout my time as chair of the board of Ornge, only once did the government convey any concerns to me. And when this occurred, I and the board responded immediately, full disclosure of the relevant information was provided, and the matter was clearly settled to the government's satisfaction.

A similar proactive approach was taken with respect to the AG's audit of Ornge. Members of management and the board provided the AG's team with an initial and comprehensive presentation and immediately made themselves available to provide any assistance required. The AG's draft report provided to me contained many inaccuracies and was highly suggestive. I immediately called the AG's representative to raise my concerns. Management, at the direction of the board, conducted an extensive written response of over 80 pages to correct the errors in the draft report. I also initiated three separate meetings with officials at the AG's office at which I expressed concerns regarding these inaccuracies.

The allegations that the Ornge board somehow stonewalled the AG's office with respect to its audit is simply baseless. The board provided the AG's office with a full briefing of the for-profit initiatives. This included providing the AG's office with all documents that Ornge had legal access to.

On the issue of Ornge executive and board compensation, the board engaged independent external consultants to conduct an exhaustive study and provide recommendations to the board on compensation for both Ornge executives and the board. After consideration, the board followed these recommendations.

During the process of reporting executive compensations to the ministry, I became aware that Dr. Mazza's professional corporation was being paid substantial amounts for services apparently not being provided. I took immediate steps to stop these payments and informed the ministry's internal auditor.

My personal board compensation as reported included, yes, a basic retainer, in addition to meeting fees and supplementary approved fees as a recovery for the significant additional time expended throughout that period on matters pertaining to Ornge. All of these matters were designed to secure Ornge's financial viability and serve the long-term interests of Ontario patients.

It was understood that the government could not force our resignation. However, we conveyed the message to the government early this year that, if requested, we would step down. We did not want to stand in the way of government.

Thank you very much. I'd be happy to answer any questions that committee members may have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. The rotation is such that the official opposition will go first. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. If I could have the clerk distribute the CV that I distributed earlier.

Mr. Beltzner, thank you for appearing here. Can I just ask—I'm familiar with your CV.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Thank you.

Mr. Frank Klees: In fact, I couldn't imagine Methuselah having as long a CV. You have been a very busy man. There isn't a sector that you have not been involved in. You are familiar with boards and the responsibility that a director has, which really comes down to one thing, and that is to ensure the financial integrity. There is a fiduciary responsibility that every director has to its shareholders, to its stakeholders. Can I ask you this: Who, in your opinion, were your stakeholders to whom you had a fiduciary responsibility?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Clearly, part of the stakeholder component was the Ministry of Health under our responsibility under the performance agreement.

Mr. Frank Klees: Anyone else?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: The people of Ontario.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. In your opinion, when did things start to go wrong at Ornge? There was a great vision that was put on paper, I think a very complex structure. I see your presentation. When did things start going wrong, or do you think anything went wrong?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: The first indication was the draft report from the Auditor General, which—

Mr. Frank Klees: That was the first time that you thought Ornge may not be on the right track?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: That draft report, as I indicated in my opening statement, contained, in my view, a substantial difference between my understanding of Ornge through the many years and the board's understanding, and that is reported by the Auditor General.

As I indicated in my opening statement, I instructed management, as well as the board members involved, to very carefully review that draft report and to respond in writing should the response be required to become public. That response was over 80 pages.

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand that you were a very hands-on chairman of the board.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I am a non-executive chair of the board.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was your remuneration?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: My remuneration, as reported, was slightly over $200,000 in that fiscal year.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was that correct?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: You also, I believe, sit on the board of directors of Humber College.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: That is not correct. I used to sit on the board of directors of Humber College until such time as I was encouraged to leave the board.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was your remuneration there?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Zero.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're familiar with directors' compensation.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Absolutely.

Mr. Frank Klees: The compensation, notwithstanding the fact that you say it was recommended by an independent advisory group—I'm somewhat familiar with directors' compensation as well, as I sit on a couple of boards. This $200,000 fee for an organization the size of Ornge is exorbitant, would you not agree?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I responded to the compensation issue in my opening remarks. I have no further comment.

Mr. Frank Klees: You think it's fair.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: The entire board reviewed the recommendations of the external consultants that had reviewed the extent of work required by members of the board, and acted on that basis.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you maintain an office at Ornge?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: No, I did not maintain an office in Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you maintain an office at any of its affiliated offices?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: No, I did not.

Mr. Frank Klees: Is it true that you asked Enola Stoye, the professor of the Schulich business school, and Shanon Grauer, the lawyer at McCarthy's, to resign from the Ornge board of directors because they disagreed with the creation of Dr. Mazza's J Smarts initiative?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: No, it is not.

Mr. Frank Klees: You deny that. Is Anne Brunet your daughter?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Yes, she is.

Mr. Frank Klees: How did she come to work at Ornge?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: She applied for a position at Ornge in response to an advertisement that Ornge had run.

Mr. Frank Klees: What experience did she have?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: She had been out of the house for many, many years, obviously, living as an adult. I believe she had been working at Credit Union Central of Ontario for something like five or six years in a variety of different positions.

Mr. Frank Klees: She took on quite some responsibility. There was a report this morning that the $6.7-million consulting fee that was paid to Ornge by Agusta was basically the responsibility of your daughter and one other individual, a Ms. Long. Is that something that you were familiar with, that that would be her responsibility?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: My daughter and I did not discuss Ornge business—

Mr. Frank Klees: Are you familiar with that $6.7-million contract?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: There are two contracts, I believe, that compose the $6.7 million. I believe there was roughly a $4.5-million or $4.7-million marketing services contract from Agusta to Ornge Global as well as a subsequent $2-million contract, which I believe, if my—I'm not absolutely certain of my memory on this point, but I believe it called for payments of a quarter of a million dollars per quarter over several years.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you thought that was a reasonable—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees, you have a minute and a half.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Can I just ask: Did you approve Dr. Mazza's salary?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: The board approved Dr. Mazza's salary.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you approve the $1 million, or coming close to that, of unsecured loans to Dr. Mazza?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: The loans were not unsecured.

Mr. Frank Klees: They were not unsecured? But you approved them.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: The board approved the loans.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you thought that was appropriate.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: The board approved the loans.

Mr. Frank Klees: I find it interesting that you, at the outset, indicated that you had a fiduciary responsibility to the taxpayers of this province, and yet, even based on your extensive experience, you and the board, and as the leader of the board, made some decisions that I think are highly questionable. I wish we had more time to pursue that, but we don't. I look forward to having you back, and hopefully under a circumstance where we do have more time to pursue these issues.

I'll defer to my colleague.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, Mr. Klees. We'll move on to the NDP. Who would like to question there? Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Welcome to Queen's Park.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Thank you.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In your role as chair of the board, you would be aware that the board kept minutes of its meetings.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: The board absolutely kept detailed minutes of finance and audit, governance, and compensation committee meetings, in addition to board minutes, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: When you went in camera, did you keep minutes of the in-camera parts of your meetings?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You did? To your knowledge, before you left Ornge, were those minutes still all there at Ornge?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: To the best of my knowledge, all of the minutes were certainly taken by and provided by the corporate board secretary. As to whether they were there or not there, I don't know. I presume they were.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who was the board secretary?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Lynne Taylor.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Lynne Taylor. Okay. We saw, through other witnesses and through correspondence, that you had the opportunity to go and brief the Minister of Health. Do you remember briefing the Minister of Health in late 2010, early 2011?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: We had the opportunities, pursuant to a letter that I wrote the minister on—I believe the date of the letter was January 19, 2010. There were three opportunities subsequent to that letter to make presentations to ministries. The first of those presentations was, I think, January 25. I may be wrong—I apologize—but I believe it was around about January 25—to ministry representatives at the Ministry of Health; that's correct. Mr. Saäd Rafi was there, as well as a number of other individuals.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you attended those meetings? They were here at the Ministry of Health, I'm guessing?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I believe they were up at the Ministry of Health in the Ministry of Health boardroom.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. The minister didn't attend, but the deputy minister was there.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Absolutely.

M^{me} France G  linas: And a number of other people were there as well?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: That is correct. I believe Ms. Li was there, and several others representing the government.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. And when you did your presentation, did you talk about the corporate structure?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Absolutely. In addition to having provided that very detailed letter, outlining both the purpose, the objectives, the corporate structure, the composition and the chart of the corporate structure, we provided a PowerPoint presentation, which I believe is now public, and went through that in some detail and answered clarifying questions and so on. Absolutely.

M^{me} France G  linas: How long would you say that meeting lasted?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Well, my recollection—certainly an hour, perhaps longer.

M^{me} France G  linas: Were there any questions that you were asked? Did you leave with the feeling that they understood what you had presented to them?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Certainly, that was my understanding. There was nothing raised during the course of that meeting that was, shall we say, in the least bit controversial. We indicated certainly during the course of the meeting that they should ask any questions. We invited questions; we asked clarifications. Nothing was brought up of any concern whatsoever.

M^{me} France G  linas: I'm with the NDP. We had filed a freedom of access of information to get to Mr. Mazza's salary. Has anybody from the government ever asked you Mr. Mazza's salary?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: There was a request for information concerning Dr. Mazza's salary. I think the last time was in the fall of 2011, yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: Did you give that information?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: We did not, and the reason we did not was because Dr. Mazza's salary, by legal advice, was apparently protected under confidentiality—I think the same reason that Mr. McKerlie recently responded to a similar request, indicating that for legal reasons, one cannot disclose personal information of companies that are not covered under the disclosure act. We indicated that to government at the time, and very clearly as to why.

M^{me} France G  linas: You were very successful in getting your budget to increase a little bit every year. One specific year, you asked for a $2.5-million increase directed at salaries. What is some of the information you shared at this point to justify the $2.5-million increase in your budget for salaries?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I was not involved in that discussion with government with respect to the increase in salaries. That's a role of the CEO and the management team. The board receives the budget based on anticipated revenues and anticipated expenses, and reviews that, but in terms of negotiating with government for additional compensation or providing rationale, that, of course, is the role of management.

M^{me} France G  linas: Was the full salary of Mr. Mazza—$1.4 million, as we know it—under the budget that you administered?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I believe so.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. My colleague.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You indicated that there was only one concern that was ever raised by the government and that it was satisfied—

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: —or it was resolved. What was that concern?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: This was back in late 2008. Ruth Hawkins, who was at that time the assistant deputy minister responsible for emergency health services, I believe, communicated to me that she was in receipt of a letter that had been sent to a minister in government. That letter, strangely, was dated April of that year, and we're now into September or October—I can't quite recall, but it was certainly the fall. She had communicated with me that there was a concern and that we needed to get together and meet, and offered some date. I responded, I believe by email, indicating that I wanted to meet as soon as possible, and a subsequent meeting was held with her, Ken Flynn from the ministry's internal audit, and, I believe, I might have had Luis Navas with me, who was another board member at the time, at that meeting.

At that meeting, Ruth Hawkins presented to me a letter from an individual—and I'm not sure I recall his name; it might have been Keith Walmsley, I think—and the letter made allegations of a double set of books, inappropriate, excessive bonuses, items of that nature. This, of course—my response to Ruth Hawkins and Ken Flynn was that it needed to be looked into immediately, and it was, by both the ministry's internal audit and ourselves, and the matter of the double set of books, I think, was resolved very quickly, and compensation was responded to in a letter.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. I'm sorry to interrupt. I just want to squeeze in some questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Singh, you have 30 seconds left.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: How many times did you brief the government in total?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: In terms of the last session?

M^{me} France G  linas: No, in terms—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In terms of the entirety when you were a board member, how many times?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Let me be clear the number of times that I personally met with government. I personally met with government officials three times. This would have been in the early part of 2011; I think once in January, once in February and once in March. I subsequently after that, I believe, attended a dinner which was attended by Dwight Duncan and Minister Papatello, along with an executive from Agusta. I believe after that I might have met with Patricia Li the next time, when I expressed some concerns about the manner in which the AG's office was vetting data. And, I believe, subsequently, the meeting that I requested with the Minister of Health to provide information with respect to the—and this would have been in late December, I believe, when, on my request, I wanted a meeting with the Minister of Health to respond to some of the allegations that were out in the—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. I'm sorry, we're out of time, Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Before 2011, any other meetings?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Not that I recall.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll have to move on to the government. If you do wish to have Mr. Beltzner back another day, of course, you can do that.

Ms. Sandals:

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you very much. You mentioned in your opening remarks that you received a basic retainer for your services on the board?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: That is correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And you quoted $200,000. Is the $200,000 the basic retainer?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I don't recall the exact composition, but my payment consisted of a base retainer, and then, on top of that, as with every other board member—the base retainer, just to be clear, is the retainer for a position as a director—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So is the $200,000, then, the total compensation?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: What is reported was the total compensation, which was retainer plus meeting fees, plus my billings, which were at the rate of $250 an hour—approved—for the additional work working on the items related to the independent committee at the time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. How would that compare, because you've served on a number of boards—how does that compare with other public boards, taxpayer-funded boards on which you have served?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: First of all, the retainers did not relate to any boards that were charitable boards. These were all retainers related to boards that had a not-for-profit or a for-profit structure. Most of the public sector boards that I was involved in—for example, the Humber board is, in fact, a charitable board, volunteer, so there's no retainer—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So in terms of other institutions which are publicly funded, this would be a rather different level of compensation for a board member than in other public sector, publicly funded boards?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: In some cases, yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We talked about the salary of Dr. Mazza: $1.4 million. You were on the board that approved that salary?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And—

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: May I just clarify? That's not totally salary—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: His total compensation of $1.4 million.

You were a member of the board that approved his transfer from employment of Ornge the non-profit to one of the for-profit subsidiaries? You were on the board that approved that transfer of employment?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: That is correct. Dr. Mazza originally became an employee of Ornge as a result of his transfer from Sunnybrook and Women's back in 2006. Ornge, at the time, was a not-for-profit entity. Because we wanted to attract fundraising funds, we then moved Ornge to a charitable status along with the creation of a foundation, which is quite normal in that kind of environment. Dr. Mazza and a number of the other executives then moved from Ornge charity into a for-profit subsidiary called Ornge Peel.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So it appears that Dr. Mazza's compensation rose quite abruptly from $250,000 when it was listed on the sunshine list, as it's known, at the not-for-profit. You approved his transfer to for-profits, and it abruptly rose to $1.4 million. Why was that transfer of employment made?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: One of the things that we wanted to do was, obviously, create a structure that allowed for for-profit ventures—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I didn't ask you why you changed the structure. Why did you transfer Dr. Mazza from a position where he was publicly listed as making $250,000 to something where you've said the legal advice was that his salary amount was subject to privacy? Why did you transfer his employment from one body to the other?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I don't think it was a specific transfer of Dr. Mazza. We transferred all of the non-medical staff from Ornge the charity that was providing services under the Ambulance Act to a subsidiary. So it was not only Dr. Mazza but all of the other executives and staff that were not directly involved as required under the Ambulance Act for Ornge.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So all of the staff who had previously been funded by public money and previously appeared on the sunshine list, all of them disappeared from the sunshine list?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Only—well, those that were transferred to the subsidiary company that were not required to remain within Ornge under its medical status.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I don't think I'm hearing yet why they got transferred from one position to another. I understand that they were transferred, but why? There seems, from a public point of view, to be a correspondence between the transfer of employment—that's why I'm saying “why”—and the dramatic increase in salary. I mean, the salary increased sixfold with that move to—

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Over time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Well, and of course we can't see what went on in between because it disappeared from the sunshine list.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I understand, but that salary increased over time as the number of activities and the complexity of the organization changed.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So over a matter of two or three years it increased sixfold?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: That's correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Does that make it okay, if it took two or three years?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: As I indicated in my opening remarks, the compensation issues, because of the complexity and the scope of business that we were moving into, was very carefully reviewed by independent outside consultants. They gave their recommendations and we responded to those recommendations.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals, you have about a minute and a half.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, then I'd like to change direction a little bit. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Kelly Mitchell?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Yes, I do.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Were you on the board when he was appointed to the board of Ornge?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So were you responsible for that appointment as chair?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Well, Kelly Mitchell was identified as a possible replacement to Lorne Crawford, who had unfortunately passed away. Kelly Mitchell had a similar, if you like, presence in northwestern Ontario as did Lorne Crawford. We were looking for somebody to replace Lorne Crawford on the board who had that presence in that part of the province. So Kelly Mitchell was presented as—and I certainly asked him, as a matter of course, would he be available to join the board of Ornge.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And was it usual practice to have people who were employed as consultants, or at least held a contract as a consultant acting for Ornge, to also be on the board of Ornge?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I'm not aware of the particulars of any consulting contract that Kelly Mitchell may have had.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you're unaware that Mr. Mitchell appears to have billed Ornge for over $350,000 in contracts for lobbying?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: I'm certainly not aware of any of that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you did not approve that lobbying contract?

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: No.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. I think we can pursue that more next week.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, and you are out of time. So thank you very much for your presentation today.

Mr. Rainer Beltzner: Thank you very much.

FASKEN MARTINEAU DUMOULIN, LLP

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our next presenter is Lynne Golding, partner and director, health law practice group from Fasken Martineau DuMoulin, LLP. Welcome.

Ms. Golding, you've received the letter with information about a presenter to the committee?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well, and our clerk will have you swear an oath.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): I'm sorry. Ms. Golding, did you want to be affirmed or swear an oath?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I'll swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Do you have the Bible?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Ms. Golding, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I do so swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. You have five minutes for an opening statement and then the three parties will ask questions.

Ms. Lynne Golding: Very good. Thank you. As you've heard, my name is Lynne Golding, and I'm a partner of the law firm of Fasken Martineau DuMoulin. I am one of a team of lawyers at my firm who have provided advice to Ornge over the years. There are five significant matters in the history of Ornge with respect to which I played a lead role. They are:

- its incorporation as Ontario Air Ambulance Services Co. and the transfer of assets to it from Sunnybrook in 2004;

- the negotiation of the performance agreement with the ministry in 2005;

- structuring advice with respect to the formation and incorporation of Orngeco and Ornge Peel in 2006 and 2007;

- Ornge's response to the first draft of the Auditor General's report in the fall of 2011; and

- the corporate activities completed since January 1, 2012, including the resignation of the board led by Rainer Beltzner, the election of the board led by Ian Delaney, the wind-up of the Ornge Global entities, and the petition of two of those entities into bankruptcy.

There are a few facts based on my personal experiences that I would like to have recorded. Firstly, why was Ornge incorporated as a non-share capital corporation rather than formed as an agency of the government? Mr. Delaney, when he appeared before you on April 4, speculated that it may have been an effort to emulate STARS, a successful air ambulance operation in Alberta, and that was part of it.

But from a legal perspective, we took as our model an example closer to home. At the time, there were approximately 150 health service providers operating in the province, offering their services to the public, receiving almost all of their operating funding from the province. Most, but not all, were provincially incorporated. They were non-share capital corporations registered as federal charities, with boards elected by their members and without provincial government appointees. What were they? Ontario's public hospitals.

Corporations carrying on business in Ontario can be incorporated under the laws of Ontario, Canada or any other jurisdiction. The choice has little to do with the division of powers in the Constitution Act. It has generally to do with tax treatment, name availability and protection, and the cost and time necessary to incorporate.

In 2004, at the time Ornge was incorporated, a non-share capital corporation could be incorporated much more quickly federally than provincially. In order to meet certain legal obligations to employees, it was necessary that the company be incorporated by November 1. By the time we received the necessary consents to proceed in the fall of 2004, we knew we did not have enough time to incorporate provincially. Ornge was incorporated under the Canada Corporations Act on October 8, 2004. Its assets were transferred to it by Sunnybrook 24 days later, on November 1. It was well understood by Ornge that, though federally incorporated, it would be subject to all provincial laws.

Secondly, why was the devolution of the air ambulance system not subject to a public procurement process? Around that time and in the years to follow, the ministry was extricating itself from the operation of a number of programs, including the Cardiac Care Network and a number of psychiatric hospitals. I understand that in each case, the government relied on existing management and others it considered knowledgeable and experienced to serve as the initial leaders of the devolved entities.

Thirdly, questions have been raised regarding the performance agreement. The agreement was negotiated over a 10-month period of time. The ministry's team was led by Dennis Brown, likely the most knowledgeable person in the ministry regarding the operation of the air ambulance system at the time. He was supported by two other members of his department as well as a senior ministry lawyer and a very able junior.

The agreement includes extensive reporting obligations and provides the ministry with three separate inspection rights. It gave the ministry access to the records pertaining to the grant funds, whether they were held by Ornge or under Ornge's control. It gave the ministry the right to terminate the agreement for cause, including failing to comply with any one of Ornge's 15 pages of covenants. If the ministry believed that Ornge was not complying with the agreement but did not want to terminate the agreement for fear that they would create further risks to patient safety, the ministry could have issued a notice of default or threatened to do so. That usually gets the attention of a grant recipient.

Finally, the ministry had the right to assume control of the Ornge communications centre if it was concerned for the health or safety of patients.

I make these statements not because I believe the ministry should have taken those steps, but only to clarify and record the rights of the ministry in this regard.

I'd be pleased to answer any of your questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your opening statement. Questions go to the NDP. Who would like to start? Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I will be starting. Thank you for coming to Queen's Park, and thank you for your presentation.

In layman's terms, whether you incorporate at the federal level or at the provincial level, like many hospitals do, it changes in nothing the responsibility or the oversight of the government of Ontario, more specifically the Ministry of Health.

Ms. Lynne Golding: That is correct. There are at least half a dozen hospitals incorporated federally. I think they would all take the view that they are subject to the laws of Ontario and the dictates of the Ministry of Health.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In your dealings with Ornge, have you ever informed people at the government level—whether the Ministry of Health, the Premier's office, finance, anybody—as to the work that was being done by Ornge?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I never had any part in briefing the government. I did receive an email from Ms. McKeogh recently asking me why we incorporated federally, but I think that's really the only advice I've ever given to the government about Ornge.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In your work with Ornge, did Ornge ever raise flags that they needed to explain their corporate structure—they were going to meet with the government; they had had questions or concerns coming from the government?

Ms. Lynne Golding: No. I knew that they were going to have that meeting in January. I knew all about that, and I had read parts of the letter before they went. I didn't really give them their advice to do with the provincial government.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Sorry. Say that—

Ms. Lynne Golding: I didn't give them their advice pertaining to keeping the provincial government briefed on their matters. I gave them advice at times, suggesting they should seek consent of the government, but I wasn't involved in preparing them for any of those arrangements.

Mme France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: The minister has indicated a number of times—and I think you've already answered this, but let's make it clear: The minister indicated that the existing performance agreement was not strong, didn't give her the ability to do the proper oversight. I just want you to respond, given the fact that you've indicated a number of tools that the minister did have, including the ability to issue the notice of default or at least threaten to do so, including the right to terminate the agreement based on the 15 pages of covenants. What's your response to that?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Those were all of their rights. In addition, the ministry, as the chief funder of Ornge, had great powers of moral suasion. I can tell you, all of my broader public sector clients work very hard to make sure that the ministry is kept happy with them.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just to build on that, similarly with a hospital or any other public institution that's receiving funds in a similar format, if the ministry had indicated that they were upset by something or they had a problem with something, in your experience, the institution would respond and would try to allay any concerns.

Ms. Lynne Golding: Absolutely.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And with respect to the ability of the minister or the ministry to control Ornge, you indicated that there is the ability to obtain information regarding—would the ability have affected the access to salary disclosure?

Ms. Lynne Golding: No, it didn't, so long as the employees were paid by Ornge or a subsidiary of Ornge. That was why, at the end of 2011, when the ministry asked to receive the salary information of those employees for the 2010 year, our advice was that they should provide those because those funds were paid out of monies that were under Ornge's control at that time. The Auditor General had access to that information as well, and he had recorded the aggregate number in his draft report. The fact that the ministry had access to that information was enough, in our view, to say that they should willingly, therefore, hand it over.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I believe the auditor would like to make a comment.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I think we found—we did try to get the T4 information. We found it difficult—I guess “time-consuming” would be the right word—to get all the information. We got most of it, but we were unable to get all of it, especially when it came to the for-profit subsidiaries.

That was one of the areas that we did mention to the ministry in suggesting they strengthen the performance agreement. The ministry didn't know what the salaries were of either the board or senior management. We said that we think they're at a high enough level that you need to get this information. We said that the performance agreement will get you part of the way; we're not sure if it'll get you all the way, I guess, was our interpretation of it, Ms. Golding.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just two pieces, then: The performance agreements that you helped in drafting provided that there were a number of reporting requirements that Ornge had to report back to the ministry?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Yes. Three pages' worth.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And in addition, the ministry had access to records pertaining to grant funds, whether they were held by Ornge or under Ornge's control. Would that include subsidiaries as well?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Subsidiaries, yes. So up until the end of 2010, all of that information should have been available to the Auditor General or to the ministry. The ministry would have had access to those. That changed after January 1, 2011.

M^{me} France G  linas: Did Don Guy do work for Ornge?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Yes, he did.

M^{me} France G  linas: Do you know in what capacity he did and over what period of time?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I didn't know that he had this relationship with Ornge until December 2011. To this day, I don't know very much about it. Really, it was a relationship between Mr. Apps and Mr. Guy, and I think you'd be best to direct your questions that way. However, based on the Hansard of last week and Mr. Apps's testimony, I know that you were looking for figures about the actual billings, and I do have those.

M^{me} France G  linas: You will table that with the clerk?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: Thank you. To the best of your knowledge, why was Mr. Don Guy hired?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I really couldn't say.

Mme France G  linas: No? Okay.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Can you confirm that Guy Giorno suggested that using the $1.6 million in public money to start the private companies would raise serious legal concerns or legal issues?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Yes, it was the view of Guy and myself that ministry funds should not be either loaned or granted to any of these for-profits without the consent of the ministry. The performance agreement wasn't absolutely clear on that point, but we thought the better view was that the ministry's consent should be obtained.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And did you provide that information, or did you alert the ministry of that?

Ms. Lynne Golding: No. Our relationship was directly with Ornge. They were our client, so that's who we provided our advice to.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

M^{me} France G  linas: So you had no way of knowing if Ornge acted upon—did you follow up to see if they acted upon that recommendation not to use public funds for their other pursuit?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I'll tell you, I don't even know if the loan was ever made. I looked for it before I came here to see if there was any evidence. I couldn't find any, but that doesn't mean it wasn't made.

I do know that the vertical restructuring, as I call it, the one where Orngeco and Peel were created—we had suggested that the ministry be apprised of all of that before it was begun. It wasn't, which made us uneasy, but I do understand that in 2008, Ornge officials met with the ministry and fully briefed them on all of those transactions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: If it was obvious to you and at least to Mr. Giorno that this would raise concerns—the public and the private kind of overlapping—do you see any reason why the ministry officials wouldn't reach the same conclusion, that there were some issues with this?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I think that they could have taken great comfort from the fact, as I say, that Ornge took the view, based on the language of the performance agreement, that all assets and revenues of Ornge or under its control were subject to review by the ministry. I would hope that the ministry would have been satisfied with the explanations given. It appears they were, if they were so briefed in 2008.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are pretty much out of time, so a very short question.

M^{me} France G  linas: What do you know about Ornge Brazil?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Nothing.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. We'll move to the government now. Mr. Leal.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thank you for your presentation today. I have a number of questions. Are you or have you been a member of either the Conservative Party of Canada or the Progressive Conservative Party of Ontario?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I am a proud member of both.

Mr. Jeff Leal: It is my understanding that you're in fact married to Tony Clement, a former provincial cabinet minister and currently a minister in the Harper government. Can you confirm that for the record?

Ms. Lynne Golding: That is true.

Mr. Jeff Leal: In the past 12 months, have you spoken with any Ontario Progressive Conservative MPPs or political staffers about Ornge?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I saw Mr. Miller on Saturday and I asked him to please make sure I appeared today and didn't have to put this off for yet another week. That was it.

Mr. Jeff Leal: So you're saying that other than Mr. Miller—in the past 12 months, he's the only one that you've talked to?

Ms. Lynne Golding: MPPs, yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: In recent months, the Ontario PC caucus, many of whom you no doubt know personally from your days with the Ontario PC Party, have been highly critical of your work and what your firm did for Ornge, particularly as it relates to the creation of the for-profit affiliates and subsidiaries. Mr. Klees in the House on several occasions has referred to this work as a "scheme." Do you stand by your work that your firm has done for Ornge?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Yes. I stand by the work that we have done. The structures that are in place are standard structures on the for-profit side for for-profit entities, and the structure on the "left side," as we call it, the not-for-profit structure, is also commonly used in the charitable and not-for-profit sector.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Last week, during his testimony, Mr. Apps indicated that your firm, Fasken Martineau DuMoulin, had a lucrative retainer with Ornge and provided a wide range of legal services to the organization. He indicated that you had considerable responsibility for this retainer and in fact were a billing partner at one point in time. Is that correct?

Ms. Lynne Golding: No, I was not the billing partner.

Mr. Jeff Leal: What is the precise nature of the legal services that you provided to Ornge?

Ms. Lynne Golding: We were their general counsel, which means that we provided pretty much all their legal advice in the province of Ontario, with the exception of insured litigation and union labour advice.

Mr. Jeff Leal: We have a summary of some billings from your law firm—and these are summaries. I wonder if it would be possible to get a more precise breakdown of time chits from your firm.

Ms. Lynne Golding: All right. What I've just circulated there, those are Mr. Guy's invoices to our firm for his services, but I do have a summary of our legal fees, if you'd like those as well.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Your personal billings?

Ms. Lynne Golding: My firm's billings.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Are they time chits or just summaries?

Ms. Lynne Golding: It's the gross amount billed of our fees for the for-profit and not-for-profit entities from 2003-12. It sets out as well the amount with taxes and disbursements.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Could you table that quickly so we get a chance to do an analysis on it, please?

Ms. Lynne Golding: It also describes the types of services that we provided, examples of them.

1320

Mr. Jeff Leal: If I can continue: Last week, Mr. Apps indicated that Mr. Giorno, a lawyer with your firm and also a prominent Conservative, provided legal advice with respect to Mr. Mazza's salary. Is that correct?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I'm sorry. The question was, did we provide advice?

Mr. Jeff Leal: Yes.

Ms. Lynne Golding: A lawyer in our firm did draft the 2007 employment contract and the 2011 employment contract.

Mr. Jeff Leal: What is the name of that lawyer?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Donna Gallant.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thank you very much.

Ms. Lynne Golding: She received her instructions on that from Mr. Apps.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Did any work involve determining whether Mr. Mazza's $1.4-million salary was appropriate under provincial rules and guidelines, including the public sector salary disclosure rules?

Ms. Lynne Golding: We gave advice on whether the salary should be disclosed under that act.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Was that generally the conclusion that Mr. Giorno reached?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Mr. Giorno and I did conclude that while Dr. Mazza was employed by Peel, he was not subject to disclosure of his salary under the act. Now, if I may, that wasn't the end of our advice. Our advice went on to say that Ornge should be aware that the ministry could, with the stroke of a pen, pass a regulation designating Ornge and its subsidiaries—Ornge was already subject to it, but its subsidiaries—as entities that would be required to comply. We also urged them to voluntarily disclose the salaries, but said that they could only do that with the consent of—

Mr. Jeff Leal: Were you aware that Mr. Mazza was earning $1.4 million in salary and compensation last year?

Ms. Lynne Golding: No. I only became aware of that on December 21, after the amount had been disclosed to the ministry.

Mr. Jeff Leal: In your professional view, do you think that's an appropriate salary considering most of Ornge's funding comes from the provincial treasury?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I think it's outrageous.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Were you involved in the decision to transfer Dr. Mazza's employment contract for the non-profit Ornge to one of Ornge's for-profit entities?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I was asked to give advice on that, and I suggested that they obtain the consent of the ministry before doing so.

Mr. Jeff Leal: When did that take place?

Ms. Lynne Golding: That was in November 2006—November 15.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Did the move have anything to do with providing him with an opportunity to earn more salary and more compensation?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I don't actually think that was the motivation. I think that the motivation was to put management in the separate for-profit corporation so that they could lend out their services, so they could provide those management services to other entities and earn a revenue stream from doing so.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Were you aware that this transfer would result in him being removed from Ontario's sunshine list?

Ms. Lynne Golding: It didn't occur to me when I first gave the advice, but certainly we knew in January, because that was when we were asked for specific advice on that question.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Do you see any connection between Dr. Mazza's salary skyrocketing from $250,000 a year to $1.4 million a year at the same time as his salary was taken off-book?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Well, it clearly happened. I don't know why, but it clearly happened.

Mr. Jeff Leal: With the benefit of hindsight, do you think Mr. Giorno's advice to Ornge with respect to the appropriateness of Dr. Mazza's salary was good advice?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I want to be clear: Mr. Giorno didn't suggest that Dr. Mazza's employment should be transferred. He simply answered the question: If his employment was transferred, would his salary be subject to disclosure rules? He said that it would not be, but that government could easily make it so by passing a regulation.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Have you ever worked with Kelly Mitchell in his role as one of the partners of the Pathway Group, in relationship to your work at Ornge and he being a former board member? Did your paths ever cross?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Not in that capacity at all, no.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about a minute and a half, Mr. Leal.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Could I go back just to clarify? Could you repeat that one more time, Ms. Golding, please—

Ms. Lynne Golding: No, I didn't do any work with Mr. Mitchell relating to Ornge.

Mr. Jeff Leal: But you know Mr. Mitchell?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Oh, yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Okay.

Mr. David Zimmer: We understand from Mr. Apps that there are relationship partners, billing partners and responsible partners. Which partner are you?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Responsible partner. We have three different categories of our client files. A responsible partner is the one who's responsible for a specific matter. So I was responsible for some matters, including those five that I listed at the beginning.

Mr. David Zimmer: I've got your time summary here. You've got the total staff part and the other one—I've got it here.

Ms. Lynne Golding: You want—

Mr. David Zimmer: It totals $9.5 million plus HST and some other things.

Ms. Lynne Golding: Right.

Mr. David Zimmer: And those are summaries. Can we have the actual time sheets that the lawyers fill out, which would show us who met with whom and on what date and what they actually did?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Twenty-two thousand hours—it's a lot. I will have to find out if we can provide that. If we can, we will.

Mr. David Zimmer: But that information would tell us who met with whom, on what dates and—

Ms. Lynne Golding: Is it that you're looking for a list of who met with government people or who met with—

Mr. David Zimmer: No. Can you produce the detailed billing dockets?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I will have to speak to my managing partner about—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time at this time, so we'll move to the opposition. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Chair. Ms. Golding, I think you've given us the turning point of these hearings. We have, for the last number of months, heard repeatedly from the Minister of Health that the reason that she was not able to intervene at Ornge was because the performance agreement didn't allow her to do so because Ornge was incorporated federally. That was, I think, the third or fourth reason that she gave us.

We have been trying to draw their attention to the original performance agreement. I think one of the specific schedules was schedule 15. They've, for whatever reason, refused to look there.

We've drawn attention to the fact, as well, that there's other legislation that certainly empowers the Ministry of Health to step in, as you pointed out today, to five hospitals that are similarly incorporated, and what you have given us today is a confirmation that those were simply excuses on the part of the Minister of Health and, quite frankly, a cover-up of their lack of oversight, and the Auditor General pointed that out.

I am wrestling with this, and perhaps you can help me. Would you have any thought as to what kind of advice the minister might have relied on to give her such confidence to stand in the Legislature and tell the members of the Legislature that she had no authority to intervene? Where might she get that advice?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I really don't know.

Mr. Frank Klees: It certainly couldn't come from anyone who is at all familiar, first of all, with legislation relating to the ministry's authority. It couldn't come from anyone who was intimately familiar with the performance agreement. Is that correct?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I wouldn't think so.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to ask you about this shift between the not-for-profit and the for-profit entities. As I understand the performance agreement, it never contemplated this transition to the for-profit scheme, and I have no problem referring to it as that, and the reason I don't is because I see an intentional leverage of public funds into those for-profit companies.

I see your billings here to the for-profit companies was $2.8 million. We have no evidence that those for-profit companies generated any revenue. The only conclusion that we can draw is that the funds that flowed into those for-profit companies came from the operational dollars, from that steady cash flow that came from the Ministry of Health intended for our air ambulance services.

Ms. Lynne Golding: I'm not sure that is true. Remember, the global side did have some other sources of revenue. There was, as we all know, the $4.8 million from AgustaWestland. So it would have been used to pay expenses on the right side, as we call it, the for-profit side, presumably including our legal fees. As well, that credit lease transaction which you've all heard about generated $5.6 million of investment, also on the right side, and presumably those amounts were also available to pay our legal fees. I don't know for sure, but certainly that is a pool of money that could have been available for that purpose.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure. So, with regard to that credit lease transaction, based on what we are hearing, that was all debt. It was basically generated by what we understand was an inflated appraisal of that property that Ornge very quickly mortgaged.

Ms. Lynne Golding: The Auditor General takes the view that it was an inflated price. The Auditor General received one valuation which said that it was much lower than the valuation that Ornge received. Ornge doesn't take the view that it was inflated.

Mr. Frank Klees: With regard to the not-for-profit, I understand that advice was given to Ornge that it would be inappropriate to fund, from the not-for-profit Ornge entity, government funds into this charity that was being created. Do you recall the advice that Fasken gave to Ornge on that, and could you—

Ms. Lynne Golding: To not fund the not-for-profit with the charitable monies—

Mr. Frank Klees: Right.

Ms. Lynne Golding: —without the consent of the ministry, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: I also understand that there is a contradictory opinion that was given by the same law firm?

Ms. Lynne Golding: That's right. A few months after Mr. Giorno and I provided our advice, Mr. Apps provided a separate opinion. It was on a different structure that he had proposed, but he didn't think that the consent of the ministry would be required. He thought it would be appropriate.

Mr. Frank Klees: So your advice was, "You shouldn't do this." Mr. Apps came along a few months later and said, "No, that's okay. We'll do it this way," and that, I think, was going to involve some $1.6 million of seeding.

Ms. Lynne Golding: Right.

Mr. Frank Klees: When there's a conflict between two lawyers of the same firm, what typically would happen?

Ms. Lynne Golding: Well, you know, the law is unfortunately not always black and white. It's often grey, so there are disagreements that do emerge between partners. Generally, we get together and see if we can resolve our differences, reason with each other, do more research, speak to other people. If we can't resolve those—and it's not very often; usually we can—then we would present to our client both different perspectives and say what the risks were of accepting one or the other.

Now, in this case, it was kind of odd because the client knew full well of the difference in our opinions, but actually the lawyers didn't. Certainly, Mr. Giorno and I knew nothing about the advice that Mr. Apps gave, and I don't know whether he knew of our prior advice.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left, Mr. Klees.

Ms. Lynne Golding: In the end, the client had both pieces of advice.

Mr. Frank Klees: Interesting. At the end of the day, the shift into this for-profit side: From your perspective, did it achieve the intended goal that Ornge had?

Ms. Lynne Golding: I think the bankruptcy of the Ornge Global entity shows that it did not achieve their objective.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. And, Auditor, did you want to make a comment about the lease?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Just on the lease transaction, I think our focus was not so much on the market value of the building; it was more on, Ornge renegotiated higher lease rates. We actually brought in a large national commercial real estate company to assess if those renegotiated lease rates were really market value for the airport corporate area. The advice we got was that the lease rates were 40% higher than market value, and they structured a 25-year lease. So when you have a building, the higher the lease rates and the longer the lease term, that, in itself, increases the market value of the building. I will add, though, as we said in our report, that they did get an opinion from another—it was actually a public accounting firm that indicated that they felt the lease rate was reasonable. So, Mr. Klees, we presented both sides of the story.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your presentation today, Ms. Golding.

Okay, so now we have a bit of time before our next presenter, in that the next presenter is scheduled for 2 o'clock, and we have a backlog of motions before the committee. So we're going to deal with them in the time available, and if we run out of time, we're going back to our presenters. We'll deal with them starting with the oldest moving towards the newest.

The first motion we have, the oldest one, starting from oldest to newest, is one Mr. Barrett had put forward. Do you want to move that motion?

Mr. Toby Barrett: Thank you, Chair. This is a motion that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts ("the committee") direct the clerk of the committee to request the attendance of the following individuals as witnesses in relation to the committee's consideration of the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge air ambulance and related services: Mr. Bruce Bennett, (former ADM, controller, Ministry of Finance); Mr. Skanda Skanthavarathan (chief accountant, Ministry of Health); Ron Sapsford (former MOH deputy who testified at the February 23, 2006, public accounts); Ms. Mary Kardos Burton (former MOH ADM of acute services division); Jennifer Tracey (Ornge); and, lastly, Diane Flanagan, chief of staff to Dwight Duncan (2007).

I think that's been distributed to everybody, that motion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Any comments? Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I would like to table an amendment, which I believe people have on their desks.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very good. Everyone has a copy of the amendment, I understand.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Would you like me to read that into the record?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please do.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And, in addition, that the committee direct the clerk of the committee to request the attendance of Kelly Long, former associate vice-president at Ornge, for the purpose of providing evidence to assist the committee in its consideration of the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge air ambulance and related services and that her attendance be scheduled at the earliest possible opportunity.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? No discussion, so we vote on the amendment first. All in favour? Carried.

The motion, as amended, all in favour? Carried.

What's next, Mr. Clerk, in the pile?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): France Gélinas's motion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. We'll get the next motion.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I was told that I can read it into the record to save time. Is this okay with you, Mr. Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Please.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts direct the clerk of the committee to request the attendance of the following individual as a witness in relation to the committee's consideration of the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge air ambulance and related services: Cynthia Heinz, administrator of Ornge Global Brazil.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion?

All in favour? Carried.

What's our next motion, Mr. Clerk?

Interjections.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'll read it, with your permission: That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts ("the committee") direct the clerk of the committee to request the attendance of the following individuals as witnesses in relation to the committee's consideration of the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge air ambulance and related services: Jim Sinclair, director, legal services, Ministry of Finance; Peter Wallace, former Deputy Minister of Finance; Trevor Kidd, flight paramedic; Ron Smith, director of transportation, CAW/TCA Canada; Randy L'Heureux, associate vice president, operations, Ornge; and Hon. David Caplan, former health minister.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just to note for the record that this has been tabled so long that I believe Mr. Caplan is scheduled for next week, and in fact Mr. Wallace has already appeared. So would it be a friendly amendment to delete the two who've already either appeared or have been already scheduled?

Mr. Frank Klees: I don't have a problem with deleting Mr. Caplan or Peter Wallace. I would like to, in that case, add Mr. Wallace to my motion that is recalling witnesses.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. So we have an amendment to delete those two names. Any discussion? All in favour of the motion, as amended? So the motion, as amended—that's with the names taken off. Carried.

Mr. Frank Klees: With your permission, Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts ("the committee") direct the clerk of the committee to recall the following individuals to attend as witnesses in relation to the committee's consideration of the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge air ambulance and related services: Hon. Deb Matthews, Minister of Health; Saād Rafi, Deputy Minister of Health; George Smitherman, former Minister of Health; Patricia Li, ADM, Ministry of Health; and Malcolm Bates, director, emergency health services branch, Ministry of Health.

Mr. Chair, if I might just speak to this.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's very clear with all of these people that we do not have the time to properly question and to get through the important information that we have. All of these people have been here, every one of them. We have not had the opportunity to fully question them. That's why I'm asking for the recall.

In another motion that I have, I'm going to be making another recommendation with the people whom we are recalling that we do so on the understanding that they are to come and attend here until we, as a committee, are finished with them.

I think this business of us constantly calling them back and having people come here and then not be able to do our work just is not only frustrating for us, but it's an inconvenience for the witnesses as well.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We'll see whether we have time to get to your next motion, and if not, I would suggest that the subcommittee talk about it next Monday if we don't get to it. Ms. Sandals?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm not arguing with the fact that you might want to recall them. I'm concerned about process here, and it actually goes to the thing that you just said, which is, you want to add the ability to endlessly call them back. It seems to me that it would be much more efficient for the committee and much more efficient for the witnesses, because some of these people, like, we've got the secretary of cabinet—he's got better things to do than sit here and wait for us to say, "At our pleasure, we'd like to talk to you for 10 minutes now and 20 minutes some other day." He really does have other things to do in this world.

Perhaps this is something that we need to work on at subcommittee: that we'll go through everybody once, and then when we've got all the comment about everything, it would be more efficient to call them back, so that when we call them back, we've got the accumulation of everything that we've discovered in the interim. We might want to talk to them further, rather than having them being treated like Ping-Pong balls.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, I have no objection to that. I think what I will be insisting, though, that we adopt is from the timing: that when we do call them back, it's not for half an hour—that we call them in such a way that we give them a time to be here, and it will be up to the clerk to appropriately schedule to allow for that time. If we need an hour or an hour and a half with a particular witness, they should be ready to come and know that they're here as a witness for as long as this committee wants to question them. So it may be an hour; it may be 45 minutes; it may be longer. I think if we're to get down to work here and get the information that we need, we need to have that latitude with these witnesses—and to your point, to their benefit as well.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If I could make one other suggestion, then, and perhaps, again, it's a friendly amendment: that we add on to the motion that the question of the timing of the scheduling of these recalled witnesses be referred to the subcommittee, because we don't need to thrash that all out today. But if we have an understanding that it will be after we've heard the rest—but just say "referred to the subcommittee" and we can discuss it at length then.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Mr. Ouellette?

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: It has been the practice of this committee, with most of the other presentations and the other reviews that we undertake, to have extended periods of time for these individuals to come forward. The set-up that we have now is more the exception to the rule that I'm used to in the years that I've had on this committee. I think that it would be in the best interest—to use a specific individual, Mr. Peter Wallace, for example—to say, "Make yourself available for this afternoon," and other individuals at that time, possibly, to come forward. I would agree that the subcommittee should be the one to define those rules as necessary.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So we have a motion and we have an amendment to it, I believe. We'll need two minutes to draft up the change to the motion, so we'll recess for a couple of minutes.

The committee recessed from 1345 to 1347.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, so we'll come back to order here, back in session. Do you want to read out the amended motion?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): The amendment that was just agreed to, on top of Mr. Klees's original motion, that the committee refer the decision of scheduling recalled witnesses to the subcommittee: That was agreed to by everybody?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, and that Peter Wallace—

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): And that Peter Wallace's name be added to the original motion and deleted off of the previous one as a recalled witness. That's now what we're dealing with, so if a member can just read this into the record, then we're official.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: What, as an amendment?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): That's the amendment to the original motion.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Did you already read Peter Wallace in, Frank?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'll move an amendment that the committee refer the decision of scheduling recalled witnesses to the subcommittee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, any discussion? So all in agreement on the amendment? Carried.

And the original motion as amended? Carried.

Okay, this is another Mr. Klees motion that everybody has a copy of.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Which one is it? We've got a bunch of Mr. Klees's motions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): This is the one with Don Guy.

Mr. Frank Klees: That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, compel the government to produce and table to this committee any and all emails, correspondence, notes and/or materials that were sent, received or copied or named or referenced Mr. Don Guy that relate to Ornge and/or Ontario's air ambulance service.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Discussion?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I have an amendment, which I happily do have copies of this time.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And your amendment?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: This is because this is production, so this is more production.

That Kelly Mitchell be compelled to produce and table with the committee no later than Monday, April 30, all written records, including but not limited to billing statements, invoices, emails, correspondence and notes relating to Pathway Group's work for Ornge and/or Ontario's air ambulance service.

I do have copies.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Your date on that was April 30?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. I think that's related to his appearing at the committee on May 2. That would facilitate trying to get the documents so committee could actually see the documents before we do the examination, which would seem to be helpful.

M^{me} France G  linas: Mr. Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: I really hate procedures, but it seems to me that this is not an amendment; this is two individual motions that should just be treated as such. One has nothing to do with the other. As much as I hate procedures, here I am bringing forward this point that this is not an amendment. It has nothing to do with the motion. Although I have no problem with what she's bringing forward, it's a motion of its own.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I will confer with the clerk to decide if this is in order or not as an amendment.

My advice from the clerk is that it is more a separate motion, so we'll deal with it as a separate motion.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just hang on to it?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, we shall. We have Mr. Klees's motion. Any discussion on that motion? All in favour? It's passed, carried.

Okay, I think we have another Mr. Klees motion.

Mr. Frank Klees: This is a bit lengthy. Everyone has a copy of it, I'm assuming.

That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, compel Mr. Alfred Apps to produce and table to this committee forthwith all documents and materials referenced during his testimony under oath before this committee, including but not limited to the following documents, materials, papers and things related to his testimony:

(1) "a summary of my personal and professional background";

(2) "a detailed overview of the legal work I did in relation to Ornge";

(3) documents pertaining to how, when and what Mr. Apps was referring to when he said, "I was aware of the marketing services agreement with AgustaWestland";

(4) documents in Mr. Apps's possession, or his ability to possess, that prove or back up his assertion that the corporate structuring of Ornge "was a conventional, bankruptcy-remote, private equity, limited-partnership investment structure that those experienced in private equity investment would easily recognize and understand as commonplace";

(5) Any documents, briefings, notes, emails, logs and/or correspondence that support Mr. Apps's assertion that "the government was thoroughly informed in respect of this reorganization before it was completed" and any correspondence and/or responses and/or evidence that show the government's response had "raised no objections in respect of it";

(6) documents that support Mr. Apps's assertions when asked about Dr. Mazza's salary and/or loans where he said the "government was thoroughly, painstakingly and, in all cases, truthfully briefed in advance of Ornge taking any of these actions";

(7) detailed documents promised to be tabled by Mr. Apps when responding to questioning by the member from Bramalea-Gore-Malton, Mr. Jagmeet Singh:

"Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You indicated that you briefed the government and you were present during those briefings. Who did you brief and who was present?"

"Mr. Alfred Apps: I've got a detailed record of every briefing that I participated in.

"Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you be able to just—

"Mr. Alfred Apps: I can just give you a high-level overview, and if you want more detail, I'm happy to give it.

"Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you be able to table that detailed—

"Mr. Alfred Apps: Sure, I'm happy to table it."

Just very quickly, Mr. Chair, the reason for this is that Mr. Apps made it very clear that he had very detailed information. He did provide us with a summary, which we don't consider to be sufficient. We are looking forward to Mr. Apps following through on his commitment to provide us with those detailed records regarding every one of his meetings that he conducted with representatives of this government.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: It might be, Mr. Klees, in answer to my question to Ms. Golding—she produced, you'll recall, what were effectively summaries of the billings. I said: Could she produce the detailed time dockets? For the non-lawyers here, lawyers fill out a docket entry and they have to put in great detail in there: “Mr. Zimmer met with Mr. Klees on December 4 at such-and-such and we discussed this, that and the other thing.” It’s all there in great detail. Her answer was that she would take that up with her managing partner. Certainly, if they released those records, that would have everything and more in spades, right down to “we met for 27 minutes” or “we met for nine hours” or whatever, and the detail about it. So perhaps we should pursue that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Zimmer, I’m happy to have you pursue that. I know what I’m looking for through this motion—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, and we have a minute left to discuss this, if we want to deal with it now. Any other further comments?

Mr. Frank Klees: I would hope you’d call the question, sir.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. All in favour? Carried.

We are now going to leave the rest of the motions. We did get through a fair stack of them.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just following up on that, could I ask the—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Could we do the others?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We’re out of time for more motions, but we will deal with them in order as time becomes available, so as we don’t get off our schedule. We have lots of witnesses—

Mr. David Zimmer: Not a motion, just to the clerk: If you could follow up with Ms. Golding and get an answer to her question—“I’ll check with my managing partner.” And then we’ll go from there.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. The clerk will follow up on that, Mr. Zimmer.

INFRASTRUCTURE ONTARIO

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our next presenter is from Infrastructure Ontario. That’s Mary Lowe, executive vice-president, lending and new business. Welcome.

Ms. Mary Lowe: Is this where you want me to sit?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please. You’ve received the letter with advice on a witness coming before the committee?

1400

Ms. Mary Lowe: I did, thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk will have an oath for you to swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Ms. Lowe, you wanted to be affirmed, right?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Affirm, yes.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Could you please raise your hand? Ms. Lowe, do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Yes, I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have five minutes for an opening statement, and then the three parties will ask questions.

Ms. Mary Lowe: Thank you to everyone for the opportunity to appear before the committee. I also appreciate the time, Chair, that you’ve afforded me to provide some introductory comments.

In October 2009, I was asked to be the chief of staff to the Minister of Health and Long-Term Care. This is a position I held until February 2011, approximately 16 months.

The majority of my career has been spent in the public service. At the federal level, I worked in British Columbia in the British Columbia regional office for Industry Canada and the Canadian Food Inspection Agency. I also spent a few years in the private sector working on a large transit project in Vancouver. Prior to joining health—and currently, as the clerk mentioned—I worked for the provincial infrastructure agency. I’m responsible for managing a lending program which provides financing to municipalities and broader public sector organizations to enable them to borrow for their infrastructure needs.

As chief of staff at the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care, my role was to manage the staff in the minister’s office, to liaise with ministry officials on legislative and policy issues, and to act as a representative for the minister to health stakeholders. During my 16 months at health, I was involved in a number of government files and policy initiatives. A priority was continuing to work with the hospital sector on the government’s wait times agenda.

Many pieces of legislation were introduced during that time. An early priority—in fact, in my first week—was acting on the H1N1 global challenge. Public health legislation was introduced during that time to increase the powers of the chief medical officer of health following that global outbreak in 2009. A safe narcotics act was introduced to provide tools to health practitioners to better track narcotic use across the province. Legislation related to quality health care was passed, changing how hospitals are compensated for the care they provide and to implement best practices in governance. The Broader Public Sector Accountability Act was also brought forward by Minister Matthews during the time that I worked for her. The minister was very keen—as I see some committee members here who sat on the all-party committee—to progress the mental health agenda, and that was certainly a big priority for our office during the time I acted as her chief of staff.

On the regulatory side, Minister Matthews also introduced changes to the way pharmacies are compensated and to generic drug prices. I personally was heavily involved in that exercise and in the discussions with pharmacy representatives, with generic drug manufacturers, along with seniors' groups, health advocates, insurance companies and other medical stakeholders. All of these initiatives had complex, often very difficult stakeholder relationships to work through. Minister Matthews was consistent about the need across the sector to find ways to improve the quality of care for Ontarians while strengthening accountability.

Minister Matthews had an activist agenda on a number of health fronts, including, as I said, improving the quality of health services, transparency and accountability in the system. The minister and our office worked hard to be available to meet with health stakeholders and health care workers in the system to better understand the complexities they dealt with on a day-to-day basis and where our intervention from a policy perspective might improve that.

I say all this to provide my perspective on the action taken while I was in her office to improve quality health care and also accountability, action which, in some cases, put the minister in a very public battle against well-resourced lobby efforts.

Speaking specifically about air ambulance services, I received two pieces of correspondence from the air ambulance organization: one was in December 2012 and the other was in January 2011. These were written descriptions of an initiative they wanted to undertake to expand their services. They were clear in the correspondence to point out that no public funds would be used for the effort, nor would there be any downside risk to the Ontario air ambulance system.

Knowing that further conversations were needed on this, I asked the ministry to follow up and include any other relevant ministries in a meeting. A meeting with officials from the air ambulance provider was set up in late January 2011, following the correspondence that was received. I did not attend that briefing.

The Auditor General has pointed out real problems at the agency. That information in the auditor's report was tabled after I left the ministry. As I understand, when these problems were brought forward, the minister acted on them.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide some comments, and I'd be pleased to answer any of your questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. It's time for the government to go first. Ms. Sandals?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you very much for providing that summary of what was going on at the ministry when you were there as chief of staff. Just refresh my memory: What years were you actually there?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Minister Matthews was appointed in early October 2009. I think I followed her about a week or two later, and then I left in February 2011. So I've been gone over a year.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, thank you very much. I would conclude from your remarks that if you were to summarize your responsibilities, the files that you were actively involved in were those which were ongoing policy issues or, in the case of H1N1, an ongoing health emergency.

Ms. Mary Lowe: Correct. Certainly H1N1 was a key component. There was legislation on quality health care and the safe narcotics act, and the pharmacy negotiations consumed a considerable amount of my time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So if we just go back to Ornge, then, you mentioned in your statement that you were not made aware of the problems at Ornge—or at least that's what I understood you to say—during your time as chief of staff. Just to get really specific, so it's clear, did you ever have any reason to meet with Chris Mazza during the time you were chief of staff?

Ms. Mary Lowe: No, I did not, and I did not meet with him.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: A similar question: Mr. Beltzner, the chair of the board?

Ms. Mary Lowe: I did not meet with him.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Tom Lepine?

Ms. Mary Lowe: I did not meet with him.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Have you ever received a tour of any of the Ornge facilities?

Ms. Mary Lowe: I have not.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Have you ever had a conversation with Mr. Apps?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Mr. Apps sent me correspondence. I did not speak with him.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And have you ever met or spoken to Don Guy in relation to Ornge? I mean, obviously, you may have had conversations with Mr. Guy about other things, but have you ever spoken to him about Ornge?

Ms. Mary Lowe: I had no discussions with Mr. Guy about air ambulance services or the Ornge agency.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, thank you very much. If we then go forward to January 2011—because, again, you mentioned that you did receive the email from Mr. Apps, along with a very long list of people—could you just remind us then, briefly, what the email was about?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Sure. So there were two pieces of correspondence. One was a letter that was to a number of different officials within government.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, okay.

Ms. Mary Lowe: And one was an email that I was copied on, requesting a meeting. That correspondence did come from Mr. Apps. With both pieces of correspondence, I forwarded it on to the ministry. I'd understood after reading it, after taking a review of the materials, that there would need to be further conversations on what was contained in the letters. I forwarded it on to the ministry and asked that they follow up with a meeting.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just so I can sort this out in my own mind, then: First of all, you got an email asking to have a meeting, which you forwarded to the ministry, and then you got the letter which was copied to the world, which you made sure was followed up on at the ministry or at least was sent on to the ministry for their action?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Correct. When the email was sent to me, I did follow up with the agency itself and asked them to contact the ministry directly, rather than through external counsel, to set up any further meetings.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And just to be clear, when you had a look at the letter, it didn't raise any flags for you; it was one more piece in your in-basket?

Ms. Mary Lowe: It was certainly detailed correspondence, and in my review of it, what I recall are some of the things they highlighted saying that no public funds would be used, that there would be no downside risk to air ambulance services. It was a comprehensive piece of information, and so I did know that further conversations were going to be needed on the initiative, and then I forwarded it on.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, thank you very much. You then, as you said, about a year ago, left as chief of staff. Do you mind sharing why?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Certainly. I don't think it's any surprise to any member in this House the kind of personal demands your positions place on your lives on a day-to-day basis. I have two young children who, during the 16 months—one was two at the time. It was a big sacrifice on their life and wasn't something, over the long term, that I was prepared to continue.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And now that you've returned to Infrastructure Ontario, have you had anything at all to do with Ornge since you've gone to Infrastructure Ontario?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Nothing.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Thank you very much. Thank you for your help.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll move, then, to the opposition. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Ms. Lowe.

You said that you received some correspondence from Dr. Mazza?

Ms. Mary Lowe: No, there was nothing—I don't recall if it was from Dr. Mazza, the letter. I recall that I had an email from Mr. Apps. There was another piece of correspondence; I don't recall who that was from. There was a letter that a number of us were copied on. I'm sorry; I don't remember who that was from.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm quite sure that in response to the question that Ms. Sandals asked—if you had had any contact with Dr. Mazza—you said, "No, no contact, but I did receive correspondence from him."

Ms. Mary Lowe: Sorry, from the agency—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That was Mr. Apps.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was it Mr. Apps?

Ms. Mary Lowe: My apologies. If that was what you said, I should affirm that I don't recall receiving any correspondence from Dr. Mazza. I never met with Dr. Mazza.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And just a point of clarification: The letter we are talking about was the letter from Mr. Beltzner that the entire world was copied on.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. It's interesting that the entire world was copied on that letter and we can't find anybody who actually attended the—or read the letter.

Ms. Mary Lowe: So, I'm sorry, I did review the letter—

Mr. Frank Klees: Oh, you did? Okay.

Ms. Mary Lowe: —and I understood that there were a few things that were highlighted in the letter, including the fact that no public funds would be used. There were attestations in there about third parties. I cannot recall who those third parties were who looked at it. It was one of the big five accounting firms that I remember in my mind. But I did know at the time that there needed to be further conversations on the information being presented.

This was in January 2011. At the time, I forwarded it to the ministry and asked them to follow up with a briefing. I did not attend that briefing. Then I did leave the ministry in February 2011, so probably about two to three weeks after that correspondence was received.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Any other correspondence that you might have received from anyone at Ornge, or consultants who may have contacted you regarding Ornge—do you recall receiving anything?

Ms. Mary Lowe: I do not.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. As chief of staff to the minister—it's a busy occupation—there's not very much that the chief of staff doesn't know about the minister, and the minister relies heavily on the chief of staff for information. Did you at any time have conversations, discussions, any meetings with the minister on the topic of Ornge?

Ms. Mary Lowe: When the correspondence was forwarded to us, I did not discuss the correspondence with the minister at the time. I had forwarded it on to the ministry for further follow-up and left the position. So those documents I didn't discuss with her.

When I first started—when the minister took office and when I first started in the office, we had received an introductory briefing on air ambulance services. There was nothing in that briefing that would have prompted a meeting or further follow-up, that signified any challenges or problems with air ambulance services in Ontario. Certainly, nothing that the auditor has since raised in his report—there was no information available, at the time that I was in her office, that was brought forward to suggest the kind of real challenges that the auditor pointed out in his report.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're now at Infrastructure Ontario?

Ms. Mary Lowe: That's correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: Are you familiar with the statement that Mr. Apps made about the folks over there in his testimony here? If not, I'll—

Ms. Mary Lowe: Would you mind repeating it?

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure. Here's what he said. In talking about Ornge, he first declared it a "great Ontario company," and he said, unfortunately—he essentially suggested that the public sector doesn't know anything about how to manage public-private partnerships. You know something about public-private partnerships. You're in the business of putting out billions of dollars through Infrastructure Ontario. What is your sense about the competency of the people at Infrastructure Ontario to, first of all, understand those funding mechanisms, and their ability to manage them and oversee them?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Infrastructure Ontario has four main business lines. The one that I am responsible for is the lending program. So we provide financing to public sector entities to leverage the province's borrowing rate. In fact, it was a program that was started by the previous government some 10 years ago.

Our business line that manages the alternative financing and procurement division, our major projects division—they manage the large infrastructure projects in Ontario and look at ways to better manage risk on construction projects. We take some of the province's largest infrastructure facilities and largest new construction facilities and try to ensure that taxpayers are getting the best value for that construction project.

Mr. Frank Klees: Here's what he said: "... fundamental absence within parts of the public sector of the required skill set and competence in commercial and legal matters to properly understand and manage public-private partnerships." It's somewhat sobering to think that someone as well-versed with financing models would give us that comment about the people in our public sector. In terms of your ministry, was this something that hit the radar, Mr. Apps's comments?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Sorry, I'm not sure I understand your question. At Infrastructure Ontario? In my position now at Infrastructure Ontario or at the Ministry of Health?

Mr. Frank Klees: At Infrastructure Ontario. That's where you are now. This comment was just made last week. Was Mr. Apps's comment discussed in your office or anywhere?

Ms. Mary Lowe: It was not discussed by me. Infrastructure Ontario is an agency. We are not in the Queen's Park precinct, so, as an example, no staff in our office have access to these committee proceedings. So someone would have had to look up Hansard to read the committee proceedings. I certainly read the committee proceedings from last week, knowing that I would be called here today, but I can't speak to if any of my colleagues have read it. I know they wouldn't have access to the TV proceedings in the building where we're located.

Mr. Frank Klees: How do you think they'd feel about it?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have 30 seconds, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: How do you think they'd feel about that comment, coming from Mr. Apps?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Our clients are ministries of the Ontario public service, and every day we meet with and work with very smart people in the public service, in order to work with them, understand what type of performance they need out of the facilities that we are being asked to build. I would disagree with his comments. The public service works hard—very smart people who are dedicated to the job that they do and the trust that they're given to deliver on their responsibilities.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We'll move to the NDP. Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. You're about to go through a little bit of a memory test. Apparently it's good for Alzheimer's also, but we'll see how it goes.

Ms. Mary Lowe: I'll do my best.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You had just started at the time. It was in October 2009 and estimates were going on. If I recall, I kind of remember you being there, but here again, we're both testing our memories.

Estimates was health estimates. The Minister of Health was brand new also, but she attended the estimates nevertheless and tried her best to answer what she could and had a roomful of people helping her.

In that period of estimates in October 2009, we—as in, the NDP—spent an entire afternoon asking questions about Ornge. In October 2009, we already had been flagged that things were going on at Ornge that in the inner circle we would say did not pass the smell test. There were decisions that were being made at Ornge at the time that had raised red flags for people.

I'm usually the health critic. I'm usually the one who would have asked the questions, but I was subbed in. My leader at the time was Howard Hampton. Howard Hampton was subbed in and he's the one who took the entire afternoon of our estimates time to ask questions about Ornge—a total of 42 questions. Substantial questions were asked that the minister, being brand new, could not answer, but promised that she would get the answers.

Following, when the estimates period was done, the clerk wrote to the minister, wrote to the deputy minister and asked for those outstanding questions to be answered. Those questions were never answered.

My question to you is—you were in the minister's office at the time: Were you made aware that they were outstanding questions about Ornge that some of the staff needed to answer?

Ms. Mary Lowe: I don't recall. I definitely was not at the October 2009 estimates. I don't recall those estimates. I do recall the following-year estimates, but there was no information brought forward to me on the October 2009 estimates. I do recall the following year's estimates, but not—

M^{me} France Gélinas: You're right; it is 2010. My mistake. You're right. It's 2010. See, it was a test of memory. You passed.

Ms. Mary Lowe: At first when you said "estimates," I'm sure I wasn't there. I did not attend the—was it October? Anyway—

M^{me} France Gélinas: October-November 2010.

Ms. Mary Lowe: October-November 2010: I remember those estimates. I remember that there were a number of questions brought forward from your colleague at the time. I was told at the time that they were being followed up on, that there were a number of questions not just from you but that a number had been read into the record at the end of the committee hearing one day, that the ministry was following up on them, not just about air ambulance services but other policy initiatives within the ministry. When I left in February, I don't recall those questions, nor the answers being brought to me before I left the ministry.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you're pretty sure that people within your ministry knew that there were outstanding questions and that somebody should answer them?

Ms. Mary Lowe: When I left, they were being worked on.

M^{me} France Gélinas: They were being worked on.

Ms. Mary Lowe: Correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Are you surprised to find out that actually those questions were answered in 2012 after we had already started, etc., etc? Are you surprised that although those questions were being worked on, we never got any answers?

Ms. Mary Lowe: I was not aware. As I said, I left in February 2011, and it is unfortunate that those were not answered.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Who was the director of EMS when you were at the Ministry of Health?

Ms. Mary Lowe: The director—I apologize. I'm not sure if he was director, but the assistant deputy minister was Patricia Li at the time, and I think Malcolm Bates was the director or the manager. I'm not positive what his title is, but those are the people who had provided the introductory briefing to me.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Those are the people who would have been tasked with answering questions about outstanding estimates questions about Ornge and about air ambulance?

Ms. Mary Lowe: That would be my safe assumption, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Well, just so that you know, anyway, the answers never came.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just some quick questions for you. Were you aware of a letter in 2008 from Keith Walmsley and a subsequent interview that took place with ministry officials regarding some of the things that were going on at Ornge, including the fact that there were private shell companies being used to hide Mr. Mazza's salary?

Ms. Mary Lowe: No, I was not. Sorry, you said 2008?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's right.

Ms. Mary Lowe: That was prior to my time there, so, no, that was not something I recall being brought to my attention.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Fair enough. In terms of the ministry's ability to oversee or to control or to have any ability to impact the way Ornge conducted its affairs, would you agree with the comment that the ministry did have sufficient tools in place to have oversight over Ornge?

Ms. Mary Lowe: Having the benefit of reading the auditor's report—and I had the opportunity to meet with the auditor and with the minister many times on previous reports—the type of information on the real challenges at that agency that were released as part of his report are incredibly troubling. Minister Matthews—her directions to me on a number of fronts were to ensure accountability and transparency and the best in quality care. Had that information been available to us, it was something we would have acted on.

There was other information brought forward on other initiatives. Pharmacy compensation is a great example of one that I said in my introductory comments, where there was not transparency in how compensation was being managed for pharmacy services in Ontario. That was an initiative we moved forward on in a very public way with a lot of real relationship challenges with the industry on that.

In my entire 16 months of working there, I don't recall any instances where Minister Matthews received information that she didn't act on. So had that information been brought to our attention, I know we would have acted on it.

As I've had the hindsight of the auditor's report and the information provided in it, as all of you members are here—the amount of time the government is spending on this, it is troubling.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just in terms of the powers—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about 30 seconds.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure. Just in terms of the powers that did exist with the performance agreement, would you agree with me that the ministry did have sufficient tools to oversee Ornge and to make decisions in terms of the way patient care was being conducted or any of those issues?

Ms. Mary Lowe: I can't speak to, did I know what tools were in place? What I can say is that had that information been made available to us, had we known the types of issues that the Auditor General brought forward, we would have acted on them.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for coming before the committee today. We appreciate it.

Ms. Mary Lowe: Thank you very much.

INFRASTRUCTURE ONTARIO

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our last presenter today is from Infrastructure Ontario: David Livingston, president and chief executive officer. Welcome. You've received the letter with information about presenting to the committee?

Mr. David Livingston: I received a letter that I was invited, yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. We have an oath to swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): If you just want to raise your hand. Mr. Livingston, do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. David Livingston: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. You have five minutes for an opening statement—then questions from the parties.

Mr. David Livingston: I thought what might be a little bit helpful was to talk about Infrastructure Ontario and talk about what we do, and then try to offer some insight into why I've been invited to speak today and to answer questions.

Infrastructure Ontario was created in 2005, as an agency of the government, to build infrastructure. We had a long list of projects, mostly hospitals. We were doing some courthouses and some roads. I think the government's view, when we were created, was that it wanted to try to take advantage of private sector practices around construction. It wanted to transfer risk to the private sector to get things built, and it felt that it was best able to do that by having an agency that was dedicated to the task of building these things.

It was very clear from the creation of Infrastructure Ontario that we weren't going to be involved in deciding what the government should be investing its infrastructure dollars in. That was the government's prerogative. Once these things got decided, then it was our job to make them happen as best as we possibly could.

We established—I think it's by legislation, but it's at the very least by practice—a process whereby we work on that which the government assigns to us. So if we're building a hospital, then the Minister of Infrastructure will send us a letter saying, "Build this hospital. Here's the budget that you have to work within," and it's our job, then, to execute it against that budget. If we're building a road, then they would come from the Minister of Transportation to the Minister of Infrastructure, who would then assign it to us. So there was a very established protocol that we worked on that which we were told to work on, and they were all infrastructure-related.

As time evolved and the nature of the projects that we had evolved, we started dealing with more ministries, so we have now broadened the infrastructure program. I would say that in the early days, it was probably 70% hospitals. More recently, it has moved into—we're doing more roads; we're starting to do some transit and some other kinds of things. It's just that I think the nature of the portfolio has changed, but the nature of what we do has not, which is, we still build that which the government tells us to build.

A year ago, a decision was made to merge Infrastructure Ontario with the Ontario Realty Corp. At that time, then, our responsibilities broadened to also include that which ORC used to do on its own, which included developing properties, selling properties, occasionally buying properties and essentially acting as a landlord for the public service, the people who work in the public service, and all the lands and buildings associated with it. So we broadened ourselves from being an infrastructure organization to one that manages property and manages buildings that the government owns.

However, the process and the practice are still the same. We do what we're directed to do. We have a very well-established protocol that says that we're not policy-makers. We don't initiate what gets done; we just make sure that what gets decided to do, we do it well. So there's a very clear distinction between people who set policy and people who execute, and we're on the execution side of things. We make stuff happen.

I think that our track record has been reasonably good, and because it's reasonably good, whenever there are infrastructure dollars around, it gets assigned to us and it's our job to bring them in. If I can just give a slight commercial for us, I think we've had 55 projects; I think we're 55-0 in terms of being on-budget. So this model has worked well.

With all of that as context: I know lots of lawyers; I know lots of construction people; I know lots of bankers. These are all people who are in and around what we do all the time. One of the lawyers who I know is Alf Apps. At some point along the line, among other things we've discussed, he did mention Ornge to me. He was the one who initiated the conversation. It wasn't obvious to me why this would ever be an infrastructure project that the government was ever going to assign to us, so I frankly didn't pay that much attention to what he was saying or what he was talking about. It was not something that was going to get assigned to Infrastructure Ontario and it was never suggested to me or proposed that this would be a project that would be assigned to us. It didn't look like something that we would be building, so there was no reason for me to engage in the conversation.

Then somewhere along the line, I think it was in January a year ago, when the letter that was sent from, I guess, the chair of Ornge to the minister, Minister Matthews—I got copied on the letter, and I'm presuming that I got copied on the letter because Alf asked them to copy me on the letter.

I have a couple of filters when I look at things. First thing, that it's not addressed to me—that's one filter—it doesn't get that much attention. If it's addressed to me and they get my name wrong, I'd probably look at it even less. If they get my name wrong and my title wrong, then I really look at it a lot less. There was not much about this that would suggest that I should read a 40- or 50-page letter on which I was c.c.'d.

I don't mean to be evasive and I don't mean to be blasé about something that's obviously important, but I just didn't spend much time on this file or much time on this effort because it wasn't something that I was directed to do, didn't look like I was going to be directed to do, or that really had anything to do with Infrastructure Ontario or what we did as a business for the government.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If we can move to questions now.

Mr. David Livingston: That would be my pleasure.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. The opposition gets to ask the questions first. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you for joining us. We're still searching for someone who actually read that letter that they were copied on.

I imagine they got your name as well as your title wrong on that letter.

Mr. David Livingston: The title for sure was wrong. I don't remember whether the name was wrong or not.

Mr. Frank Klees: All right. So what you're telling us is that you know Mr. Apps casually?

Mr. David Livingston: Right—well, professionally, I would say.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you at any time have any discussion with Mr. Apps about Ornge? Any aspect of it, and let me say specifically any of the financing structure: Did he ever seek your advice on it?

Mr. David Livingston: So, as I said in my remarks, I certainly recall Alf raising Ornge. I really don't know—I just don't know enough about it. I don't recall what we talked about. I don't recall spending a lot of time on it. So I can't honestly tell you what was the nature of the conversation. If he raised it, it didn't stick with me because there was no reason for it to stick with me.

Mr. Frank Klees: The reason that I would think that Mr. Apps may want to initiate a conversation with you is because when we look at what they did at Ornge in terms of doing their raising of money—through a bond offering—it seems there are some parallels between what Infrastructure Ontario is doing and what they ultimately did.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but essentially what Mr. Apps structured, along with his financial advisers, is a $275-million bond offering. They brought in Standard and Poor's to provide the credit rating, which I understand it, at the initial blush was AA-, which is a pretty strong rating.

My understanding of reading the offering memorandum is, that in large part, that rating was directly related to the Ontario government and the fact that the Ontario government stands behind Ornge. Essentially, it's a monopoly ambulance service, and there's a significant annual cash flow into Ornge. At the end of the day, the market really does look to the provincial government as the guarantor. Whether you say that directly, indirectly, it would be the Ontario government that gives traction to that bond rating that Standard and Poor's was able to assign. Would you agree with that?

Mr. David Livingston: So, I frankly have no idea. On the projects—the way Infrastructure Ontario works, we don't do the financing on the projects that we do. The way our process works is that we run an RFQ. From that RFQ we pick—not pick; there's a process we go through to get three bidders. It's the responsibility of the three bidders to then arrange the financing. What they do is, they go to the capital markets, they go to the equity markets, they go to their own various advisers, and they put together structures that involve different sorts of security arrangements. They're the ones that get the facility rated. It's not really something that we do, so I'm not sure what the parallel would be between whatever Ornge was thinking about and how we work.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, let me try this: Your third party entity to whom you've awarded the contract goes to the market and raises funds. I'm sure you're familiar with the offering memorandums that those third parties would be using in the market to raise their bonds. In those offering memorandums, is there a reference to the fact that this is an Ontario government program and that it is the Ontario government that is funding the project?

Mr. David Livingston: It would certainly be noted in those documents that we're the take-out on the bond, but there would be a lot of other stuff in there about how much equity they put in, what their security arrangements are. These would not be documents, frankly, that I would spend that much time personally looking at. I'm giving you a pretty high-level view of what the structure would be. All I would say is, I think it's more complicated than just it's this and it's that and the result is a certain credit rating.

Mr. Frank Klees: While you're here, what would the typical equity participation be of a project of a company, be that the general contractor or whoever you award the contract to?

Mr. David Livingston: So, again, I don't want to be evasive. It will depend a lot on who the contractor is, the size of the project, the nature of the project, whether or not we have revenue risks, whether we transfer revenue risk in the project or do not transfer the revenue risk. The size of the equity would vary a lot and there would be a lot of variables, so I'm not sure I can give you a—

Mr. Frank Klees: Is there a minimum equity participation that you require?

Mr. David Livingston: Not established by us. It would be established by the bankers—

Mr. Frank Klees: So it would be possible that one of your infrastructure projects could be 100% financed.

Mr. David Livingston: I think it unlikely.

Mr. Frank Klees: But it's possible.

Mr. David Livingston: I guess. As I'm answering the question, I'm trying to think about whether I can think of one that would have been 100% financed, and it doesn't come immediately to mind.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a couple of minutes, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Did you know what your friend Mr. Apps said about folks in the government of Ontario and their understanding of public-private partnerships?

Mr. David Livingston: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, let me—this will make your day. He said, "... fundamental absence within parts of the public sector of the required skill set and competence in commercial and legal matters to properly understand and manage public-private partnerships."

So he's essentially saying that folks in the public sector know very little about the complexity of these arrangements.

Mr. David Livingston: I'd like to suggest that I think we know a little bit about them. Everybody's got a view—

Mr. Frank Klees: You disagree with Mr. Apps?

Mr. David Livingston: Again, he's entitled to his opinion. I think we have a pretty good track record at delivering projects using AFP, which is the Ontario program for transferring risk to the private sector, alternative financing and procurement. We've got a well-established track record of bringing projects in on time and on budget. The market seems to like them; they come to us regularly. I think that speaks for itself.

Mr. Frank Klees: Don't feel too badly, by the way, because he wasn't very complimentary of the Auditor General either, so you're in good company.

Interjections.

Mr. David Livingston: Jim and I are in the same boat. I think we're in good shape.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll move to the NDP, then. France?

M^{me} France G  linas: So what are your—not personal, but your relationship with Mr. Apps. When do you ever deal with him?

Mr. David Livingston: Honestly, I know tons of people that I would talk to all the time, and I've always found Alf to be—he's got good ideas; he's a smart guy. So things would come up. There's no particular reason why I would call him; there's no particular reason why he would call me. I talk to him like I talk to lots of people.

M^{me} France G  linas: When was the last time you did talk to him?

Mr. David Livingston: I'd be hard-pressed to think that it was—it was about a year ago, probably, around all the time that this was going on.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. Do you remember if it was a phone call, email, or you saw him? Where was it? When was it?

Mr. David Livingston: I've certainly seen him. I don't recall—I mean, I've certainly had phone conversations with him; I've certainly seen him. I don't recall whether there was any email traffic on any topic.

M^{me} France G  linas: So the last time you talked to him, was it over the phone? Was it in person?

Mr. David Livingston: Gee, I really don't remember. I don't know.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. But how long have you known him for?

Mr. David Livingston: Years.

M^{me} France G  linas: Years. Only through Infrastructure Ontario, or from before?

Mr. David Livingston: I think so. In getting ready for this, I was trying to remember if I knew him from my banking days, and I don't remember whether I knew him or not. We dealt with Fasken as a firm a lot when I was at TD, so it's entirely possible I met him beforehand, but the conversations I recall are since Infrastructure Ontario.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. In some of the projects that you bring forward, do you look at the corporate structure of those projects? Do you solely deal with not-for-profit corporations, or—

Mr. David Livingston: Well, in the work that we do, the bidders, these are all very for-profit corporations, so their structures matter a lot. But most of what they do are project financing deals and so, as I said, they arrange the financing themselves. So the structure that they would put together is really up to them, and how much, whether they try and do it as a project finance, whether they're behind it, is really up to them and their lenders.

M^{me} France G  linas: So you remember the letter, you remember not looking at it, and you remember thinking, "This is none of my business."

Mr. David Livingston: Pretty much.

M^{me} France G  linas: You got named because you knew Mr. Apps and he said, "Include this person."

Mr. David Livingston: I'm presuming that was the case.

M^{me} France G  linas: And nobody from Ornge, nobody from his firm, nobody else ever tried to make sure that you attended a briefing?

Mr. David Livingston: I know nobody at Ornge. I've never had a contact with them, nobody else at the firm, no.

M^{me} France G  linas: Nobody from Infrastructure Ontario attended a briefing with Ornge or for Ornge?

Mr. David Livingston: No, certainly not to my knowledge.

M^{me} France G  linas: None of the above? Okay.

Do you want to go?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I just want to put to you a scenario, if you can comment, perhaps, on the way Ornge was conducting its affairs, that essentially a public institution, publicly funded, was filtering or funnelling some of its publicly derived income or funds into for-profit, in a schema that was quite complex. If you had seen that or if you'd been briefed on that, what would your reaction be?

Mr. David Livingston: That seems like an incredibly speculative question. If somebody came to me and said, "This company is breaking the law," or something like that was happening, I would do something about it. But to comment otherwise, I would have to know a lot more about what was going on and what was involved. So I just don't know.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's fair. What if it came to your attention that, due to a corporate change or a change in the structure, salaries that were once publicly disclosed were then hidden? Would that raise a flag, in your experience or in your opinion?

Mr. David Livingston: I don't have any experience with that at all. It has not happened in anything that I've ever touched, so I just don't know.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. In terms of your personal background—sorry, your background with Infrastructure Ontario—and communications with Alfred Apps, is there any contact you had with Ornge whatsoever?

Mr. David Livingston: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I have no further questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. The government members?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. It's delightful to see you, but I think you've just said you had nothing to do with Ornge, so, I'm sorry, I have no questions.

We actually have a few motions to deal with, Chair, so I would suggest we do that.

Thank you very much for coming.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your testimony, and thanks for coming before the committee.

Mr. David Livingston: My pleasure. Thanks for having me.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): How much time do we have? We have 10 minutes. May I suggest, then, that the one time-sensitive motion we have is the one that you just proposed, to do with Mr. Mitchell. Maybe we could deal with that one first.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If I may, I'll move that: that Kelly Mitchell be compelled to produce and table with the committee, no later than Monday, April 30, 2012, all written records, including but not limited to billing statements, invoices, emails, correspondence and notes relating to Pathway Group's work for Ornge and/or Ontario's air ambulance service.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sorry.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I do have discussion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I don't know this person or whatever, but I know that this is April 25, and that means, really, two opening days for him—it's a him? Him or he, whatever. Kelly—is it a him?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): It's a male.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It's a male? Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): He's a male.

M^{me} France Gélinas: This man will have two days to do this. I fully agree with the intent of it. I would be willing—if he needs a few more days to get that together, I would much rather that he fully comply with what we ask him than he rush through.

I fully support what the member is trying to do. I'm just conscious of the time. It is now 3 o'clock on the 25th. On the weekend, his firm will be closed, just like everybody else. I'm guessing that the poor secretary who will photocopy all this is allowed the days off, just like everybody else. It's kind of short, isn't it?

Interjection: Yes, it is.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Good point. Any comments from you, Liz?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm just thinking here. Can we take out—I'm going to change it, and I can't do it grammatically, quite, as it is. If you delete "no later than Monday, April blah-blah-blah," so that it will read "compelled to produce and table with the committee all written records," and then we'll add a clause "and that in so far as possible that the records be produced by Monday, April 30."

1450

Interjection.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Do you have a better wording for that, that says, "Please give us what we can get as quickly as possible"?

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, you don't want to say, "as soon as possible" or "in so far as possible." You've got to have some end thing to it. It has to have a reasonable time, and there's got to be an end point.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, but that's what I was going to say: "that in so far as possible that the records be produced by Monday, April 30." And if he says it's not possible, then we'll have to deal with him when he appears as a witness. He'll be here next week.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Did you get all that, clerk?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Kind of.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I did. So you've added on to it, "in so far as possible that the records be produced by April 30" and you struck out "no later than Monday, April 30, 2012."

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. That provides some flexibility for—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Everybody understand that? Any discussion? All in favour, as amended? Agreed? Carried.

We have a little bit of time left. Mr. Klees, you have a motion?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, I do, if I can find it, Chair. Which one are we on?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): It's something about authorization of the House leaders.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'll read this, then, Chair: that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts ("the committee") formally seek the authorization of the House leaders for each of the recognized political parties in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario so as to permit the committee to sit and call witnesses during the May 2012 break week, during the week of May 21-25, 2012, and that the committee be permitted to sit for up to three full days so that the committee may continue its debate and inquiry into the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge air ambulance and related services.

The reason I'm tabling this now: The last time that we wanted to sit during a break week, the House leaders said there wasn't enough time. We are running out of time. We only have five weeks left—five days left, basically—before we break for the summer. We have many witnesses to hear from, and I think we need to focus on this.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Is there other comment on this motion?

Mr. David Zimmer: Is that constituency week?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): It is constituency week. Mr. Leal?

Mr. Jeff Leal: As part of the House leaders' meetings that I tend to on Thursday—this would be something that the House leader for the Progressive Conservative Party could put on the agenda for tomorrow's House leaders' meeting, and we could have an ample discussion there.

That would be the correct way, Mr. Chair, I think, of handling this particular item.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, I think it's important for this committee to demonstrate its intent to sit, and that's why the motion is there. I would ask you to call the question on it.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Let me interject, Mr. Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, Mr. Leal.

Mr. Jeff Leal: There's a variety of requests right now from a whole variety of committees who want to, perhaps, sit during the May break week and into June. I think it would be respectful of the House leaders' committee that meets on Thursdays—that we have the opportunity to look at all these requests that are coming forward. That's the appropriate mechanism to deal with this.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Leal is being less than forthcoming. He knows full well—

Mr. Jeff Leal: Oh, no, you're not questioning my integrity, Frank.

Mr. Frank Klees: He knows full well that in the House leaders' meeting yesterday—

Mr. Jeff Leal: No, no, you're not questioning my integrity, Frank.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, if we could be civil.

Mr. Frank Klees: —the reason that he's not prepared to accept that the committee sit is because there has been no request from the committee. This will be the request from the committee, so Mr. Milloy will not have an excuse.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The committee can make a decision on this issue. Is there any further comment? I'll wait for Mr. Zimmer to get back to his chair. Is there any further comment? Okay. Those in favour? Those opposed? Carried.

I think we're just about out of time. Thank you very much to all the committee members for your participation today. Adjourned.

The committee adjourned at 1456.

The committee met at 0819 in room 151.

SUBCOMMITTEE REPORT

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, I'll call this meeting to order. I believe we have a subcommittee report to deal with first and then a number of motions. Our first presenter is to be at 8:45, so at that point, if we can, even if we're not done our motions, move to presenters that would be good.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. I was just trying to find the subcommittee report here amongst all the paper. So, you would like me to read this?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Your subcommittee met on Monday, April 30, 2012, to consider the method of proceeding on the 2012 Special Report of the Office of the Auditor General on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services, and recommends the following:

(1) That the clerk of the committee contact Roger Yachetti to follow up with the Speaker's warrant relating to Dr. Chris Mazza.

(2) That the clerk of the committee revise the public hearing schedule for Wednesday, May 2, 2012, to remove Mr. Skanda Skanthavarathan and Mr. Flavio Volpe; to schedule Mr. Steve Farquhar from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m.; and to add Ms. Kelly Long from 2 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

(3) That the committee clerk, in consultation with the Chair, be authorized, prior to the adoption of the report of the subcommittee, to commence making any preliminary arrangements necessary to facilitate the committee's proceedings.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any debate? All in agreement? Carried.

SPECIAL REPORT, AUDITOR GENERAL:
ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE
AND RELATED SERVICES

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Then I guess we're going to start on some motions.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, I'm not sure what you have in mind in terms of the order of these. If I might, given the circumstances relating to the motion that I have—if members would agree that we could deal with that as a first item.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I thought we had agreed that we would deal with the witness motions first.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If there's not agreement for Mr. Klees's idea, then we'll start with the oldest witness motion and work our way up in historic order.

The first one would be from Mr. Klees. Do you have that motion?

Mr. Frank Klees: Which one do you want to deal with?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): It was tabled April 25, and it's a motion to the Standing Committee on Public Accounts.

Mr. Frank Klees: The appraisal?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The appraisal.

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts direct the clerk to call representatives from the appraisal firm that were involved in the appraisal of the Ornge headquarters as well as other assets related to any security agreement.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

The next one is also one of your motions, Mr. Klees, that was tabled April 25, to do with Toronto Dominion Bank.

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts direct the clerk to call representatives from the underwriting firms (Toronto Dominion Bank and Scotiabank) that were involved in the underwriting of the Ornge debt instruments.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

The next one is another motion from Mr. Klees to do with Standard and Poor's.

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts direct the clerk to call representatives from the rating agency (Standard and Poor's) who were involved in the rating of the bond issue by Ornge.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

The next motion here is from Mr. Klees, to do with the months of June, July and August.

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts ("the committee") formally seek the authorization of the House leaders for each of the recognized political parties in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario so as to permit the committee to sit and call witnesses at its pleasure during the weeks in which the House is not sitting in June, July and August of 2012 so that the committee may continue its debate and inquiry into the 2012 special report of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services.

Chair, if I might, I would be willing to withdraw this, depending on what happens, obviously, on the motion that I have before the committee to expand the mandate of the committee, which I believe would give us this authorization.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Well, why don't we just hold on to that one—

Mr. Frank Klees: We could just set this aside.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): —set that aside.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We can still deal with this. Your other motion that is still to come would trump this one.

Mr. Frank Klees: Fair enough.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any comment? All in favour?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Of what? Deferring?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No, of voting on this motion.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, of voting on the motion. Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes. Opposed? Carried.

The next one, Mr. Klees, is to do with an analysis prepared by MOHLTC.

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, request a copy of the report or analysis carried out by the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care with respect to a proposal submitted by Ornge on or about January 2011.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion on this motion? All in favour? Carried.

The next motion is one by Mr. Klees to do with Tom Rothfels and John MacKenzie. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, and if I could have a copy of that, please.

I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, call Tom Rothfels, former COO at Ornge, and John MacKenzie to testify before this committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

The next motion is one tabled by Mr. Klees to do with Rhoda Beecher. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, call Rhoda Beecher to testify before this committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

The next motion is one tabled by Mr. Klees to do with Robert Blakely.

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, call Robert Blakely, vice-president and general manager, Canadian Helicopters Ltd., to testify before this committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

The next motion is one by Mr. Klees to do with Ontario's Integrity Commissioner. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, call Lynn Morrison, Ontario's Integrity Commissioner, to testify before this committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Mr. Klees had a motion that he was going to table. You've got it there?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I think this may be the one.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: The one that has the committee requesting the clerk to—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): I just didn't put it on everyone's desk because we needed all these ones to be done first.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. So if we could get that now?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): That's the one there.

Mr. Frank Klees: Oh, yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts request Ornge to provide the committee with the contact information for the following employees: Rick Potter, Tom Lepine, Maria Renzella, Cynthia Heinz, Randy L'Heureux, Rhoda Beecher and Tom Rothfels.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Norm, if we could just note that our understanding is that, given that the committee has now officially asked the clerk to get the contact information from Ornge, they will now be able to provide us with any contact information they have for those people.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So noted.

Mr. Klees, you now have your motion to do with the terms of reference, I believe it is.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Chair.

I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts request that the House expand the mandate of the committee with respect to its investigation of the 2012 special report of the Office of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services; and

That the committee be additionally authorized to examine and make recommendations on:

(1) the extension of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act to all aspects of Ornge;

(2) the extension of the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act to all aspects of Ornge;

(3) Ornge being subject to the oversight of the Ombudsman;

(4) changes to accountability legislation in order to enhance compliance and enforcement, including whether sanctions should apply prospectively to current or former ministers, ministerial officials, political advisers, lobbyists, consultants, legal counsel and/or external parties; and

That the committee be authorized to meet at the call of the Chair;

That the committee may examine any other matter it deems relevant to its terms of reference; and

That the committee shall report, or if the House is not sitting, shall deposit with the Clerk of the House its report and recommendations as soon as reasonably possible at the conclusion of its investigation.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion?

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, if I might?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Perhaps, just by way of explanation, I think that we've seen, over the last number of weeks since the committee has been sitting, that the very narrow scope within which this committee has been conducting its business has just not been conducive to us being able to adequately question witnesses. Even witnesses who have come forward—I think of Mr. Apps who, in his opening remarks, specifically said that it's difficult, within 30 minutes, to be able to adequately get to the facts of the matter in such an important and complex issue.

I think that there has been a lot of debate in the Legislature. We did have a vote in the Legislature that sent a very strong signal; it called on the government to strike a select committee of the Legislature on this issue. We had agreement from the Minister of Health that she would support that if it was the will of the Legislature. For whatever reasons, we have not been able to convince the government to give us that select committee.

There are still a number of witnesses who would like to come forward but are saying that they feel uncomfortable, given the scope of this committee and the limitations that are here in terms of protection for witnesses. As a result, we have some disruption—without question, we have some disruption in terms of how the business of the House is proceeding.

I believe that based on the comments of the government House leader in the Legislature last Thursday, in which he made it very clear, in response to our challenge about expanding the scope of the committee, that in his opinion it's up to this committee to determine how we want to proceed with the business of this committee.

I'm taking him at his word, and I'm asking my colleagues in this committee to accept the terms of reference here, within the context of this committee. I'm very satisfied to continue to carry out the work that we have before us, within the context of the public accounts committee, assuming that we're willing to expand the scope as we put it forward.

I think that it should be perceived as a compromise situation that allows us to move forward. If that is the case, certainly, Chair, I can assure you and my colleagues with the government that if this is accepted, we will, in that case, ensure that whatever business is before the House will proceed according to schedule.

Mr. David Zimmer: What, no bells?

Mr. Frank Klees: No bells.

So I leave this with you, Chair, and hope that we can get the agreement of this committee to move forward and if, in fact, there is a motion required to allow us to move forward, that the government House leader and the opposition House leaders will agree, then, to move quickly to present that motion to the Legislature so that we can get on with the business that we know is so important.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Actually, I'm quite surprised by the direction this motion has taken, because when we were discussing this at subcommittee, I think what Mr. Klees had said previously in the House was to get the committee to adopt the terms of reference which he had proposed originally for a select committee on Ornge—and what we were looking at on Monday, which were the proposed terms of reference for the select committee on Ornge and where we did actually make a few amendments because they didn't seem to make any sense, relevant to what we're doing here at public accounts.

But what has come back as the revised motion bears virtually zero resemblance to the original request for a select committee in the terms of reference that were in the original request for the select committee. The things that were laid out in the motion that you presented to the subcommittee the other day, Mr. Klees, has us examining a number of items that are very closely aligned with what we have been doing, reporting back on the things that we would almost inevitably report back on anyway, given the nature of the testimony that we've had. This seems to be quite a different change in direction.

In particular, I had suggested that if we were going to have a look at this, that we needed to have more direction to your very open-ended suggestion for expanding the dates. In fact, if anything, this has gotten more open-ended than the original timing to which I was objecting, because it's that the committee can be authorized to meet any time at the call of the Chair and examine anything that you would happen to want it to, which seems to me like hardly being terms of reference at all.

So I just put on the record that there are significant problems with the motion that has come back. The other motion had things in it that I thought were useful, but this one has gotten way far away from where we started. I just put that on the record.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for that, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Two questions. The first one is, I'd like to have the opinion of the clerk or whoever knows those kinds of things: What we are adding, what Mr. Klees would like us to adopt, are powers that are not included right now within the public accounts' regular doing of business?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Will, would you like to make a comment?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): First of all, this is a recommendation to the House; it's not anything but that. So the House can do with it what it decides to do with it.

Second, with relation to Mr. Klees's original motion, about 80% of that stuff the committee can do on its own anyway, so it would have almost been redundant for us to put it in another motion, because then you're looking at it and moving a motion in committee asking the committee to do things that it can already do. So if it was voted down, then you would also be voting down stuff that the committee already had within its powers.

The motion that you're seeing in front of you today is outside of what the committee can already do, and that's why they're recommendations to the House—to have the House do with it what it sees fit to do.

M^{me} France Gélinas: All right. That makes it clear to me. That was my first point.

My second point is that I just want to make sure, because I also saw a difference from what was presented to what is presented now, although I understand better that what's presented now are things that we wouldn't be allowed to do unless we get permission. So that's fine, and it's in keeping, I would say, with the spirit of what we wanted the select committee to do.

One thing that was very important for me and that is not there anymore is, in my experience with public accounts, we have never sent out an open invitation for people to come. The reason I bring that forward is that I find the working of public accounts on this particular matter has been very adversarial. We treat everybody coming here as if they were a hostile witness. I've read some of the stuff that Mr. Zimmer wants to put forward, and it's all geared to people who don't want to be here.

In a select committee, you open the door. You let people come forward and bring forward ideas to make things better. I don't see this in our new terms of reference. Is it because it's already there and I didn't know?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): That's correct. If the subcommittee wanted to get together or if the full committee wanted to agree to send out invitations or advertise wherever they wanted or let people know that the hearings were going on, any committee can do that. In fact, when you're doing public hearings on a bill, that happens on a regular basis. It's really up to how the committee wanted to move forward.

In this case, we drafted the original witness list, and we really haven't gone back to that original witness list. It has just been motions that have been coming before committee adding more witnesses to that initial list. If the subcommittee or the full committee wanted to have a discussion about that, that is completely within the powers of the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, under the terms of reference that we currently have.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What we are asking here, to me, is in keeping with what a select committee would have had the pleasure to do, if they so wished. So I think this is a step in the right direction: to respect the wish of the House that has voted on a motion that says that they wish for a select committee to handle this matter. I think this is a good compromise, and I thank you for clarifying that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, I want to make it very clear that what we have before us here by way of this motion is the result of consulting with the clerk, who I understand consulted with his colleagues at the table as well. We wanted something that would do what the intent was, and that was to expand the scope of the committee to give us, de facto, the same authority that we would have had under a separate select committee.

This does look different than the original motion that I put forward, and the reason is, as the clerk explained, many of the items that we had included in my original motion would have been redundant. It was the advice of the clerk to remove those from the motion. So I find it difficult—and likewise in terms of advertising for witnesses. We already have that authority, and that's why it's not in this motion.

What we have here is what we thought was, first of all, a response to the government House leader's very specific comments, both in and outside of the House last week, saying that he is leaving it up to this committee to determine how they want to conduct its business.

I just think that what we want to demonstrate to the government is that we're willing to work with them. What we will not do is compromise on what we believe is an effective way for us, and the only way for us, to get to the bottom of this. We want to do so efficiently, and we want the business of the House to carry on as well.

Chair, with that explanation, I would ask that you call the vote, and hopefully we can bring this matter—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. I'm getting nods from the government side as well, so I assume that means we can have a vote.

All in favour? Opposed? Carried.

We are out of time for motions.

ORNGE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We have our first presenter here this morning, and that is Patricia Volker, board member of Ornge. Patricia, if you would come forward, please. Good morning.

Ms. Patricia Volker: Good morning.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Just to confirm, you have read the information for a witness coming before the committee?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Yes, I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk has an oath for you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): You wanted to swear an oath; correct?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Yes.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): The Bible is in front of you there.

Ms. Volker, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I do.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have up to five minutes for an opening statement, and then there'll be questions by the parties.

Ms. Patricia Volker: I have an opening statement, with copies here.

Good morning. I want to thank the Standing Committee on Public Accounts for the opportunity to speak to you this morning. My name is Patricia Volker, and I am one of the new volunteer members on the Ornge board of directors. I am a chartered accountant and currently the director of public accounting with the Certified Management Accountants of Ontario. I have over 30 years of professional experience, including more than 10 years at the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario, which is the self-regulating body for Ontario's chartered accountants. I held various positions there, including the director of standards enforcement.

Prior to the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario, I acquired financial institution experience at the Bank of Montreal where I worked with the first group to operationally liaise with their wholly owned US subsidiary, Harris Bank. I then became a line banker and left the Bank of Montreal, with the responsibility for the personal and commercial operations of a number of branches and personnel in the west end. I obtained my CA while at Ernst and Young where I provided advice to primarily publicly traded clients and senior personnel on a variety of accounting, assurance and regulatory issues.

I continue to be a strong supporter of my professional and personal communities and was a member of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants task force on the appropriate disclosed basis of accounting. I am an aviation enthusiast, a pilot and past president of the Canadian International Air Show, where I was also a board member for 10 years.

Prior to receiving my CA designation, I graduated from the University of Toronto with a bachelor of science degree in pharmacology and physiology.

I joined the Ornge board in January of this year, and I am the current chair of the finance and audit committee. The finance and audit committee of Ornge has responsibility for the overall financial oversight of the organization. The committee will recommend policies to the board that maintain and improve the financial health and integrity of the organization, engage in long-range financial planning and monitor the financial performance of Ornge as a whole.

Ornge's annual audited financial statements will be reviewed and approved by the audit committee. The finance and audit committee is also responsible for both internal and external audit functions. The audit committee's mandate also requires the creation of a whistle-blowing policy, which is currently in development, and the committee will report to the board regularly on all of these issues.

I am committed to working with my fellow board members and the staff at Ornge to ensure we rebuild trust with all Ontarians and provide the highest-quality patient care. I am happy to take questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for that statement. The first round of questioning goes to the official opposition: Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Ms. Volker, thank you for your attendance here. I understand that your position on the board is a volunteer position. Is that right?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Yes, that is right.

Mr. Frank Klees: So there is no remuneration to you?

Ms. Patricia Volker: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Why are you doing this?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I do believe in supporting community. I was involved with the Canadian International Air Show, which, the one year that I did check, I spent over 1,000 hours in a volunteer capacity, and I think that Ornge is a very worthy cause and that, from an Ontario perspective, we need to ensure that we're doing the right things for our constituents, and if we can do them fiscally prudently, that's a good thing too.

Mr. Frank Klees: Fiduciary responsibility is the primary responsibility of a director of any board of directors. Would you agree with that?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Yes, it certainly is.

Mr. Frank Klees: To whom are you responsible as a director?

Ms. Patricia Volker: As a director, I would consider my responsibility initially to the board chair, who would speak on behalf of the board. We are responsible, I believe, to the people of Ontario.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're familiar with the CV of the former chair of the board of directors of Ornge, Mr. Beltzner?

Ms. Patricia Volker: No, I am not.

Mr. Frank Klees: Have you familiarized yourself with any of the other board members who were there?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Of the previous board?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Ms. Patricia Volker: No, I have not.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can I ask—in your position as chair of the finance and audit committee, at the end of the day you will have responsibility to monitor and get to the bottom of issues that the Auditor General of Ontario had a very difficult time getting to—are you familiar with the performance agreement and the standards that are set for Ornge?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I have read it. I cannot quote it to you, but I have read it, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Have you read the original agreement or the revised agreement?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I have looked at both.

Mr. Frank Klees: When you read the original agreement, the some 15 pages of covenants that are there, the inspection responsibilities, the reporting responsibilities that Ornge had, would you say that the previous board failed in their responsibilities, in their fiduciary responsibilities?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I really have not spent any time looking back at what happened prior to the creation of this board, so I'm not in a position to answer that question.

Mr. Frank Klees: Have you read the Auditor General's report on Ornge?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: That certainly is quite an in-depth analysis of what happened in the past. You didn't have to look any further than the Auditor General's report. Based just on that, and based on your knowledge of that former performance agreement, would you not agree that the former board failed miserably in their fiduciary responsibilities?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Well, I wouldn't disagree with the comments made in the Auditor General's report.

Mr. Frank Klees: You know, I'm not trying to be difficult. I am trying to get a sense of how important you feel the role of a director is, and I want to get to the heart of what you may think is different when it comes to fiduciary responsibility than the former board, who also was a CA, and I encourage you to look at his CV—members of many boards, many oversight committees of the chartered accountancy profession. He clearly had a very, very distorted view, in my opinion, of what fiduciary responsibility is. I'm hopeful that the new crop of directors at Ornge has a more clear view of fiduciary responsibility.

I'm just going to ask one more time: Based on what the Auditor General has very clearly told us about the direction that Ornge went, about the lack of oversight on the part of the board, the lack of responsibility and accountability, would you agree that the previous board failed in their fiduciary responsibilities?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I certainly agree with the comments that are made in the Auditor General's report, but I—

Mr. Frank Klees: This is disheartening.

Ms. Patricia Volker: I'm hesitant to say that only because I have no—based on the conclusions that were in the Auditor General's report, I can absolutely concur with your line of questioning, but I would like to think, perhaps giving the benefit to others in my profession, that the decisions that they perhaps made and that in their state of mind they believed were right—would I have made those based on what I've seen in the Auditor General's report? No, and I'm not trying to hedge the question, but—

Mr. Frank Klees: Actually, you know, you are hedging the question, and here's what is disturbing to me about that. The board of directors should not be trying to defend the past. You shouldn't be trying, in my opinion, to defend past directors. I don't think it's your role to play interference on behalf of the government to protect either the minister or anyone else. I'm hoping that you accepted your appointment as a director for the sole purpose of helping to restore confidence in our air ambulance system and to provide proper oversight. I think in order to do that, it's important to know what went wrong so that you know what to fix.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes left.

Ms. Patricia Volker: I would like to assure you that the reason that I am on this board, and I believe everyone is on this board, is for the sole purpose of making sure that the province of Ontario's patient needs are taken care of and their financial resources are used appropriately.

With respect to the actions of the past board, I'm just a little leery to comment as to why they did what they did, because I was not there. Perhaps that's the auditor in me. Unless I've seen something—I want to see before I can make a conclusion.

I can assure you that from my perspective, one might question some of the structuring and things that went on. If the true focus is to maintain patients' need at an efficient perspective, there are simple structures and there are more complex structures. We plan to follow a simple structure and make it easy for everyone who touches Ornge to know what it is we do and how we do it and why we do it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll move to the NDP: Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I think Jagmeet is going to start.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Good morning. Thank you for being here.

Ms. Patricia Volker: Good morning.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I just want to touch on that last line of answers that you provided. With respect to the corporate structure, were you exposed to or did you get a chance to look at the previous corporate structure, and are you aware of that?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I have seen charts that showed the structure, yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just based on your experience as an auditor as well as a chartered accountant and your very extensive experience, in terms of a publicly funded institution that provides ambulance care, what's your opinion on the corporate structure and the way it was laid out?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Again, I'm a little reluctant to comment as to why things were done when I was not at the table when decisions were made from a structuring perspective. If the question is, was this the most efficient and streamlined way to run the air ambulance service in the province of Ontario—because there is a flow chart, because there is a larger piece of paper, one would suggest no. There certainly were other activities that were being conducted, other than the direct provision of patient care.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: With the current board, you indicated that there are different ways you can structure. There's a complex structure or there's a simple structure. You've indicated the board's desire—and let me just make sure that's correct. Is it the current board's desire to move towards a more simple structure in terms of the corporate layout?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Certainly, those steps are under way. Management has things in place. Certain of those entities no longer exist or are no longer financially viable, so they are being shut down, and we are trying to work with a simpler structure than we inherited.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Is the plan to do away with all for-profit entities, or will there be some for-profit entities in Ornge?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I believe that we have, currently, our entities that hold the licences for the fixed-wing and the rotor-wing in two separate companies, which I believe are for-profit companies.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Were you aware of the fact that there were some funds that had been unallocated, or, probably more accurately, they're missing funds that the Auditor General was unable to locate where they were? Are you aware of those funds, and are you taking any steps to find out where they are?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Certainly, I'm conscious of the comments that were in the report. Since we started at the end of January, our committee has recommended and completed a request for proposal, where we have engaged a new firm of external auditors, and that is certainly one of the things that I expect to discuss with them, and I'm waiting for their full report they started yesterday.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Ensuring that Ornge is transparent by allowing our freedom-of-information request regarding salary disclosure, as well as allowing the Ombudsman to have access to oversight of Ornge—what's your opinion on those two pieces?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I'm not familiar with the specific requirements for the freedom-of-information or Ombudsman requests, so I'm not in a position to comment, but certainly as an entity that is using provincial funds on behalf of the taxpayers, that's what I mean by transparency. To the extent that we do things with Ontarians' money, they should know about it.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You ended your written statement by saying, "I am committed to working with my fellow board members and the staff at Ornge to ensure we rebuild trust with all Ontarians and provide the highest-quality patient care." What leads you to believe that trust has been lost? You are an auditor; you need proof before you make statements. What is some of the proof that led you to put that statement down?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I think it's safe to say that if one is in the Toronto area reading the papers, the press coverage of Ornge in the last few months has been other than positive, for valid reasons, and part of that is what I think causes the general Ontarian to go, "What are we getting for the money that is being allocated to Ornge?" So there is a lack of trust. One reads the paper and sees salaries that are clearly higher than the norm being paid to people and that, I think, makes people question how efficient the previous entity was and if they were really focused on delivering patient care.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So how do you intend to rebuild that trust?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I believe it will be a slow process. You can't turn it around overnight. Certainly getting the right people in the right spots in management, and making sure that there is a culture internally is an important piece of it, as is, I believe, developing a functioning whistle-blowing policy, which our committee has taken on as the challenge.

It will take some time, but the employees and the folks who work at Ornge I've had the privilege to meet are dedicated, they are knowledgeable and they want to continue to do what they do. But they really would like to read some more positive things in the press, rather than the negative. It will take time, but I know we can get there.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So in your role on the board, you still feel confident that you know the people who are doing the operating side? Do you know that they are competent? Usually, the governance and the operation are separated. But you have this assurance that those people are good?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I've had the opportunity to meet some of them. Not that I could tell you, but just in conversation they are dedicated and they truly believe in the service that they provide to the province of Ontario. We have a human resources committee. We have a quality of care committee—and I know you've spoken to him. All of the board members want to make sure that we, as a board, are involved with an entity where every piece is working as well as it can.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How do you communicate with the ministry?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I do not personally communicate with the ministry. My belief is that the chair communicates with the ministry, and management. It would not be appropriate, I don't believe, for me to report.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Do you know if reporting happens monthly or happens as needed?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I don't know if there's an official timetable.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So the board was never asked to report back to the ministry on anything occurring, any of its doings, or anything like this? The ministry is letting you go and do your own work?

Ms. Patricia Volker: No, I believe the chair has some reporting relationship, but I don't know the specifics.

M^{me} France G  linas: It has not been shared with the board that the board has to report back to the ministry on the changes that are being done? So this has nothing—

Ms. Patricia Volker: Certainly management is doing that as well through the performance agreement and making sure that those targets are met.

M^{me} France G  linas: But there's nothing in there regarding the governance reporting back to the ministry?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I don't recall.

M^{me} France G  linas: It has not been shared with you?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I don't recall. Sorry.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you are out of time. So if we could move to the government, who in the government would like to do the questioning? Mr. Moridi?

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair, and thank you, Ms. Volker, for taking the time and appearing before this committee.

Ms. Volker, you're a respected and highly regarded accountant. When you were appointed to the board of Ornge, what was your impression of the former board of governors and the governance at Ornge, in particular when it relates to the financial accounting at Ornge?

Ms. Patricia Volker: As mentioned, I have not spent more than a moment in looking backwards, because we, as a board and as a committee, have had enough on our plate in looking forward. Knowing that with the March year-end we would be looking at the financial statements as a whole with new external auditors, I'm really waiting to see their conclusions and deal with everything as it pertains to the audited financial statements for the year ending March 31.

I personally have not gone back and looked at any single transactions or the historical financial statements. We, as a committee, have been focused on moving forward—so putting the audit up for tender, developing a whistle-blowing policy and ensuring that we have a mandate that is appropriate on a go-forward basis.

Mr. Bas Balkissoon: Would you think that looking back to the history, one can learn for the future?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Absolutely, and I do look forward to looking at the history for this last 12 months, which certainly have been a period of change, in its entirety and in discussion with the external auditors.

Mr. Reza Moridi: I understand, Ms. Volker, that you have some experience as a pilot and also in aeronautics. How would you think that your experience in those fields will be helpful to carry on your job at Ornge? Would you think that particular area of experience and expertise would be helpful to Ornge?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Minimally. My plane is not in the same league as the assets held by Ornge. I do own an air ambulance, but it's from 1942. Certainly, I'm sitting on this board with my CA hat on and not my pilot headset.

Mr. Reza Moridi: As you know, the board has enormous responsibility. Every board has lots of responsibilities—as a director sitting on the board of a corporation. Given the Ornge situation, what steps is the board going to take to make sure that there will be more effective control in the spending of public dollars at Ornge?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Certainly, the corporate structure will be streamlined, as it has been. The profit/not-for-profit splits that used to exist no longer exist.

Ornge has not had, to date, an internal audit function, and that is something that we are in the process of changing. I think it's our committee's responsibility to ensure that we do have an internal control mandate and that we do have the right person spearheading that. And the controls are more than just financial. The controls relate to every aspect of the organization—maintenance records, all sorts of things.

I think it's important that everyone at Ornge understands that an entity has risk and we need to identify those risks as it pertains to every area within the company and make sure the controls are in place and are working.

Mr. Reza Moridi: As you know, the government has signed a new performance agreement with Ornge. We had one in the past which wasn't effective; we have a new one. How do you think that this new performance agreement with Ornge is going to increase the government's oversight and also the relationship between Ornge and the government?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Speaking as a member of the new board, we are conscious of what that new performance agreement contains, and we will do our best to ensure that we adhere to each and every aspect within the agreement. There are some tight things within that agreement. There's a significant amount of disclosure that needs to be made within a relatively short time frame, and I know that management and the board are committed to trying to do that.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Would you think that this new performance agreement with Ornge is going to strengthen the financial reporting by Ornge to the ministry?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I don't think the timing of the reporting was an issue so much as what was being reported, because of the various accounting things that were being dealt with. What I think we're looking towards is making sure that we meet the timing and that we have a simple structure that's easy to understand.

Mr. Reza Moridi: In terms of accountability and transparency of Ornge, how do you think this new performance agreement will affect those two processes in relation to the ministry?

Ms. Patricia Volker: I believe the performance agreement—and I'd have to look at it and go through it line by line—was designed with the intent of providing the ministry with information that both parties felt was required and including content that was appropriate and on a timely basis.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes left.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you. In the past, Ms. Volker, the data which Ornge reported to the government and to the ministry, in some cases, wasn't accurate. Would you think that based, again, on this new performance agreement between the government and Ornge—how the transfer of data and reporting will be affected by this new performance agreement?

0910

Ms. Patricia Volker: Again, I can't comment on inaccuracies in the past, but what I would hope is that, on a go-forward basis from a financial perspective, we have designed systems that make sure that we, as Ornge management and as Ornge board, have the right information, in the right timeline, that we can make our decisions with, and one of those would be to share it with the ministry. I'm not sure if that's answering your question.

Mr. Reza Moridi: What would you think your role is as a member of the board in relation to the operational matters of Ornge and also on reporting to the government on accountability and transparency?

Ms. Patricia Volker: From an operational—

Mr. Reza Moridi: Yes, your role as a board member.

Ms. Patricia Volker: Sorry. As to the role of the—

Mr. Reza Moridi: How would you see your role as a board member at Ornge in terms of transparency and accountability of this organization?

Ms. Patricia Volker: Again, as mentioned, I believe that one of the things that we need to do as a board and as management is make sure that there is open dialogue between Ornge, the entity, and our funder, the Ministry of Health. Some of that comes through the performance agreement, with mandated checks and balances for financial and operational data. We as a board need to make sure that those systems are in place to get that information to management, because they need to make the decisions, and also to the ministry.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time. Thank you very much for coming before the committee today and presenting.

Ms. Patricia Volker: Thank you

MR. DAVID CAPLAN

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And our next presenter is Mr. David Caplan from Global Public Affairs. Welcome.

Mr. David Caplan: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And just to confirm that you've read the information, the letter for a witness appearing before the committee?

Mr. David Caplan: Yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very good. Then our clerk has an oath.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): The Bible's in front of you there, Mr. Caplan. Do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. David Caplan: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have five minutes for an opening presentation, and then we'll go to questions.

Mr. David Caplan: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I may go a little bit over, but I'd like to complete my statement.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sure.

Mr. David Caplan: Thank you very much. I'm here today, and I'm pleased to attend hearings and answer any questions you may have.

I'd like to take the opportunity to give you some context and clarity about my role as MPP for Don Valley East for 14 years, my role as Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal and as Minister of Health and Long-Term Care.

I've been involved in politics since my earliest memories. I have campaign stories, insights into government and even a scar or two. I also have lifelong friends from all walks of life and from parties on all sides of the House. Having served as deputy House leader and deputy whip, I respect the traditions and roles of all parties in serving the people of Ontario.

From the beginning of my time in politics, I've learned from example that the role of elected officials is to serve and represent the public interest, not personal interests, not corporate interests, but the interests of all constituents, indeed all Ontarians. I've kept that lesson in mind throughout my career as an MPP and as a cabinet minister.

In opposition, I knew full well that my job was to hold the government to account. I understand that that is the role of many of you on this committee, and I commend you for it.

As Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal, I'm proud of my accomplishments. I was able to plan, manage and deliver the construction of hospitals, schools, courthouses, transit, indeed a renaissance of construction that has touched every corner of our province. I led the creation of a progressive and coordinated growth plan, garnering international attention and support. I was involved in creating innovative initiatives like Ontario's deposit-return system for beverage alcohol.

I had the privilege to serve as Minister of Health and Long-Term Care from the end of June 2008 until the beginning of October 2009. I was responsible for overseeing a ministry with a budget of almost $47 billion, over a quarter of a million direct and indirect dedicated health care workers, over 5,000 agencies, boards, commissions, transfer payments partners and contractors.

During my brief time as minister, I introduced and passed expanded scope-of-practice legislation, supported by all parties; legislation to protect the public by expanding the powers of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, supported and passed by all parties; steps toward badly needed reform of our mental health system and introduced legislation that, while it did not pass, was supported by all parties. I introduced Canada's first system for tracking and lowering hospital-acquired infection. I led our efforts to prepare for the H1N1 pandemic. I negotiated a widely supported collective agreement with Ontario's physicians, to name a few highlights.

Now, I anticipate you have some questions regarding one of those transfer payment agencies, Ornge, so let me be clear on a few issues.

When I became minister, I took the opportunity to review the 2007 Auditor General's report; in it, Mr. McCarter dedicated a section to Ornge. It was a follow-up to his 2005 annual review which looked at Ontario's air ambulance services. The report states: "Responsibility for coordinating all aspects of Ontario's air ambulance system was transferred to Ornge (formerly the Ontario Air Ambulance Services Co.), a non-profit body accountable to the government through a performance agreement. The transfer was completed in January 2006...." The report went on to outline a number of operational ways that Ornge could be improved, including decisions on cancelling calls, operator service reviews, location of air bases and aircraft, lines of authority, patient billings and an integration of air information systems. Nowhere in the Auditor General's 2007 report were concerns raised about Ornge's then non-profit status or its corporate structure, nor about its performance agreement with the ministry.

During my time as Minister of Health and Long-Term Care, I met with Ornge CEO Dr. Chris Mazza on one occasion in 2008. I do not recall who else was present, but I am certain that members of my staff and ministry staff were there too. We were, of course, focused on discussing Ornge's operational issues. For example, Ornge indicated that it had taken the 2007 report to heart and had implemented or was implementing all of the recommendations. At no time before, during or after that meeting were issues discussed about Ornge's plans to develop for-profit entities, nor were there discussions around executive compensation. During my 15 months as Minister of Health and Long-Term Care, I was never approached by anyone either at Ornge, in the ministry, in the media, by the opposition, or anyone else, for that matter, indicating those kinds of concerns about Ornge.

I have reviewed the Auditor General's 2012 special report on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services and want to bring to your attention a few issues regarding oversight of Ornge.

The report confirms that, one, monitoring of Ornge's performance occurred both in appearances before the Standing Committee on Public Accounts and in submissions to the Management Board of Cabinet for approval to outsource air ambulance services. The ministry committed to establishing performance standards and monitoring the performance of an external service provider against those standards. In outlining its plans for Ornge to the Standing Committee on Public Accounts in February 2006, the ministry committed to set standards and monitor performance against those standards to ensure that, "The end result will be improved care, improved ... service, increasing effectiveness and efficiency of the delivery of service, and the assurance of greater fiscal and medical accountability." However, the auditor notes that the corporate entities created by Ornge and signed off by its board were not covered by the performance agreement.

Secondly, in 2008 the ministry contracted, through its internal auditor, to have a special review done to determine whether Ornge was complying with several aspects of the performance agreement and had adequate administrative processes in place. The review covered the period from Ornge's commencement of air ambulance operation to November 2008. It focused on the 12-month period ending March 31, 2008. The results were issued in September 2010, after I served as Minister of Health. One of the outcomes of the review was that the ministry needed to obtain more comfort regarding Ornge's corporate structure and its impact on delivery of air ambulance service in Ontario.

I want to bring this to your attention because I want to set the record straight that, to my knowledge, the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care was providing oversight of Ornge during the period that I was there.

What went wrong with Ornge and who was responsible—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If you could wrap up. We're a couple of minutes overdue.

Mr. David Caplan: I'm just at the end here.

What went wrong with Ornge and who was responsible is certainly the purview of this committee.

I believe Ornge can best be described as a rogue agency. The Ornge management quietly attempted to restructure the not-for-profit Ornge into a for-profit corporate entity that would serve their interests and obscure the lines of accountability and the flow of money. The board of directors became complicit with Ornge management in making this happen. I believe that both management and the board of directors of Ornge failed in serving the interests of the people of Ontario.

The auditor's March 2012 report indicated that between 2006 and 2010, Ornge began creating a number of organizations, and the boards of directors of these organizations were composed entirely of the individuals who comprised Ornge's board.

The report goes on to say that by 2011, almost all of Ornge's senior management became employees of the new for-profit international business. Directors were hired as consultants. Ornge spent millions of dollars paying lawyers and consultants to paper these arrangements over.

I'm not pleased at all with what went on at Ornge. However, I can state categorically that during my time as minister, I did not see these kinds of red flags.

Mr. Chair, I'm now very happy to answer your questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your opening statement. We go to the NDP to begin with. France, are you going to go first?

M^{me} France G  linas: Nice to see you, David. How are you?

Mr. David Caplan: Nice to see you, France.

M^{me} France G  linas: The first question I'd like to ask you has to do with your time as minister. The salary of Chris Mazza disappeared from the sunshine list while you were Minister of Health. The NDP filed a freedom-of-information with your ministry, asking what had happened to Chris Mazza's salary. Were you ever made aware of the freedom-of-information and that we were looking for his salary?

Mr. David Caplan: No. Freedom-of-information requests go through the process where there is a freedom-of-information officer. And I can tell you that at the Ministry of Health, there are a large number of freedom-of-information requests. None of them are ever shared with the minister. It would go through an administrative process that is set out in the act, and the answers are provided. Now, when the answer is generated, it is supposed to be shared with us so that we do know, but not anytime before or during that process.

M^{me} France G  linas: So was the answer shared with you? The answer we received was received during your time in office.

Mr. David Caplan: Well, I don't recall ever seeing the reply or the answer to that question. I must admit that I tried to review back on the 2009 list. At the time, nobody in the ministry, nobody in the media, nobody in the opposition pointed out that there was this glaring omission. What we did notice was that there were a large number of individuals who were on the sunshine list, and we weren't really looking for people who were not.

M^{me} France G  linas: Well, the answer we received was that none of the information could be shared with us; a number of documents had been found regarding his salary and that none of it could be shared with us.

There were a number of people who had been doing air ambulance services in northern Ontario who were quite worried about what was going on at Ornge. They wrote to you, and actually, Michael Gravelle, who was MPP for Thunder Bay-Superior North and is now a minister, also wrote to you about this. They were worried about what Ornge was doing, and they respectfully requested an investigation of what was going on. Did you ever talk to Michael Gravelle about his worry about what was going on at Ornge while you were minister?

Mr. David Caplan: I don't recall any conversation with Minister Gravelle about Ornge.

M^{me} France G  linas: You don't recall anything about Ornge?

Mr. David Caplan: Not a conversation with Minister Gravelle around Ornge.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. How about the northern air providers who were raising a red flag about what was going on in the corporate structure?

Mr. David Caplan: In their letter, they don't raise any questions around that. They raised questions around the fact that they were operating and consolidating operations in northern Ontario, and in their words, they were saying "competing with their for-profit business."

M^{me} France G  linas: Did you talk to them?

Mr. David Caplan: No, we never had a meeting with any of the air transport providers in northern Ontario. I did reply via letter to tell them that Ornge had been set up under the act and the way that things had moved along—

M^{me} France G  linas: I have seen the letter.

Mr. David Caplan:—that it was not a direct service provided by the Ministry of Health, and that, appropriately, the concerns they had around the business of Ornge and the competition they saw with themselves—

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. I'd like to go back. I read the letter, so I know what you're saying.

Mr. David Caplan: I just wanted, you know, to share with you what my reply was.

M^{me} France G  linas: The previous minister was here—Minister Smitherman came. He basically said, when he learned about the $1.4-million compensation, that it didn't happen during his time, because you took it on in June 2008, so the salary disappeared under your term. Basically, he pointed the finger at you, saying that the minister did not do his job, the ministry did not do their job and it would not have happened under his watch, blaming you that it happened under your watch. What do you make of that?

Mr. David Caplan: Well, listen, Mr. Smitherman will answer however he does. What I can tell you is that no one, whether it was the ministry, whether it was the media or the opposition, noticed this at all. It did not raise a particular concern and it did not appear that anything untoward happened.

I did meet, as I had mentioned, with CEO Chris Mazza once in 2008. The issue of executive compensation never came up. We talked about the operational issues.

M^{me} France G  linas: Do you figure that $1.4 million would have raised red flags? Do you figure that that could have been appropriate if you were still minister?

Mr. David Caplan: If somebody were to know. So I do know, for example, where we have—

M^{me} France G  linas: You know now that it's $1.4 million. Do you figure this is an acceptable salary?

Mr. David Caplan: Let me put it this way: I was responsible for setting up enterprise corporations for the Ontario government and I do know the salary range of the executives and they were less than a third of that kind of salary figure. So it would have been highly unusual and it would have raised a number of concerns, whether that was the time in finding the CEO of the Ontario Realty Corp., the liquor control board, OLG, IO. They would all be in that kind of range, so the level that you're talking about would be highly unusual and would stand out.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. So when you were Minister of Health, you were forced to resign over eHealth. You did not create the mess at eHealth, you inherited it.

The same thing is happening now. The minister who is in place did not create the mess at Ornge but she is the one who is there now, she is the one responsible.

You did the honourable thing. You admitted that what had gone on at eHealth was unacceptable; that we had to show leadership and we had to show that confidence had to be rebuilt in eHealth. In order to do this, you did the honourable thing: You resigned in a show to acknowledge the scandal that had been there and the willingness of the government to turn the page.

We are now facing a scandal that is bigger than what we saw at eHealth, that has ramifications as to how the government does business that are way worse than what we saw at eHealth. Do you figure the current minister should do the same thing that you did, have the same courage that you had, to show Ontarians that the page needs to be turned, and resign?

Mr. David Caplan: I don't think that's a question that I can really answer. That's—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're on your last minute.

Mr. David Caplan: I'm here to talk about my time as minister, what I knew or didn't know about Ornge. The kind of consideration that you're asking about, France, is I think a question that is best appropriately put to the minister or to the Premier.

I always discharge my duties, as I talked about, with the way and the values that I was raised and the reason that I feel that public service is important. Everybody has to govern their own behaviours and carry themselves accordingly.

I really do believe that kind of question, Mr. Chair, is best put to the minister herself or the Premier for an answer.

M^{me} France G  linas: Just one quick—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time, so we'll move to the government now. Mr. McNeely?

Mr. Phil McNeely: Thank you, Mr. Caplan, for being here today.

Mr. David Caplan: Thank you, Mr. McNeely.

Mr. Phil McNeely: You've already confirmed that your tenure as Minister of Health and Long-Term Care was June 2008-09. Can you just give us an understanding of the issues and policies that you were principally focused on during that period?

Mr. David Caplan: There was—

Mr. Phil McNeely: You already have, but—

Mr. David Caplan: I just touched very briefly on a few things, but I remember, as I started, one of the real issues that we were dealing with at the time was hospital-acquired infection—C. difficile, MRSA, VRE, ventilator-acquired infection and others. So I quickly got to work on a couple of things. One was a protocol to be able to track in all of the hospital settings and also, then, a whole program led by Dr. Baker to be able to get out to health care professionals, to the public as well, to have the proper procedures and protocols in place.

But shortly after that, it became quickly apparent that the Ministry of Health is multi-faceted and we had questions almost immediately around unmet standards in long-term-care homes, followed up very quickly with—I don't know if you recall three years ago, but there was an outbreak of listeria bacteria that was caught by Ontario's public health network. So that was very much in progress as well. Also, that summer I was quite pleased to unveil the first comprehensive diabetes strategy that the province has ever seen. Remember, this is really just in the first month and a half that I assumed responsibility for the Ministry of Health.

Beginning a bit later, we began to work in earnest on a couple of things. There was legislation around expanded credentials for foreign-trained physicians or international medical graduates who could then be able to practise in Ontario. We got to work on a report from HPRAC related to a variety of health professions and expanded scope of practice. Eventually, we were able to turn those recommendations into legislation, which I was quite pleased was supported by all parties and all members and, in fact, is working today to strengthen the access that Ontarians have to a variety of medical professionals.

Additionally, as I had mentioned, there was a concern that was brought forward by the College of Physicians and Surgeons arising from a particular case of a woman here in Toronto who had gone for some cosmetic surgery and, tragically, had died. The college did not have the ability to enter the premises to watch procedures being performed to be able to judge competence etc. Again, with the support of all parties, we were able to pass legislation which strengthened the college's ability to do so.

Continuing throughout the year, the government had previously passed a new long-term-care act, and one of the really important things was to write the new regulations. I must admit that I don't know whether those have gone through and been fully implemented. But it was quite a daunting task to go from that kind of environment to a new one.

Additionally, Ontario was moving to a new system for home care procurement. So that was another file which was considerable.

I must admit, I had some other interests. A passion for me is to reform Ontario's mental health system, and that encompasses more than simply the Ministry of Health's purview but a great deal more, as it coordinates with the justice system, with education, social—

Mr. Phil McNeely: I'd just like to interrupt there because I'll be running out of time here.

In that context, the Ornge issue—obviously, the one letter here which you've gone through and responded to—how big was that in all the jobs you had?

Mr. David Caplan: To put it in perspective, there are literally hundreds if not thousands of letters per month. I must admit that one of the things that we had run into was that there was an enormous backlog, of about six months, of correspondence which had built up. We worked very hard to turn around within the ministry to reduce that backlog so that we could respond on a much more timely basis to letters and things that came in and then ultimately could act upon some of those.

I don't want to say that they're minor, because Ontario's air medical transport system is an important part of the overall health care system. There are a lot of moving parts of the ministry, and it was not as though it was the focus of a lot of attention.

As I said, we reviewed the auditor's report in 2007, and while he did indicate that there were some operational issues that ought to be attended to—that was the nature of the follow-up that we had.

We did understand that there were competitors, if you will, who might be concerned about Ornge's entrance into the market, and we can understand the difficulty that might create.

I am familiar with one other letter related to the procurement as well, so I do—and we did receive letters from outside or competitors regarding procurements in hospitals, regarding—

Mr. Phil McNeely: That became a big issue, of course, when you started competing with private enterprise—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. Phil McNeely: How much?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Two minutes.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Two minutes.

I'd just like to get into the Ornge Issuer Trust. The issuance of $275 million in bonds by the—what was your involvement with the issuing of those bonds? Did you know about them?

Mr. David Caplan: I knew about it, but it was mainly that they had talked to finance about it.

When I met with Dr. Mazza, he had mentioned that one of the significant things that they wanted to do was refurbish their fleet—to be able to buy new helicopters, new airplanes, that kind of thing—and that the method they were going to use was bond financing, and they were talking to finance about that. So we never got into the mechanism of how it was.

Now, I did understand, and he explained to me, that Ontario—while we were the source of funding, we were in no way backstopping any of the finances or not responsible for the performance of Ornge as it related to those bonds.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Did anyone ask for your specific approval of that issuance of the bonds?

Mr. David Caplan: No—never asked and never provided any approval.

Mr. Phil McNeely: The headquarters became quite an issue, where it appears that the for-profit part raised their capital through that process. What was your involvement with that?

Mr. David Caplan: None whatsoever. You have to remember, Ornge is a transfer payment partner. It's not under the direct control of the ministry. So, for example, a hospital or the Victorian Order of Nurses, they may have their headquarters somewhere; they don't come to the ministry and say, "We're seeking approval from you to be able to do something with our headquarters or our place of business or whatnot." The ministry would be much more concerned about the service that they are providing. Are they meeting whatever standards have been set? Are they providing timely service? Is it cost-effective and value for money? These are the kinds of things that the ministry would talk about. The things that you're referring to would really be outside of those kinds of conversations that the ministry would have with its provider partner.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We're out of time here, so we move to the opposition: Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Hello, David. Welcome back to Queen's Park.

Mr. David Caplan: Hello, Frank. Nice to see you.

Mr. Frank Klees: We don't have a lot of time, so let's get on with it.

Mr. David Caplan: Please.

Mr. Frank Klees: When did you meet with Dr. Mazza? What was the date, approximately?

Mr. David Caplan: I've been trying to think about that. I would have put a specific date, but it really escapes me when that was. I think it was in the fall, but I don't want to underwrite that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, so you were appointed in June 2008?

Mr. David Caplan: End of June 2008.

Mr. Frank Klees: So it would have been in the fall of 2008?

Mr. David Caplan: I believe so, but again, I can't underwrite that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who arranged that meeting?

Mr. David Caplan: I have no idea. In a minister's office, as you're well aware, there is a person responsible for scheduling—

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand.

Mr. David Caplan: Well, let me amplify the answer; what happens, in my office at least, is that we would have a committee of people: my chief of staff, policy advisers etc.—

Mr. Frank Klees: David, my question was, who arranged it? You don't know. I'd like to move on.

Mr. David Caplan: Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to move on to a letter to you from your colleague Michael Gravelle. The "Minister" is stroked out. It says, in part, and I'll quote from it: "David ... I wrote to you on Mr. Friesen's behalf on July 11/08 (copy enclosed) regarding his concerns over the expansion and hiring and staffing policies and practices of Ornge." This letter is dated November 7, 2008.

He says, "I am compelled as MPP for Thunder Bay—Superior North to pass along this request from these northern air services providers to meet with you or the appropriate" Ministry of Health "specialists to discuss the expansion of Ornge transport medicine, in the specific aspect of all of these medevac operators being clients of your ministry."

"I hope that we will be able to discuss this somewhat complex matter personally in the near future, and that a meeting can be arranged in the spirit of cooperation and fair competition between all these important and experienced partners in northern and remote medical transport, in seeking to achieve the best standards of safety, patient care and logistical efficiency."

Now, are you telling us that you never responded to your colleague Mr. Gravelle on this letter?

Mr. David Caplan: I don't know if there was a response or not. I don't have one in front of me. As I said, there are several thousand pieces of correspondence that arrive. But I can tell you that I don't ever recall having a conversation with him—I think that was the question that Ms. Gélinas asked, if I had a conversation. I don't recall a conversation with Minister Gravelle about this.

Mr. Frank Klees: He enclosed a letter from Mr. Cliff Friesen, executive VP of Bearskin Airlines—it was all distributed.

You responded. You signed the letter dated November 6, 2008, and after acknowledging that you received a letter from Michael Gravelle, you say this: "Since your inquiry and questions relate to the responsibilities, activities and decisions undertaken by Ornge, I have taken the liberty of forwarding your correspondence to Ornge, for that organization's consideration and response. I am confident that Ornge will be able to address your inquiry."

Now, isn't it passing strange, Minister—

Mr. David Caplan: I'm not a minister, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, you were at the time.

Mr. David Caplan: I was at the time—

Mr. Frank Klees: And isn't it passing strange that there would be a complaint from a fairly substantive group of individuals in northern Ontario brought to you by your colleague and that you would simply say, "I'm acknowledging your complaint. Guess what I'm doing. I won't give you the meeting you ask for. I'm going to ignore what you're telling me as the minister who is responsible for the ministry, and I'm going to send your complaint back to the people that you're complaining about." How do you square that?

Mr. David Caplan: Well, I don't agree with the premise of your question. Nothing is ignored but, rather, that they are referred to the people who are directly responsible for the provision of air ambulance service in the province of Ontario.

It is not, as you well know, the ministry directly that had had this contractor relationship with Ornge. They had specific concerns around a competition with them and the ability of them to potentially contract in northern Ontario, that if they wished to get into those kinds of arrangements, it wouldn't be the ministry, and I think you would acknowledge it would be with whoever is providing that service. They are the appropriate people to do so, and I think appropriately enough that the referral should be to those whom they could have a business relationship with—

Mr. Frank Klees: See, I strongly disagree with you.

Mr. David Caplan: You're entitled to your opinion.

Mr. Frank Klees: I think if they're complaining about this organization—and by the way, it wasn't just the competition that they were complaining about. They refer in their letter specifically to the stewardship of the funds of the Ontario taxpayer that they were concerned with.

Now, as minister—and here's—

Mr. David Caplan: Well, no. They were—

Mr. Frank Klees: —here's where—

Mr. David Caplan: No, no, no. They say in their letter that they're concerned about the fact that the health levy is levied against businesses and that—

Mr. Frank Klees: No, Mr. Caplan, I'm sorry; that's not what they say.

Mr. David Caplan: Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: I am telling you, they say right here: "also in regard to the responsibility they show as stewards of the funds of the Ontario taxpayer as funded by the Ministry of Health."

Now, Mr. Caplan, you folks are going to have to get a bigger bus, because every witness we have, whether it's your predecessor, whether it's your successor, whether it's deputy ministers—everybody's throwing everybody under the bus. There's no more room under that bus. At some point, what we're hoping is that someone will actually fess up and say, "You know what? We failed in our oversight responsibilities."

You, sir, as minister, on the strength of this letter alone should have taken the initiative to investigate this, rather than send their letter of complaint back to the people that they were complaining about. Doesn't it make sense that you would have said, "You know what? I'm going to look into this. I'm going to call the deputy in here and I'll ask the deputy to give me a full report on what's going on here." Doesn't that make sense?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute and a half.

Mr. David Caplan: I would say—and I think I've answered the question, sir—that they were concerned about the business practice, particularly around the competition with a private provider, which I think Bearskin Airlines is; that appropriately enough, if they wished to be a part of and enjoy a relationship with Ornge, that appropriately they should have that direct conversation.

I think that the people who are providing the service to Ontarians and providing the business of air medical transport are the ones who can best have that kind of conversation. The ministry is not the direct provider, and I would say that the kind of inquiries that you see from this particular individual and this particular effort, while they do raise concerns for the business of Bearskin Airlines, I don't think that the referral was by any means inappropriate. I think it was the direct and the fastest route for them to be able to resolve the concerns that they have, for them to best be able to share in the kind of operational issues that they do raise in their letter, and to get them the kind of satisfaction that they were looking for. I had hoped to be able to provide them with the quickest route to do so, and I did make that referral in my letter. You and I may disagree on what the course of action is, but I believe that that was the appropriate one.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time. Thank you very much, Mr. Caplan, for coming before the committee today.

Mr. David Caplan: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair, and thank you to you all.

PATHWAY GROUP

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our next presenter is Mr. Kelly Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell has handed out his opening statement. He is going to forgo reading his opening statement to allow more time for questions.

Just to confirm, you have received the information for a witness appearing before the committee?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I believe we have an oath for you to swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Mitchell, if you could just raise your hand, please.

Mr. Mitchell, do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I do.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The first round of questioning will go to the government. Who would like to ask the questions? Mr. Zimmer would like to ask questions. Go ahead.

Mr. David Zimmer: Mr. Mitchell, I understand that before 2003 you were a chief of staff in the Harris government, including chief of staff to John Snobelen.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: That's correct.

Mr. David Zimmer: And I understand that more recently you were the campaign chair for Tony Clement in the Parry Sound–Muskoka 2008 federal election.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Correct.

Mr. David Zimmer: And I understand that more recently, in the last provincial election, you served on Tim Hudak's leadership campaign, and then were a member of the Ontario PC target seat fundraising team in the 2011 election.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Not really the fundraising team, no. But I was part of the target seat program.

Mr. David Zimmer: I want to ask some questions about Ms. Long's hiring sequence. I understand the sequence to be this: Dr. Mazza or OAA, Ornge, contacted Pathway in October 2005 about the possibility of hiring her. I understand that Pathway in fact hired her on December 2005, with a start date of January 2006. I understand that from January 2006 to September 2006 she worked at Pathway, at which time she was seconded to Ornge, although on the Pathway payroll. Eventually, in December 2006, she left Pathway and moved in-house to Ornge. Is that a correct sequence?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I believe that's correct, yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: With respect to her time at Pathway, her contract—and I think you've got the document book there.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I don't, no.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm sorry, the clerk isn't here. We had asked that the clerk forward the materials to Mr. Mitchell.

Mr. David Zimmer: Anyway, I've got the contract here.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: It was forwarded to me. I'm sorry, I just didn't bring it with me.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. I understand that at tab—that's the billing summary. I have the service contract with Ontario Air Ambulance and Pathway, and it recites what you're going to do for OAA. On schedule A, there's specific reference to Pathway Group: A Pathway Group employee would be seconded to OAA—and it lists the duties—and the salary for that secondment was $4,800 and change. That seconded employee was Ms. Long?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: That's correct.

Mr. David Zimmer: I understand that in addition to the Pathway contract with OAA/Ornge, you personally served in the following capacity with Ornge on these dates, on the board:

—Ornge Global Air, elected January 1, 2011, resigned September 1, 2011;

—Ornge corporate services board, elected January 1, 2011, resigned September 1, 2011;

—Orngeco, elected January 1, 2011, resigned September 1, 2011;

—Ornge Global Solutions, elected January 1, 2011, resigned September 1, 2011;

—Ornge Global GP, elected January 1, 2011, resigned September 1, 2011; and —Ornge, September 1, 2011, to December 23, 2011.

Is that correct?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Yeah, I think that's absolutely correct. The only thing I would say is I was actually elected to the board of Ornge Global on January 1, and it was subsequent appointments where I was nominated to the boards of the other private companies on the private side. In fact, I thought that they took place in March, when I became a member of the other boards. But I'm not disputing that I was on both of those boards for roughly those periods of time.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. On the document book that we sent over to you, at tab 1 is a billing summary for Pathway's account to Ornge; that totalled—Ornge-Pathway accounts were $337,411.27. Is that correct?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I had $388,302 but I'm not sure of the discrepancy. I'm fine with that, yeah.

Mr. David Zimmer: But anyways, $330,000-plus?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: That's correct.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. I understand that the billing summary, then, for Pathway and Ornge Peel—the total billings were $42,501.52.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I'm sorry, so in the first case you were referring to Ornge?

Mr. David Zimmer: Ornge and Pathway and—

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: And the second one, Ornge Peel?

Mr. David Zimmer: Peel.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: My understanding is that's reverse, actually. I thought Ornge Peel was the larger number and Ornge—the only work we did for Ornge was a formal RFP that we were awarded in—

Mr. David Zimmer: In any event, those totals—say $337,000 plus $42,000; close to $400,000—are a reflection of Pathway billings on this file?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Over the seven years, yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

Am I correct also, then, that portions of those billings were made by Pathway to Ornge and Ornge Peel and so on while you were on the various boards of the Ornge structure?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: So, when I was on the private boards of Ornge, the Ornge Global side, prior to that, on August 23, 2010, I believe, we were awarded an RFP for $96,000—a public RFP process for this $96,000 and that was for Ornge work. That would have happened at the same time I was on the board of Ornge Global. So January 1 was when I started with Ornge Global. If we went back to August 23, previous to that, Pathway Group was awarded the contract through Ornge for the work that we did on the RFP.

Mr. David Zimmer: But then there were periods of time when you were both on various Ornge boards within their structure and Pathway was also billing various entities of Ornge?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Just the one period, though. I don't want to—

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay, that's fine.

Do you think that was a conflict of interest to be providing advice and on the boards of the various Ornge structures?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Well, I was concerned about it, and I raised the issue with the chairman of the board—

Mr. David Zimmer: The chairman at the time was?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Mr. Beltzner.

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes, and?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: —and with Dr. Mazza. So this is on March 29. I said I wanted to highlight a perceived conflict: My company is under contract with Ornge to provide specific duties awarded under an RFP executed on August 23. It's for a northern engagement strategy. It had nothing to do with lobbying governments or anything; it was strictly about northern work, something that Pathway Group is very qualified to do. I would be reporting in that job to the COO and the director of regulatory affairs and, from time to time, the CEO. My role as board member for Ornge Global—at this stage, I didn't see a conflict because we were dealing with the private side, and it wasn't about what was going on at Ornge. But I did raise the issue with the chair and the CEO just to make sure that it was put forward. His reply back to me, dated on the 29th: "I don't see this as a conflict at this time, especially if the contract was awarded prior to your participation on the boards of Air and Peel. Should there be a motion concerning Air as related to your work, I would expect you to declare the conflict and abstain from discussions and voting."

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left.

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes, two more questions: Did you do any lobbying or consulting with the PC caucus or individual members of the PC Party on Ornge matters?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I did.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you—and that's covered in your billing summaries.

Lastly, when you took on Ms. Long, presumably somebody at Pathway met with her and interviewed her, as you would any other prospective employee. Did she present a resumé?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: You know what? I can't remember if she did or not.

Mr. David Zimmer: Would you search your records to see if she presented a resumé?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I will.

Mr. David Zimmer: And the last question: In her resumé—I know among other things she was a water-skiing instructor and did some waitressing. Was there anything else in her resumé or during the interview that stood out in your mind that attracted you to her professionally as a potential employee?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I can't remember seeing the resumé, and I apologize for that, but we did interview her and, frankly—we're looking at an admin position. In my view, she was very good. She was bright and articulate. We didn't have anything negative—even during the time she worked for Pathway Group, I couldn't say anything negative about her work. But in direct answer, I can't recall a resumé, so I really don't know the answer.

Mr. David Zimmer: And would you search your records for that?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I will.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time, so we shall move to the official opposition. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Welcome to these hearings.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Thank you.

Mr. Frank Klees: Your time on the board of directors of any of these companies was very short. Can you tell us why you resigned as a director when you did?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: In the case of the private boards, I had been asked to—I was on those boards for a number of months, but I believe it was somewhere in July or perhaps August that Dr. Mazza had phoned me up and said, "I would like you to be on the board of Ornge. We have a replacement for a gentleman who was a very good friend of mine who passed away, from northern Ontario."

It's where I do a lot of my work. Frankly, I was kind of happy to get off the board of Ornge Global. Beyond the stuff that we were talking about, I found Global to be exceptionally complicated. I think you've all seen the org chart or the chart of companies. When I started with them, I had no idea that that was the structure of it. I was happy to resign from the private side.

In regard to the public side—and it's in my notes—I attended two meetings. One was a teleconference call; one was a meeting on, roughly, December 1. The conference call was mid-December. At that point, all these negative things were coming out now through the newspapers. There had been questions in the media, questions posed here in the House. I'd asked the question during the conference call what the salary of the CEO was, and I was informed that it was around $1 million. With all of the other things that were going on and, added to that, this compensation, which I think is outrageous, I announced that I would resign from the board and did so by the 23rd.

I was quite disappointed with it. I was really excited to be on the board of Ornge. It was kind of a new thing for me, as a young guy or relatively young, anyways. I've been referred to as a senior Conservative lately, and I think that's kind of moved me up the scale, which I'm happy about. But I was quite excited about being on the board, and I was very disappointed to see that, as a board member, you would have to be responding to all of the decisions that were made by previous members—that I just thought the task was something I wasn't up to.

Mr. Frank Klees: You were aware—or were you aware—of questions that were raised in the Legislature about Ornge, the possible cross-subsidization of the for-profit entities with public funds, in April 2011. Did you become aware of the fact that those questions were being raised in the Legislature?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I did, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Were you also aware that a very long letter was addressed to the MPP who raised those questions in the Legislature, who happened to be me, threatening legal action? Did you become aware of that letter?

1000

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I did. Actually, they had asked me for advice on that. My advice was, and it was in an email—I've provided you, I believe, thousands of pages of emails—where I said, "Don't go to war on this. The member has the right to ask these questions. The better approach is to sit down with the member and provide the documents that are being requested."

So I was aware of it at that time. I was also concerned about it as well, because there were a series of FOIs that were being thrown out there, and some of them, I believe, were from the Conservative research group., but I don't know everybody who was FOIing.

I talked both to Ornge and to a friend of mine who I had a relationship with, the Honourable Michel Bastarache, a former Supreme Court justice who had recently retired. I had asked Ornge to retain Mr. Bastarache with the goal of going through all of these things, because one of the problems that you see with Ornge, in my impression, is that it was very difficult to distinguish between rumour and fact. I thought this would be one way of having somebody of his skill look at the distinctions between the public funds that could bleed over to the private entities and make sure that that wasn't the case. He could look at the corporate structure and ensure that it was appropriate.

Specifically, and I have it in my kind of draft term sheet—as I've put in my notes to you, I'm a forester, not a lawyer. This is in legalese, but I was trying to say that there are also issues that Ornge continued to not be able to resolve, such as [inaudible]. So I suggested that they hire Mr. Bastarache. Unfortunately, it didn't happen. Now, I'll say this to Ornge: The CEO and the COO seemed to be very keen to follow through with this, but it never happened. They never approached and Mr. Bastarache went on summer holidays and it didn't happen.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. To your knowledge, was Don Guy ever briefed on the Ornge file while he was working for the Premier, while he was still the chief of staff?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I don't know that.

Mr. Frank Klees: To your knowledge, in working with Ornge, was Don Guy hired through Alfred Apps at Fasken?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I don't know that, either.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. When the questions were raised in the Legislature and when that threatening letter was sent to me, was there any discussion at Ornge in any of the meetings that you were at as to what steps the minister might take in response to that? Was anyone at Ornge surprised that the minister, rather than—let me rephrase it. Did the minister or anyone in the ministry follow up, to your knowledge, with Ornge in response to those questions that were put to her?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I'm not aware of it. I have seen a previous version of the letter that they had sent, which was something I believe that also had been sent to the leader of the third party, which had no threat of legal action. It was essentially a letter that said, "Here are the facts." That was the letter that I saw. I didn't see the final letter until afterwards, when somebody from Ornge had said to me, "Oh, we sent the wrong letter," which was c.c.'d to many people, including the minister. But in regard to a response back from the minister, I'm not aware of any.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did that surprise anyone, that there wouldn't be a reaction from the ministry to something as serious as this being raised in the Legislature?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Certainly, I guess, from my own perspective, the questions were being raised in the House to the minister, and I thought that based on my knowledge of Ornge at that time, I thought that the answers could have been stronger, because the information I had—and I'm not saying it was right; it was just at that period of time. There were answers to these questions, in which case I would have expected that they would be articulated in the House because they were being raised in the House.

In regard to directly answering the question about surprise, it was never articulated to me that they were surprised about that one way or the other.

Mr. Frank Klees: Given your pedigree as a Conservative, were you ever asked to get in touch with me and to try to get me off this file?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I was, and this is right around—so January, February, March, April—probably somewhere in April, I'm guessing. At this time, we have this contract that's winding up with Ornge, this RFP, and I'm on the private board, Global. The Ornge COO, Mr. Lepine, was really upset because he just felt like he couldn't answer the questions. And I have to say, having gone through this the last couple of weeks where my name has been raised in the House too, it can be quite frustrating not to be able to go, "But wait a minute."

So they did ask me to see what I could do, so what I did is I contacted the lobby registrar and asked her for a ruling on whether I would be allowed—as a board member of Ornge, somebody who I've lobbied for—to communicate with you. We had some email exchanges back and forth, and then she phoned me. We had a discussion and she said, because I'm a well-known lobbyist, it would be deemed to be a lobby action and therefore, under the Broader Public Sector Accountability Act, I could not contact you. I think, as you all know, I never did.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're on your last 30 seconds, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Perhaps Mr. Guy and Mr. Apps should have taken the same precautionary steps. We're looking forward to hearing, of course, from Mr. Guy later today. Thank you.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): To the NDP: Who would like to ask questions?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'll go first.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Flag me halfway through.

Thank you for being here. The first question I wanted to ask you is—you were on the board of directors of Ornge Global on January 1, 2011. A briefing as to the corporate structure of Ornge was shared in, basically, a briefing material, with many people at the Ministry of Health and Ministry of Finance. It's a letter that has been circulated around.

After this letter was presented and the briefing took place with people at the Ministry of Health, the minister told us that there were red flags, that there were alarm bells, that they tried to get information but they were stonewalled by Ornge.

To your knowledge, on the board from January 1, 2011, has the Ministry of Health ever tried to get information from Ornge Global?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Nothing through me, obviously, as kind of the newest member to the board and a Conservative, but my impression from the chair of the board and discussions that he had—at the same time, I believe, the AG is also doing his investigation as well. I'm trying to make sure that I don't confuse the two—but my impression was that members of the government had been briefed all the way through the process of the creation of Ornge Global, the private entity, and I'm sure that that had been articulated at a board meeting; I'm not sure which one. That would have been my belief.

I don't know if the government actively tried to do something proactive to say, "We've got red flags." That was never presented to the board members.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But you knew the fact that the corporate structure had been presented and the fact that Ornge Global was a private entity had been presented to the Ministry of Health, and to your knowledge, they did not come back for more information, nothing that hit your radar anyway?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: That's correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

You knew that the Auditor General was at Ornge. Was that topic ever discussed at the board of Ornge Global?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: It was. I don't recall it ever being a line item topic. In fact, it seemed to me there was one session on a meeting, I think it was just before I started with the board. So my nomination was on January 1, I believe, but my first meeting would have been on January 23 or 28, later in the month. It seemed to me that there was an in-camera session that was talking about the AG's report, but other than the chair of the board saying, "We're struggling to answer all these questions. We don't think that the AG's department is quite getting what we're trying to present to them, so we're really working hard on it"—I know that they were quite satisfied with their ability to push the AG's report further off into—I guess it was March 23, whenever the AG reported specifically on Ornge, because they felt that if it had been presented at the normal time the AG's report comes out, the December period, that there were still too many factually incorrect answers or parts of his report.

So I was never part of any of those kinds of formal discussions, but certainly that was articulated, I believe, by the chair at a board meeting.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In the discussion at the board of Ornge Global, was the discussion of, "this information should not be made available to the ministry," or of "that information should not be made available to the AG," or—what was the culture of communication between Ornge Global and the ministry or the AG?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I can't member specifics on what was discussed, but certainly my impression was that the board members of the private board felt they were a private entity and that they had assurances through the legal firm and through their accounting firm—I believe it's KPMG—that this was a private entity and shouldn't have been grouped into the AG's report.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And although you were on the board of directors, you did not know the salary of Mr. Mazza while you were at Ornge Global?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: That's correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And how do you figure that is? He was your employee.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: They had presented—I believe it was in my second meeting—a matrix of what would go into a salary, but there was no number attached to it. I have to admit, this was all brand new to me. I didn't know—in hindsight now, you learn a lot, especially in your first experience of being on a board. I should have just asked the question, but I didn't at that time. It wasn't until mid-December 2011 that I found out that it was approximately $1 million.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What was your teleconference in December? What was it about? You had a teleconference board meeting?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Yeah, it was an emergency one. There were a lot of newspaper reports that had been coming out in that time frame. The chair had set this up on very short notice to say that the CEO was in very rough shape. He needed to be removed as CEO of Ornge and somebody had to find a replacement. So that was kind of the focus of the discussion that took place.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Rough shape physically or rough shape financially?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have one and a half minutes left, France.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Mentally, I believe.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. The minister says that she called the board of Ornge for a meeting, but then the chair of Ornge told us that no, they called the minister for a meeting. Would you know which way it went?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: No, and I believe that I had effectively been resigned from the board by that point, so I don't know the answer to that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And what's the date of your teleconference call?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: It was mid-December. I could be off by a day or two, but it was a Saturday, like December 12, I believe; something like that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And this is when you decided to resign, and it became effective—

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: The 23rd.

M^{me} France Gélinas: The 23rd.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Singh?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you, sir, for being here. Did you have a working relationship with Don Guy?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: No, I've never met him before.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you have any idea what his relationship was with Ornge or what he was doing at Ornge?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: No, none.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. In terms of your briefings, did you have a number of briefings with provincial government officials or elected officials?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: A total of four: One with the NDP, Mr. Bisson; one with Mr. Norm Miller, and those were not briefings on Global or anything. There was a lot of stuff going on in your ridings, either in the north or, in

Mr. Miller's case, of course, Ornge calls it "trauma season" in the summertime and a lot of people go to the Muskokas and they get themselves injured. So the focus on those briefings was very specific to, "Here's what's going on in your riding."

We had two meetings—I didn't attend either of them, but I was involved in setting them up with the PC research group who were asking a bunch of questions and doing their due diligence on Ornge because they felt that there were problems. My approach on all of this, and still remains today, is that the systems of FOIing are complicated, are slow and cumbersome. It's easier to get people together if it's at all possible, and so—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: What problems were flagged by the research group?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I never saw the FOIs, but certainly I know that the speedboat was one of them. I believe that Dr. Mazza's salary would have been another one, and I'm not sure—I never did see the FOIs.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you take any steps to address those FOIs?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: The steps I took were to ensure that the two groups got together and had meetings, with the opportunity to disclose that information.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When was that? And I'm going to pass it over to France.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I'm sorry?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When was that? What time was that?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Two meetings. One was December 2009 at Queen's Park. I didn't attend it. The other one was—I'm going to be off a bit here—March or April 2010.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When you got the groups together, did it raise your attention about the salaries when that was raised by the leadership?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: It did. But, you know, at that time, I actually presumed that—my impression of Dr. Mazza is that he was paranoid on his salary. I never understood why, but his salary in 2008, the last disclosed salary, to me wasn't something that raised huge flags. He's a very credible doctor. He's got his MBA and he runs a big organization. So the irritant was more, in my view, that they decided to pull it away from the public view than it was what the salary amount was.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Do you have any understanding of why it was taken out of the sunshine list?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: No. They created Ornge Peel, but I don't know why. My advice is always that they shouldn't do that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'd like to come back to the teleconference you had on December 12. By then, Ornge had made the front page of the papers. A few red flags must have gone up. Was there any discussion at the board as in, "Our ship is about to sail. Bail out, bail out," or "Mayday," or anything like this? Or was it really just, "We're talking about Mr. Mazza needing some personal time for health reasons"?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: It was a bit of both—I don't mean to say, "Jumping ship—mayday, mayday." But certainly the reason that Dr. Mazza's mental health was compromised was because these stories were in the front page of the newspaper. So the two things were definitely tied in the discussion. I believe I had said at that conference call that I thought I would have to resign and I thought the rest of them were probably going to end up having to resign as well.

M^{me} France G  linas: Had the minister contacted—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're on your last minute.

M^{me} France G  linas: —contacted your board by then?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I don't believe so. I believe by December 12 that hadn't happened, as far as I know. I believe by the next week—I believe it happened the week after.

M^{me} France G  linas: So the week after. So it had hit the front page of the paper, you had an emergency board meeting, Mr. Mazza started having health problems and you looked at who would be your new CEO. So in the minds of the board, the operation needed to continue. You needed to look at an interim CEO. Who was chosen?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: The COO, Tom Lepine.

M^{me} France G  linas: He was chosen to continue?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: And in your mind, was this house of cards falling, or was it just a rough spot that you were going to work through?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: I thought the house of cards was falling, definitely.

M^{me} France G  linas: And did you share this with the other board members?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: You did, eh?

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Yes. You know, some of the board members, Dr. Lester—a few on that call, I think, were absolutely shocked that what was happening was happening. It was a very unpleasant phone call, to be certain. But it's one thing when people are trying to raise questions and are being stifled; it's another thing when it's on the front page of the Toronto Star all the time, saying, "I've got all these sources and this is what they're saying." You go, "Jeez, why didn't we know about some of these things?" So, yes, I thought it was a very serious problem.

I will separate the organization of Ornge, which I've always had faith in. It was why I was so proud to be a member of Ornge, because I think they are world-class transport medicine. I am so impressed with the work they do. We do a lot of work in northern Ontario and First Nations, and they are the first piece of health care for so many of these people. With the work we did with them—we worked on changing languages so that the people who were being left on the shores, as the helicopter takes off from an area, could communicate and see how their loved one was doing. They were really special to work with.

But this piece, it looked to me like it was crumbling—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time. Thank you very much, Mr. Mitchell, for coming before the committee today.

Mr. Kelly Mitchell: Thank you. I hope that was helpful.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I would suggest that we come back at 12:15. Our first presenter is at 12:30. It gives us a few minutes, in case there are any motions to be dealt with.

Mr. David Zimmer: And this will be locked up?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Someone will be here, yes, so it will be secure.

The committee recessed from 1020 to 1221.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I call this committee to order, then. We have a matter we have to deal with in camera to begin with, so I ask members of the press to leave, please.

The committee continued in closed session from 1221 to 1235.

ORNGE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We're back in open session and our first presenter this afternoon is Steve Farquhar from Ornge, vice-president of operations. If he could come forward—Clerk, do we know where Mr. Farquhar is?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): He's just standing outside.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Welcome and good afternoon, Mr. Farquhar. Just to confirm that you have received the letter of a witness testifying before the committee?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk, once he gets back here, will have you swear an oath.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Okay.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): So the Bible is in front of you. You wanted to swear an oath or be affirmed?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I'll swear an oath.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Swear an oath? Okay. Mr. Farquhar, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching this subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have time for an opening statement. Then there will be questions from the parties.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Thank you. Hello. My name is Steve Farquhar and I'm vice-president of operations for Ornge air ambulance. I would like to thank the standing committee for the opportunity to speak to you today.

In my role as VP of operations, I am responsible for the day-to-day operations of the paramedic service at Ornge. We have 146 full-time paramedics and 71 part-time paramedics who operate out of 13 air and land bases around the province.

Operations involve the day-to-day activities involving the delivery of air ambulance services across the province. This includes providing paramedic/RN services, base-related activities, scheduling services, land ambulance deployment and administrative management support. Ornge is made up of a number of business units that are responsible for different activities.

Operations does not have oversight over aviation activities or activities—nor do we have responsibility for medical oversight or the training and education of paramedics. We all work together as a team to deliver the best service possible to our patients.

My career as a paramedic spans 25 years. I've worked as a front-line paramedic in both the land and air environments. As I am sure every person in the medical field will tell you, I became a paramedic to help people. Providing the best possible patient care has always been my number one priority. Working to help those who need medical care is the reason I have remained in the business for over 30 years.

This line of work is difficult; it's physically and emotionally draining. It is all-encompassing. You carry it with you when you go home at the end of the day. It is always part of your life. When you deal with life and death, you do not always have the luxury of leaving your work at the office.

During this time, I have seen this remarkable and challenging field undergo many changes—from times with little or no recognition and low pay, to advancements in technology and the evolution of patient care. Medical transport services have undergone a prolonged and significant transformation, and despite the problems we have been facing, I feel fortunate to have been a part of the larger industry.

Having worked both in the field and as a manager, I understand the challenges that the front-line staff face every day as well as those of the organization and the system as a whole. I feel that it is important to point out the unique challenges of operating an air ambulance system. Medicine and aviation are among the most highly regulated professions in the country—I dare say, the world. Imagine the complexities of running an airline and then, separately, the challenges of managing a hospital. Combining these two fields adds additional complexities and regulatory issues that make day-to-day operations and decision-making exceptionally difficult. Each decision has a ripple effect. No decision stands alone. Even a minor change can bring with it regulatory issues. Great care must be taken to always ensure the continuity of our operations.

When I became a flight paramedic, I was extremely excited about the future of the field, and to this day it is an area I find incredibly rewarding and promising.

To say that recent events have been disheartening would be an understatement. I feel the same emotions as the front-line staff. I am, and always will be, a paramedic at heart.

Ornge lost its way and let down those committed to the service. I count myself among that group. To watch the events of late has been anything but easy, but I truly believe Ornge is rebuilding and will once again be the strong, vital organization it is meant to be.

I know that a number of people have left the organization, for many reasons. For me, the silver lining is that I am still here and I am able to take part in the amazing rebuilding process that is under way. The new leadership is making significant change, and I am fortunate to be there to support these efforts. Our interim CEO, Ron McKerlie, has made great strides in fixing the problems of the past.

We all acknowledge that mistakes were made, hands were tied, countless hours spent wondering what could be done differently, only to end up back at the start. But that is the past, and I look forward to the future of the organization. Change is happening—positive change, important change—and things will only get better.

Here are some examples of the change at Ornge: We have refocused our core mandate to provide a safe, reliable, quality air ambulance service for the people of Ontario; we have improved communications across the organization and have become a more transparent and accountable organization; we are moving to improve our available staffing levels by ensuring that paramedics progress through training and reintegration programs in a timely manner; we have systems and processes in place to transform the medical interiors; we are restructuring the Ornge communications centre, which will improve service delivery and aircraft deployment; and we are working closer with our EMS partners, hospital stakeholders and, of course, the Ministry of Health emergency health services branch. These are just some of the changes that have been made at Ornge in the last few months.

I continue to be amazed by the dedication of not only our front-line staff but of the entire organization. We have some of the most highly trained paramedics in the world. They have worked through the issues being faced by Ornge because of the commitment they have to the people of Ontario. I am honoured to work with them. I will continue to do my best to be their voice and represent their interests and help them deliver the best possible medical services to the people they are tasked with caring for.

I am happy to take any questions you may have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your opening statement. The questions go first to the official opposition. You have 25 minutes, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Mr. Farquhar, thank you for attending here. Your formal training is that of a paramedic. Is that correct?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: When did you complete that training?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: In 1982.

Mr. Frank Klees: In 1982? And how long did you work as a paramedic?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Twenty-five years.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you worked as a paramedic until 2007?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Roughly there, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Let me ask you this: After you were finished your work as a paramedic, what was your next position that you took on?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I graduated in 1982 and I worked for Toronto emergency medical services for about 14 or 15 years. I also worked for the air ambulance program full-time for two and a half years, and then part-time for a total of about 10 years.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what did you do there?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I was a critical care flight paramedic on Bandage 1, out of the Toronto base.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Then I went on and took a position at the base hospital as a clinical instructor. I trained 30 paramedics in Peterborough under the OPALS program, which is the Ontario paramedic advanced life support program. Then I was asked to come down and work in the Sunnybrook base hospital program in 2000 as the manager of the critical care land ambulance program.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Thank you.

You say in your statement that it's a very complex undertaking to run an airline and then deal with the challenges of managing a hospital and so on. The position that you've taken on, which is that of VP of operations at Ornge, certainly, that is a very complex responsibility. Can you just describe briefly what all that entails?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The VP of operations has an associate VP below that reports up to my office and a director of operations in the province. From that we have a number of operations managers that are placed at each one of the bases around the province. Then the paramedics report to the operations manager.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you're really the guy who makes the decisions regarding all field operations at Ornge. Would it be fair to characterize it that way?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The decisions that are made, some of them are within my ability to make them; other ones, I would have to seek counsel from my boss at the time, who was the COO.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, but ultimately you sign off on most of the field operations at Ornge. Is that correct?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. That's quite a responsibility for someone who basically has been trained as a paramedic. You've taken on very complex management responsibilities. Before you took on this responsibility at Ornge, did you have any formal training as a manager at that high level?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. So, I started off in 2000 as a manager. I moved into the central region manager, which would be equivalent to an operations manager. I was then promoted to the director of operations in 2006, so when we took over from the province. I held that position for three years and I was promoted to an assistant VP of operations and then to the full VP of operations. So I've been in management for 12 years now.

Mr. Frank Klees: At what point did you enrol in the MBA program?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I enrolled in the MBA program in February 2011.

Mr. Frank Klees: Were you aware of what the cost would be for that program?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, I was aware of the cost.

Mr. Frank Klees: And how much was that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It was $90,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: And when did you graduate?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I'm not graduated yet.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're still taking that course?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Correct. I'll graduate in June.

Mr. Frank Klees: And Ornge continues to pay that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you're fine with that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: There were a number of people that were approached by the senior executive team to take management leadership training, and a sponsorship was offered for those positions—

Mr. Frank Klees: Isn't it a little late to be taking management leadership training at that level once you're already the VP of operations of a very complex organization?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I have 52 people in my MBA class and most of them hold senior positions—VPs, CEOs, COOs—so I would say it's never too late to learn.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was there ever any question in your mind as to whether public funds should be paying for that? I mean, a lot of people take additional training; they pay for it themselves. What was your salary?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: My salary? It was reported at $250,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: Any additional bonuses on top of—

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No, that was bonus-in.

Mr. Frank Klees: You didn't at any time think that, perhaps, you should be picking up the cost for your further education?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The company offered to sponsor me for the position and I accepted it. I didn't accept it lightly; I'm very honoured to have that. I can tell the committee that I'm putting in 25 to 30 hours a week of work, and everything that I've learned in my MBA, which is a lot about leadership, also, I use every day on my job.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can you tell me who signed off on the medical interiors of the helicopters? I've been led to believe that you had to sign off on that, given your role.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I did not sign off on the medical interiors. It was done at the COO level.

Mr. Frank Klees: And the COO at the time was?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It would have been Tom Lepine, COO of Ornge; and Rick Potter, COO of aviation.

Mr. Frank Klees: So both of those gentlemen signed off on those medical interiors. You had nothing to do with it.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The role I had in the medical interiors: I was asked to be part of the RFP committee. My responsibility on the RFP committee was to look at vendor presentations, review renderings. We were scoring and we were shortlisting vendors.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you certainly played a role in shortlisting whoever it was ultimately contracted to. Given your medical background—critical care flight paramedic—did it ever occur to you that perhaps CPR would have been a pretty important thing to be able to administer in that helicopter?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: If I could tell the committee a little bit about what happened there: The RFP went out in 2008; it was awarded in 2009. We were against very tight deadlines to be able to deliver because the CHL contract was coming up, and we were given tight deadlines to operate in.

A medical team was sent over, consisting of a front-line flight paramedic at the Toronto Island and one at Sudbury. A project manager and a transport physician were sent to Switzerland because that was where the manufacturer was. It was Aerolite. They were there for about a week and they went through all kinds of prototype testing. They went through a number of medical scenarios to make sure that all the medical scenarios that we do in the field could be checked.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was CPR one of those?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, sir, it was.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was the value of that contract for those interiors?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I believe the contract was almost $6 million.

Mr. Frank Klees: How could we end up paying $6 million for interiors in which paramedics couldn't even do basic CPR? Who, if not you, was responsible for signing off on that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The first AW139 was put into service at the Sudbury base at the end of December 2010, and the first complaint that we heard of on this came in the middle of January 2011. The issue at the time was the CPR. We initially thought that there was something wrong with the height, that the specs were wrong on it. We took the measurements, we talked to the manufacturer and we found out that it was fine.

I think what happened was that when you have—and this is just my opinion, but when you do scenarios and people are in street clothes, and they don't have Kendrick extraction devices on, they don't have clothes on, a matter of a couple of inches raising the patient up can make the difference between—

Mr. Frank Klees: Isn't that pretty fundamental? I hear your explanation, but it's not helping me. I would think that, with a complex organization like yours, where you have a medical director, you have flight operations directors, you've got people who are engineers—this isn't the first time that you've been involved in this—that somebody would have taken into consideration all of those issues? And after $6 million in a contract, you end up with an interior where you can't even administer basic CPR.

I'll repeat my question: If not you, as the VP of operations, who was responsible for signing off on this?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It was the two COOs who signed off on it, but when the aircraft initially came, I don't think everybody was fully aware of how bad the problem was.

I think the real issue is that, typically, when you take a very complex, customized medical interior—if I was going to do it, I'd put a prototype out in the field, test it for a certain period of time and get the feedback. But if you're against tight timelines and that step doesn't happen, you're opening yourself up—

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, it's not very comforting to think that artificial timelines would result in compromising safety standards. My understanding is that Canadian Helicopters was willing to extend their contract, and all it would have taken was for Ornge to say, "We need to extend our contract with you," and that would have been the end of the tight time frame. Isn't that true?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I don't know, sir. That would be above my level.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to move on to quality management, because at the end of the day, the reason that we're here today, apart from the financial irregularities, which are a concern—and we'll get to the bottom of that, and the police will as well—what's really important to us are the patient care issues. We heard, through the Auditor General's report, of numerous incidents that were reported. In some cases, deaths occurred, and we have yet to find out exactly what the reasons for that were, but, nevertheless, patient care was compromised. Would you disagree with the Auditor General on that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: In regard to the statement made on page 30?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The Auditor General's report, I believe, said that there were 21 significant adverse events.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I think part of the disconnect from that is the way that Ornge was reporting its significant adverse events at the time. We've met with the Ministry of Health emergency health services branch, and it has been clear that there's been a disconnect in what they consider a significant adverse event and what Ornge considers a significant adverse event, so I think that's part of the problem.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to move on to the issue of quality management. What was your role regarding quality management at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Quality management?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: My role was to oversee, to make sure that the policies were followed, to make sure that any investigations that were brought forward were raised in a proper manner and that we would continue to look into those. It was making sure that there was proper staffing available, aircraft available.

Mr. Frank Klees: Quality management is a very complex discipline in and of itself. What qualifications did you bring to the table? Do you have any specific quality management training qualifications?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Not specifically in quality management, no.

Mr. Frank Klees: The Auditor General, in his 2007 report, made very specific reference to the IT system at Ornge. He had raised this issue as a serious concern in his initial report, and again in 2007 made reference to the system that was being used at Ornge and said that there were still considerable concerns there. His main concern was that the Ministry of Health was not able to get the appropriate information—information, by the way, that was very specifically required under the terms of the performance agreement with the Ministry of Health. Can you tell us why, four years later, that issue that had been brought to your attention still had not been properly addressed?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I don't have the IT background to talk intelligently about how the systems could speak. I was understanding that there were some issues with the IT in the ARIS II system that the ministry uses communicating with the Ornge critical care Optimas system, but I couldn't comment intelligently on how the architecture was designed.

Mr. Frank Klees: So, as the operations manager, you didn't have any responsibility to ensure that that was addressed?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: There was a lot of issues with the IT that we were working on to try—we had had discussions with the ministry that dated back to when Ornge took over with the cluster group, and at that time, it seemed that there was not enough time to be able to get those two systems aligned, that they were dynamically different and that it was going to be a longer project. I think that it was essentially agreed upon that Ornge's business was somewhat different than the land and that the Optimas system would stand alone.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you ever have proposals to replace the Optimas system with an alternative system that would be more efficient and more effective and address these concerns?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, we did. We had an ITM project, an integrated transport medicine project. The vendor of this project was Zoll. Zoll is very well known in pre-hospital care. So we rolled out the Zoll scheduling software system, and we also rolled out electronic patient chart records, but the piece that we did not get rolled out yet, where we ran into problems, was the data management system, which is actually the system that works in the Ornge communications centre.

Mr. Frank Klees: And why was that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The vendor—there was a lot of customization, from my understanding, that was required, and the project was put on hold. It's not terminated, but it's put on hold right now.

Mr. Frank Klees: The $150 million—at least that's the most recent annual funding from the Ministry of Health to Ornge—is a lot of money. Can you give us an idea of how much of that funding you directed into capital improvements to address things like the IT system and other quality management issues? Out of that $150 million, how much was actually invested in capital improvements at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I wouldn't have that information.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you direct any?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I was only responsible for the operations budget, so I couldn't comment on the entire funding envelope and what went into capital.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to talk about the staffing levels, because that is in your bailiwick, right?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: We have had so many complaints coming from the front lines, paramedics as well as pilots, in terms of something that they refer to as "downstaffing." Is it true that you were directly responsible for signing off on that downstaffing policy?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: There was no downstaffing policy. Last year, the overtime budget for the paramedics—it doesn't include the pilots—was escalating. The forecasts were calling for two to three times what our budget was, and I raised it as a concern. The CFO at the time was quite concerned with the run rates on the overtime, and in order to curb that, I went to my superior, who was the COO. I'm assuming he talked to the CEO about this, and the decision was made, yes, that we have to stop calling overtime in.

Mr. Frank Klees: So, under that scenario, if you could not get someone to come, you would just simply leave that unit understaffed, because of the financial constraints?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: So, what we put in place there is, we put in regionalized coverage. So if one base couldn't be staffed, and this is the same now—if you did a downstaffing in Sioux Lookout, it's not easy to upstaff if you get a last-minute book-off. The bases are 400 or 500 miles apart. So what we do is, we go to regional coverage then. So if Sioux Lookout is down, we can move aircraft around in the region or we can upstaff at other bases, if we could do that.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm trying to get a sense of the practical implications here because, at one time—correct me if I'm wrong—when this service was outsourced to private operators, they were actually penalized financially for not having the sufficient number of paramedics on staff to do—whether it was a critical care call or whatever.

In your case now, you don't have anyone else to penalize. You're obviously not penalizing yourself, and so you're content to have those bases short-staffed and you're justifying it—correct me if I'm wrong—on the basis that your staffing numbers are regional. So you may have a particular base that is understaffed, but because you're reporting it on a regionalized basis, you're actually putting patients at risk in a particular base because you don't have a sufficient number of paramedics staffed there appropriately. Yes or no?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, it's interesting because we're going to be getting some practical reports on that, and I believe, Mr. Farquhar, you're going to be proven wrong on that.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I can tell you what our single medic staff—right now, it's running at about 4%. We run the stats quite frequently. The issue that you raise, sir, is concerning to us. We do not schedule one medic on an aircraft. When we did our analysis, the single-most cause for single staffing and downstaffing is paramedics picking up the phone a couple of hours before their shift and saying, "I'm not coming in to work."

Mr. Frank Klees: And what backup do you have?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: We have part-time. We have changed that policy since, in this new fiscal, where we have staffed with overtime, but at the time my responsibility was to oversee—manage a balance between regional coverage, the operations budget and making sure that the people of Ontario had access to the proper aircraft—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have four minutes, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: When did you change that policy that you would actually call people in on overtime?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I believe it was December or January.

Mr. Frank Klees: December or January. Prior to that, your policy was that to save money, you would not pay somebody overtime and you would simply leave that unit understaffed. Isn't that true?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: We would call in part-time. We would use what's called a sister-based concept, so we would bring resources as far—but we tried to mitigate the overtime because it was becoming—

Mr. Frank Klees: You tried to mitigate the overtime by allowing for understaffing, and I'm pleased to hear that you've changed that policy. But Mr. Farquhar, what we're getting at is that there were policies that were put in place that clearly put patients at risk, all in the interest of saving money and all at the same time that we don't know how many millions of dollars were actually being frittered away, whether through multi-million dollar schemes or million-dollar salaries. I think you understand why we're concerned here and why the public is so concerned.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I totally understand the disconnect there, and I did not have any visibility on what was going on in the broader scheme of things. I was only tasked with managing the resources and the budget that were under my responsibility.

Mr. Frank Klees: I have one last question for you, sir. I think we're all familiar with the performance agreement and what the objective was in coordinating services and integrating services. The performance agreement and the initial program—the vision—of creating that integrated air ambulance system never contemplated that Ornge should be in the aircraft ownership business. It never contemplated bringing in-house an entire air force of single-wing or helicopter aircraft. Do you agree with that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It didn't specifically mention that in the performance agreement. I believe, from what my understanding was that there was a business case done to in-source aviation resources, which would have been better for the public because there was better launch reliability and better control.

Mr. Frank Klees: It was never contemplated in the performance agreement. You agree with that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: At some point, someone made a decision to move away from using third party suppliers who were experienced, who had invested millions of dollars and, quite frankly, were performing the service quite well. In fact, what's interesting is that Ornge itself relied on that historical service of those third party suppliers to trumpet the fact that they are an excellent provider of air ambulance services when they went out to the marketplace, because Ornge didn't have that history. The only history that Ornge could rely on was the history that came before Ornge, and that was the structure that involved those third party experienced, qualified suppliers.

I'd like to know from you, when was that decision made to move away from that performance agreement strategy and to bring in-house the ownership of helicopters and single-wing aircraft, and to put all of those people out there out of business?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I wouldn't be able to know that. That decision was made above my level.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you were not privy to any of those discussions?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I understood what the strategic direction was. I don't know when the decision was made, but if I could just comment briefly: As a service operator, I know that there were vendors that we were contracting with that had dispatch reliabilities in the 70s. Ornge air now is in the high 90s.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can you provide those statistics for us, please?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I can ask the aviation department for them.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, if you would. This is very important information. Clerk, if you could follow up with Mr. Farquhar?

I think there are two reasons we need that information: first of all, to establish the credibility of the testimony, and second, it's going to be a reflection on the rationale that Ornge had to bring those operations in-house.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much, Mr. Klees.

On to the NDP: Madame Gélinas?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you for being here. I was interested in what you said in your opening comment that you are happy to be able to take part in this amazing rebuilding process that is under way. You say, "We all acknowledge that mistakes were made, hands were tied, but we're moving forward." The first thing you say as an example of moving forward is, "We have refocused our core mandate...." I'm curious to see where had the focus gone that you are now focusing on providing "a safe, reliable, quality air ambulance service for the people of Ontario." If this is your new focus, where was the old one?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I think it would be safe to say that there were distractions previously that required resources. It's really now about—the distraction is gone—to move on, to move forward.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Give me a concrete example of this distraction that required resources.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Well, a distraction is the fact that there was a multitude of people working on different projects, and different people's time was required to work on the for-profit side, the Global.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you ever work for the for-profit side?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I was used as an adviser.

M^{me} France Gélinas: To the for-profit side? And that was during your paid hours at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No, I received a stipend for that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You received a stipend? I see your salary in 2008 was $140,000. It went to $160,000 in 2009. It bumped up almost $83,000 in 2010, when your salary went up to $243,900, and then in 2011 to $249,843.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: That was through VP—that, as I described earlier, was—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So the money that I see now, does that include the stipend, or is the stipend on top?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The stipend was $4.25 an hour.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, and that's included in the—

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Was the $4.25 an hour paid from the for-profit side, or was it—

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It was paid from the for-profit.

Can you give me an example from your day-to-day of the distractions where you had to give advice to the for-profit? What kind of advice were you giving?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: There were different planning committees and things that were set up where different people in different business units were required to attend and sit on that and give input, certain deliverables, advice, feedback. Those were some things that were created that created additional work.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. You also say in your statement, "Here are some examples of the changes at Ornge" that you are proud to be part of: "We are working closer with our EMS partners, hospital stakeholders and, of course, the MOH emergency health services branch."

Could you give me examples of how you are working closer with the emergency health services branch?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. We've had several meetings. We've worked out the amended performance agreement with them. The communications are more open. I'm sending a lot of operational metrics and reports over to the branch on a regular basis.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who do you connect to at the branch?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Tony Campeau and Rob Nishman.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Who did you liaise with before?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It was still Tony and Rob.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It was the same. How has that changed?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Now we're sharing more information. The branch is asking for more information than they did in the past, and we're providing more information. We're trying to work through some of the issues that need attention in the new amended performance agreement. Those are all where we're coming together: We're meeting more; we're trying to plan more. We're reaching out more to our stakeholder hospitals and the EMS groups.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So this $4.25 stipend you got for helping the for-profit, are you still getting this?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And are you still providing advice to the for-profit?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Are there any for-profit ventures still up and going?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. When they were going on, did you ever talk to the people in the emergency health services branch about what was going on?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No, I didn't talk to them about that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you keep it away from the ministry on purpose?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So how was it that you did this job for years and talked to the same people for all those years but you never talked about the for-profit?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: My focus was always on operations in Ontario, so if I was asked to sit on a committee or an advisory group that was—I don't think it was really any concern with the ministry, so it was never discussed.

M^{me} France Gélinas: At this time last year, how much of your time were you spending advising, sitting on committee, for the for-profit side of Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I can't say; probably—I don't know—five or six hours a week.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How many different committees were there?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: There was just one committee that met regularly, every Thursday. It was just the take-aways, the follow-ups that you had to do on it and some of the research and background stuff that you had to do.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What was the name of that committee and who was there?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It was the Global planning or something like that, along those lines.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Global as in referring to Ornge Global?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Global planning? And who was there?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It was a cross-functional committee, so there were a number of directors from across the organization at different business units.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Can you name me some names?

Mr. Phil McNeely: Mr. Chair, I'm having difficulty hearing this.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Sorry.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If you don't mind moving closer.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It's probably that I turn my head; sorry about that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Can you name me some names?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. There was the director of procurement; there was the—

M^{me} France Gélinas: The name of the director of procurement?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Gabe Aivazian. There were medical people on there, so there was the chief of staff, Dr. Bruce Sawadsky. There was myself. There was Kelly Long. There was Carrie Anne Brunet. There was a project manager. There were people from different levels in finance.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Can you name me some names?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I'm not sure what her last name is—June, from finance. We had the VP of marketing for Global there. The VP for sales was there.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And who are those people?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I can't remember their names right now. I didn't have much interaction with them. Greg was one fellow. I'm trying to remember the other fellow's name; I can't remember.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Some of the people you have named to us are people that we know worked for Ornge, the not-for-profit, and also worked for the for-profit and you would meet every Thursday. So everybody knew that they were working both sides?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: My understanding was that you were supposed to track your hours, so if you did work for this, then you would track your hours and you would submit your hours, so that there would be no time where you were charged time that you were spending at Ornge over to the Global side.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And this tracking system: Was it manual? Was it online?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: They would ask you to submit your hours that you put in for that, for those times.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, so you submitted that on a piece of paper?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It was an Excel spreadsheet or something.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, and who did you send that Excel spreadsheet to?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It went into finance.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know who at finance received those?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I'm not sure who took down my—

M^{me} France Gélinas: How often would you submit those?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I think it was once every two weeks or monthly or something.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You don't do that anymore?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Once every two weeks or monthly, do you remember doing this on a regular basis? Every Thursday you attended that meeting, so every week you had to report that you had spent time on the for-profit side.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yeah, they just didn't want anybody spending time on the for-profit side and then getting paid by Ornge at the same time. If you spent time on the for-profit side, then you were to submit the hours. You didn't get any money for it; they would just reconcile the financials, I guess, on it.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So that would be a pretty ethical way to handle this, would you say?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yeah. I don't think the intention was to have people working for Ornge and then spending time on the Global side.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Do you believe that Dr. Mazza behaved ethically?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: A lot of the stuff that came out in the paper—I mean, personally? Do I believe it? It doesn't seem so.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Because of what you've read in the paper?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I didn't know about some of the stuff going on, so when you read it in the paper, it's concerning.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Does the picture make sense now that you've read what you've read in the paper, now that you know what you know? Did you ever know how much Dr. Mazza was being paid?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No. I was very surprised.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You were very surprised?

Except for communicating with the emergency health services branch, did you have any other communication with the ministry?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No? Okay.

My colleague wants to ask a few questions.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thanks. So, in terms of the requirements to provide reports to the ministry, were you involved with any of those reports?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: We used to send a lot of reports. Are you talking about operational reports?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes, because you were responsible for operations, which would involve some patient care issues. Is that correct?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The patient care issues were dealt with on the clinical—so the base hospital side. Operations doesn't deal with patient care issues.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure. Who would be involved with patient care, then?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: That would be clinical affairs. It's equivalent to a base hospital. So that would be Dr. Bruce Sawadsky, who's the chief of staff.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, perfect.

With operations, did you provide reports back to the ministry on a regular basis regarding how the operations were conducted at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. We would provide operational reports back to the ministry. We would go up and meet with the branch when Dennis Brown was there, before he retired.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And how often did you provide those reports?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: They were less frequent than they are now. So they would be more on an ad hoc basis.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: What was the frequency?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Mostly when they asked; if they asked for reports, then we would provide them.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: How often did they ask during the time you were there?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: There wasn't a large request asking for certain reports—only usually if there was something specifically that they were interested in.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just give me a ballpark. Was it once a year, was it once a month, was it once every week?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I would say probably two times a month, somewhere around there.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. So two times a month the ministry requested reports, and you provided those reports?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yeah. It would be an investigation report. It might be something that they were following up on.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you ever say, "No, I won't send you a report" or did you ever create any difficulties?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: We can't say that. It's against the Ambulance Act.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Indeed. So you were aware of this responsibility and you complied whenever you were asked to provide any information. You'd agree with me that that was the same for the entire organization: If there was ever a request from the ministry, you or someone in Ornge would respond?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I can't speak for other departments. I'm just speaking for operations. I would comply. If the ministry asked for any information, we would provide it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Why is that? Why would you respond?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It's required under our performance agreement. It's under the Ambulance Act as well.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Certainly.

With respect to what went on in Ornge, many of your colleagues either were fired or resigned. Why did you stay?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Why did I stay?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I was asked to stay. I was not released. As I said in my opening statement, I do believe that I can still contribute to Ornge going forward.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Who asked you to stay?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The CEO. I have not been released, so—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And how much did the ministry know about what was going on in Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: With the whole debacle going on?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I have no idea.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And with respect to your particular department, you apprised the ministry of everything that was going on in terms of your department?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. If the branch asked me for something, I would provide it. I wouldn't hold anything back.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You were asked questions about the initial mandate of Ornge. You'd agree with me that the initial mandate of Ornge was not to set up its own fleet of either helicopters or airplanes; it was to provide ambulance care?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Certain issues have arisen that Ornge misled the ministry. Do you have any response to that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I was never involved in those meetings. I read about them in the paper, I've heard the allegations, but that was above my level. I had never had any meetings with the government or the ministry on any level like that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. You want to jump in?

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. Did anybody from the ministry ever come to the headquarters of Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: Who did?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Malcolm Bates; Tony Campeau, I believe had been there before. We used to mostly go up to 5700 Yonge to meet with them, but I had seen them at Ornge head office before.

M^{me} France G  linas: Had they ever commented about the NDP-orange motorcycles?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

M^{me} France G  linas: Let's just call them "the motorcycles."

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It was sitting in the lobby for a number of months.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And nobody commented about them? Nobody asked where they came from, who paid for them?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: There was a sign up there that gave a bit of history on it, so you'd just have to go up and read the sign.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And when the ministry people walked by, they never asked any questions?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I wasn't there. I wouldn't be touring that delegation going through.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were you aware of what Ms. Long was asked to do when she was brought into Ornge to fulfill a research mandate?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I wasn't aware of what her duties were.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You didn't know what she was doing?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No. When she came on she was involved with corporate communications, and that's the only role that I knew her to have until she escalated up through the ranks.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Were you a shareholder of any subsidiaries that Ornge had? Ornge Peel, Ornge Global? Were you a director or a head of any of those subsidiaries?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No, sir.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What is Ornge Brazil?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I don't know. I believe they were looking at trying to get into Brazil, so I'm assuming that they named the company Ornge Brazil, I guess.

M^{me} France Gélinas: We were told that the for-profit entities were set up so that we could leverage knowledge and skills that we had developed here in Ontario elsewhere so that it would benefit the people of Ontario. Were you ever told that?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You were told that. Could you describe to us any benefits that the people of Ontario got out of those entities?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Well, my understanding was, and I thought, and in my training that I've had in the MBA, that a public-private partnership can be very valuable if the shareholders' value increases, which is the people of Ontario. I had no idea until I read in the paper that it was 3%, because I actually thought that if we could reduce the taxpayers' burden and we could create value for them, that that would be very noble and something to do. When I found out that it was 3%, I personally was quite upset about that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What would you have seen as a good deal for Ontario?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Well, if they're using Ontario resources and that, it should have been the majority of the share coming back into the province.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you agree with me that the shift between when Ornge was using private companies to provide aircraft and helicopters and then when Ornge started creating its own fleet— that patient care and operations went down?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I don't believe there's any evidence of that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you agree with me that there were less bases in remote communities and it increased wait times to be able to respond to those communities in different parts of Ontario?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No. It would be hard to make that correlation between the two because of the differences in the demographics and the call volumes. There are so many factors involved in that. But we didn't reduce or shut down any bases. As a matter of fact, Ornge actually, within the same funding envelope, added a fixed-wing aircraft up in the Thunder Bay base. We didn't have the $1.2 million to put the paramedics on it, but we did put a fixed-wing aircraft up there.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Actually, the total number of bases across Ontario decreased when Ornge created its own fleet. The amount of bases that were spread out across Ontario reduced in number.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No, sir.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You don't agree with that statement?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It could be interesting for us. Could you submit that information as to what you believe is the number of bases and where they are? There seems to be a bit of a discrepancy.

You knew that last spring, the Auditor General was auditing Ornge.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Was that ever discussed at any management committees?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: That we were being audited?

M^{me} France Gélinas: That you were being audited by the Auditor General?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. I spoke to the Auditor General's office, the group that was there, probably 10 or 12 times.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. And the fact that the auditor was there, was this ever talked about at the management committee?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The fact that the auditor was there? Yes. We were just told to co-operate fully and, you know, prepare whatever documents that we were asked by—I think the lead on it was Naomi, and I met with her several times and provided a lot of documentation. We had a lead person that would go ahead and collect the documents and provide it. I spent a lot of time trying to explain how the system works, because I know it's very complex.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. When did you become aware that the auditor had had a problem getting to some of the money issues at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I wasn't aware of that. I met with Naomi and her team, like I said, about 12, maybe 15 times. Mostly we discussed operations, you know, and we didn't really talk about any finances or anything like that, because it wasn't my department.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Except for the people that you name from the emergency health services branch, did you ever talk to anybody else at the Ministry of Health?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No. I think, at my level, it was really—well, EHS branch was the one that we spoke to.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And nobody from the Premier's office ever contacted you either?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You indicated in your statement, "We all acknowledge that mistakes were made" and "hands were tied." How were hands tied?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Well, I think there were certain instances where there was, you know, policies or things that we wanted to—we felt that we could probably change, but it wasn't supported by—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: What's an example?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Maybe using aircraft in north-western Ontario and contracting them from Manitoba if we were short of aircraft, to bring them in on a tariff rate, a set tariff rate.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And how were your hands tied to do that? Who tied them?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Well, Dr. Mazza didn't want to use any aircraft from outside the province.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You say, "We all acknowledge that mistakes were made." What mistakes were made that you acknowledge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Well, I mean, clearly, there were mistakes made in the sense that some policies were implemented. They were all done with the patient focus and trying to run the operations, but afterwards, we've reversed them. So there was mistakes made like that. I think we all make mistakes. I think the big point is that we recognize them, we stop them, and we take that as a lesson learned.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So some policies that were implemented for patients were reversed? Explain to me; give me an example of that.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I'm sorry, I—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes left.

M^{me} France Gélinas: When my colleague asked you, "We all acknowledge that mistakes were made"—he asked for you some of the mistakes. You just answered that, "We had some policies implemented," and then you changed them.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yeah.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And that was the mistake, changing them?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: No. As Mr. Klees pointed out, the launch policy: It was generated out of the Auditor General's report to try to reduce the cancelled calls. There was 4,600 of them. And operations—we felt that it wasn't simply a money issue with that, but it was also an issue of resources, and if those resources weren't used effectively, they were taken away from another patient that may have needed them. So that was an example where the initial launch policy was put into place. There was a communication breakdown in that, and in some cases, in retrospect, that policy was changed. So that would have been what we would consider not a—you know, a lesson learned in that, as an example.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Should the ministry have known what was going on at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Should the ministry have known?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Should the ministry have known what was going on at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The emergency health services branch had it in the performance agreement to come in any time they wanted to.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But they never came?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: They did come.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But when they came, they didn't ask about salaries, they didn't ask about corporate structure, they didn't ask what share of the revenue from the for-profit was actually coming in to the not-for-profit?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I can't comment on that because I never met with them. It wasn't at my level that they would come over and meet. I mean, we would talk on the phone about operational issues, but at that level of coming over and having those discussions, I wasn't privy to those.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. You're out of time now.

Mr. Jim McCarter: Mr. Chair—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, sorry. The Auditor General would like to make a comment.

Mr. Jim McCarter: Just in fairness to Mr. Farquhar, the issue of co-operation did come up and I should say that I have raised the issue that some of the individuals weren't necessarily all that forthright. I'd have to say Mr. Farquhar was very co-operative and any time we wanted to meet, he was more than willing to meet with us.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Thank you, sir.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for that clarification.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you for that because that's helpful.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): On to the government: Who would like to ask questions?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Starting with Reza.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Moridi?

Mr. Reza Moridi: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Farquhar, for taking the time and appearing before this committee. Mr. Farquhar, could you please let us know how long you've been with Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I was with Ornge from the beginning, but I started with the Sunnybrook base hospital in 2000, which was when Dr. Mazza was there.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So you have been with air ambulance services for over 10 years, over a decade, at Ornge and its predecessor company?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yeah. I started the air ambulance in 1990 and I started with Sunnybrook base hospital that turned into the Ontario air ambulance and then eventually into Ornge in the year 2000. So I've been there 12 years.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Given the fact that you have been there for over a decade, how would you see the transformation of the air ambulance services and the system in the province, and how did it affect patient care?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I can honestly say, I know that when you look at things now, it's very difficult to sometimes understand why there's a single medic on an aircraft or there's downstaffing, but I've been in the business 30 years and I can honestly say that—and I've worked there on the aircraft for a number of years—the system is much better. I think that the people of Ontario have a really wonderful system. I've been all over the world. I have colleagues that are in air ambulance, and it's a system that we can be very proud of.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Mr. Farquhar, given the fact that you are a paramedic yourself, based on your background, education and training, how would you interact with paramedics and how would you see the province's air ambulance services?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: So, I interact with the paramedics through base visits. Many of the paramedics that are out in the field now, many of them I've trained. I've worked inside the helicopter with many of them. I do get a lot of phone calls and discussions from the paramedics. I've got an open-door policy. They can call me on my cell any time or in my office and discuss. I have had feedback from the paramedics, and we try to implement that feedback from the paramedics because I value their opinion very much. I don't think there's anybody that can bring more to the table than those people that work on the front lines.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Currently you are VP of operations, I believe. Could you explain a little bit about what is involved in your responsibilities as VP of operations at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: So, VP of operations: the responsibilities include all the day-to-day activities in the field, the bases, the paramedics and the operations managers and the director of operations and the associate VP. We do a lot of work with hospitals, so I also sit on a lot of committees working with the stakeholders in the province, if they have issues that involve air ambulance or air transport. I sit on the Trillium Gift of Life donations steering committee. I've worked with the North West LHIN. So we try to be, I guess, that liaison between the stakeholders and the issues that they would face with transport because it's complex.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So you're involved in various areas, I believe, in the operation of Ornge. Which area is your main focus of attention currently?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: It would be field operations. At my level, because we've got operations managers, we've got a director of operations and an associate VP of operations, a lot of times I try to work more with stakeholders. I try to make sure that system issues are in place and that we're delivering those according to our performance agreement.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you. I know this question was asked before by my colleagues from the NDP, but I would like, just for the record, to ask this question again: You were a member of senior management at Ornge and currently you're also a member of the senior management at Ornge. As we all know, the management and governance structure at Ornge has changed recently. So what made you to be kept as vice-president of operations at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I'm sorry; I didn't understand.

Mr. Reza Moridi: You were a member of the senior management of Ornge before—

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, sir.

Mr. Reza Moridi: —and after the changes made just recently to the board of directors of Ornge and the senior management, they kept you as vice-president for operations.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Why did they keep you?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I'm assuming they felt that I could contribute positively to the organization. It is a very complex organization. There's a lot of moving parts, and I believe that there are a lot of good people that work there that were not involved in all this. They came in every day, looked after the patients and tried to do their job the best they could. I think that was part of it, that I was focused on taking care of the patients and running the operation.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So would you say that the irregularities as we've all seen, and we have read in the papers and is also discussed in various locations, including in this committee—this is all related to the governance and the management? But the front-line staff, the middle management and even people at your level, as VP of operations, have been doing a good job at Ornge to provide service and care to patients?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, I believe so.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Would you think, Mr. Farquhar, that the recent developments, in terms of changing the board of directors of Ornge, have resulted in the improvement of service at Ornge?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. Yes, I do. I met Dr. Barry McLellan a couple of weeks ago, and he was my old base hospital physician at Sunnybrook. Dr. McLellan has always been sort of a hero to me. He's just a great guy. I met some of the board members, and they're very focused on Ornge. I know that they're a great bunch of people and that we're going to go do great things.

Mr. Reza Moridi: In the past, we have heard that at Ornge the employees weren't allowed to come out and speak. Under the new management structure at Ornge and also in your position as VP of operations, do you plan or are you thinking to give more freedom, basically, to employees to come out and speak their mind on whatever they see in the organization—their opinion, their comments?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, and, you know, Ron McKerlie has done an excellent job at that. He immediately started off by holding town halls, and we had those on a weekly basis. He kept us up to date—because it was pretty frightening for everybody, on what was going on there; there were a lot of people that had no idea—and they were kept in the loop. He continues to send out updates weekly. He went out and went around to every single base and talked to the paramedics and asked them, “What can we do to make it better?” He’s allowed all kinds of emails to come in from anybody at any time—very open-door policy. He’s very personable. Totally, I’d say, he’s a breath of fresh air.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So are you saying that now at Ornge, we have a very open environment, where people can come out and speak their minds without any fear of being fired or punished?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, sir, which is great to see.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Yes. Thank you. Now I’ll pass it on to my colleague.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you very much. You described to Mr. Klees who reports to you. When I see references to various people at Ornge, I’m always quite amazed by the number of people who have vice-president or associate vice-president or assistant vice-president or chief of this or chief of that—just how many are there on the team at Ornge who have these executive titles?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I don’t—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Give me a ballpark.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yeah, I know—I think associate VPs, there might be just a couple left now. It was, I believe, a position that was put in to help take over the day-to-day operations and sort of a promotion not quite to the full level of vice-president but a step up there.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Because you described to Mr. Klees who reports to you, can you then take us the rest of the way up the chain? Who did you report to, and then, in turn, on their way to the top?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yeah. So I reported to the chief operating officer of Ornge, who is Tom Lepine. Tom Lepine reported to Dr. Chris Mazza.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, so he reported directly to the president then, Lepine. Okay.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. Each of the business units had a chief operating officer that was responsible for that business unit.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So there were a number of people with the COO, the CFO or some such title?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, there was the “C” suite. There was a group of offices in there that was the “C” suite.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And they came in above the vice-presidents?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That helps clarify. And you spoke about, then, this difficult issue of the design of the medical interior of the helicopters, and I understood you to say that there was a team sent to Switzerland—

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —and that there were two paramedics, a physician and somebody else on that team? I didn’t catch you.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. There was a project manager that went and Tom Lepine went as well.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So when they came back, it was Mr. Lepine and Mr. Potter who were responsible for approving the medical interiors which were actually ordered?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes, the sign off would have been at the COO level.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And then obviously, as we know, there has been a lot of conversation around the problems with that. I wonder if you could tell us a bit about how things have evolved in terms of working that out; can you walk us through the steps in improving the medical interiors?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yeah, absolutely. The first time we saw the aircraft when they showed up, there was concerns raised by the paramedics about the height of the pedestal. That was sort of the crux of the issue, that there just wasn’t enough room between the pedestal height—and I do have pictures if anybody would like to see them. When you tried to sit the patient up, there wasn’t enough room in a high Fowler’s position; they would be too close to the ceiling. So we immediately went to the manufacturer. Well, let me back up; before we did that, the CPR issue, we put in a protocol where you released the bed—it’s very difficult to understand, but you turn it transversely across the cabin and then you can lower it so now you can start doing CPR.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you rotate the stretcher and you lower it a bit so you can—

Mr. Steve Farquhar: And then you can do CPR. That was the quick fix on it, keeping in mind that everything that you do in a helicopter—and this is back to my point on highly regulated—has to go through. The helicopter was an Italian helicopter, so that’s under EASA, which is the European aerospace administration. It was bought in Philadelphia, so it’s under the FAA, the Federal Aviation Administration, and it’s flying in Canada, so it’s under Transport Canada. There’s a number of regulations. So we went back to the manufacturer and advised them that this was not working. We had the specs pulled on it. They assured us that it was done within spec of what was given to them and—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Can I just interrupt? Because we did have this earlier conversation with Agusta, and they sort of said, “No, we had nothing to do with the interiors; it was all the Swiss firm.” Who were you going back to at this point, the medical interior firm or Agusta?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Agusta didn’t have anything to do with the interior. This was Aerolite, so this is the Swiss firm. They were co-operative. We said, “We need to have that stretcher go right down so that the patient is actually flying what is called transverse.” We found out that that’s not an easy thing to do even though the stretcher would go down because there’s a 16G forward path load on that stretcher. It’s not tested for that; it was tested for longitudinal. So if you turn somebody sideways, it changes it. We had to get all the engineering drawings and redraft them. They had to do dynamic crash testing, pull testing. That took almost a year. In the meantime, Jim Feeley, VP of aviation, was working with me to try to get what's called an exemption under Transport Canada, which would essentially be the same as if you had a fractured clavicle and you had a letter that said you can't wear the seat belt. We thought that was going to be a relatively quick process; it turned into several, several months, almost a year. Finally, I was awarded the exemption on February 2, and that exemption is good for one year. What we're doing in the meantime is I've pulled together a team of paramedics. We call it the interior committee. We have an operations manager who helps lead it, but it's all paramedic-led. This is their office. This is the way they need to make the calls on this.

An RFP will go out now for an interim solution, and I do have some of the—this is a picture of what the interim solution will look like.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: This is a mock-up in someplace other than in the actual helicopter?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. This is actually in place, but these pictures here show some of the problems that we've faced with the interior. The RFP will go out. We have very tight timelines on this. We're expecting a quick turnaround on this. There are a number of improvements that are going to be made to this medical interior. The final solution is going to be a permanent solution which will probably come online somewhere near the end of 2014, I would imagine, because that's how long these things take. It sounds really ridiculous, but that's how long.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: For this redesigned interior, who all do you have to go through the rounds for approvals, then? What all agencies will be required to approve?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: We would work with what's called DAR, which is a designated airworthiness rep.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: From?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Right now, the one who we have is James Mewett from Airtech. They actually are Transport Canada's representatives.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Essentially—they know all the regulations—they work within that.

It's very complicated and it takes a lot of time, but these are some things that should have been done in the first place. We are going to put a prototype out there and I want it flown at different bases around the province for a couple of weeks at a time so that we can get the feedback from the paramedics; because if the paramedics don't like it and it's not working, then we're back to the drawing board.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So, as Madame Gélinas suggested, you will be taking the rebuilt interior, doing prototype testing with your paramedics on the ground, and then once they've worked out any remaining kinks, I assume that you do have to go back to Transport Canada for final approval?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. Transport Canada would get all the specs. Before we could fly it even in a demo with a patient on it, they would have to approve it.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And does it have to go back to the Italians or the Europeans? Or this is strictly a Transport Canada issue?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Aerolite owns what's called the STC on the interior—supplemental type certificate—so we have to work with them. They would have to provide all the specs for that interior. The manufacturer would be very involved in this.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you for that. It's helpful to get that detailed technical description, even if we don't understand it, because I think it inspires some confidence that somebody who knows what they're doing is on the case.

You mentioned earlier, because we're very concerned about patient safety, that there was a disconnect—and I think I'm quoting you correctly—between the definition of a “significant adverse event” at the Ministry of Health and at Ornge. Could you expand on that and then what you're doing to resolve that disconnect? I presume you are.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. “Significant adverse event” has a definition under Ornge. I believe the Auditor General's report said there were 21 SAEs, and when we went back and looked, there were actually only five. I think it was probably just the definition. We met with the ministry EHS branch and we spoke with them. That was one of the things that they reported, too. The thought was that perhaps we are over-reporting at this point. I think we need to sit down and we need to define what a significant adverse event is. It's not operations that defines an SAE; it's actually clinical affairs. For example, if a medication was given in error, even though it may not have had any direct impact on the patient, it could be deemed as a significant adverse event, and that might be over-reporting.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So it's a case of there was an error made; it isn't necessarily that the consequence of the error was life-threatening. Is that a fair comparison?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: Yes. I don't have the exact words, but it's something, too, that would impact the patient function, that type of thing. It could include up to morbidity, but I guess it depends on where it impacted along that continuum. I think it's important when we met with the ministry to get that SAE defined so that we're all reporting accurately on those things that are impacting our patients.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. Mr. Zimmer has a few questions.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just briefly, the Auditor General had a number of problems with operations at Ornge. So how are you dealing with these problems that the AG raised?

(1) The communications centre was having lots of problems getting the documentation for proper dispatch decisions; that led to problems; (2) the delay in aircraft launch; that led to problems; (3) the shortage of trained paramedics; that led to problems. And the Auditor General's final sentiment that he felt he was being stonewalled by the former leadership. What are you doing about improving the relationship? Plus an answer to those three questions.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The Ornge communications centre is being restructured. We're redesigning it now so that there are specialized people dealing in specialized functions. The way it was operating before, it was sort of, if you were taking medical information or you were doing flight planning, you were able to sit on all desks. We are reorganizing that; we're restructuring it. We're giving more training to the communications officers. We're looking at scripted responses to implement into the Ornge communications centre so that information isn't missed. That's some of the movement that we have on the Ornge communication side.

For the paramedics, for the training, I mentioned in my opening remarks that we were looking at reintegration. Part of the problem was that some of the paramedics, if you were off on mat/pat leave, and you were gone for eight months, your reintegration could include six months to get back and get reintegrated. We've met with clinical affairs, we've met with the academy of transport medicine and we've shortened those times. We've tracked them better. We're looking at getting them exposure to some higher-volume bases. So if you were a medic, let's say, up in Moosonee and you didn't get exposed to stuff, that would slow down your reintegration. So we're moving them around in the system.

And I'm sorry, sir, I didn't—

Mr. David Zimmer: The delay in aircraft launch.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: The delay in aircraft launch: We believe that many of the delays were somewhat related to the launch policy, which has been changed.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you're on your last minute now.

Mr. David Zimmer: Comment on how the AG felt he was stonewalled by the former leadership. What are you doing to make sure that doesn't happen again?

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I would never do that. I mean, I was working very well with their team.

Mr. David Zimmer: The organization—make sure the organization doesn't do that.

Mr. Steve Farquhar: I would instruct any people who reported to me to give full co-operation.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you. Thank you, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for your presentation today.

MS. KELLY LONG

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our next witness is Kelly Long. Welcome, and just to confirm that you've received the letter for a witness coming before the committee?

Ms. Kelly Long: I have. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk has an oath for you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Ms. Long, if you could just raise your hand, please. Ms. Long, do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Ms. Kelly Long: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have five minutes for an opening statement and then the parties will ask questions.

Ms. Kelly Long: My name is Kelly Long. I am a former employee of Ornge Global. I started working for Ornge in 2006 as a communications officer within the corporate communications department. My primary responsibilities—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sorry, could you just speak into the microphone a little—not real close, but just a bit? Some of our members are having—

Ms. Kelly Long: My primary responsibilities were the development and execution of proactive stakeholder communications, leading the development of stakeholder analysis and conducting monitoring of stakeholder environments for trends that impact Ornge.

In 2009, I was promoted to stakeholder communications supervisor, which left me with the additional responsibility of assisting in developing, implementing and managing stakeholder strategies and initiatives.

In late 2009, I was asked to take over as acting director for the corporate communications department, where I led the development and management of the overall department. I was asked to do so because my manager at the time was being seconded to fill a gap in the foundation department.

During an organizational restructuring in 2010, I was promoted to director of health care relations and moved over to medical affairs and health care relations, reporting directly to the VP of that department. In that role, I worked closely with senior management to formulate and execute overall corporate strategies, initiatives and new processes to support the growth of the organization, improve stakeholder satisfaction and overall operational efficiency, with a primary focus on patient care and safety.

In mid- to late 2010, I was approached by Luis Navas, the former chief operating officer of Ornge Global, and was asked if I would be willing to be seconded by Ornge Global to help with revenue-generating initiatives. I agreed to do so because I understood that this revenue-generating strategy would ultimately help support the sustainability of Ornge the not-for-profit company.

Eventually, I was transferred over to Ornge Global as a junior executive in 2011. Between 2011 and January 2012, I assisted in sales and marketing activities, but my primary responsibilities were in business development and relationship management, where I worked collaboratively with senior executives on strategic planning, business development and execution. I was also responsible for identifying, cultivating and managing relationships with external stakeholders, such as potential clients, channel partners, strategic alliances and suppliers. On January 11, 2012, I was advised that I was being terminated from Ornge due to the bankruptcy.

I'm here today to answer questions and to help in any way that I can, but before I turn it over to the committee members, I would like to say that I was and still am very proud to have been a part of a company so committed to ensuring that not only patient needs are being met but also that quality care is being delivered in a safe, effective and sustainable manner. I believed in Ornge, and I still do. The organization is full of dedicated, patient-focused employees that I was honoured to work beside. I am truly saddened by what has transpired and hope that one day Ornge will regain the reputation that it deserves.

Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your opening statement.

It's time for the NDP to go first. Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were you aware of Dr. Chris Mazza's salary?

Ms. Kelly Long: No, I was not.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You found out in the paper, same time as everybody else?

Ms. Kelly Long: I did.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What did you think of it?

Ms. Kelly Long: Really, that's not for me to comment on. What I can say is that it was approved by the board of directors. I understand that they brought in consultants that advised on the compensation. Those same consultants advised on the other executive management team's compensation.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you rely on—

Ms. Kelly Long: I have full faith with the board. I do.

M^{me} France Gélinas: The board that is no longer there? Okay.

Are you still in contact with Chris Mazza?

Ms. Kelly Long: I am.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know where he is?

Ms. Kelly Long: I think that question would be better directed towards his lawyer, Roger Yachetti, who I believe has communicated to the committee on several occasions.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. I won't ask you where he is. I just want to know if you know where he is.

Ms. Kelly Long: Yes, I do.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you want to go in?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: No, go ahead.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You said that when you went to the for-profit side of Ornge, you felt proud of that work because you thought it was going to bring dividends to Ornge the not-for-profit. What made you think that?

Ms. Kelly Long: The way it was described to me is that we would be leveraging the resources from Ornge not-for-profit to generate revenue and then filter it back into the Ontario not-for-profit company to help sustain and fill that gap that exists.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you have any proof of that, that this was actually happening?

Ms. Kelly Long: As I mentioned, I was at a junior executive level, so, did I look at the organizational charts? In the media they had mentioned the shareholders' agreement. I hadn't reviewed that, no, but I—

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you were told that it was going to do some good, and you believed what you were told?

Ms. Kelly Long: Absolutely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know if Ornge kept the Ministry of Health up to date as to what was going on?

Ms. Kelly Long: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And how do you know that?

Ms. Kelly Long: I have had several discussions with certain employees at the organization that led me to believe that they were. Was it the Minister of Health? I am not sure. But definitely the bureaucrats within the ministry.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who told you that?

Ms. Kelly Long: As I recall, I had a conversation once with Jennifer Tracey and she had indicated that—I'm sorry, my memory is not that great, but—

M^{me} France Gélinas: That's okay. We can tell you're nervous. You're allowed.

Ms. Kelly Long: —that she had spoken to someone in the Premier's office, I believe. I had known because I had heard that our COO of Ornge Global, Rainer Beltzner and Alf Apps had actually conducted briefings, and obviously in stakeholder relations I had asked those questions, because the government and the taxpayers of Ontario were one of our key stakeholders and I wanted to make sure that they were informed.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And when you identified those stakeholders, did you identify both the Ministry of Health and the Premier's office? Any other ministry that you had identified?

Ms. Kelly Long: Any ministry that we touched—so it would have been the Ministry of Transportation, it would have been economic development and trade. So there was a number of ministries that had an impact on our organization or we had an impact on them.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And that included the Premier's office?

Ms. Kelly Long: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You figured your colleagues had had those briefings, so it was your job to identify the stakeholders—the Premier's office, the Ministry of Health, economic development and trade—and you knew that the work was being done to keep those people informed of what was going on at Ornge?

Ms. Kelly Long: At that point, I didn't go that far in terms of, "Did you notify this person? Did you notify this ministry? Did you notify that ministry?" Because I had been moved over and I was primarily focused on the revenue-generating aspect of the business. I'm not quite sure who took over my role as stakeholder manager, but at one point they had, during the reorganization I had mentioned—I don't know if it was around that timing—had separated me from government relations or, as we would call it, regulatory affairs and government relations, I believe is the exact name of the department, and they were actually responsible. I knew that the government was something that was not going to be in my bailiwick, so I was more responsible for the hospitals, the emergency management service teams, the CACCs central ambulance communication centres. So that was my bailiwick prior to me moving over to Ornge Global.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just to touch on that, while you were involved with stakeholders and government relations, how long was that for?

Ms. Kelly Long: I started in 2006 and was moved over—again, my memory—2010, I believe. If I reference my notes, I think I—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's okay. You did reference that. So while you were involved with stakeholder management, you had identified a number of stakeholders including the Premier's office and various ministries; is that correct?

Ms. Kelly Long: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And identifying them—

Ms. Kelly Long: Well, it's not that I—we knew who our stakeholders were; right?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Right. So it was common knowledge, you knew them?

Ms. Kelly Long: It was common knowledge, absolutely.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And everyone at Ornge at the executive level—at any level—would know that those are the stakeholders, it's very clear, and everyone at Ornge, including yourself, knew that you'd have to let those stakeholders know what was going on at Ornge?

Ms. Kelly Long: As it pertains to Ornge the not-for-profit and the operational issues that were going on, I believe—but again, I was a junior. I wasn't responsible for actually having those conversations.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: But you'd indicated before that you were confident that you had heard from people that those conversations and those communications did occur?

Ms. Kelly Long: For what matter, though?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just for advising the ministry and those stakeholders of what was going on at Ornge in terms of the not-for-profit side.

Ms. Kelly Long: Yes. I mean, they had a performance agreement, so within that performance agreement they reported on whatever they needed to report on. So did they report on every single issue or matter? I can't answer that; I have no idea.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're on your last minute.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In terms of the for-profit side, did you advise the ministry what was going on on the for-profit side?

Ms. Kelly Long: That wasn't my responsibility.

M^{me} France Gélinas: If the ministry would have asked for information, can you see any reason why Ornge would not have given that information?

Ms. Kelly Long: I don't believe that I'm in the position to answer that question. Again, I wouldn't have been responsible for making that decision. I, personally, don't know.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Aside from the people on the board who decided on the compensation for Dr. Mazza, who else in the organization would have known?

Ms. Kelly Long: Regarding his compensation?

M^{me} France Gélinas: His salary.

Ms. Kelly Long: His salary?

M^{me} France Gélinas: If the government had asked his salary, would the government have gotten it?

Ms. Kelly Long: Again, I have no knowledge in terms of his salary. I found out, I believe, probably when you did as well.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You read the papers, just like everybody else?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time, so we'll move to the government. Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. Good afternoon.

Ms. Kelly Long: Good afternoon.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: It's been very widely reported in the media that you've been in a long-term relationship with Dr. Mazza, so just to confirm, that is true? And it's also been widely reported that you have lived with Dr. Mazza and that you continue to be his partner. Just to confirm, that is true?

Ms. Kelly Long: Well, no, I didn't live with him. There have been circumstances recently that have required me to support the family. I've lived in my own condominium since March 31, 2010—or 2012; I apologize. So I would not categorize myself as living with him.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, thank you for that clarification.

How did you originally come to know Dr. Mazza?

Ms. Kelly Long: Through work.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And could you describe your work?

Ms. Kelly Long: Yes. If I may just give a bit of background in terms of where I've come from and where I am today. After I graduated from York University with a BA in arts, majoring in sociology, I became a certified English teacher. During the summer months, I actually was a general manager—operations manager for a sports club. One of my duties was, yes, being a water ski instructor, but that was just one responsibility in that role that I had. I met Dr. Mazza at that club.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So obviously a relationship developed. We can go back and talk a bit about your working with Ornge, but if we flash forward to the last year or so when the Auditor General was doing his work, did Dr. Mazza ever talk to you about the work that the Auditor General was doing with Ornge?

Ms. Kelly Long: No. We made it very clear that our personal life and our professional life remain separate.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But you were in charge of stakeholder relations, and one of the most important stakeholder relations is with the government of Ontario and the officers of the Legislature and the person of the Auditor General. That would seem to me to be part of your responsibility, given the roles that you were just describing to Madame Gélinas.

Ms. Kelly Long: I was actually moved over to health care relations, so I was—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That would be very important, then, to health care, that you know what's going on with the Auditor General.

Ms. Kelly Long: I was responsible for hospitals, for EMS services, for CACCs—central ambulance communication centres—and ambulance communication services, so I had a set of stakeholders that I was responsible for. There were other individuals that were responsible for the government, the ministries, the Auditor General. There was a team of individuals that we put together who were actually responsible for dealing strictly with the Auditor General. I was not on that team.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, that would be helpful for us to know, then, given that we're reviewing the auditor's report. Who was on the team that was put together to manage the auditor?

Ms. Kelly Long: I don't know. I know—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But you've just told us you were a vice-president. How did you not know who was working with the auditor?

Ms. Kelly Long: I was the associate vice-president, and it was still a junior executive role. I do know that Rainer Beltzner was leading the team. In terms of who was actually on that team, I wasn't made aware of; it wasn't something that I felt I needed to concern myself with. There are individuals who were perfectly capable who were dealing with the questions that were coming in and being co-operative with the Auditor General.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So it's your position that you had absolutely zero knowledge of anything that was going on with the Auditor General over the past year?

Ms. Kelly Long: Other than that they were there, I can't recall that I did, no.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So are you quite shocked by what came out in the auditor's report, then?

Ms. Kelly Long: I am shocked to the degree that not all the facts were presented within the Auditor General's report.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Ah. Now, that's interesting. So it's your position, then, that you didn't actually have anything to do with the audit but you're quite sure that he got it wrong?

Ms. Kelly Long: I read the Auditor General's report, and I also read the one in 2005 and some of the recommendations that they put forward. So again, it's my opinion that there were certain things that he failed to mention.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: How much time do I have left?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two and a half minutes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Quickly, then: The way you got involved with Ornge in the first place was, you were working for Pathway Group. We heard this morning from

Mr. Mitchell. He was paying you, it seems, a salary of $58,000 a year, but then you were seconded back to Ornge, is our understanding. You then went back to work at Ornge. Could you explain to us why you were at Pathway, Ornge was paying your salary, then you went back to Ornge? Why not just hire you at Ornge in the first place, given that Ornge was always paying your salary?

Ms. Kelly Long: I wasn't aware that Ornge was always paying my salary.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That would appear to be what has come out today.

Ms. Kelly Long: Okay. So that's information to me.

Several years after being a certified English-as-a-second-language teacher and my part-time job at the water sports club, I decided that I was going to pursue other fields of interest, and one was public affairs. So I had started networking with a number of clients who were members at the club and had asked: "If there was anything that came up at your organization, please let me know. I'm interested; I find myself a communicator. I have been engaged in stakeholder relations. If you hear of anything, please let me know."

Dr. Mazza was one of the individuals that I had approached. He had indicated that he didn't know of any positions at Ornge at the time; that they do actually post on the website and the newspaper, so please feel free to monitor the website or the newspaper; and if he would hear of anything else, then he would let me know. I believe it was a short time after that that he indicated that there is a gentleman that I might want to touch base with or contact: Mr. Kelly Mitchell from Pathway Group; that he "may be looking for someone in terms of what you're looking for." So I contacted Kelly Mitchell. I met with him and his partners and presented my resumé and we had an interview, and he subsequently offered me the position.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And you were totally unaware of the fact that the money to pay that position was actually coming from Ornge?

Ms. Kelly Long: No.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time, I'm afraid, Ms. Sandals. So we'll move to the opposition. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Ms. Long, you've had a meteoric rise in a very short time through various levels of management and vice-presidencies and directors; I have to compliment you.

Can I ask what your income was the last year that you were working at the health club, or sports club, as you call it?

Ms. Kelly Long: At the sports club? I'd have to check my records.

Mr. Frank Klees: The job before you got the job as a government relations person.

Ms. Kelly Long: For my ESL?

Mr. Frank Klees: Whatever you were doing that year. What was your income that year, according to your tax records?

Ms. Kelly Long: I would have to check my records—

Mr. Frank Klees: Approximately.

Ms. Kelly Long: I would have to check my records. I can do that for you if you'd like.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're an astute young woman. You were a director, a manager and a vice-president. Surely you can give us an example or an estimate of what your income was.

Ms. Kelly Long: It would have not been lower than $60,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: About $60,000? You earned that at the sports club. Did you ever teach?

Ms. Kelly Long: And teaching.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you actually teach English as a second language?

Ms. Kelly Long: I was actually certified as an English teacher.

Mr. Frank Klees: I realize you were certified. Did you actually have a teaching job?

Ms. Kelly Long: Yes, I did.

Mr. Frank Klees: Where was that?

Ms. Kelly Long: At Hansa Language Centre.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. What did you earn when you got hired over at Pathway? What was your starting salary there?

Ms. Kelly Long: What Ms. Sandals had indicated: $58,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, so you took a decline in income.

Ms. Kelly Long: I did.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was your income when you left Ornge?

Ms. Kelly Long: When I left Ornge Global?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Ms. Kelly Long: It was $120,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: And that was over the space of what time?

Ms. Kelly Long: It would have been five years.

Mr. Frank Klees: Excellent. The role that you had when you assumed responsibility to deliver to Agusta on a multi-million dollar contract: Tell me what it is that you did to fulfill the terms of that contract.

Ms. Kelly Long: First, I would like to clarify my role in the Agusta marketing services agreement. I was not the lead on the project.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who was the lead?

Ms. Kelly Long: Luis Navas, the former chief operating officer of Ornge Global, was the lead on that project. He was actually responsible for overseeing the agreement and the deliverables. When he suffered a medical condition and went on medical leave—I believe that was in September 2011; it would have been September or October, I believe; I can't recall exactly the month—I was delegated, because I was reporting directly to him in a junior executive capacity, that I would oversee the final deliverables.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Well, that's a huge responsibility. What exactly was it that you were to oversee and deliver? What was the value of that contract?

Ms. Kelly Long: May I also clarify something else? Because I think it's important.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure; go ahead.

Ms. Kelly Long: There were actually six employees and four interim MBA students who contributed to that report. They were responsible for obtaining and analyzing the information and providing a report. In addition, we utilized tools such as academic papers, journals and databases to obtain the information that went into the report.

Mr. Frank Klees: And for all of that work—how much did Agusta pay for that?

Ms. Kelly Long: Four point seven.

Mr. Frank Klees: Four point seven million dollars. This is a multi-billion dollar corporation. Do you have any idea why they would come to you, to Ornge, and pay that kind of money for that kind of work? Why would they not be able to hire their own MBAs? I'm just going to ask you this question: If you put all of the salaries together of all of those MBAs and all of your people at Ornge, how much do you think you would have paid out in salaries to those people?

Ms. Kelly Long: I'm not sure—

Mr. Frank Klees: Oh, come on now; you're a senior person at Ornge; you can take a wild guess. Be on the high side.

Ms. Kelly Long: I'm not sure.

Mr. Frank Klees: How long did it take to put the report together?

Ms. Kelly Long: It was over two years.

Mr. Frank Klees: Two years. So let's make an assumption. You were getting paid $100,000?

Ms. Kelly Long: Mm-hmm.

Mr. Frank Klees: Let's make an assumption that even the MBA students each got paid $100,000. Let's make an assumption that all of those employees—you say how many there were in total?

Ms. Kelly Long: Ten. But then the executives—

Mr. Frank Klees: Ten? Let's say they all got paid $100,000, all right?

Ms. Kelly Long: Mm-hmm.

Mr. Frank Klees: At the end of the day, what was the net value?

Ms. Kelly Long: I think what's important is the expertise that we offered Agusta. So, at a very high level, the report was designed to basically identify and better understand the key pursuit target markets in order to communicate—to impenetrate, those key pursuit markets. This ultimately would have led to increased sales for Agusta. At the top of my head in terms of what was added into that report, there was a number of deliverables that we spent a significant amount of time on.

Mr. Frank Klees: Very interesting.

I want to go back to Ms. Sandals's question. When you were first hired by Pathway, were you aware that Dr. Mazza had made arrangements to actually pay your salary through Ornge to Pathway?

Ms. Kelly Long: No, I had not—has that been confirmed?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, it has.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We have the invoices, Mr. Chair.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes. How do you feel about that?

Ms. Kelly Long: I feel that I did a great job for both Pathway and Ornge. I feel that I deserved the promotions that I received. I know that people are insinuating, or the media are insinuating, that I rose quickly because of my relationship—or my friendship—with Dr. Mazza. I think that's unfair. I do have a university degree.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Ms. Kelly Long: I spent a lot of time—I was fortunate enough to have the time to commit myself fully to my career.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure.

Ms. Kelly Long: So I think it's unfair that people insinuate that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, you know, there are some—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about a minute left.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure. There are some factual things that I think for the average person it's pretty hard to kind of understand.

Ms. Kelly Long: I understand that.

Mr. Frank Klees: But let me just ask one last question of you. You made reference to the dedicated, patient-focused employees of Ornge. Knowing what you know today, do you believe that Dr. Mazza fits into that description? Dedicated and patient-focused?

Ms. Kelly Long: Absolutely, 100%. I can tell you that that is an accurate statement.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much and thank you for your testimony today, for coming before the committee.

Ms. Kelly Long: Thank you.

MR. DON GUY

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our next presenter is Mr. Don Guy. Good afternoon, Mr. Guy.

Mr. Don Guy: Good afternoon, Mr. Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Just to confirm that you've received the information for a witness testifying before the committee?

Mr. Don Guy: I have, thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk does have an oath for you to swear, once you're ready.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): There's a Bible on the table there, Mr. Guy.

Mr. Don Guy: Oh, great. Right hand or left hand? Does it matter?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): No, you pick.

Mr. Guy, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to the committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Don Guy: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. You have five minutes for an opening presentation and time for questions.

Mr. Don Guy: Great. Thank you, Mr. Chair. Thank you to you and to the committee members for the opportunity to appear before you today. I will take the opportunity to make a short statement for the record. I've tried to keep this to five minutes and I apologize if I've gone over a little bit.

I am hopeful, but not optimistic, that this statement of facts under oath will give pause to those elected officials who knowingly and willingly have been telling malicious lies about me for partisan purposes, under the protection of parliamentary privilege. These are the accurate facts.

I was chief of staff to the Premier from October 2003 until July 2006, when I left government. When I left government, I visited with the Integrity Commissioner, who informed me, confirmed in writing, that the conflict-of-interest-and-post-service directive restricted me from engaging in any lobbying for 12 months. Not only have I lived within this directive, I have not undertaken any lobbying activities at any time since leaving government. And to be clear, despite the accusations of some members of this committee, at no time did I undertake any lobbying on behalf of Ornge.

The Integrity Commissioner also informed me that this directive contemplates that you will be able to make use of the expertise acquired by you during your service with the crown. Section 26 of the directive provides as follows: "It is in the public interest to facilitate the movement of individuals and the transfer of skills and knowledge to the private and public sector organizations...."

In late November, 2007 I was approached by Alfred Apps of Fasken, on behalf of Ornge, regarding the imminent consolidation of Ornge on to the province of Ontario's books, as directed by the Provincial Auditor. I was told that Ornge was concerned that consolidation might cost it several hundred thousand dollars in legal and accounting fees. Mr. Apps asked if I would be willing to help Ornge. I told them that I was busy back at my job as CEO of Pollara after the election and wasn't interested. He asked if I would at least have lunch with Dr. Chris Mazza, who I had not met before. We had lunch shortly thereafter, and Dr. Mazza told me the story of his background. He told me the story of the tragic death of his son from a skiing accident in 2006. He indicated that there was a delay in medevac services; that he was himself involved in flying; and that he wanted to ensure that that would never happen in Ontario again. His story was very compelling, and his vision and drive impressed me.

As several people have pointed out, I was in good company and I took assurance in the good reputation of Fasken's, of Mr. Apps, Lynne Golding, Guy Giorno and Kelly Mitchell. A number of people from all partisan stripes, as well as non-partisans, were working in various capacities in support of the Ornge vision. I am prepared to assume that they did so with the best of intentions, as I did.

Upon reviewing the matter, my advice to Mr. Apps, and through him, to his client, was that while consolidation might cost Ornge several hundred thousand dollars in legal and accounting fees, there was no point in engaging in a lobbying effort to try to stop it, as there simply is no political discretion over those kinds of directions from the Auditor General. As the secretary of cabinet confirmed in testimony before this committee on April 18, consolidation went ahead as scheduled in that fiscal year.

Ornge drew up a draft contract to retain my services but it was never finalized. Instead, Mr. Apps remained my main client contact on the file, and I was retained by Fasken's and compensated for my time, monitoring various developments and issues related to Ornge and offering strategic and public policy advice as needed. My average billing was about $3,700 a month until I ended the engagement in March 2010. I had recently left my job as CEO at Pollara so I could take off time after the birth of our twins, and wanted to do the same with this.

I wish to say that during the time I was on a retainer, I saw no intent or evidence of wrongdoing, criminal or otherwise, at Ornge or at Fasken's.

After some two years with no involvement with the file, paid or otherwise, I was approached by Mr. Apps in mid-December 2011 and asked my advice on the salary disclosure matter. I advised him that co-operating fully with the minister in disclosing salaries was the only way to go, from my perspective, even if it involved risks of lawsuits from employees.

He got back to me and asked how to convey a message from Rainer Beltzner, the chair of the board of Ornge, to Deb Matthews indicating that the board had resolved to co-operate fully with any direction she wished to take on salary disclosure. As I was seeing Ms. Matthews the next morning for breakfast for a campaign post-mortem in her role as candidate search chair, I volunteered to convey the message to her. I did so in part of a conversation that lasted about a minute, and it turned out that Ms. Matthews was already scheduled to meet with Ornge that afternoon. Her response was a single, firm, "Good."

Later that day, Mr. Apps got back in touch with me and I let him know that the minister was meeting with Ornge that day. We then had a telephone conversation, and he asked me if I had feedback on detailed briefing documents he had sent me on the current status of Ornge. I indicated that I would have to spend several days getting caught up reading on the file and I would have to invoice my time accordingly if I was going to do that. My invoice was sent in advance on December 18, 2011.

Three days later I concluded I could not give the matter the attention it deserved in a timely fashion. The little time that I had spent on the file was paying attention to media reports, and these were troubling. As a result, on December 21, I withdrew the invoice and received no payment.

Members in the Legislature have asked if I have ever discussed any matter related to Ornge with the Premier, and I want to give you my assurance that I have not, either in government or before 2006 or since.

That's my statement, and I would be happy to respond to any questions you might have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for that. We'll go to the government first. Mr. Leal.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair, and through you to Mr. Guy: Can you tell the committee how your retainer to provide consulting services to Ornge was initiated?

Mr. Don Guy: Through Mr. Apps.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Could you tell the committee how the retainer was structured? For example, what were the deliverables, what was the term and so on?

Mr. Don Guy: The idea was that there would be compensation for time that I would spend paying attention to matters related to Ornge as a base and then over and apart from that I was therefore available to provide public policy advice or strategic advice, as the case may be. That would, in some cases, happen over the telephone with Mr. Apps—principally over the telephone, actually.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Why was your retainer with Fasken Martineau instead of directly with Ornge?

Mr. Don Guy: Because Mr. Apps and Fasken's were the client. I was advising him and Fasken's in support of their efforts, as I understood, to support Ornge in a variety of capacities. My specific duties were with respect to staying current on public affairs, public policy and strategy.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Can you provide an overview for the committee of the precise work you did for Ornge over the course of the contract?

Mr. Don Guy: I certainly could, in general. The work would typically, I'd say, involve an hour to two hours a week, paying attention to developments. I had set up various alerts on social media and things of that nature so that I would receive that information.

As well, I was paying attention to developments in other jurisdictions with respect to air ambulance service—Alberta, for example, where the STAR system was viewed to be a similar model to what we had set up in Ontario, as well as international jurisdictions, and trying to anticipate trends in the development of issues, as well as public policy trends that might provide opportunities.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Were you aware at any time of the $1.4-million salary that Dr. Mazza was earning?

Mr. Don Guy: I became aware of that on December 23, 2011, from the media.

Mr. Jeff Leal: What are your thoughts on that salary?

Mr. Don Guy: I think it's outrageous. I, literally, was stunned and saddened and disappointed to see that that was the case. I knew enough about the structure of public sector salaries, both on the agency side as well as within government, to know that that likely made him the best-paid public servant in Ontario and perhaps in Canada.

If you think about that in the context of an agency with revenue of $150 million a year and you compare that to Hydro One or OPG or OLG or whatever the case may be, never mind some of the agencies federally—I just couldn't understand it. The NDP proposal to do something about those kinds of salaries seemed to me to be a very—that would be the kind of situation where that would make a lot of sense.

Mr. Jeff Leal: This committee heard last week from two Fasken lawyers, Mr. Giorno and Ms. Golding, advising Dr. Mazza that he didn't have to disclose his $1.4-million salary. Were you aware of this advice while you were working with Fasken's?

Mr. Don Guy: No. At no point did that ever come up while I was on retainer prior to March 2010. In fact, salaries were never an item of discussion. I did not know what Dr. Mazza or other members of the executive team were earning in terms of salary, although I have seen from transcripts in the committee that it was approximately $300,000 at the outset.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Were you aware of the legal advice they provided that Ornge did not have to co-operate with the Auditor General while at Ornge?

Mr. Don Guy: I am not aware of any legal advice to that effect.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Apps indicated in his testimony that they first engaged your services for two purposes: first, to provide the organization with a sense of how to “anticipate and think about issues relating to government”; second, to provide with respect to the government's proposed consolidation of Ornge on the province's books. Can you elaborate on the work that you did and the advice you provided with respect to these two items?

Mr. Don Guy: Certainly. Let me take the second item first, if that's acceptable. As I touched on in my remarks, the initial approach in late November 2007 was with respect to the imminent consolidation of Ornge on to the province's books, as directed by the Auditor General and consistent with revisions that were made to public sector accounting standards under PSAB in 2005.

As I say, I was told that there was a concern that this would mean additional accounting and legal costs to comply with that direction, both on a one-time basis as well as on an ongoing basis, and that there was a desire to engage with government to determine if that policy could be amended.

I was fairly certain at the outset that that would not be the case. I did go back and do some reading and came to the conclusion that my instincts were right. There is no room for political discretion around public sector accounting rules as interpreted by the Auditor General, and I gave that advice accordingly. As I say, as I understand it, the consolidation was complete for the end of the fiscal year 2007-08.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have one minute, Mr. Leal.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Klees has alleged in this committee that you were hired by Fasken's to help “fend off” the proposed consolidation. Mr. Apps indicated that the truth is, you advised the opposite. What is your recollection of the advice that you provided with respect to the consolidation?

Mr. Don Guy: My advice was very clearly the opposite of what Mr. Klees has alleged, and I hope that he'll take the opportunity at some point to correct the record on that.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Did you ever meet the Minister of Finance to discuss Ornge?

Mr. Don Guy: No.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Did you ever meet the secretary of cabinet to discuss Ornge?

Mr. Don Guy: No.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Did you ever meet the Premier of Ontario to discuss Ornge?

Mr. Don Guy: No.

Mr. Jeff Leal: So it's safe to say that the consulting services you provided to Ornge did not involve advocacy or lobbying?

Mr. Don Guy: That's correct.

Mr. Jeff Leal: The opposition has made a number of allegations in the House with respect to an invoice dated December 17, 2011. What did this particular invoice relate to, and why was the invoice ultimately cancelled?

Mr. Don Guy: The invoice was related to documents that Mr. Apps had sent me and asked me to review and give feedback on, that gave an update on the current status of Ornge and its various businesses. As I indicated, I told him, “That's going to take quite a bit of time. It's going to take several days for me to, first, catch up on the file. I haven't paid attention to it for two years.” Secondly, it was a fairly detailed document, as he indicated. So I indicated to him that I would have to invoice for my time doing that, and he indicated that would be okay. “Go ahead and send an invoice,” which I did. It was apparent to me, though, after three days that I just was not going to get to it. Upon seeing the media on the morning of December 21, it reinforced my desire not to get to it. So I withdrew the invoice and never received payment.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're out of time, Mr. Leal.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll move to the opposition, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Mr. Guy, do you make it a habit to charge in advance?

Mr. Don Guy: I do. That's the standard in professional services consulting, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can you tell me when the first time was that you acted on behalf of Ornge through Fasken?

Mr. Don Guy: What do you mean by “act”?

Mr. Frank Klees: Made phone calls, made inquiries, provided strategic advice.

Mr. Don Guy: I've never made any phone calls or inquiries on behalf of Ornge, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: You've never made a phone call to the Ministry of Finance on behalf of the Ornge consolidation issue?

Mr. Don Guy: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're under oath, sir.

Mr. Don Guy: I realize that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. When was the first time you had anything to do with Ornge?

Mr. Don Guy: The first time I had anything to do with Ornge?

Mr. Frank Klees: The first time you provided advice, discussed it—let's put it this way: the first time that, in your opinion, you could actually bill for something that had anything to do with Ornge.

Mr. Don Guy: The first day that I began billing was December 5, 2007.

Mr. Frank Klees: And how did you charge for that?

Mr. Don Guy: Pardon me? Sorry.

Mr. Frank Klees: How did you bill for that, and to whom did you bill your time?

Mr. Don Guy: I billed Fasken's for the time that I spent advising them on the matter of consolidation.

Mr. Frank Klees: I thought you always bill in advance.

Mr. Don Guy: Pardon me?

Mr. Frank Klees: I thought you always bill in advance.

Mr. Don Guy: That is the way I prefer to proceed. In this case, there were a number of things that I was involved in at the time, and I did not get around to issuing that invoice in advance.

Mr. Frank Klees: When did you issue that invoice?

Mr. Don Guy: In May, I believe.

Mr. Frank Klees: And how much was that invoice for?

Mr. Don Guy: I think that was for five and a half months at $3,500 per month.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Let me ask you this: When you were chief of staff to the Premier, given the nature of this project—pretty significant in the context of government and health care—were you ever briefed on the Ornge file, during the time that you were chief of staff to the Premier?

Mr. Don Guy: No, I was not.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you think you should have been?

Mr. Don Guy: I wouldn't want to speculate on something like that. My responsibilities as chief of staff to the Premier did not preclude policy items. So I did not become aware of the file and was not briefed on it until some time quite a bit later. I think it might have been when it was actually before cabinet.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you saw the MB20 before it went to cabinet?

Mr. Don Guy: No, I did not.

Mr. Frank Klees: You did not? But you were in the room when it was discussed?

Mr. Don Guy: I'm not sure I was, to be perfectly honest. My attendance at cabinet was both infrequent and also somewhat—what's the term I'm looking for—if I had to leave cabinet to go attend to a matter, I would do that. So I'm not sure that I recall being in cabinet for a discussion of the matter. I may have been; I just don't recall it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was there any time at all when the issue, the file of Ornge, came to your attention, that there were senior people within the Ministry of Health who were expressing concern about the proposal that was going forward to cabinet, specifically some of the legal people within the Ministry of Health? None of this ever came to your attention?

Mr. Don Guy: I think the way I understood the proposal was that the previous government, of which you were part of cabinet, had made a decision to consolidate air ambulance services into one entity—that was the decision of the minister at the time, Tony Clement, I believe. I don't know if that came to cabinet when you were in cabinet, or if that discussion came to cabinet. My understanding was that the ministry was persuaded of that policy approach in 2002 and was persuaded subsequently, when we came into government, that that continued to be the appropriate approach. So that, frankly, is about as much as I knew about it at the time.

I think there was something to do with 50 or something separate private sector providers. There was something to the effect of challenges of managing dispatch in a timely fashion. I think those have been flagged in a couple of reports, so it seemed to make sense.

Mr. Frank Klees: Consolidation was, in fact, the focus and vision of the previous government. What was not the vision of the previous government is what happened under the current government—

Mr. Don Guy: I don't think that was the vision of the current government, either.

Mr. Frank Klees: —and that is the failure of proper oversight of an organization, the spawning of for-profit companies. My concern, Mr. Guy, is that as the chief of staff to the Premier, one would think that you would be his eyes and ears, and that you would want to alert the Premier to what was clearly a controversial proposal coming forward to cabinet.

The reason that we conclude that you may well have had a role in smoothing the waters for Dr. Mazza and others is that anyone who is conscientious and who can see—or should be able to see—the red flags, one would have thought, with your experience and your responsibility, that you would be the first one to trigger to that, in the same way that you say, based on your experience, you alerted Alf Apps that the consolidation issue may well be something that rather than oppose, they should just fold on and agree to.

So my question to you is, something as significant as the consolidation of the air ambulance service—that it did not come to your attention, that it didn't cause you any concern, is puzzling to us. I'd like your thoughts on how you would view the effectiveness of a chief of staff who wouldn't bring something like this to the attention of the Premier.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you have 30 seconds left.

Mr. Don Guy: Okay. Well, there are a couple of things there that I'd like to unpack a bit, the first of which is the assumption or speculation that somehow concerns about consolidation were brought to my attention, which they were not.

As you indicated, Mr. Klees, the vision and the policy approach that was adopted to consolidate these various disparate services into one system was initiated under your government.

Mr. Frank Klees: That's right.

Mr. Don Guy: So were those concerns raised in 2002?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time, so we'll have to go—

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair, I just want to raise a point.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're going to cut into the NDP's time, so no.

Mr. David Zimmer: I want to raise—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No. We're going to go to the NDP. Go ahead.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you, Chair.

I'd like to ask you, Mr. Guy, in the last 18 months, were you paid, directly or indirectly, by the Liberal Party?

Mr. Don Guy: Can you please restate the question?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Sure. In the last 18 months, have you been paid, directly or indirectly, by the Liberal Party?

Mr. Don Guy: I was paid by the Liberal Party, the Ontario Liberal Party, until—I guess until October 6, until election day.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Until October 6, 2011?

Mr. Don Guy: That's right.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So, since you left the Premier's office in July 2006, and up until this last election, you continued to receive payment?

Mr. Don Guy: No, no, no. Sorry, no, no. That's not—sorry. Do you want me to—

M^{me} France Gélinas: I don't want to put—

Mr. Don Guy: Can I take a second just to—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yeah.

Mr. Don Guy: That's not the way the campaign director position works in our party. I can't speak to how it works in other parties, but I am typically appointed to be the campaign director—or I've had the honour to be appointed the campaign director on four separate occasions, typically, a few months prior to what is anticipated to be the election day. So, for example, the first time in 1999, which I think was—was that a spring election, Mr. Chair? Was that a June election?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

Mr. Don Guy: So I was appointed campaign director in October 1998, so I think eight or nine months in advance, and was paid at that time. Before the 2003 election, which again, Mr. Chair, you will recall sort of dragged on—there were no fixed election dates at the time—so I think my appointment preceded that by about 18 months. I left the Premier's office in July 2006, but I don't think I started on as campaign director with the party getting paid right away; I think that was in January.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Don Guy: And I think this most recent time, it might have been October 2010. I'm not totally sure.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you.

When they sought your advice on salary disclosure, you made it clear that you'd tell them, "Be transparent and tell them"?

Mr. Don Guy: Mm-hmm.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did they explain to you then the corporate structure?

Mr. Don Guy: No, no. It was a pretty brief conversation, which is, "Hey, what do you think we should do on this salary disclosure thing?" and I gave the advice I gave, which is, "You know, I don't think you've got an option; you've got to find a way to co-operate with the minister and accept her direction and do what she wants to do, and if that creates some legal issues or exposure with some of your employees because of contract law, you're going to have to come up with a solution to that, because it's just not going to be acceptable that these folks are not on the sunshine list."

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. And you did mention that you had a quick meeting with Minister Matthews—a one-minute. She ended up saying, "All good." All you had to do was bring the message forward—

Mr. Don Guy: No, she didn't say, "All good."

Mme France Gélinas: Oh, no? Sorry.

Mr. Don Guy: Sorry. So the context is that, because of the minority situation, I went around and did debriefs with all the folks who are working committee chairs over the course of the campaign. Because Ms. Matthews is so busy, the earliest opportunity that we could really find to sit down after the election was mid-December. She's our candidate search chair, as I think you know, or has been in the last two elections. So I wanted to debrief with her on that.

Just because of the overlap with respect to the call from Mr. Apps on salary disclosure, I offered to communicate that message, which was, "They want to co-operate fully with your direction on that." She didn't say, "All good"; she said, "Good."

Mme France Gélinas: All right.

Mr. Don Guy: From the context, it's quite different, as you'll appreciate.

Mme France Gélinas: No, no. I appreciate. But you did say that she had a meeting booked with Ornge that afternoon?

Mr. Don Guy: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you remember the date of that mid-December candidate search debriefing?

Mr. Don Guy: I think it was December 15.

Mme France Gélinas: On December 15. Okay.

The pile of documents that Mr. Apps wanted you to review: You spent three days on it, then saw the news, saw everything, and said, "No, thanks"?

Mr. Don Guy: It's a good question, and I know you've been going at this in the House. I never got to the documents. It was one of those situations where I was thinking, "It's going to take me a while to really dig into this file and catch up on what's been going over the last two years, and it's going to take a significant amount of time. It's going to take a significant amount of time to wade through these documents in particular on top of that." Just because of the time of year, I didn't think I was going to get to it before Christmas. As I say, my inclination not to do it was reinforced when I saw the papers on the morning of December 21 and the story, which was troubling.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you very much, sir. What was your role in the Ornge debt offering? Were you aware of the Ornge debt offering?

Mr. Don Guy: I was aware of the Ornge debt offering, but I had no role in it specifically.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. With respect to your work, you were CEO of a company; is that correct?

Mr. Don Guy: Mm-hmm.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You worked on Liberal campaigns and you were hired at certain times preceding the campaigns; is that correct?

Mr. Don Guy: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You also had a company called Artisan Research and Communications Inc.; is that correct?

Mr. Don Guy: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: How often are you employed through that company?

Mr. Don Guy: Since December—I think, 5; it was around that time—December 5, 2009, that's been my only source of consulting. That's the only business. I own the business.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: How many clients do you have in total?

Mr. Don Guy: It tends to vary. It's a business that is focused on market research. So it really tends to vary. When there are projects that are large-scope projects, you don't end up taking on a lot of smaller things, but when there aren't, you take on some of those projects.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: How many of those projects are related to the government or to government relations?

Mr. Don Guy: Actually, this was the only one.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: This was the only one?

Mr. Don Guy: This was the only one. I went against my instinct, but that lunch with Dr. Mazza made such an impression on me. I heard that story about his son; I just went, "Wow. My God. How could you not want to help this guy?"

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have 30 seconds.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Do you believe you were hired because of your intimate knowledge of the Premier?

Mr. Don Guy: Sorry?

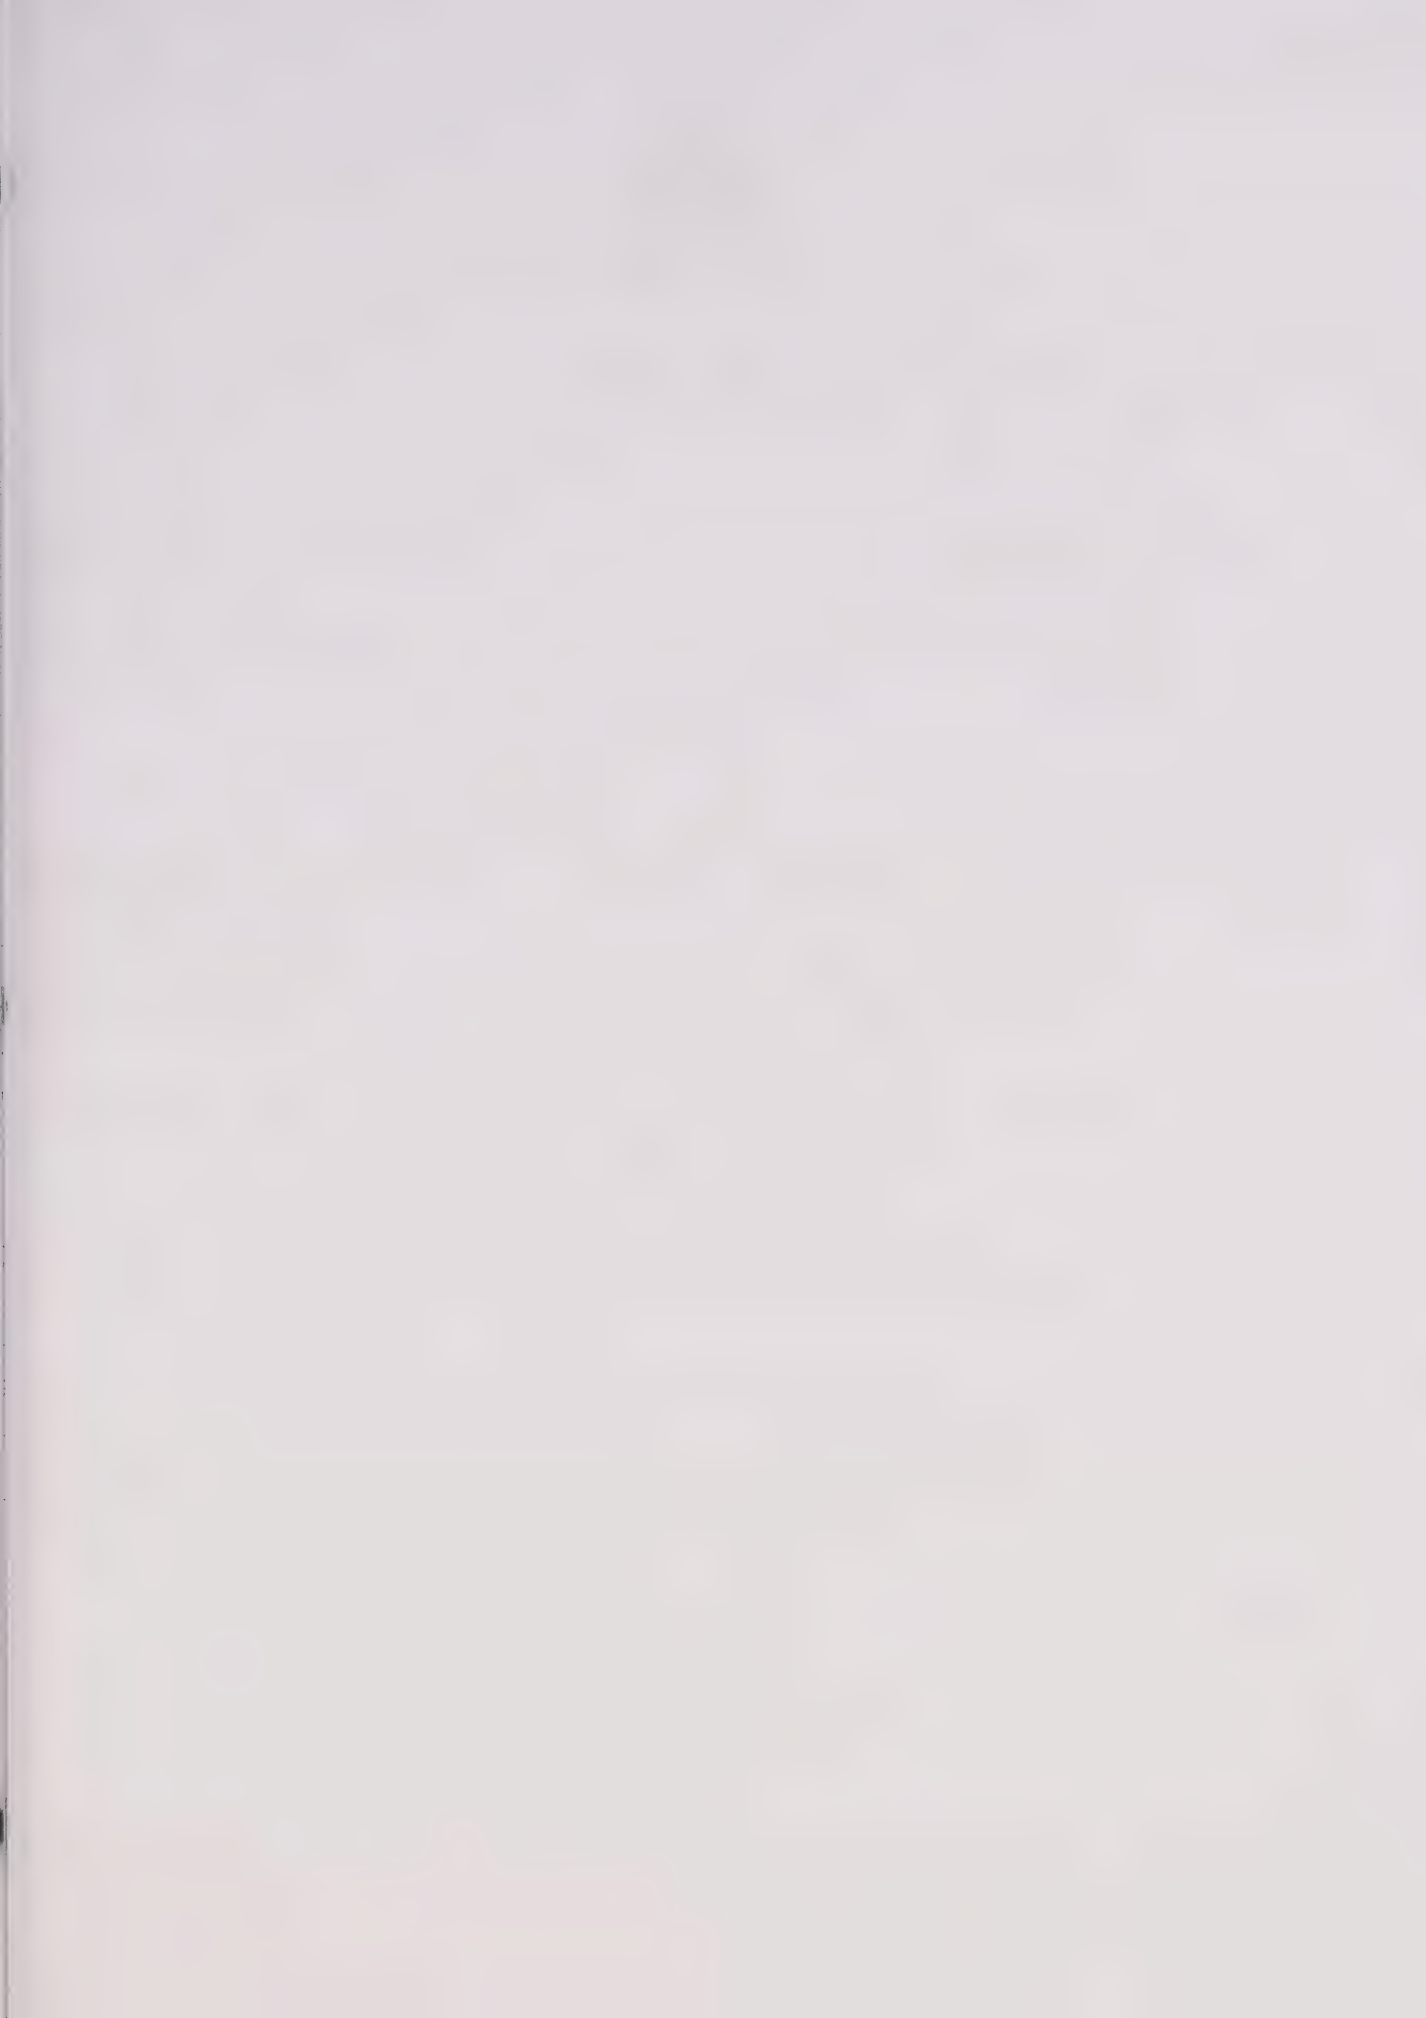

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Do you think you were hired or you were consulted by Fasken's because of your intimate knowledge of the Premier?

Mr. Don Guy: Well, I'm afraid I don't have intimate knowledge of the Premier. That's limited to Terry. But no, I don't think so.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We do need to wrap up, because it is 3 o'clock.

Thank you very much for your presentation today. We have to adjourn, unfortunately.

The committee adjourned at 1500.

STANDING COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC ACCOUNTSCOMITÉ PERMANENT DES COMPTES PUBLICS

Wednesday 9 May 2012

Mercredi 9 mai 2012

The committee met at 0846 in room 151.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I call this meeting to order, and we need to go in camera for the first few minutes.

The committee continued in closed session from 0846 to 0921.

SUBCOMMITTEE REPORT

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'm going to move back into open session. I believe we have a subcommittee report.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We do.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mrs. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Your subcommittee met on Thursday, May 3, 2012, to consider the method of proceeding on the 2012 Special Report of the Office of the Auditor General on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services, and recommends the following:

(1) That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts invite Dr. Chris Mazza to appear before the committee on Wednesday, June 6, 2012, at 9 a.m.

(2) That, should Dr. Chris Mazza fail to accept the invitation, the Standing Committee on Public Accounts consider a motion to present a report to the House requesting that a new Speaker's warrant relating to Dr. Chris Mazza be issued for his appearance before the committee on Wednesday, June 6, 2012.

(3) That Mr. Flavio Volpe be removed from the witness list.

(4) That legislative research prepare an interim document entitled "Issues and Observations" following the hearings on June 6, 2012.

And further considered the method of proceeding on the notice of motion by France Gélinas, MPP, dated March 7, 2012, and recommends the following:

(5) That the committee send a letter to the Ontario Power Authority with respect to the "Request for Information on the Cancellation of Ontario Power Authority's Contracts with TransCanada Energy Ltd. And Greenfield South Power Corporation."

(6) That the committee clerk, in consultation with the Chair, be authorized prior to the adoption of the report of the subcommittee to commence making any preliminary arrangements necessary to facilitate the committee's proceedings.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any debate? All in favour?

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, I just want to—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: I think it's appropriate that we at least provide on the record an explanation as to why the arrangements for Dr. Chris Mazza have now been changed from the original date to June 6. Perhaps the clerk can clarify that for us.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Clerk, go ahead.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): We have received notification that Mr. Mazza will not be able to appear on May 16, from his lawyer, and the committee has now suggested June 6 as a new date for him to come. We have been notified that it is due to a medical condition that Mr. Mazza is currently dealing with, and we will reissue a new invitation for Wednesday, June 6, due to this.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): All in favour of the subcommittee report? Carried.

SPECIAL REPORT, AUDITOR GENERAL:
ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE
AND RELATED SERVICES

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I believe we have one motion to deal with before our presenter. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: This would be the reference to the information, or further information, that I'm requesting:

That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts (herein "the committee"), under standing order 110(b), stating that "each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things," directs the Minister of Health and Long-Term Care as well as the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care to produce, within a fortnight, all documentation in any form, electronic or otherwise, related to at least the 13 incidents that have occurred between January 1, 2010, and May 1, 2012, investigated by the emergency services branch involving an Ornge ambulance (air or land) as well as any documentation in any form, electronic or otherwise, related to any other internal investigation conducted by the Ministry of Health that pertains to Ornge air or land ambulances.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

MINISTRY OF FINANCE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Our first witness this morning is Mr. James Sinclair, director of legal services, Ministry of Finance. Welcome, Mr. Sinclair. You've received the notice for a witness appearing before the committee?

Mr. James Sinclair: I did.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Very well, and I believe our clerk has an oath for you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Sorry, Mr. Sinclair: Did you want to swear an oath or be affirmed?

Mr. James Sinclair: I'm happy to swear an oath.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Okay, the Bible is in front of you there.

Mr. Sinclair, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. James Sinclair: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. You have five minutes for an opening statement and then there will be questions from the members.

Mr. James Sinclair: Great. My name is Jim Sinclair and I'm the director of legal services at the Ministry of Finance. I have held this position since December 8, 2008, which is also the date I entered the Ontario public service. I joined the ministry from the private sector. Prior to my role at the ministry, I was chief legal officer and chief compliance officer at Northwater Capital Management Inc., an investment firm.

As the legal director for the Ministry of Finance, I am responsible for the provision of legal advice to the ministry. There are just shy of 40 lawyers at the ministry's legal services branch, and advice is provided on a wide variety of subjects and in connection with a large number of matters. The role of the legal services branch in connection with Ornge, however, has been fairly limited.

I'm able to speak to you today about three things: how the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act, 1996, operates; the impact on the province's liabilities of Ornge's bond issuance; and whether the consolidation of Ornge on the province's financial statements resulted in additional liability to the province as a result of the bond issuance.

First, the PSSDA: The purpose of the PSSDA, as you no doubt know, is set out at section 1 of the act and it is to "assure the public disclosure of the salary and benefits paid in respect of employment in the public sector to employees who are paid a salary of $100,000 or more in a year." Simply put, the act applies to employers. Employers include non-profit employers in the public sector. An employer is in the public sector if it receives more than $1 million in funding from the government in a year or if the funding exceeds 10%, or $120,000, of its gross revenues. Employers are required to report the salaries and benefits paid to their employees if they pay them more than $100,000 in salary in a given year. For the purposes of the act, "salary" means taxable salary, and "benefits" means taxable benefits.

The obligation to determine whether or not to disclose under the act rests with each individual employer. If an employer does not make the required information public, funding can be withdrawn from it or withheld from it. Each year, the Ministry of Finance collects and organizes the information provided to it from organizations subject to the act in order to produce the compendium that is published on its website.

In compiling the compendium, the ministry relies upon the information provided to it by affected organizations and funding ministries. A company that is a for-profit corporation would not meet the definition of employer under the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act, 1996. It would not, therefore, have an obligation under the act to disclose the salaries paid to its employees.

Now I would like to turn to the Ornge bond issue. We at the Ministry of Finance legal services branch were not involved in the bond issuance itself. I can, however, say something about liability to the province as a result of the bond issuance based upon a review of some of the closing documentation.

The issuer is Ornge Issuer Trust, a trust created as a special-purpose entity under Ontario law. According to the offering memorandum, Ornge is the sole beneficiary of the trust. The trust may offer one or more series of debentures under a master trust indenture with specific terms of each issuance set out in a supplemental indenture.

The offering memorandum is clear in stating that recourse is limited to the assets of the trust. At III of the offering memorandum it states, "There is no recourse against any other entity, including Her Majesty the Queen in right of Ontario, as represented by the Minister of Health and Long-Term Care." And at page 34, it says, "Recourse will be limited to the assets of the issuer from time to time," and goes on to say, "In no event shall there be recourse to any other entity, including the beneficiaries of the issuer or the province of Ontario."

As a disclosure document, the offering memorandum describes the transaction that Ornge was engaging in, and similar statements are made in the trust indenture itself, and this is where the legal relationships are created.

The offering memorandum includes a specific risk factor entitled "limitation of recourse." The risk factor provides that there is no recourse to any other entity, including beneficiaries of the trust, Ornge itself, or the province of Ontario. Even if such a provision were not included in the trust indenture, it would, under common law, be highly unusual for liability to attach to the beneficiary of the trust, Ornge itself, in any event.

I would add that no liability could be imposed on the province without its consent or acquiescence. The province could only provide its consent to such liability if there were a guarantee provided to Ornge in the transaction and if that guarantee were issued in compliance with the Financial Administration Act, with appropriate approvals having been obtained. To my knowledge, no such approval has been obtained and I would add that applications for these approvals would typically be reviewed by staff at my branch.

As a material agreement, any such guarantee would also need to be described in the offering memorandum and there is no disclosure in the OM of such a guarantee. The OM is clear on the province's liability under the bond issuance: There is none.

Finally, to the extent that there is a question as to whether there is any liability to the province by virtue of the fact that Ornge has been consolidated on the financial statements of the province, the short answer is no. Consolidation is something done for financial reporting purposes and does not override or overwrite existing legal relationships or obligations. The decision as to whether or not to consolidate is an accounting determination. Consolidation does not affect the corporate law principle of limited liability. In a government context, school boards and hospitals, for example, are consolidated even though the province may not be liable for their obligations. The bottom line is, consolidation does not affect fundamental corporate law principles such as limited liability.

So that is it for my opening statement. I'd be happy to take any questions you may have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Thank you very much, Mr. Sinclair. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, could you just confirm how much time we have?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have eight minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you for being here. You have extensive experience in the private sector in the financial area. You are now the director of legal services. I assume that you're familiar, obviously, with the health audit service team, who I think report either directly to you or a colleague. Could you tell us what the responsibility of the health audit service team is?

Mr. James Sinclair: The health audit service team doesn't report to me, so I can't actually provide you much assistance there. I mean, they conduct—I would assume that they conduct—audit services for various ministries, the health audit service team being the one involving the health ministry, but that's not something that we at the legal services branch get involved in.

Mr. Frank Klees: My understanding is that Mr. Ken Flynn, who is the director of the health audit service team within the Ministry of Finance, met with the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Health to raise some concerns about irregularities at Ornge. So you're not familiar with any of that?

Mr. James Sinclair: No, this is the first I'm hearing of that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. I'd like to ask you—you're familiar with the offering memorandum—

Mr. James Sinclair: I am—

Mr. Frank Klees: —that raised some $275 million of debt. The issuer trustee is BNY Trust Company of Canada. Are you familiar with that organization?

Mr. James Sinclair: I am.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was BNY Trust involved in any other financial dealings with the government of Ontario?

Mr. James Sinclair: I don't know the answer to that, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're not—

Mr. James Sinclair: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm advised that they were involved in a rather substantial instrument—an asset-backed security restructuring that involved some $32 billion. You're not aware of that?

Mr. James Sinclair: I'm aware of the asset-backed commercial paper restructuring—

Mr. Frank Klees: In that amount, does that ring a bell?

Mr. James Sinclair: I thought it was $34 billion, but that's within hand grenade range.

Mr. Frank Klees: And I would have assumed that someone like yourself, who is a senior person, would have been aware of who the players were who were involved in that rather substantial financial deal.

Mr. James Sinclair: Well, typically, the kind of services that BNY, the Bank of New York trust service, would provide would be acting as a trustee for various types of trusts that would be established. So they wouldn't have, typically—and usually their trust agreements would provide that—much involvement in the actual entity that is the trust. They simply act—to form a trust, you need a trustee, and then they would likely, by agreement, have an administrator that would provide administrative services. In the case of asset-backed commercial paper, if there are investments in the trust, they would have advisers who would manage those investments, and the trustee's role would be extremely limited.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Standard and Poor's gave an AA- credit rating to this bond offering. Throughout the entire offering memorandum, repeated references are made to the province of Ontario, and repeated references are made to the fact that this is really a monopoly business. Can you help us understand? Ornge Issuer Trust went to the market—it was a private placement—and was able to secure investors for the $275 million, yet there's no equity in this deal at all. The only revenue stream that the entity has that would ultimately be responsible for repaying the interest as well as the capital was from the government of Ontario.

In your opinion, apart from whatever technical wording might have been within this offering memorandum, what, in your opinion, would the investors have relied on to give them a sense of confidence that this in fact is an AA- rating investment?

Mr. James Sinclair: Well, I mean, I guess, in my opinion, I think the investors would have looked to a number of different things. Obviously, they would have conducted a careful review of the offering memorandum and the trust indenture and other documents. They would have satisfied themselves as to the business model for the entity. They would probably have had meetings with the management team. I don't know this; I'm just speculating. Based on their analysis, they would probably take note of whatever credit rating was assigned to it, and they would then have made their investment.

I don't know who the investors are. They may have many different reasons for investing in an entity such as this. This is the kind of investment—it had a decent return attached to the debentures, and it would be in an industry that they would have had difficulty getting any kind of exposure to other than this way. So if—

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Would you not agree that, at the end of the day, the reason that anyone would have had confidence here is because it's the government of Ontario that's standing behind this?

Mr. James Sinclair: Well, I think if the investor had had a careful review of the offering memorandum, they would have noted that the government of Ontario isn't standing behind it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Let me ask you this question: In light of events, who now is responsible for paying the interest and, ultimately, who is responsible for paying the capital debt that Ornge has incurred? Would you agree that it's the province of Ontario at the end of the day who really is going to have to cut the cheque for this?

Mr. James Sinclair: No. I would think that the responsibility remains with Ornge Issuer Trust.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you're suggesting that Ornge Issuer Trust is now solely responsible. They have no income. How are they going to pay it?

Mr. James Sinclair: I don't know the answer to that question. I'm not familiar with the financial affairs of—

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, sure you are. You're probably more familiar than anyone with the financial affairs of this trust. You know full well that the only income stream is from the government of Ontario. You also know that given the turn of events, the bankruptcies of all of these other companies, that were supposedly going to generate revenue from the private sector—they no longer exist. So there's only one entity left, and that is the government of Ontario, that is flowing operational dollars to Ornge. There's only one source to pay the interest now that's owed to the bondholders, and there's only one source available to repay the capital outstanding, and that is the government of Ontario. Do you not agree with that?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And that's your last question, if Mr. Sinclair wants to answer it, and then we move on to the NDP.

Mr. James Sinclair: No, I don't agree with that, because I think that if the Ornge Issuer Trust obtains its revenues from wherever—

Mr. Frank Klees: The government of Ontario.

Mr. James Sinclair: But it doesn't matter. Wherever it's obtaining its revenue from, it is the obligation of the Ornge Issuer Trust to meet its payments under the bond indenture.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, and we shall move on to the NDP. Who would like to ask questions? Jagmeet or France? Go ahead, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Just on this: So, here we have Ornge Issuer Trust, that has no assets, no money, but issued the bond. The bond is still out there; interest is still being paid. Ornge has been on the front page of the papers for four months, every single day, and you know nothing about this? You haven't followed the money from the Ontario government, to be able to assure me right here, right now, that you are keeping an eye on this, in this important position you hold with the provincial government, to make sure that not one of the taxpayers' dollars ends up paying this?

Mr. James Sinclair: Please understand that I am with the legal services branch. It's not our role to get involved in the finances of entities such as Ornge or anything else. We deal with legal obligations. We look at legal things on behalf of the Ministry of Finance, not the Ministry of Health. So what I know of the finances of Ornge and Ornge Issuer Trust is from what I read in the newspapers.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In your branch of the ministry right now, this file is not active? You're not looking, as to the legal implications for finance, into the debt of Ornge? Nobody's looking at this? It's not your business?

Mr. James Sinclair: That's not what I said. I said that we don't get involved in the finances, the accounting, whether Ornge Issuer Trust has the wherewithal to make its payments under the bonds that were issued. I'm not—

M^{me} France Gélinas: How about the province having the legal obligation to pay?

Mr. James Sinclair: But I've answered that question, and my opinion on that is that the province does not have the legal obligation to pay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And you know this as of today? You've checked recently? Nothing new has appeared on this file? Legally, you know as of today that we don't have to pay.

Mr. James Sinclair: That's my opinion. As of today, there is no legal obligation on the part of the province to pay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Go.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you very much. Ornge is, for the vast majority, provincially funded. You'd agree with that?

Mr. James Sinclair: That's my understanding.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And the purpose of the sunshine list is essentially to know where public dollars are being spent. That's one of the purposes behind it. Would you agree with that?

Mr. James Sinclair: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You wouldn't agree with that?

Mr. James Sinclair: Lots of money gets spent for things other than salaries. The sunshine list is about where salary dollars and benefit dollars are spent, but that's a subset of what you asked. I partially agree, but it's not the whole thing.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So it's one way of knowing where some of the money that's our public money is being spent? Would you agree with that statement?

Mr. James Sinclair: On salaries.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: On salaries, yes. And the purpose is, it's a mechanism, it's one form of oversight. Would you agree that one of its purposes is a type of oversight?

Mr. James Sinclair: I'm not sure that there's oversight in connection with it, but presumably it could be used as a tool by those who have oversight over the various institutions that report.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's good enough. So the CEO of, essentially, a completely provincially funded organization is on the sunshine list one year and is no longer on the sunshine list the next year. Does that send any flags in your ministry, or in your role?

Mr. James Sinclair: As I explained in my opening remarks, the Ornge entity was structured in a way so that it would be outside of the purview of the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act. Does that raise flags for me? Maybe it raises flags, but there are lots of reasons to structure businesses that are outside of trying to skirt the PSSDA.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So for you, it maybe would raise flags. But you'd agree with me, though, in terms of the spirit of what the sunshine list is—maybe not the letter of the law, because if there's a way of restructuring it so that the private entities are providing the income, technically it's not breaching the letter of the law. But in terms of the spirit of what the sunshine list is hoping to achieve, do you agree with me that it's a violation of the spirit of the sunshine list to have the CEO of, essentially, a 100% publicly funded institution not disclosing his salary?

Mr. James Sinclair: No, I wouldn't agree with that. People come on and off the list all the time. There are lots of reasons for people coming on and off the list. I think that if we were to say that wherever there's provincial funding, those salaries should be indicated on the list if they're over $100,000, the list will become less and less meaningful. The province provided funding to General Motors, but we don't have General Motors salaries on our list. It, too, is a for-profit entity. Ornge Global Holdings is a for-profit entity. The salaries of the people who are presumably the officers and directors of that entity aren't reported because it's not caught by the salary disclosure act.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just to draw a distinction, though, I'm asking you about Ornge, the public entity; not the other subsidiaries, but Ornge the public entity, the air ambulance provider. The CEO of that institution was Dr. Mazza, and his salary was not disclosed. Do you find that that was a violation of the spirit of the sunshine list: the fact that he, as the CEO of a completely publicly funded institution, was not disclosing his salary, despite the fact that there were private entities as well?

Mr. James Sinclair: Well, I think that if he was not being compensated by that entity, then he wouldn't be caught by the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How do you make sure that employers do follow the PSSDA?

Mr. James Sinclair: It's the employer's responsibility to review the act and to determine whether or not their employees are caught by the provisions of the act.

M^{me} France Gélinas: If an employer does not follow the act, how do you find out?

Mr. James Sinclair: Please bear in mind that this isn't a primary responsibility of the legal services branch, so I don't get involved in the compilation of the compendium that contains all of the salaries that are caught by the PSSDA. So I don't know the answer to that question. I don't know how the ministry determines whether or not employees should or should not be on the list. But I will say that it is the obligation of the employers themselves and not of the Ministry of Finance to determine whether employees should or should not be on the list.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have 30 seconds left, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So we could have many other Ornge employers out there shielding salaries from the sunshine list and there is nothing in the legal branch in your ministry—no flags would be raised, no accountability mechanism. We just don't know?

Mr. James Sinclair: I don't agree with that. There are accountability mechanisms. The ministry can withhold funding if the act is not being complied with. If the act is being complied with, then that's not something we involve—at the legal services branch, we don't involve ourselves with situations where statutes are being complied with.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we move on to the government now. Who would like to ask questions? Mr. Moridi.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you, Mr. Sinclair, for appearing before this committee.

Mr. Sinclair, you are the director of legal services at the Ministry of Finance.

Mr. James Sinclair: I am.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Could you please tell us when you started at your job as director?

Mr. James Sinclair: In December 2008.

Mr. Reza Moridi: And before assuming this position at the Ministry of Finance, could you tell us where you worked and what was your role in your previous jobs?

Mr. James Sinclair: I was at Northwater Capital Management, an investment management firm. I was chief legal officer and chief compliance officer at that organization for almost 14 years. Prior to that, I was the senior counsel, derivatives, at the Ontario Securities Commission for five years. And before that, I was at a law firm now known as Gowlings.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you. Could you tell us the role played by the Ministry of Finance in cases where entities such as Ornge seek to raise money through a bond offering?

Mr. James Sinclair: Can you restate that question, please?

Mr. Reza Moridi: The role of the Ministry of Finance when entities such as Ornge seek to raise money through a bond offering.

Mr. James Sinclair: Well, if an entity such as Ornge is raising money, the ministry doesn't have any responsibility for Ornge. So it typically would not be involved—that's why the legal services branch wasn't involved in the bond issuance itself. They may talk to the Ontario Financing Authority, which is in the capital markets every day, to get a feel for what the markets are like, but typically, in situations such as Ornge, the ministry wouldn't be particularly involved in those types of capital raises.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you. Are you familiar with the $270-million bond which Ornge has? They got it in 2009, I believe.

Mr. James Sinclair: I have familiarity from reading the offering memorandum.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Did you have a particular role in that bond offering?

Mr. James Sinclair: No, we had no role.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Did you review the offering memorandum?

Mr. James Sinclair: Yes, I did.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Did it cause you any concern when you reviewed the memorandum?

Mr. James Sinclair: No. It seems to be a fairly standard private placement memorandum for instruments of its kind.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So it looked normal to you?

Mr. James Sinclair: Yes.

Mr. Reza Moridi: There has been some confusion in the past as to whether or not the government is on the hook for this bond—the $275 million raised by Ornge. Do you think the government's on the hook?

Mr. James Sinclair: I do not.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So we are not on the hook as a government?

Mr. James Sinclair: No. As I said before in an answer to some previous questions, the legal documentation is quite clear that the province is not liable for the obligations of the Ornge Issuer Trust.

Mr. Reza Moridi: In 2008, Ornge was consolidated on the books of the province of Ontario. Are you aware of that?

Mr. James Sinclair: Yes, I am.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Okay. What role did you play as the ministry's director of legal services in that process?

Mr. James Sinclair: I played no role. I'm not an accountant. We have a great accountant here with us. As the legal services branch, we would have had no role.

Mr. Reza Moridi: In your opinion, Mr. Sinclair, this kind of thing, which is basically putting Ornge or any entity on the province of Ontario's books—does it have any significance or any importance or any consequences, apart from the accounting procedures?

Mr. James Sinclair: There are really good reasons, obviously, to consolidate, and they help people who read the financial statements better understand the government and its finances. All I really want to say about that is that the fact of consolidation doesn't override the trust indenture which is clear in saying that the province doesn't have a liability vis-à-vis the bonds that were issued.

Mr. Reza Moridi: This consolidation—does it have any impact on the government?

Mr. James Sinclair: Presumably it has an impact on the government's finances, but as I said, it doesn't impact the legal liability that the government has for the bonds issued by the Ornge Issuer Trust—because it has none.

Mr. Reza Moridi: What is your role and the Ministry of Finance's role in relation to the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act, which is known as the sunshine list?

Mr. James Sinclair: The ministry is responsible for compiling the information that employers throughout the government provide to it, where they determine that their employees are caught by the PSSDA. We, as the legal services branch, provide advice where there are questions that arise as a result of the application of that statute.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Dr. Mazza was on the sunshine list, and then he was taken off the list in 2008. Are you aware of that?

Mr. James Sinclair: I'm aware of that. He came off the list before I joined government, so I wasn't there at the time that he was on the list.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So you didn't play any role in that—

Mr. James Sinclair: I played no role in that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute and a half left, Mr. Moridi.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you.

What role do you think the Ministry of Finance played?

Mr. James Sinclair: I can only speculate. My speculation would be that the ministry would have received information from the Ministry of Health as to that ministry and its agencies' employees who should be caught by the list, and I would speculate that they would then have included that within the compilation that is the sunshine list.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you very much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: I would ask—we do have a few minutes left—if we could divide the remaining time amongst the three caucuses.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Is there agreement to do that?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Until 10:15.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Until 10:15. So it would be five minutes for each caucus. Agreed? Agreed.

Mr. Klees, you have five minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

You've just, in response to my colleague's question, made the statement that there would be "an impact on the government's finances." That is the practical implication here of this $275-million debt outstanding. Interest has to be paid and the capital has to be repaid, and notwithstanding the technicalities that may exist, the province of Ontario is clearly on the hook for these interest payments and for the capital.

You referred to the offering memorandum. On page 19, there's a very specific reference here—and I'm going to read it into the record: "In the event of termination of the performance agreement, the province of Ontario would be able to take certain steps, in its discretion, to ensure continuity of the services provided by Ornge."

I think this actually contemplated what we have today, and that is that the organization, the issuer of this debt, defaults. Their business plan just has ceased to function, but the government of Ontario has a responsibility to ensure continuation of our ambulance service.

It goes on to say, "The government of Ontario may take the following steps: (1) realizing on Ornge's interest as beneficiary of the issuer, which realization may include the repayment of all amounts owing by the issuer under the series A debentures and/or an assignment or transfer by the province of Ontario with the consent of the issuer."

The memorandum actually contemplates the eventual-ity of the issuer not being able to perform, and it provides for the province of Ontario to assume the payments.

I want to ask you again: Under the terms of the agreement, first of all, does the province of Ontario have the right to step in and assume the responsibilities and the obligations of the issuer based on the provisions clearly set out in the offering memorandum?

Mr. James Sinclair: As I said at the outset, the province is not liable for the payments under the bonds that were issued by the Ornge Issuer Trust. If there is a default, it can step into the shoes of the holder of the interest of the trust, Ornge. But as I also said at the outset, the offering memorandum and the trust indenture are clear that the beneficiary, whether it's Ornge or someone stepping into the shoes of Ornge, is not liable for the obligations that are the subject of the bonds.

Mr. Frank Klees: At the end of the day, it may not be legally, but in all practical terms, the taxpayers of this province are now on the hook.

I just have one other question. We referred earlier to the relationship of BNY Trust and its involvement in this offering. You're well familiar with that company. Can you confirm for me that Alfred Apps represented BNY Trust Company of Canada in that $34-billion restructuring of asset-backed commercial paper?

Mr. James Sinclair: I can't confirm that because I just don't know whether he was or not.

Mr. Frank Klees: You were not involved in that rather significant transaction?

Mr. James Sinclair: I was involved in that transaction, both when I joined the ministry in late 2008, and, prior to that, I was a member of the proffered committee that was involved in the restructuring of that. There were lots of people around the table.

Mr. Frank Klees: You never had any contact?

Mr. James Sinclair: BNY Trust wouldn't have been a significant player around the table, so I don't remember whether Mr. Apps was there or not.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have 30 seconds.

Mr. Frank Klees: But you never had any contact with Alfred Apps in any way in relation to that restructuring deal?

Mr. James Sinclair: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

Mr. James Sinclair: Uh—no.

Mr. Frank Klees: You hesitated.

Mr. James Sinclair: Well, I was just trying to remember the very end of the transaction, and, no; upon further reflection, no.

Mr. Frank Klees: He didn't show up at the closing party?

Mr. James Sinclair: I don't remember seeing him at the closing party.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We'll move to the NDP. Jagmeet?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you very much. So, sir, just touching on the PSSDA, if there is a clear breach or if there is indication that a company or an institution is not complying with that, you indicated that the province could withhold funds.

Mr. James Sinclair: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: How does that mechanism work, and was that mechanism available to the ministry with respect to Ornge?

Mr. James Sinclair: I'm not quite certain how it would work in practice. I would imagine that if the ministry was aware that there was non-compliance with a particular entity, and if that non-compliance was brought to them and they continued not to comply, it could then, under whatever funding that entity receives from the ministry, elect not to provide that funding or some of that funding. To my knowledge, that hasn't happened in the past.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's right. It certainly hasn't happened with respect to Ornge. But that power is something that exists, and it's a part of the PSSDA?

Mr. James Sinclair: It is.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And that's regardless of any performance agreement or any other agreement between the province and any given entity?

Mr. James Sinclair: Correct. It's baked into the PSSDA.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And if a request was made for salary disclosure, for example, for Ornge, and the request was denied or turned down, would that provide a ground to use that power under the PSSDA to then withhold funding to the entity?

Mr. James Sinclair: Can you ask that again?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: If the province made a request for salary disclosure—a request that you disclose the salary of the CEO of the public entity—and there was a denial or a refusal to comply with that request, would there still be the power to withhold funds under the PSSDA?

Mr. James Sinclair: Well, presumably, yes, as long as—there has to have been noncompliance with the statute.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

Mr. James Sinclair: So as we talked about before, in the instance that we're focused on here, Ornge Peel or Ornge Global Holdings, it was not—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Captured in the act.

Mr. James Sinclair: —caught by the act because of the way it was structured.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. France?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I want to know, in your experience of reviewing legal documents for the Ministry of Finance, have you come across many times where a transfer payment agency of the government has given personal loans to an Ontarian, to a person in Ontario?

Mr. James Sinclair: Not in my time here at the ministry; I have not encountered that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you have been here for four years.

Mr. James Sinclair: Three and a half.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Three and a half years, and you don't know of any other transfer payment agencies that signed legal documents that say, "We're going to give you a million-dollar personal loan"?

Mr. James Sinclair: I haven't been involved in anything like that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you have an opinion on that?

Mr. James Sinclair: I don't know enough about the circumstances surrounding the loans in this case that I think you're referring to to have an opinion. So, no, I don't have an opinion.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Is it in the business of the government to give personal loans?

Mr. James Sinclair: No. To my knowledge, it's not in the business of government to give personal loans, but there may be programs out there for which personal loans are provided. I just don't know.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But you've never come across one?

Mr. James Sinclair: Not in this context.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I've been in the health care system for 25 years and I've never seen one either.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you want to finish?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Jagmeet?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes, sure. Just going back to the concept—I mean, the purpose of the salary disclosure, what I want to just understand from you is, is there in any way, in your mind, as someone who oversees this component in some regard, that there's something wrong with the idea that a CEO of a public institution is not providing any salary disclosure though he's a CEO of a public institution? Is there anything that's wrong in the sense that it's violating the spirit of salary disclosure for a public servant?

Mr. James Sinclair: This hearkens back to our earlier conversation and, really, it depends on what the purpose of the act is. If it's to report publicly where salaries are in excess of $100,000, then it isn't problematic, and that's the reality that we're dealing with. That's what the PSSDA says.

If the requirement is that it should be the five top executives, the CEO included—their salaries should be reported, even if it's only a dollar a year—then it would violate the spirit of the act, but that's not the act that we're dealing with.

We're dealing with legislation that is very good at certain things, but those things are limited, and they're limited because it only seeks information about salary and benefits, and that's taxable salary and taxable benefits. So it has a very limited scope.

What has happened here in this Ornge arrangement is that, for whatever reason—it may have nothing to do with the PSSDA; I just don't know—a structure was created where an entity was for-profit and outside of the scope of the PSSDA. It's not as easy as a stroke of a pen to re-establish a connection to a for-profit entity. There will be lots of implications for doing that, and we would have to think very carefully about what those implications are, before doing that, and whether or not it's appropriate for the government to seek the salary information for for-profit entities that receive money from the government.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If we can move to the government, then, please.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you, just a couple of quick questions. First of all, to the best of your knowledge, there was no failure to comply with the PSSDA, as the act is written?

Mr. James Sinclair: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And given that there was no failure to comply, there would be no cause for either the Ministry of Finance or the Ministry of Health to withhold funding to Ornge, under the PSSDA?

Mr. James Sinclair: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And then with respect to the bond issue, if Ornge, in any of its entities, fails to pay the interest on the bond to the holders, is the Ministry of Finance under any obligation to pay?

Mr. James Sinclair: There's no legal obligation for the Ministry of Finance to pay if there's a default on the interest payments under the bonds.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So there is absolutely no obligation under any circumstance for the government of Ontario, in any guise, to step in if there's a default on that bond. There is no obligation on behalf of the government.

Mr. James Sinclair: There's no legal obligation on behalf of the government.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you very much. I have no further questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Thank you very much for coming and for taking some extra time this morning. We appreciate it.

Mr. James Sinclair: Great. Thanks.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Take care. We're recessed now.

The committee recessed from 1013 to 1232.

MR. RICK POTTER

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, I'll call the meeting to order. Yes, Mr. Zimmer?

Mr. David Zimmer: What is the—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Order?

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes. The time—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: What's the time allocation?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The time allocation would be 10 minutes for an opening statement, then 20 minutes each for the parties twice, basically. Then whatever leftover time there is I'll split equally.

I'd like to invite our witness for the afternoon, Mr. Rick Potter, to come forward. Welcome, Mr. Potter. Thank you for making the trip from Thunder Bay. Just to confirm that you received the information for a witness coming before the committee?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, I've received nothing.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You received it by email, the—

Mr. Rick Potter: If I have, I haven't had a chance to read it.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Then we have a copy for you here. I'm going to give you this and give you time to read it before we start

Mr. Rick Potter: Sure.

Interjections.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're fine?

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Good. Our clerk has an oath for you to swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Potter, there's a Bible in front of you there to swear your oath. Mr. Potter, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Rick Potter: I do.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. You have up to 10 minutes for an opening statement and then there will be questions from the three parties.

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't really have much of an opening statement. I think you've got my biography in front of you. I think you'd be better served by the time asking me questions.

Mr. David Zimmer: Sorry, I'm just having trouble hearing you.

Mr. Rick Potter: I said that you have my biography and CV in front of you, and I think the time would be better served with questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, that's very well, then. I think we caught the NDP by surprise, but the NDP has the first round of questioning here. Who would like to go first? Ms. Gélinas. You have up to 20 minutes and we'll do rotations.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Pleased to meet you, Mr. Potter, and thank you for coming to Queen's Park. My first question is quite simple: Are you still employed by Ornge or any of its subsidiaries?

Mr. Rick Potter: As a contractor, I am currently being retained by Ornge.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And do you know which part of Ornge has retained your services?

Mr. Rick Potter: Ornge Air.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Ornge Air, the not-for-profit?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What is it that you do right now?

Mr. Rick Potter: My primary purpose is to provide advice that helps them in the transition from the old management to the new management in the aviation field, and provide advice on safety and existing contracts.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Similar to what you were doing before?

Mr. Rick Potter: That's correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Is this a full-time job for you?

Mr. Rick Potter: I have a consulting firm on the side as well.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How much are you being paid to do this?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm being paid the same remuneration I was at Ornge, roughly $20,000 a month.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sorry, how much?

Mr. Rick Potter: Twenty thousand dollars a month.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. How long of a contract have you signed with Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: It was for three months. It expires at the end of June—or end of May, I should say.

M^{me} France Gélinas: End of May? Okay. Any indication as to whether your employment with Ornge will terminate at the end of May, or do you think it will keep on a little bit longer?

Mr. Rick Potter: There's no indication, and I have no plans to continue on.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No plans to continue?

Mr. Rick Potter: No. I have commitments for the month of June.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Thank you.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Mr. Chair, it's difficult to hear Mr. Potter. Would it be possible to turn on the other mike as well?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'll speak up generally—

Mr. Reza Moridi: Is it possible to turn on the other mike as well?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Just speak slowly—

Mr. Rick Potter: Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I don't think that helped.

In your previous role at Ornge, you were an executive. What titles did you have?

Mr. Rick Potter: Well, my first contact with Ornge per se—Ontario air ambulance—was as a board member, as is indicated in my bio. I was hired on as—I think the initial role was called a director, and then I think I went to associate VP, a VP, and then a chief operating officer, I believe.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How long were you the chief operating officer at Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe for a period of about two years.

M^{me} France Gélinas: For about two years? So which part of Ornge did you have dealings with?

Mr. Rick Potter: Ornge Air.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Ornge Air only?

Mr. Rick Potter: No. I did some work for Ornge Global. Whenever any work for Ornge Global was done, it was recorded and those figures were submitted.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you were working for Ornge Air, which is the air ambulance as we know it in Ontario. You know about the sunshine list, I take it, where people who are paid over $100,000 a year, their name gets published?

Mr. Rick Potter: That's correct, yeah.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yours was published up until 2008, and it was published as $180,000 a year. Then in 2009, although you have told us that you were working for Ornge Air, your salary disappeared from the sunshine list. As a person in charge of finance, can you explain how come, as an employer, those numbers were not given to the ministry?

Mr. Rick Potter: That was a corporate decision that was made. I volunteered every year to have the salary published.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And it was a corporate decision that was made? By who?

Mr. Rick Potter: To my understanding, it was Maria Renzella.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Interjection.

Mr. Rick Potter: Maria Renzella was our chief financial officer.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you ever question that decision?

Mr. Rick Potter: I did not question the decision.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But you knew that your salary had been on the sunshine list and was not anymore?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know if the Ministry of Health knew that?

Mr. Rick Potter: I have no knowledge of what the Ministry of Health knew.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No? Did Maria give any explanation as to why they had not provided your salary to the ministry?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe her interpretation was that it was not required, that we were exempt.

M^{me} France Gélinas: That you were exempt? What changed from 2008 to 2009 that would have exempted you?

Mr. Rick Potter: I have no idea. As I said, I freely volunteered to have that information submitted. I had nothing to hide.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. You say it was the decision of Maria Renzella that this decision was not shared. What the government is telling us is that this information was not shared because you were working for the for-profit side of Ornge, which is completely in opposition to what you just said. So you stand by your testimony that—

1240

Mr. Rick Potter: Every one of my paycheques since my first day of employment with Ornge Air up to the present time has been with Ornge Air.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Your paycheque has always been with Ornge Air?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct, ma'am.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, the not-for-profit. And when you did do some work for Ornge Global, those hours were accounted separately. Did you get a second paycheque from Ornge Global?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So what was the point of keeping those hours separately?

Mr. Rick Potter: I was asked to keep a record of it. I had my executive assistant detail every meeting I had, every trip I had, as to where it should be most appropriately categorized.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But it did not influence your pay structure, as in you got the same amount of money every month when you got paid?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you get paid every month or every two weeks?

Mr. Rick Potter: Every two weeks.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So it didn't matter if you did work for Ornge Global. You would keep track of your hours, your executive assistant would track them where they belong, but you got your pay every two weeks?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And the signature on the pay was Ornge Air.

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: The not-for-profit. Did you want to say something?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So with respect to that, just if you could break it down for me, how do you know—I don't know the cheque that you were receiving. Did the cheque actually indicate on it who was paying it? Did it say Ornge Air? Was it on a letterhead of some sort?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know if it was on the cheque, but there's actually a run you can do, because there was some question at some point in time as to the employment. Even though a novation, I believe it's called, was issued in the fall of 2011, I was never switched over to Ornge Global. I was always with Ornge Air and my pay always came from Ornge Air accounts.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sorry, I missed that portion. At one point there was a switch, but you didn't switch over? What did you mean by that?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe in November of 2011, there was—I think it's called a novation. I'll have to refer to legal counsel for the right term.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: An ovation?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think it's called a novation, where they move you from one division to another. I never moved over. I always stayed with Ornge Air.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. With respect to your salary disclosure, you were content to disclose it at all times, you had no problem disclosing it, but your understanding is that it was a corporate decision not to disclose it?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct. We were advised, actually, that we were prohibited from disclosing it. What happened in the last year was that if we had disclosed our salaries—the gross amount of executive pay was out there, and by deduction you could have found out what Dr. Mazza's salary was, and that would have been a violation of his rights. That's what I was advised.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Who advised you that it would have been a violation of his rights?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe our legal counsel did.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Who is your legal counsel?

Mr. Rick Potter: Cindy Heinz.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Cindy Heinz? Okay. If I can just ask you some questions now, just shifting over to the operation of Ornge: When you initially were involved, were you aware that the initial mandate of Ornge was not to purchase its own fleet of helicopters and aircraft, but to outsource that and to have its own source of paramedics and medical personnel?

Mr. Rick Potter: That was not the direction I was given.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Can you explain?

Mr. Rick Potter: Actually, the reason I was brought on was essentially safety-based. There was some concern over the number of operators. I believe, in 2007, there were almost 100 aircraft being flown by over 30 different operators. Many of those aircraft were old, some antiquated. Many of the operators were one-aircraft operators, very small operations. Many of the aircraft were still piston-powered—piston engines like in a car, as opposed to turbine. I don't want to get too technical; if I do, someone stop me. A lot of them were actually still unpressurized. One of the mandates was to do an investigation on the history of compliance with our contracted carriers and to find a more efficient and safer way of operating.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I'm just going to ask you a couple of more questions before I pass it on to my colleague. I wanted to get to the heart of—was the Ministry of Health apprised or advised along the way of the operations at Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: I never had any dealings with the Ministry of Health in my tenure.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Are you aware, just in general, of the Ministry of Health being apprised of anything or given briefings, or if they attended and they met with other officials at Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: All the communication with the Ministry of Health was either with Steve Farquhar, Tom Lepine or, I guess, Chris Mazza directly.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, so you didn't have any dealings—

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: The problems with the layout of the inside of the new helicopter have been reported in the press for quite some time. When did you become aware that the paramedics could not perform CPR, for example, in the helicopters?

Mr. Rick Potter: Basically, it was just prior to going to the press, to be honest with you.

I think it's really important to understand the role of aviation at Ornge. With all due respect to southern Ontario people, I think you have to understand that Ornge's business is 82% in northern Ontario; 56% to 60% is northwestern Ontario. It is very much a Toronto-centric, medic-centric, rotor-centric organization. To understand that will put some of the other things in context.

The interiors for the helicopters were solely the purview of operations. Aviation had absolutely nothing to do with it; we were prohibited from being involved in it. Our only involvement was essentially to define the allowable weight for the interior, the centre of gravity, and to look at some of the electrical inputs that would be required. It was 100% the purview of operations to design the interior of their choice.

Now, we volunteered—we actually fought on numerous occasions to try to have more input, because we were afraid of what the outcome might be. I was aware that we sent a team to Switzerland—I believe twice—and I was told that the team was excited, and that the aircraft interior was fully functional as a result of that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, and then none of the pilots that you worked with ever mentioned the problems with the interior?

Mr. Rick Potter: Essentially, there are sort of two different worlds, okay? The pilots are concerned with the aircraft, the operation of the aircraft etc. The pilots had no input whatsoever and were not asked—aviation was not asked and had no input whatsoever—in the design of any of the interiors.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But there are some dull times when you're downloading your patients. Pilots and paramedics do end up talking. None of them ever talked about problems with the interior?

Mr. Rick Potter: No pilot at any point in time ever expressed a concern about the interior to me, other than the fact that the interior came in heavy, which limited our fuel.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Which was then in your purview?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Were there any issues with the helicopters that had been chosen that were ever brought to your attention?

Mr. Rick Potter: Well, we had reliability issues, certainly, at the start of implementation. With any new aircraft, you're going to have teething problems, and that was an accepted fact, or we knew it was a proven fact. We increased the redundancy of the number of aircraft in anticipation of that.

As far as the selection of the aircraft goes, I stand by the selection. I think the committee stands by the selection. It's still, as we see here today, the most advanced aircraft. That's been proven by 92 different agencies—there are 92 aircraft being used in medical transport search and rescue around the world that are AW139s. There are over 500 aircraft flying and there's a backlog of two years to get new ones.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What are some of the reliability issues that you had to deal with at the beginning?

Mr. Rick Potter: Well, the aircraft—there were limitations placed on the main rotor and the tail rotor life usage limits, which increased some of the maintenance. Parts logistics management was a bit of a challenge. Spares were a bit of a challenge. Training slots were very finite, so it was always difficult getting training slots.

But I think it's important to understand the context. When we brought the AW139s online and put them in service, Ornge itself at that time did not have an aircraft maintenance organization. Ornge only could accomplish the maintenance through CHL, and CHL have told me on numerous occasions they would do absolutely nothing to expedite or help in the transfer.

M^{me} France Gélinas: All right. Was it part of your responsibility to seek to have better maintenance available?

Mr. Rick Potter: Oh, we have top-quality maintenance. It wasn't the quality of the maintenance. It was the expediency of the maintenance, and the expediency of the maintenance translates to the availability of the aircraft.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So am I to understand from what you're saying that some of the aircraft might not have been available because of the lack of expediency of the maintenance done by CHL?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe that to be a fact. I believe that there's a learning curve. I think we have to appreciate that most of the maintenance people worked on the Sikorsky aircraft for 25 years and have probably done every procedure 50 or 60 times. They could do it with their eyes closed.

So you have a brand new, high-technology aircraft; it's a completely different generation, it's a different machine. There is an anticipated learning curve. It's going to take us longer to do a check on a new aircraft than it is on an older aircraft, until we can prejudge what parts we need out there, etc.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Where would—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Chair, can we just have, as part of the Hansard record, what CHL is?

Mr. Rick Potter: Canadian Helicopters Ltd.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I lost my train of thought there.

Where would you say Ornge is at on this curve of being able to maintain their helicopters in an expedient way?

Mr. Rick Potter: As we speak today?

M^{me} France Gélinas: As we speak today.

Mr. Rick Potter: I think Ornge is probably 90% or 95% where they should be. We knew that it would take at least a year to two years to do that. That's exactly what happened. It evolved. The training has been completed with all of the technicians. Parts availability has been largely remedied. Spares and stores have been remedied. Part of that is because we're not working through CHL anymore.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Potter, if I can just ask you to move a little bit away from the microphone now; we're getting noise happening. Thank you.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Potter, I just want to go back to your salary and the salary arrangement. The way you received your salary before and the way you receive it now: Is it the same, still?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And the cheque that you receive is the same type of cheque?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe so.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you be able to table that with this committee? You can block out anything that's personal on there, with your personal address.

Mr. Rick Potter: I have no problem with that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And you confirm that what you'll be tabling is the same thing you received throughout your employment at Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: Do you mean how I'm being paid as a consultant versus a substantive employee?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes.

Mr. Rick Potter: Sure.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And you agree, it's the same form of payment that you're getting as a consultant now—

Mr. Rick Potter: It's the same amount.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: The same amount, but it's also the same in terms of the way it's being paid, the cheque or the form of payment?

Mr. Rick Potter: It's monthly instead of every two weeks, but—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, but besides that, it's still the same source of income coming from Ornge and it's the same labelling or the same way you can identify that you're being paid by Ornge ambulance, not by Ornge Global or anything else?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Thank you very much.

M^{me} France Gélinas: There are quite a few comments that we hear that the helicopters are really costly to operate, their fuel consumption is way more than what a fixed-wing would be, and that this particular helicopter is especially costly to use. Do you have any comments on that?

Mr. Rick Potter: That's true. The helicopters operate at, generally, about 300% of what a fixed-wing aircraft would cost, if you're comparing the AW139 versus the Pilatus PC-12. It is a dedicated machine which has a specific operating environment and it's designed to operate in a specific environment. It is not designed to fly airport to airport or beyond 100 nautical miles. It gets grossly inefficient. But it does extremely well at the roles that it has to do: landing in confined areas, on highways, in remote areas. That's what it's designed for. That's the cost of operation.

The aircraft has about 30% more performance than the S-76, and there is some advantage to that as well.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute left, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So how do you reconcile what you just said with the fact that the number of bases for Ornge actually decreased after—if the helicopters are not to be used for airport to airport but really to be used to go where there are no airports, why is it that more and more—I'm from northern Ontario. We would get helicopters coming in from southern Ontario to service people in my riding.

Mr. Rick Potter: How the actual aircraft are dispatched and used by the OCC at Ornge is not under aviation's control. We provide the tools and how they do it. We suggest how they do it. We suggest operating practices and the most efficient practices. But at the end, medical necessity and expedience trump everything.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll move to the government now. Who would like to ask questions? Mr. Zimmer. Go ahead, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you very much for attending today. When did you first meet Dr. Mazza?

Mr. Rick Potter: That would probably be—I'm thinking 2005, 2006.

Mr. David Zimmer: And what were the circumstances of that meeting?

Mr. Rick Potter: I was asked to join the board of directors.

Mr. David Zimmer: Who asked you to join the board of directors?

Mr. Rick Potter: Kelly Mitchell.

Mr. David Zimmer: She approached you?

Mr. Rick Potter: Kelly Mitchell—

Mr. David Zimmer: I'm sorry. He approached you?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes. Kelly Mitchell called me up and asked if I'd be interested in joining the board of directors. They were looking for some aviation expertise and, more particularly, northern Ontario expertise.

Mr. David Zimmer: Would that have been your first board experience, then, as opposed to operational, technical?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, sir. I've been on boards for 35 years.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you have a conversation with Dr. Mazza before you took the decision to join the board?

Mr. Rick Potter: I had lunch with him, I believe, yeah.

Mr. David Zimmer: And what was your understanding of the contribution that you were expected to make to board discussions?

Mr. Rick Potter: As with any board member willing to participate in anything, but what he really wanted to access was some aviation knowledge and some northern Ontario knowledge.

Mr. David Zimmer: And what was your initial impression of Dr. Mazza?

Mr. Rick Potter: He's a very impressive individual.

Mr. David Zimmer: And in what way was he impressive?

Mr. Rick Potter: He's charismatic. He's a brilliant individual. He's enthusiastic, a visionary, a very impressive man.

Mr. David Zimmer: In terms of his vision for the Ontario air ambulance service, did he tell you what his vision was?

Mr. Rick Potter: Not at that time, sir.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you subsequently find out what his vision was?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes. As a board member—we were Ontario Air Ambulance at that point in time. I think it was probably about a year later when Ornge came about, and he'd share with the board, on an ongoing basis, what his vision was for Ornge.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. And generally speaking, what was his vision, as you understood it?

Mr. Rick Potter: My understanding is, his vision was to provide patient-centred, safe and quality transport for the people of Ontario.

Mr. David Zimmer: During your time on the board, how closely did you work with Dr. Mazza?

Mr. Rick Potter: On the board? I wasn't the senior board member like a chair or vice-chair or anything, but I was on a number of committees with Dr. Mazza as well.

Mr. David Zimmer: Would you say you spoke to him daily, weekly or monthly?

Mr. Rick Potter: Maybe monthly.

Mr. David Zimmer: And were those conversations initiated by you or by him?

Mr. Rick Potter: Principally by him.

Mr. David Zimmer: And when he initiated those conversations, what typically was the subject matter of the conversation?

Mr. Rick Potter: It was generally fact-based discussion: "What do you think about this?" or "What do you see as the cost?" or "What are the implications of this?"

Mr. David Zimmer: All on the technical aspects of operating aircraft?

Mr. Rick Potter: Very much so, yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. Dr. Mazza has been described variously in the media—and I assume you've been following the media—and other places. No?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Well, then, I'll tell you that he's been described, in the media and various other places, as his management style: “tyrannical.” Would you agree with that or disagree with that?

Mr. Rick Potter: That would be accurate.

Mr. David Zimmer: And in what ways did the tyranny manifest itself from your point of view?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yelling and screaming.

Mr. David Zimmer: At you?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: And what was your reaction—

Mr. Rick Potter: I think I threatened to quit twice.

Mr. David Zimmer: I’m sorry?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think I threatened to quit twice.

Mr. David Zimmer: And what was his reaction to your threats?

Mr. Rick Potter: Then usually he’d go away and then about a day or two later you’d get a makeup call.

Mr. David Zimmer: He has also been described as “given to obsessive tendencies,” fixated on something. Do you agree with that?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think he was, as I say, a truly brilliant individual who had a number of things going on in his head at any time, so I don’t know that he would fixate.

Mr. David Zimmer: Was his management style, particularly in discussions with you or the board, of the style, “Look, it’s my way or the highway for anybody that disagrees with me”?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think it’s fair to say that Dr. Mazza is fairly singular in his direction.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. Reflecting back now, if you could identify one point in your time at Ornge when you sensed that the wheels were coming off or things were getting complicated or things were going in a direction that you saw danger signals, when would you say that point was?

1300

Mr. Rick Potter: I think it was the start of Ornge Global.

Mr. David Zimmer: Where would you put that on a calendar, roughly?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe it would be the latter part of 2010.

Mr. David Zimmer: What were the signals or the things that you saw that made you think at that time that things were going awry?

Mr. Rick Potter: To be honest with you, I thought the idea was very suspect to start with. From our perspective as an organization, we built two airlines, two aircraft maintenance organizations, went from a staff of one to almost 200 in a period of three years. For us to take on more was pretty questionable. It’s one thing when you start moving into the whole business-jet realm and you start moving to the international scale—you’re in a whole different arena. The consequence of error is huge, the risk is huge, and I did not see any substantive business justification for it.

Mr. David Zimmer: I just want to come back to Kelly Mitchell. When Kelly Mitchell approached you, were you surprised at the approach?

Mr. Rick Potter: No. I knew Kelly through affiliations with the Conservative Party in the past.

Mr. David Zimmer: How long have you been a member of the Conservative Party?

Mr. Rick Potter: My mother took me campaigning when I was eight, so quite some time. I ran federally.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. And then the events leading up to your joining Ornge—were you active in the party at that time or—

Mr. Rick Potter: Actually, no.

Mr. David Zimmer: Where did you run federally?

Mr. Rick Potter: Thunder Bay–Atikokan. The record is intact; they haven’t had a Conservative for about 45 years.

Mr. David Zimmer: Looking back on things, do you think the various criticisms of Dr. Mazza are fair or unfair—criticism, that is, of his management style, tyrannical style, his single-mindedness, his—

Mr. Rick Potter: I think Chris is singularly one of the most brilliant and gifted individuals I’ve ever had the pleasure to meet. As a public speaker, he is truly charismatic. He has a tremendous amount of assets. As a visionary, I think he’s unparalleled with that. His management style left something to be desired. It was somewhat confrontational, somewhat singular, somewhat polar, and that had a tendency to fragment, I think, the organization to some degree.

Mr. David Zimmer: So with all those management strengths that you’ve said he had—his vision, his commitment, his charisma and all of that sort of stuff—what was the downside in his personality that has caused this grief?

Mr. Rick Potter: The hardest part about aviation, as far as Ornge is concerned, is we were always the bad guys, because we were the guys who had to translate concept into reality. As I tried to explain to Chris on numerous occasions, I can only move at the speed of Transport Canada, the FAA; I can’t move any faster. Everything had to be done, basically, tomorrow, and it just doesn’t work that way in our world.

Mr. David Zimmer: As you know, the press about Dr. Mazza’s salary and how it worked its way up to about $1.4 million—when did you become aware that his salary had risen up to $1.4 million?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think when I read it in the press. We knew he made a lot of money, but I had no concept that it was that much.

Mr. David Zimmer: Were salary issues discussed at the board when you were on the board?

Mr. Rick Potter: When I was on the board, there was some discussion of salaries. You’re going to have to go back and look at the public record, but I believe his salary was more in the order of $300,000 or $400,00 at that time, which was sort of comparative.

Mr. David Zimmer: In points of time, you were on the board when his salary did get up to $1.4 million.

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: Had you left before then?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes. I left five years ago. I had to leave the board to become an employee of Ornge.

Mr. David Zimmer: After you left the board, were you on some of the for-profit boards?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: That's the only board you've been on?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Thank you. Did you ever have any suspicions, while you were on the board, that Dr. Mazza's salary was becoming over-the-top?

Mr. Rick Potter: Absolutely none.

Mr. David Zimmer: Now that you know the salary got up to $1.4 million, do you think that's an appropriate salary for the responsibilities that he had?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: Why do you say that?

Mr. Rick Potter: Comparative industry analysis.

Mr. David Zimmer: And what are the comparables in the industry for salary with comparable responsibilities?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe the head of the hospital in Thunder Bay makes somewhere around $300,000, and I think the new head of Barrie makes $700,000. I look at the number of employees, I look at the span of responsibility, I look at the total budget responsible for. It's hard to justify.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just a ballpark figure: What would you say would be a reasonable salary for Dr. Mazza's position, given his responsibilities—$400,000 or $500,000?

Mr. Rick Potter: I would think in that neighbourhood.

Mr. David Zimmer: Last week, Kelly Long appeared before the committee. She described how she became an executive officer at Ornge, a vice-president. She also described herself as Dr. Mazza's partner, in the relationship sense, not in the business sense. Do you know Ms. Long?

Mr. Rick Potter: I know who she is, yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you know her personally?

Mr. Rick Potter: Not terribly well, no.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you know that she was, to use the expression, his "girlfriend"?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you know that she was his girlfriend before she joined Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: No. Chris made an announcement that she was his girlfriend. I think he came into my office last August.

Mr. David Zimmer: I'm sorry, I missed that sequence.

Mr. Rick Potter: Chris came into my office—I think it was last August, but last summer sometime—and mentioned the fact that he was now going out with Kelly Long.

Mr. David Zimmer: What was her position at Ornge at that time?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know. I had nothing to do with her.

Mr. David Zimmer: But you knew she was his girlfriend?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Do you think it was appropriate for an executive like Dr. Mazza to bring his girlfriend on board as one of his vice-presidents?

Mr. Rick Potter: I didn't make a judgment. I don't know whether there was a direct reporting responsibility there or not.

Mr. David Zimmer: Were you aware that she rose through the ranks very quickly? That is, she was working for a consulting company, Pathway. She was seconded by Pathway to Ornge to do some of their work and subsequently formally hired by Ornge as a VP, all in a very short period of time. Were you aware of that sequencing?

Mr. Rick Potter: I had no knowledge that she was working for Pathway or hired by Pathway.

Mr. David Zimmer: One of the comments that Ms. Long made last week was she was quite clear that she felt she deserved the promotions and deserved the salary she was getting and that there was nothing untoward about her being taken on at Ornge by Dr. Mazza. Do you think that was appropriate?

Mr. Rick Potter: I have no knowledge of her work so I couldn't comment on that.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. I've got just one last question on this resumé business: I see on the resumé we have before us that there's an MBA in progress at Heriot-Watt University, Edinburgh, Scotland?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

Mr. David Zimmer: When did you start that degree?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think it was 1997 or something like that.

Mr. David Zimmer: When have you last done some coursework there?

Mr. Rick Potter: I haven't done any coursework, probably, for four or five years. I work about 80 to 90 hours a week at Ornge, or I did.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you. I think my colleague—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals, and you have five minutes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I think my colleague Mr. Singh was trying to get some documentation around the source of your pay. I'm wondering if it would be possible to table your T4 slip from 2011.

Mr. Rick Potter: Sure.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We're not so much interested in the amounts; we're interested in the record of who, for the record, was the payer. Would that be helpful, Auditor?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Of course. I think what you're getting at—the committee—is it Ornge? There's also an Ornge Global Air and there's an Ornge Air. My sense is that on the T4, I think it would show which company actually made the payments, if that's what you're getting at, Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, that's what I'm looking for. So—

Mr. Rick Potter: Actually—sorry to interrupt. Because there was some confusion with the new CEO as to who I was employed with, I asked, and finance produced a report which showed that every one of my paycheques since day one was issued by Ornge Air. I could give you that if you want.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That would be very, very helpful, because—

Mr. Rick Potter: Sure.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: To go back to this conversation: Trying to figure out who you were employed by and what position you held, whether it was Ornge Air, the non-profit, versus Ornge Global, is quite significant with respect to the public salary disclosure. We understand that you weren't trying to hide your salary, but whether or not it was reported is quite a significant issue to us.

I'm just trying to understand, then, how this worked, because from your point of view, you were the chief operating officer for Ornge Air. Who, if anyone, then, would have been the chief operating officer for Ornge Global?

Mr. Rick Potter: The Ornge Global company?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes.

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So if we were to have looked on the website or at the corporation documents at the time, would you have been listed as being in dual roles, as the chief operating officer for both entities?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm not sure. The role of aviation, essentially, was not so much in brokering a deal or being involved in the deal. Basically, what happened was, for example, when they looked at AirMed and purchasing AirMed, we had no involvement whatsoever, other than the fact that then what happens is somebody says, "Okay, we want to do this. Go make it happen." So I meet with the FAA, the Department of Transportation etc. in the States to see if I can make that happen.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But if the planes belonged to one of the private entities, which I understand they did, and if, in essence, if I understand correctly, Ornge Air contracted with Ornge Global to run the planes in some sort of convoluted thing—if you were supposed to make it happen where you—I'm just trying to figure it out. If the responsibility for making it happen had moved over to the for-profit side, and you were still on the non-profit side, somebody here has to be making it happen, as you put it. From your point of view, that was you.

Mr. Rick Potter: From a purely aviation—just getting the regulatory approvals to get the machines up and running.

The aircraft at no point in time could ever have been held by a Canadian corporation. That's against the law in the States. There's a 75-25 ownership regulation that prohibited that. You would have had to form a US corporation to do it.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, now you've got me really confused. You're saying there was somebody who was incorporated in the US that—

Mr. Rick Potter: There was not. It never got that far, but you would have had to go and form a separate corporation. By law, a Canadian can't operate in the States with more than 25% ownership.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, okay, I see. No, I'm just actually trying to figure out the Ontario air ambulance set-up, because if I've understood the auditor's report properly, many of the functions that we, as taxpayers or the Ministry of Health, thought were being carried out by Ornge Air, the non-profit, seemed to have been, on paper, contracted out to these for-profit entities, even within Ontario.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you are out of time. You can answer the question, if you like, and then we'll move on.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm sorry. Okay. We'll come back to this later.

Mr. Rick Potter: It's probably better if I come back, because I'm trying to process the question so I can get you the right answer.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. We'll move on to Mr. Klees. Go ahead.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Mr. Potter, I'd like to follow up on two specific items. I want to start off with your comment that you made just a little bit earlier about the fact that you were concerned about the direction that things were going—that you had already, as an organization, taken on a huge task, that with all of the additional layers that were being envisioned, you had a serious concern. And based on your experience, I can imagine why.

As you were concerned, did you ever wonder where the Ministry of Health and the emergency health services branch had disappeared to in this process, that there was not someone knocking on the door, challenging where Ornge was headed?

Mr. Rick Potter: My understanding is that presentations had been made to the Ministry of Health, extensive presentations, and that the Ministry of Health was in support of the direction.

Mr. Frank Klees: We know that. My question is, did it concern you? Did you ever wonder why, despite the presentation and all of the disclosure to the Ministry of Health, that somebody at the Ministry of Health was not expressing some concern and was not raising some flags and was not doing some investigating into what's going on here?

Mr. Rick Potter: I probably thought about it. It wasn't really my purview. Our primary thing was to make sure that we, in point of fact, complied with the agreement and maintained the service in the province of Ontario, which we did.

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand. But you did think about why the Ministry of Health was simply allowing this to happen?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know that I would say that. From an aviation perspective, we were more aligned with the Ministry of Natural Resources than Health, because the Ontario standards would govern the aviation activities.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm trying to get to the heart of you as a professional. Knowing aviation, you were the key guy, according to your resumé. I look at the list of things that you were responsible for. It deals with audit and quality control. It deals with safety management systems. It deals with staff recruitment and training, labour-union relations, project management. There isn't anything that has to do with the front line of air ambulance service delivery that you were not responsible for.

Mr. Rick Potter: Pretty much.

Mr. Frank Klees: And so from that standpoint, knowing—and based on your earlier comment that you had some serious concerns about what it is you were taking on, as a professional, did you not question why the Ministry of Health was simply passive on what was happening here, knowing full well what their responsibilities are under the emergency health services branch, as well as what their responsibilities were under the performance agreement under which you were working?

Mr. Rick Potter: I guess my answer would be a qualified no. Did I have concerns from a safety perspective? Very much so. That amount of growth, in itself, is a challenge to manage from a safety perspective. We operate under the auspices and the regulation of Transport Canada. We are audited on a regular basis. If I had concerns regarding the safety aspect of it, that's where I would go, or the FAA.

From the Ministry of Health: As I say, I had no interface with anybody from the Ministry of Health in my tenure, so that did not really cross my mind.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Let's talk about the aviation side. I understand that on August 20, 2008, SMS Aviation Safety Inc., a consulting firm, was working directly with you, and that they sent out an email to all of the air ambulance carriers that detailed Ornge's plan to acquire helicopters and airplanes, as well as to centralize the air operations to just three super bases. Can you confirm that?

Mr. Rick Potter: Part of the plan was to look at the economies of scale. The economies of scale involved three super bases. It was not just three super bases; it was primarily three super bases. That would have been Thunder Bay, Sudbury and—we'll call it GTA at that point; a decision hadn't been made.

Mr. Frank Klees: Nevertheless, what you were doing is laying plans to basically consolidate the operation. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Rick Potter: What we were doing was consolidating the rotor and the fixed-wing operations, as opposed to consolidating the contracted carriers primary care.

Mr. Frank Klees: In the final analysis, it would result in Ornge operating from fewer bases throughout northern Ontario. Is that correct?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think it would result in Ornge operating from more optimum bases in northern Ontario.

Mr. Frank Klees: That wasn't my question. There would be fewer bases in northern Ontario that Ornge would be operating out of?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think that's probably correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: That is correct? How many fewer?

Mr. Rick Potter: My understanding was that we were still going to have operations primarily in Thunder Bay. There would also be operations in Sioux Lookout and I think, maybe, perhaps, reduced operations in Kenora. I'm not sure about the continuance of operations in Timmins, but expanded operations in Sudbury and expanded operations in the GTA.

Mr. Frank Klees: We've heard testimony here that the result of that reorganization would mean that, depending on weather, there would be a significant impact on being able to respond to certain calls, specifically if there was not an aircraft in a locality. It's one thing to take off; it's another thing to call an aircraft to land. Would you agree with that conclusion?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: You don't agree with that?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think the plan that we had would improve the overall efficiency and response time for the province of Ontario. There are several bases which, because of their extremity, don't get utilized, and what happens is that a number of people, because of over-utilization of other bases, don't get the service. What's important to understand is that aviation was a service provider. The way that I looked at it at Ornge, the way it was explained to me, is that we would look at designing a structure based on optimal aircraft utilization. That was impacted by operations. They would look at it from the paramedic side as well. Finally, Dr. Bruce Sawadsky and the medical team would look at it from the medical efficacy viewpoint. We had to work with all of those people to make any kind of decision.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. I'd like to move to another focus. I'm assuming from your CV here that you were the main man in charge at Ornge, given the list of those responsibilities. I'd like to discuss the aircraft purchase agreement between AgustaWestland and Ornge. You were the COO. When did you first assume the responsibility as COO?

Mr. Rick Potter: I can't remember, to be honest with you. It's probably a matter of record, but I would think it was in the last two years.

Mr. Frank Klees: We have two records: Your CV says "2007"; the offering memorandum that was circulated with the $275-million bond offering says "2009."

Mr. Rick Potter: Well, 2009 would be more accurate, rather than just saying, "Director, associate vice-president, vice-president, COO."

Mr. Frank Klees: Why is your CV that you gave us different from that? It says "2007."

Mr. Rick Potter: It's not different. That was my tenure at Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, it says, "Chief operating officer, 2007 to 2012."

Mr. Rick Potter: That's simply as opposed to putting "director" and "associate" and all the rest of the stuff and having the detail—

Mr. Frank Klees: Minor detail?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe that to be true.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Let's talk about your involvement in that purchase agreement. Which of the Ornge entities was a party to that aircraft purchase agreement?

Mr. Rick Potter: It would have been Ornge Air, but I believe the actual purchase was accomplished through, I think it's called BNY, and then the assets went to Ornge Issuer Trust.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who at Ornge was on the team that was tasked with negotiating that agreement?

Mr. Rick Potter: Maria Renzella was there, Chris Mazza, John Mackenzie, Tom Rothfels.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who was the lead on that team?

Mr. Rick Potter: It would have been Chris and Maria.

Mr. Frank Klees: They were actually engaged in the front-line negotiation?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe so.

Mr. Frank Klees: Interesting. From beginning to end, what time frame did it take to actually negotiate that deal?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe it to be in the order of months, probably six months.

Mr. Frank Klees: About six months?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm guessing, okay?

Mr. Frank Klees: And in the end, the final price tag for the 12 helicopters was what?

Mr. Rick Potter: It depends what agreement you refer to.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm talking about the initial purchase agreement.

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm going by memory here. I believe amendment 2 to the purchase agreement had a total value of 144—you've got it in front of you, you can refer there—and amendment 3, I believe, indicated a value of 152.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm not familiar with the technical terms, so forgive me. You can correct me as we go along here. Can you briefly explain what the significance of the weight and balance specifications of the aircraft purchase agreement is?

Mr. Rick Potter: The performance of an aircraft is very much predicated on its max gross weight. Every pound over your designed gross weight basically is less fuel, less capacity, less capability of the aircraft.

The second part which happened with the AW139 aircraft is, with the higher gross takeoff weight, the 6,800-kilogram versus the 6,400-kilogram, they initially affixed a penalty to what they call "half-life" on the main rotor and tail rotor blades. In other words, every hour you flew above 6,400 kilograms counted two hours against those blades versus one, which has a significant economic impact.

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand that the original purchase agreement signed by Ornge included weight upgrades. Is that correct?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Are you aware that Agusta finally got the actual regulatory weight upgrade? And are you aware that Agusta actually attempted to get Ornge to pay a premium of some $600,000 per unit—

Mr. Rick Potter: It's $668,000, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: So $668,000. Agusta, having negotiated for that weight upgrade in the original agreement, actually came back to you and said, "We need another $668,000 per unit because we now have the regulatory approval for that upgrade." Is that right?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you negotiate with Agusta to waive that weight upgrade?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Were you successful?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: When you were successful in negotiating away some $668,000 of additional cost per unit, you approached Dr. Mazza with that information?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes, but—

Mr. Frank Klees: You must have been very satisfied with yourself for having been able to deliver that kind of result.

Mr. Rick Potter: What happened is this—and you can appreciate the complexity of trying to bring on 12 aircraft, a number of deficiencies etc. Anyway, to make a long story short, at the point where Lou Barlotta called me over the increase in gross weight, we had about $2 million on the Ornge side of the equation for delivery penalties that they had failed on the contract. So we had $2 million on our side of the balance sheet. It wasn't just the increased gross weight; there was an additional landing light, there were some communication package changes, some antenna configuration changes. I believe the Agusta side of the coin—he said I owed him $12 million. So we had a debt of $10 million. I discussed this with our committee we had to manage the Agusta things. I went down to Philadelphia and had a meeting with Lou Barlotta to discuss that.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you were successful. You came back and said, "Look, guys, I've been successful in negotiating away that six hundred—"

Mr. Rick Potter: Ten million dollars.

Mr. Frank Klees: How much?

Mr. Rick Potter: Ten million dollars.

Mr. Frank Klees: Ten million dollars. What was Dr. Mazza's reaction?

Mr. Rick Potter: Very cool and reserved.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did he not say at some point—and the words may not be correct—did he not express to you that he was not at all happy? Did he not say, "I have other plans for Agusta," and in fact direct that Ornge pay the additional fee, notwithstanding the fact that you had negotiated it away?

Mr. Rick Potter: I would answer thusly: I sent him an email—it was a Friday night; I remember that—saying, as you indicated earlier, that I thought this was a pretty good deal. We saved 10 million bucks. I got a very cool response, to which my reply, I remember vividly, was, “It doesn’t even deserve an ‘Attaboy’?” And he reluctantly said, “Attaboy.”

Mr. David Zimmer: I didn’t hear that.

Mr. Rick Potter: I said, “It doesn’t deserve an ‘Attaboy’?”

Anyway, that next week, he came to me and said, “Rick, there’s a value in that increase in gross weight.” I said, “No, there’s not, Chris. This is just”—I don’t know if we’ve got any aviation people, but this is kind of a standard thing which happens in the aviation industries. It’s a way to sort of jack up the price, to be quite honest with you, okay?

I also reminded him that when Agusta submitted their proposal for those helicopters, it was based on the 6,800 kilogram. The performance was based on that; the selection was based on that.

I said, “There is no value in this. This is paper.” There was no material change to the aircraft. And he said, “Well, there are other things to be considered,” or something to that effect. I’m not quoting; I’m paraphrasing, okay? And that was it.

Mr. Frank Klees: And bottom line is, he directed that Ornge should pay that additional amount—

Mr. Rick Potter: Not to me, he didn’t, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who would he have directed?

Mr. Rick Potter: I know that Maria Renzella came in shortly thereafter and said, “There has to be a value to this.” I said, “There’s absolutely none,” and I told her the same story.

My understanding is there was further conversation—I’m not sure who was party to that conversation—with Agusta, which resulted in amendment 3.

Mr. Frank Klees: So the amendment, essentially, resulted in Ornge paying the additional $7.2 million, and Maria Renzella was then charged with finalizing that agreement. That agreement essentially became the marketing agreement that has been under discussion. Is that correct?

Mr. Rick Potter: I do not know that that’s the pathway that followed. I was not privy to the marketing agreement until, at one point, I found out that part of the marketing agreement was that we were supposed to provide an aircraft for trade shows and sales promotion. I said to Chris, “You’ve got to tell me what’s going on here, because I have to know, if we’re taking an aircraft out of rotation, what our commitment is, to assess what the impact is on that.”

Mr. Frank Klees: So knowing what you knew—you knew there was no value to this $7.2 million. You challenged Dr. Mazza; you challenged Maria Renzella. Nevertheless, Ornge followed through, insisted on paying the $7.2 million, and following that, it had to be papered somehow and that paper ultimately took essentially the form of a marketing agreement with the exact amount of money attached to it.

Mr. Rick Potter: I do not know that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Chair, at one point, Mr. Potter nodded in agreement to having paid the extra. Could you just say “yes” to whatever—could we get a—

Mr. Rick Potter: Sure, we can say it’s a yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. We don’t pick up the nods in Hansard.

Mr. Rick Potter: Sorry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: The yeses and the noes are important.

Mr. Rick Potter: I’m from northern Ontario. You have to give me some slack.

Mr. Frank Klees: So to your knowledge, did anyone—now you knew. As a major player at Ornge, you were well aware that now Ornge was paying $7.2 million for air. You had to be concerned, knowing this is public money, knowing this is a public air ambulance service, knowing that there is going to be scrutiny. Did you approach anyone to express your concern about this transaction?

Mr. Rick Potter: I wouldn’t categorize it as saying I knew it was air, okay? But was I concerned over the—it’s the same thing as if you go and buy a car today at $30,000. You don’t go buy it next week and pay the guy $40,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: You had said before that you told Dr. Mazza there was no value in this.

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct. So what I did is, as I said, I talked to Dr. Mazza. I talked to Maria Renzella. I talked to Christine—not Christine. Our lawyer—

Mr. Frank Klees: Cynthia Heinz?

Mr. Rick Potter: Cynthia Heinz, sorry. I talked to Cynthia Heinz and I said, “Look, this is nuts. This is not a secret.” What I had done when I came back was share it with our committee, because we had a list of ongoing challenges with Agusta we were trying to solve and say, “We can strike this off the list, this off the list and this off the list.” There were any number of people who were well aware of that. In fact, I had reported to the executive committee what had happened that time. I said, “This doesn’t make any sense to me.”

I called Lou Bartolotta at AgustaWestland and said, “Lou, what the heck is going on here?” He said, “Well, we do this all the time.” And then I said, “Look, I can’t see how the hell you’re doing this”—pardon me. “I can’t see how you’re doing this.” And that was it. I said, “Is your CEO aware of this? Is your CFO aware of this?” and he said, “Yes.” I said, “Okay.”

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You’re on your last 30 seconds.

Mr. Frank Klees: You know, if you don’t mind, Chair, I don’t know if my colleagues would agree—we have another round. Would my colleagues agree if I can just follow through for a few more minutes on this line of questioning?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We would deduct the time—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: As long as Mr. Miller is keeping the time very carefully.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, I'll keep track.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. I appreciate that.

So essentially, what you confirmed with Mr. Bartolotta is that, first of all he, on the Agusta side, was willing to do this and that his COO—or CFO?

Mr. Rick Potter: CEO, I believe—was aware.

Mr. Frank Klees: —was also familiar. And they said, "Well, we do this all the time." It's a matter of how they do business.

Mr. Rick Potter: That was my take on what his thing was, and I said, "Okay, I give up."

Mr. Frank Klees: And on the Ornge side, we have the corporate in-house lawyer, Cynthia Heinz, and we have Maria Renzella, who is the CFO, negotiating this deal. They knew there was no value to this, but they were putting together an agreement with a value of $7.2 million.

Mr. Rick Potter: I do not know how they came up with the $7.2 million.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. We'll find out at some point I guess, right? But here is my follow-up question to you: Did you at any time feel compelled to go to someone on the board of directors? If this executive group was willing to be complicit in this exercise, surely the fact that you sat on the board as a director—you know that a director has fiduciary responsibilities. Did you at any time make an effort to contact anyone on the board of directors to share with them what you clearly saw was something that wasn't quite in keeping with the way business should be done?

Mr. Rick Potter: I did not contact the board of directors; I thought it would be inappropriate as a staff member. I contacted seven people, including legal counsel, and confirmed that the legal counsel on both sides was in agreement with this. My assumption was that I was obviously missing something.

Mr. Frank Klees: In retrospect, do you think it might have been a good idea to go to someone on the board to say, "Look, we've got something going very wrong here"?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm still not aware of the details of the marketing agreement or if there's value in that, so I can't comment on that.

Mr. Frank Klees: You've read none of the wonderful reporting by the Toronto Star on this?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: We'll send you the clippings.

Chair, thanks.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very good. We'll move on to the NDP, then. Who would like to ask questions? Jagmeet, go ahead.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you so much. Mr. Potter, you were asked a question about when you started noticing that the wheels were falling off, that there was a downturn and some flags were raised. You indicated that Ornge Global was one of the signs that something was wrong. Do you agree with that statement?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm not sure what context of the "wrong" part you're referring to. I had genuine concerns from an aviation safety and aviation management perspective, to try to accomplish that with the finite resources we had. At that point in time, we had just finished starting up, under part 703, the airline operation for the Pilatus. We were in the midst of a difficult take-over with CHL. We were trying to get a 704 certificate for our rotor operation. We were trying to start an aircraft maintenance organization for helicopters. We were trying to start an aircraft maintenance organization for fixed-wing aircraft. We were trying to recruit pilots, we were trying to recruit maintenance engineers, and there had been no staff increase. The complexity of international operations, it's a different sphere as well.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. So maybe I can just clarify the question, then. Did you have any concerns in general with the way Ornge was being run, in terms of its provision of quality of care or its provision of patient care, that drew concerns for you?

Mr. Rick Potter: From the perspective of aviation, absolutely none. We're very proud of the service we've provided.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. When you indicated that Ornge Global was a concern, your concern was that it was spreading yourself too thin; that you already had a substantial increase of employees over a three-year period—200 new employees—and that to further expand would just be very difficult to do and would be spreading yourself too thin. Is that what you—

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. You also indicated that there was no—I don't want to quote you, but something along the lines of that you didn't see a business benefit or an economic benefit or advantage to this idea of creating Ornge Global. Is that right? Is that what you said?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'll answer your question in a long-winded manner. When Chris first said he wanted to form an airline, the first thing I said to him was, "You're nuts. I've been in aviation for 43 years. All I can tell you, Chris, is it's really expensive and it's going to be more expensive than I tell you. You're better off on a tightly managed contracted model if you could, given your 20% margins, and go with that." Anyway, that was the prelude to the fixed-wing.

Then, as complex as fixed-wing is, rotor is probably five or six times more complex, simply because there are a lot less pilots, a lot less maintenance engineers, more complex mechanical equipment and the costs are astronomical. So it was not that we were trying to sell doing this stuff. We were trying to sort of say, "You don't want to be doing this." But it was more that we were forced into doing it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. You touched on something I want to just kind of expand on. I was going to talk about response time and cost of operation. So you'd agree with me that the cost of operations of Ornge switching to creating its own fleet increased. It was more expensive that way as a model, as opposed to the model you just described of having tightly controlled and supervised outsourced aircraft providers.

Mr. Rick Potter: Well, yes and no. It will sound like I'm being hypocritical, but I'm not. What happens is this: You have to compare apples to apples. If you want to compare the cost of Ornge flying $5-million aircraft with five crews per aircraft and providing that level of response, versus somebody flying a 30-year-old Beech King Air using three crews per aircraft and being available 65% or 70% of the time, no, they're not comparable.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Maybe we'll just talk about quality of care, then. In terms of the transition from the initial model, which was outsourcing the aircraft to private providers, sometimes of only one aircraft or some that had maybe a couple of aircraft, and shifting to Ornge having its own fleet, did the response time increase? Were there quicker response times, were they the same or did they go down?

Mr. Rick Potter: There are two things. First of all, availability went way up. From a low, I think, of around 65% at one point with the previous contracted carrier, we consistently are above 95%, 96%. In some places, we're consistently above 98% to almost 100% in our availability. On response times, our response times have always been well within all the parameters.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So if we factor availability and compare that to response time, did having higher or lower availability impact response time from before, when there was the outsourcing model, to Ornge having its own fleet?

Mr. Rick Potter: Well, they're sort of two different things. One is having the aircraft ready to go, and the other is being in the aircraft in 10 minutes. If we don't have the aircraft ready to go, it doesn't really matter. So they're kind of apples and oranges on that one.

And the other part is that the world is kind of broken up, as it's a vastly different world between fixed-wing and helicopter.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. So if you were able to compare both models—I know they're different, and you've explained that one is older fleet and there's a newer fleet—was there a significant difference in terms of the ability of ambulance services to assist someone in need with the old model versus the new model in terms of response time and ability to just get out there and get the job done?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe the province of Ontario is way better served right now than it ever has been before.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: There's also been an increased cost associated with that.

Mr. Rick Potter: There would have been an increased cost at any rate. You can't keep flying 25- and 30-year-old helicopters and airplanes. And if you think the contracted cost is expensive now, when you have some contracted carriers who go out and buy $200,000 and $300,000 airplanes that are 1972 models and you force them to upgrade that to a $5-million capital asset, you're going to see a huge increase in your contracted costs.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I want to come back for a minute to the comments you made. You came back, you had saved $10 million and you got your attaboy, but kind of from the back of the hand; it had to be forced out of him. Then you went and shared that with the committee, and you said you reported that to the executive. What committee are you referring to?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think it was called the Agusta transition committee, which was basically most of the people in the aviation section, because we had different people responsible for different things.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were you the chair of this committee or—

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You were. And can you name me some people who were there and heard it?

Mr. Rick Potter: Oh, boy. Ted Rabicki was there, Shauna Marques was there, I think probably John—John MacKenzie was there.

Interjection: Tom Rothfels.

Mr. Rick Potter: Rothfels? No. I don't think Rothfels was around at that time.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You also mentioned, "And I had reported it to the executive." Which committee were you referring to? The executive of the board?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, the executive committee was—Chris had kind of an executive committee meeting. That would have been Chris Mazza, Rhoda Beecher, Tom Lepine, Steve Farquhar—that's all I can recall right now.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you usually attend the meetings of the executive?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You did? Was this question ever raised again afterward, so you had kind of gloated as to, "Hey, I did a pretty good job. I went down there, guys. I saved you 10 million bucks"? You reported this, and was it ever brought back again?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you ever bring it back to the executive?

Mr. Rick Potter: I was not party to the negotiations for amendment 3.

M^{me} France Gélinas: For amendment 3, which is—

Mr. Rick Potter: That's the one that has the increased costs.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Rick Potter: Or the agreement that they had with Agusta on that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Marketing agreement.

Mr. Rick Potter: Marketing agreement.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You've been an aviation executive for 45 years. You've now lost your job. Did you see this coming?

Mr. Rick Potter: Did I see losing my job coming?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yes.

Mr. Rick Potter: Not really, but it's okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're still getting 20 grand a month.

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm retiring, and that's fine with me.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Rick Potter: I started off as a pilot 43 years ago. I'll probably go back to flying.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know what is happening to Ornge? Do you know why you're losing your job?

Mr. Rick Potter: My belief is it's fundamentally because of political process. I will look at anybody in this room and say I'm damned proud of the job that I did, I'm damned proud of the job that the people in aviation did on behalf of the people of Ontario, and I believe you're going to be better served in the future because of the work we did.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You really feel that you were contributing to improving air ambulance services in Ontario?

Mr. Rick Potter: Absolutely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So how come we're not continuing down this path, then?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe it's politics.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What do you mean, "politics"?

Mr. Rick Potter: There are a number of politicians right here. My name was brought up in the House of Commons. Someone referred to a master's degree. You have the resumé in front of you, which I think is about 15 years of age. At no point in time did I ever tell anybody at Ornge I had an MBA. As a matter of fact, I told Chris Mazza twice that I didn't. Mazza came in my office and said, "Potter, you have an MBA." I said, "No, Chris, I never finished it." He said, "No, no, you've got an MBA." I said, "No, Chris, I never finished it." Okay? He said, "Well, it will look a lot better if you did." And that's it; he left.

M^{me} France Gélinas: All right, then.

Mr. Rick Potter: He's a hard man to say no to.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You had just graduated. So previous to December of this year, you thought that you were doing good work and that the good work was about to continue?

Mr. Rick Potter: I know we were doing good work in aviation.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How about Ornge as a whole?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think Ornge as a whole seemed to be fairly confused.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So let's just talk about some of the confusion. Would you agree with me that—three key concerns have been raised, if we can summarize them. People talk about mismanagement of funds—there were public funds being shifted into private, for-profit—and there was wastage of funds. There's actually a large amount of money that's unaccounted for. There are some issues with the quality of care, and there are some issues with respect to communications: the ability to communicate and respond to requests for services. Would you be able to touch on any of those three? And do you agree with them as issues of concern?

Mr. Rick Potter: Most of those have nothing to do with aviation. The only thing I would say, as far as negotiations go, is one of the things—because of the relationship with Agusta, I was held back from doing a lot of the stuff that I wanted to do.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Putting aviation aside, just as someone who was aware of what was going on at Ornge to some degree, would you agree with me that there was certainly mismanagement of funds in terms of using the public dollar efficiently and effectively?

Mr. Rick Potter: From what I saw, I would say no. What I've seen in our expenditures—and I can only comment on the expenditures that I'm a party to—there was darn good value that we got for you. We beat up a lot of people.

I'll give you an example. As far as I know, unless it has changed in the last few months, we're the only people in the world who were able to negotiate with Agusta so we'd have no penalty on the main rotor and tail rotor blades. That's a $10-million savings. We beat up on a lot of people to try to get good value.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. You had negotiated very well and effectively to get rid of that cost for the increased weight but Ornge went ahead and paid for it anyway. That's an example of some money being wasted that you had worked hard to save. It's not your fault, but it looks like Ornge wasn't managing its money very well.

Mr. Rick Potter: I am not sure what the value was of the difference.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: But you'd agree with me that could be one example of mismanagement of funds—that's not your fault, but that could be the perception of why Ornge—

Mr. Rick Potter: I would agree that if it's not well-founded, it could be, yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Were you aware of any other examples of mismanagement of funds like that?

Mr. Rick Potter: Not in our world.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: With respect to communications between those who were requesting services and the communications team that was set to respond to those requests, are you aware of any issues with respect to that?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm not sure what communications team you're referring to.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just the communications department of Ornge, in terms of responding to or assessing demands or requests for any care.

Mr. Rick Potter: I thought they were doing a pretty good job.

M^{me} France Gélinas: We questioned you at the beginning about how come your salary was not on the sunshine list. You said you freely volunteered to have this on the sunshine list. Do you have any way of showing us that you did that—that you sent an email, a letter—or is it going to be your word against somebody else's?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, it was a discussion with Maria Renzella.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It was a discussion with Maria? Okay. You don't remember ever having something in writing that shows that you were quite willing to have your salary on the sunshine list, knowing that you work for Ornge Air and that it should be, and you accepted—what was her reasoning again that it shouldn't be put on the sunshine list?

Mr. Rick Potter: What I was told was that it wasn't a requirement, so they weren't going to report it. They had some interpretation that it wasn't necessary.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And you took that for granted and that was the end?

Mr. Rick Potter: I did.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What made you aware of even asking?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm sorry?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: The fact that you said, "Hey, I'm willing to disclose my salary. I have no issue disclosing it"—why did that even come up in your mind?

Mr. Rick Potter: Because I was asked if I would disclose my salary.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who asked you?

Mr. Rick Potter: Maria.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Maria asked you if you would disclose? In what context did that come about?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know. It was some meeting. Her office was beside mine.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So she asked you, "Would you be willing to disclose your salary?" and you knew that that was going to be disclosed on the sunshine list. You said yes, and then she said, "I asked you, but really the answer is we won't share it."

Mr. Rick Potter: No, what I was told is that it's not necessary, that there was some exemption as to the interpretation of it. It really wasn't an issue to me because I had nothing to hide. I said, "Go ahead. I don't care."

M^{me} France Gélinas: So she came to ask you, you said you didn't care, and then she said, "But we're not going to do this because we don't need to."

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Isn't that a weird conversation?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: That was a weird conversation. Were there many weird conversations like this at Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And you just accepted them as, this is the culture of the place?

Mr. Rick Potter: I didn't see it as a consequential issue at that particular time. If counsel had made an interpretation that they didn't have to do it and they didn't want to do it, I said, "I don't care."

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you remember how long ago that was that this conversation took place?

Mr. Rick Potter: The last conversation regarding this was probably in December. I remember there was Lepine, myself, Rhoda Beecher. They asked, and we all said we're good with that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Potter, just some quick questions on briefings. I know you personally weren't involved in briefings with either the ministry or any government agencies. Were you aware in general of briefings that were occurring or that took place?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you know about them at all, though?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But you did testify that the ministry had been briefed about what was going on.

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes. Like, Tom would say he'd met with somebody at—I don't even know the people's names, but he had met with somebody at the Ministry of Health or they were going to see somebody in the Ministry of Health.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you knew that this was happening, but it had nothing to do with you?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. When you say "in December," you mean December of this year, in 2011, was the last time you had that conversation?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Was it the first time you had the conversation about the disclosure?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, we had a conversation probably about a year earlier, as well, I think.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So in 2010, the same conversation with the same people: Lepine, Rhoda, yourself?

Mr. Rick Potter: I can't answer you because I can't remember.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: But for sure Maria would have been involved in that conversation the first time, in 2010?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Was that the first time, in 2010, or could it have happened before that as well, in 2008 or 2009?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know. I'm sorry; it wasn't that big an issue to me.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No, I understand. But when she would say to you, "We don't have to. We are exempt," the conversation led you to believe that it was a lawyer that had told Maria that you were exempt?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And which lawyer was she referring to?

Mr. Rick Potter: I assume Cindy Heinz.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You assume Cindy Heinz? You never—

Mr. Rick Potter: I do not know that to be a fact.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you ever talk to Cindy about that?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you ever talk to your colleagues about that?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you know what your colleagues were making?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No? Didn't know, didn't care?

Mr. Rick Potter: Correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Pretty much.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Potter, was there any other time when you negotiated a savings where either Dr. Mazza or anyone else on the board turned around and said, "No, actually, you know, we're going to go pay the full amount, even though you've negotiated a savings for us"?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, and Dr. Mazza didn't say that, per se, okay? Did we negotiate other savings? Sure, lots.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And the other savings that you negotiated, did they go ahead as planned or were they ever—

Mr. Rick Potter: On the aero one, we saved $7 million.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're on your last minute, there, Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure. Any other negotiations similar to the one where you had worked out an agreement to reduce the costs but then Dr. Mazza was like, "There's a value to this. I want to pay that amount"? Did that ever happen in any other example?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't recall any, no.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Aside from the people you named to us that were on the executive committee with Dr. Mazza—Rhoda, Tom, Steve etc.—they seem to have known the content of the deal, and you seemed to be put aside. Is there a chance that when we talk to those people, they tell us the same thing: "Oh, they all knew, but I didn't know"?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know. I can't answer that question, sorry.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you felt that you advised people that the $10 million had been saved, that that was a big "attaboy" moment for you, and that when this started to fall apart, everybody seemed to understand. You said, "I thought there was a piece missing," so you accepted it as a piece missing and it was none of your business, therefore, you continued with your life?

Mr. Rick Potter: What I said to Chris, and I'll paraphrase for this committee, was, "Are you freaking crazy?"

M^{me} France Gélinas: It started with an F but was a different word?

Mr. Rick Potter: I didn't say that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll move on to the government, then. Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. Let's go back to Ornge Global Air. It's my understanding that Ornge Global Air sold its aviation services essentially back to the province, but through Ornge the non-profit entity. Can you explain to us exactly what flight service is aviation services? And also, administrative costs would have gotten sold back to Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: Well, Ornge Air consisted basically of the pilots and the management personnel to run the airline for the fixed operation and then, later, the rotor operation, so those would be the services that went back. The OCC was part of operations, it was not part of aviation. Just commencing, I think it was December 1, was the ACC, which was sort of the—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: ACC stands for?

Mr. Rick Potter: Oh, boy. Aircraft—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If you can't remember the acronym, tell me what it does.

Mr. Rick Potter: Basically, it was the dispatch function for our aircraft.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So when those services were sold back, obviously they had to be sold back to Ornge at a price.

Mr. Rick Potter: I have no idea. Let me take a tack, because I may answer your question. One of the frustrations that I had as an accountable executive—which is a Transport Canada position—the accountable executive is essentially the person who goes to jail if something goes wrong in an airline operation; not an enviable position. But one of the responsibilities of an accountable executive is to be able to ensure you have enough funding to do your operation and conduct it safely.

Because of the way that funding was at Ornge—the Ornge world of six or seven companies and money going back and forth—my complaint to Maria was that I have to be able to prove on paper, if I come to you with a budget of X amount of money, that I have X amount of money. I never had a problem getting the money, but I could not say, "Okay, this is where it's coming from." It got to the point on purchases of things that I'd go to her and say, "Who's behind this?"

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Let's go back to this model where you've got Ornge, which is being funded by the province—let's go at it that way—purchasing aviation services from Ornge Global Air or one of the other entities. If you're purchasing something from somebody, you must be paying a price. Where did the price come from? Who set the price tag? How was the price tag determined?

Mr. Rick Potter: I have absolutely no knowledge of that. That would have been Maria Renzella. My understanding is it was simply a function of the direct costs, i.e. salaries and materials that were consumed.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So would you have been responsible for providing her with the direct costs of these things—what the actual cost of the component was?

Mr. Rick Potter: She had access to the budgets, and she had every line item that we used.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So she would never have asked you for an opinion as to, "What does this cost?"

Mr. Rick Potter: Oh, no. She would question some of the things.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. If she questioned it, would her questions be related to wanting to have a lower cost reflected or wanting to have a higher cost reflected so that Ornge would pay more?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, it was never that. It was more just—you can appreciate it's a technical thing. Somebody says, "I need three artificial horizons." She would go, "What's an artificial horizon?" But I mean, she wouldn't say, "Why did you pay $10,200 for this artificial horizon when you can get another one for $8,000?" If we purchased, we had a fairly stringent procurement policy, which we followed to the letter.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. So from your point of view, you followed a stringent policy to procure whatever it is you would need in order to provide the aviation service. But even though you were playing the role of chief operating officer, we're a little bit confused as to where your name was lined up on the corporate books. Let's set that aside. From your point of view, you were the chief operating officer involved in aviation services. She would never have asked you, "We now have to figure out how much to charge Ornge?"

Mr. Rick Potter: No, she never did.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: "What to charge for this"?

Mr. Rick Potter: Never did.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you're saying you have no knowledge, then, of whether what was charged back to Ornge by the for-profit entity was strictly cost or whether it was cost plus?

Mr. Rick Potter: I have no knowledge.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You have no knowledge, even though you were chief operating officer on both sides, it sounds like in a way, of whether there was a profit factor built into what the public taxpayer, in essence, was being charged.

Mr. Rick Potter: I have no knowledge whatsoever of that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So who would have been responsible for the decisions around how much the for-profit entities were charging Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: Maria, it was my understanding.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And would she have worked that through in conjunction with Dr. Mazza?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know who she worked it through in conjunction with. She did not work it through with myself.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But she did not work it through with you. You made the comment—I think Mr. Farquhar talked about distractions. He talked about the fact that the creation of the for-profit entities was a distraction in terms of providing safe, quality paramedic services. You just said, I think, something to the effect that all this corporate structure got in the way of what you would like to do. Is that correct?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know that it got in the way. Well, it would get in the way, to some degree. I think that's a fair statement to make. It was because you start wondering where things are going or what reports through what.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: What would you have liked to be able to do that would have improved the quality of the aviation service side of Ornge, that you were unable to do because there was this focus on for-profit and "Can we sell services to Brazil?" or wherever people were trying to run around and sell services? In your view, in this for-profit, what got in the way of providing good service?

Mr. Rick Potter: It's very simple: Ornge aviation should have been a stand-alone corporate entity, fully accountable for every cent it spent on aviation within itself.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I think you alluded to this earlier: In your view, then, taking the corporate structure back to the original one where you just simply had Ornge, the non-profit is the appropriate structure? Or do you see any need for any of these side entities?

Mr. Rick Potter: I see no need for any of the side entities.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, I think that answers the question. Are there other issues around which you raised concerns with Dr. Mazza, where things were interfering with or you were unable to—

Mr. Rick Potter: No, I really think that one of the great things about working with Chris is, when we decided to start the airline—I mean, we have the most over-trained Pilatus pilots in the world. When we started that airline, we knew there was a significant risk. I went to Chris and I said, "This is the training plan we've developed. It's probably five or six times more extensive than any of our contractors'." But, starting an airline, you don't have experience. We trained, and it was very safety-based. I can say that if I ever went to Chris with a safety concern, there was never any hesitation about support.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You mentioned earlier that sometimes you had to block out time and report on a time sheet when you were providing services to some of the other entities.

Mr. Rick Potter: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: What services did you actually—if we could see your calendar, where you blocked out providing services to these other entities—

Mr. Rick Potter: Sure.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: What were the services you did provide to these other entities?

Mr. Rick Potter: We did a project for the Saskatchewan government. We designed the rotor system for Saskatchewan. On the US endeavour, I dealt with AirMed, which is a company based out of somewhere in Alabama; I've forgotten now. Chris was looking at buying them, so I went down and looked at the organization, its safety management systems, maintenance procedures, those types of things. We looked at buying an entity or starting an entity, apparently, in Fort Lauderdale. I was there and looked at properties and looked at contractors to see if that was a potential.

I dealt with US lawyers on numerous occasions as to the structure of what an organization would be like in the States. Mr. Apps had designed a structure which I challenged and, you know, we were trying to find a way to do that. That's primarily that.

We were asked to comment on some other things. I think they put a bid in for Kazakhstan and they wanted me to look at what the infrastructure was there, as well as Saudi.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Would it be possible for you to provide the committee with a list of the other projects that you were asked to work on?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't have that and I don't have access to the email anymore—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But you've just sort of rhymed off—

Mr. Rick Potter: But Judy Rybar was my executive assistant in Thunder Bay, and she would have that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, because you've just rhymed off a whole list of things that you were doing on the for-profit side. It would probably be helpful to the committee to have that, because I think what you just said was a more complete list of for-profit projects than we've probably had access to previously.

I know that Mr. McNeely has a few questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. McNeely.

Mr. Phil McNeely: The situation when you came to Ornge, or what the previous name was, was you were using a lot of contractors and a lot of old planes, and there were a lot of problems with that.

Mr. Rick Potter: That's correct.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Could you go through what you had then and take us through to where you are today? Just to go through that whole process.

I'd also like you to comment on your opinions when you were going to run the airplanes yourself, own, be an airline; and then how you felt, now that you've got that, about taking that out of Ontario. Were you in over your head when you came to that? You had made comments that that was not a direction you wanted to go in.

Mr. Rick Potter: I think there are three questions there. I'll see what I can do.

First of all, the system as I perceived it, when I came on board, is there was nobody really watching the contractors; there wasn't. There was very little quality control on the part of us as to the service we were getting, the equipment they were doing, their compliance—a number of things. The equipment they were flying: There was very little specification on the age of the equipment, the type of equipment, the radio navigation equipment inside the aircraft—there was virtually none. Some of the stuff was old, it was tired, it was beat up, and it was certainly not something that we needed in a modern system. Very few people in the world fly piston aircraft in a medevac operation anymore. Very few people fly unpressurized aircraft in a medevac situation anymore.

So we looked at that, then we looked at a number of operators that we were using for one, two and three hours a year type of thing—a “they get one call” type of deal. What we wanted to do was we wanted to improve the quality of equipment. We wanted better aircraft and we wanted better and more accountable organizations that were operating on our behalf. So what we did do was we improved the specifications. For example, we put in a requirement for TAWS, which is terrain avoidance equipment; TCAS, which is traffic avoidance software; GPS—some of them didn't have GPS navigation, and in the north, you can't really go anywhere without a GPS type of thing.

Those were some of the changes we made. Unfortunately, it did eliminate some people. We would have loved to have that number, but we just couldn't sustain having that equipment. What we also did was a five-year analysis of any reports that were filed in the Canadian aviation daily occurrence reporting system against any of those operators to look for trends, and analysis on that to see what flags needed to be raised on both the operator's side and the type-of-equipment-they-were-operating side of the equation. We did that as well. What that led to was fewer operators, but it led to operators with better equipment.

Are we there yet? No, we're not, because one of the constant things that we always had to balance out was if we went and said, “We want you to get brand new aircraft,” “We want you to do this,” well, you'd move from $1,300 an hour to $3,000 an hour in a contracted fee. So there's always a balance and an evolution.

One of the things we did do to try to help the operators was we moved from one-year contracts to longer-term contracts, because they were always looking for a way to amortize the capital side of improvements on their part. We were fairly successful with that. That's the system that we inherited.

The intent of Ornge Air at the start was only to do advanced and critical care transport. The primary care transport was to be left solely to the contractors. My understanding is they're doing a little bit of the primary work now, which is another story. So there's that part there.

Now what we do is we've demanded they have a safety management system. We have our own safety management system. We have a more strident reporting system as well. What we do do is we audit a minimum of three contracted carriers per year. They're independent audits; it has nothing to do—we have independent contractors come in and they certify our tests to the compliance of those aircraft operators.

Is there a way to go in those operators? I think there's room for improvement. As a matter of record, we've had accidents with two of our major contracted carriers in the last year, year and a half, and our major rotor carrier in the last five years. So is there room for improvement? Sure there is. There always is in aviation. It's always a balance between safety and cost, and that's one of the things we wrestle with on a daily basis.

What was the other question? Sorry.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Maybe just a general question, then. The service that was there in 2004, 2005, from a patient safety point of view and the service that is there today—I think you said that it has improved a great deal.

Mr. Rick Potter: It has improved. For example, one of the things I say where it's very hard to compare Ornge to a contracted carrier is that we will use five crews per aircraft, because we staff an aircraft as a 12-hour shift. So it's fairly straight up.

What a lot of contractors will do is they'll only use one or two crews per aircraft and they're on a pager system, and whether that pager goes off at 2 a.m. or 2 p.m., they have to make their way to the airport in an hour and get going.

We had a historical problem with CAW and the paramedics who refused to get on a number of our SA carriers because of duty time and duty rest and they didn't like the equipment or they thought there was an endangerment to their safety. So there was a negotiation with CAW in which I believe they came to an agreement that they wouldn't be forced to go on a standing offer agreement carrier. So that's changed a bit there.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Mr. Zimmer wanted some more time. How much has he got?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Two minutes, Mr. Zimmer.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Can we look, then, at the—
Interjection.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. He actually wanted the two minutes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Two minutes, Mr. Leal.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I just had to step out momentarily.

Mr. Frank Klees: I think your two minutes are up.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thank you, Mr. Klees, through the Chair.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Through you to Mr. Potter: Mr. Potter, as chief operating officer for Ornge, were you involved at all in the decision to establish a satellite operation at Oshawa Municipal Airport?

Mr. Rick Potter: In the selection of the airport, yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: You were. Did the city of Oshawa provide any incentives for Ornge to establish at Oshawa Municipal Airport?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Through you, Mr. Chair, could you detail those incentives for me?

Mr. Rick Potter: To be honest with you, I can't remember, but there were incentives.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Through you, Mr. Chair, could you bring that information back to this committee? Or who would have that information for me to get my hands on?

Mr. Rick Potter: Jim Feeley.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Jim who?

Mr. Rick Potter: Jim Feeley is the VP of aviation at Ornge.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Jim Feeley?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Through you, Mr. Chair, were you aware that at Oshawa Municipal Airport for the longest time there was a curfew of 11 p.m. for takeoff and landings?

Mr. Rick Potter: I was very aware, Mr. Leal. As a matter of fact, Oshawa was certainly not an airport of my choice—on the analysis. It doesn't have an instrument landing system. I can't get down below I think it was 350 feet on the GPS approach there.

In my previous career that was earlier referred to, I was responsible for basically all the air traffic control towers in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario. Oshawa was one of them. It had probably one of the loudest noise complaint communities of any of the airports I dealt with.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time. You'll get another five minutes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I have some more questions to ask.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very good. We'll move to Mr. Klees. You have 17½ minutes this time, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Potter, I'd like to focus on the medical interiors file. Can you tell me who was on that team to deal with the medical interiors, determine the design and also do the negotiation for that?

Mr. Rick Potter: Of the AW139?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Rick Potter: The singular point of contact for all of the interiors on the fixed and rotor was Steve Farquhar. He worked for Tom Lepine. I believe there were two medics on one committee. I believe one fellow's name is Wade Durham—don't quote me on that—from Toronto Island. And one of the physicians went over; I'm not sure of the physician's name. I believe Tom Lepine went as well.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was Dr. Sawadsky in any way involved in this? He was the medical director, was he not?

Mr. Rick Potter: He was. I don't believe Dr. Sawadsky went to Switzerland. I believe Sawadsky was involved in the process very much.

Mr. Frank Klees: He was on the team.

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can you tell me who did go to Switzerland?

1420

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe it was Farquhar, Lepine, another medical doctor and two paramedics.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was their purpose for going to Switzerland?

Mr. Rick Potter: The purpose of going to Switzerland, as I understood it, was that there was a full-size, completely detailed mock-up of the AW139. So they were able to actually use the mock-up of the AW139, take their concepts, sit in the aircraft, perform all the necessary exercises and procedures they do, and verify that they could be accomplished on the aircraft.

Mr. Frank Klees: That being the case, which sounds very practical, how do we fast-forward—you say there were two trips to Switzerland?

Mr. Rick Potter: My understanding was that there were two.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did this team ever report back to you, as COO, in terms of how things were going?

Mr. Rick Potter: No. They only reported through Tom Lepine.

Mr. Frank Klees: So there was a mock-up. They were able to get on the aircraft and were able to test it out, essentially. And then it got back here, and after—how many millions?

Mr. Rick Potter: Six million dollars for the interior, I believe.

Mr. Frank Klees: —six million dollars for the interior, the paramedics here found out they couldn't perform CPR.

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe that to be true.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can you help me with this? What am I missing? What was this team doing over there?

Mr. Rick Potter: I do not know. Aviation was not part of it. Actually, I think Jim Feeley went on one trip, and he tried to make a comment and was told to mind his own business.

Mr. Frank Klees: Here's my concern: We have all these experts and leadership people from Ornge making the trip to Switzerland, specifically for the purpose of helping to design and negotiate the medical interior for these new helicopters, and we end up with something that doesn't work.

The emergency health services branch of the Ministry of Health has a very specific mandate, and one of their responsibilities is to inspect any new medical equipment—ambulance, air ambulance—to ensure that it is up to standard. What is it that the emergency health services branch did to ensure that these specifications were up to standard?

Mr. Rick Potter: I have no idea.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you ever hear from the emergency health services branch?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: To your knowledge—

Mr. Rick Potter: Well, I heard there was a fellow doing an investigation—I think it was in January. That was the first I ever heard of it.

Mr. Frank Klees: In January of this year?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was he investigating?

Mr. Rick Potter: There had been 25—there had been a number of fatalities onboard the aircraft, and he was investigating. That's the first I heard.

Mr. Frank Klees: There were a number of fatalities on the aircraft, and that's what he is investigating?

Mr. Rick Potter: That's my understanding.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. As the chief operating officer—I'm just trying to get a sense of how engaged you, personally, were in this responsibility that you have—did you ever question why you haven't seen someone from the emergency health services branch of the Ministry of Health on-site?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, because that's solely the responsibility of Tom Lepine and Steve Farquhar. My assumption would be that they—they were insistent, for example, on doing a medical acceptance of the interior of the aircraft in Philadelphia. My assumption, and aviation's assumption—and they were very adamant and strident about the fact that, "This is operations; we will design and we will do this"—was that they would manage that particular portfolio.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you made the assumption that they would have had the appropriate interaction with the emergency health services branch and that everything was up to standard with the Ministry of Health standards?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct. We were essentially told to mind our own business. Our interface came, and the point was, is the interior compliant with Transport Canada regulations?

Mr. Frank Klees: In testimony here, the Deputy Minister of Health said in no uncertain terms that they were misled. I asked him very specifically about the medical interiors, and we had been led to believe that it was Dr. Sawadsky who had the lead as the medical director.

Mr. Rick Potter: That's correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: So I asked the deputy why they didn't do their job, and he, in his response—I'll just read it to you. I said, "Where was the Ministry of Health?" His response was, "We were given that assurance by that same medical director"—now, I had mentioned Dr. Sawadsky. He said, "We were given that assurance by that same medical director that the interiors were sufficient, and it wasn't until a complaint was lodged via our communications centre on or about July 2011 that we discovered that that indeed was not true. We were misled." Those are the deputy's words. He goes on to say, "We launched an investigation. I understand that actions have been taken to get a short-term correction."

Now, when the deputy minister said that he was misled, can you give me a sense of who at Ornge would have misled him?

Mr. Rick Potter: I can tell you it was not myself; it was nobody in aviation. We never had any contact. We never had any questions from him.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can you suggest who we might speak to or call to this committee who might be able to enlighten us on that issue?

Mr. Rick Potter: Again, everything I've seen to do with any medical interiors—the coordination of medical interiors, the design of medical interiors, the RFIs, RFQs, RFPs and what I would associate with medical interiors—were the purview of Lepine and Farquhar.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you very much.

Safety was a priority. You just said earlier in your testimony that whenever you went to Dr. Mazza for funding for moving forward on safety issues, it was always a priority. Can I ask you, then, who was responsible for the policy—a very specific policy—for understaffing crews? I understand that that was put in place specifically to save money. Whose responsibility was that?

Mr. Rick Potter: Understaffing paramedic crews?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Rick Potter: It would be Farquhar and Lepine. It has nothing to do with aviation. As long as I've got two people up in the pointy end of the airplane, I've done my job.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. You just made reference—and this is very timely today, because you said Ornge always has five crews available per aircraft.

Mr. Rick Potter: That's our desirable staffing. I'm not saying we have it 24 hours a day, every day of the week, but that's certainly what we aim for.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. You're aware of the incident that happened here today, just north of Toronto?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, I'm not.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, let me share this with you, and I'd like to get your sense as someone who intimately understands the process and staffing, and the standards. There was a collision earlier today that happened at about 6:30 in the morning. Local EMS arrived on the scene. They had to extricate one of the drivers from the vehicle. They put a call in to Ornge for an air ambulance. They were told by the dispatcher at Ornge that there was no crew available and they wouldn't be able to get a crew until 7:15. I understand that the reason for that is that they just weren't available. The previous crew had booked off. Yet, when I hear what you're saying, that it's Ornge's policy to always have five crew per aircraft available, I'd just like to know how it can happen that—it seems that Ontarians now have to book their emergencies in accordance with the shifts at Ornge.

Mr. Rick Potter: It would be inappropriate for me to comment on the occurrence of today. The staffing for an aircraft we use is normally five crews per aircraft or 10 to 11 per aircraft at a base. That's not to say that you have 10 or 11 available at any given time because, obviously, there are people on days off and there are certain regulatory requirements as to length of duty days, as to number of days you can work etc. But we do strive to have redundancy and backup in the system.

Again, being away from it for a couple of months, things may have changed. It's a tough process on the rotor side, the helicopter side, which you're referring to. We lost some people in transition, which we had counted on.

We had fully anticipated getting 80 pilots from CHL. We didn't get that number. I can't give you the number that they got right now, but I can tell you on the fixed-wing side, we had initially projected for a 25% to 30% turnover rate because they're smaller aircraft; people are ambitious and they move on. Our turnover rate in the first two years of operation was only 2%, which is a record in the industry. We retained most of our pilots.

Mr. Frank Klees: But apparently, that's not happening now.

Mr. Rick Potter: I'm not aware of what's going on now, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, I'll tell you, we're getting a great deal of feedback from the front line, from paramedics, as well as pilots, that they're very unhappy with how things are being handled at Ornge, that pilots are leaving, paramedics are leaving. They're distressed at the circumstances under which they're working, and the concern, of course, that everyone has is that you can have all the helicopters you want; if you don't have the pilots, if you don't have the paramedics, you don't have an emergency service. So, are you aware of that personnel shortage problem that we've got?

Mr. Rick Potter: No. I left working in the office at Ornge on March 1, so what's happened in that interim I'm not sure. What has happened in the general aviation marketplace is that there's been a fairly significant hiring uptake by Porter, by the Air Canada startup, by Jazz, a number of them, and, really, starting off with a single-engine turboprop is generally kind of the start point for a pilot in their career, and we know that a lot of people will progress through that.

The disadvantage we have in Ornge is that—I don't understand why, but there's a number of people who would not prefer to live in northern Ontario, and so if there's an opportunity to move to southern Ontario, they take that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can I ask, just again to shift to the Pilatus deal, were you involved in that purchase agreement, the negotiating—

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was your role in negotiating that deal?

Mr. Rick Potter: Essentially, kind of a technical representative.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Did you make a specific recommendation based on that technical analysis to Ornge—

Mr. Rick Potter: To recommend that type of aircraft?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Rick Potter: I did, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. And did you declare a conflict when you made that recommendation?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's my understanding that you're very good personal friends with Frank Kelner.

Mr. Rick Potter: No, I'm not.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're not?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you know Mr. Kelner?

Mr. Rick Potter: Sure I do. It's Thunder Bay.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mr. Rick Potter: There's Thunder Bay and then in the aviation community is probably 30 or 40 people. I know Cliff Friesen and Harvey Friesen and all the rest of them, too.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't think Cliff would say I'm his friend, though.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you negotiate the $300,000 donation back to Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: It had nothing to do with me.

Mr. Frank Klees: Pardon?

Mr. Rick Potter: I had nothing to do with it.

Mr. Frank Klees: But you're aware that it did take place?

Mr. Rick Potter: Actually, no. I know that Chris tried to institute a policy, I think, where he went after primary people for something like a 2% donation back. But I had nothing to do with that.

Mr. Frank Klees: So are you saying that it was a matter of business dealings that if you did business with Ornge, that it was expected that you would kick back to the charity a certain percentage of that deal?

Mr. Rick Potter: I wasn't involved. I don't have the answer to that. But further to your initial question, the aircraft weren't purchased from Kelner aircraft. They were purchased from Pilatus in Switzerland. Kelner had nothing to do with it. As a matter of fact, they were kind of upset that we didn't buy it through him. They did do some of the maintenance stuff because they're the maintenance centre for Canada.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about two and a half minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to just spend a couple of minutes, which is all I have, regarding your background. You were with Nav Canada as an air traffic controller. That was your background, and then you were at Confederation College. Can you tell us the circumstances under which you left Confederation College?

Mr. Rick Potter: Sure. I went to Confederation College for five years and it was just about five years and I finished. My task was to build the Aviation Centre of Excellence and to bring the three faculties together in that facility.

Mr. Frank Klees: We will be hearing from Patricia Lang from the college here and we will be asking her about the circumstances under which you left Confederation College. Do you have anything to add to your answer?

Mr. Rick Potter: No. Patricia Lang and I had differences of opinion, but my intent was never to stay past five years anyway.

Mr. Frank Klees: I see. But you were terminated there?

Mr. Rick Potter: I left Confederation College at about the five-year mark, which was what my plan was.

Mr. Frank Klees: But the circumstances were that you were fired; is that correct?

Mr. Rick Potter: The circumstances were that I had agreed to work for five years, and I worked for five years.

Mr. Frank Klees: What experience prior to coming into Ornge did you have in starting up a new airline?

Mr. Rick Potter: The short answer is none. The longer answer is that I've been involved in aviation as a commercial pilot for—well, as I say, 43 years. There's not an airport in northwestern or northern Ontario that I haven't personally flown into. I—

Mr. Frank Klees: But there's a difference between being a pilot and managing an entire fleet and managing an airline as the COO with all of these responsibilities that you had there.

Mr. Rick Potter: If I could finish, I managed an aviation operation and air traffic control of almost 500 employees—somewhere short of 500 employees.

Mr. Frank Klees: That's air traffic control. That's not—

Mr. Rick Potter: That's aviation. It's a regulatory-based environment, and I was the accountable executive at Confederation College for the aviation program.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you get a sense at any time that you might be underqualified for this huge—

Mr. Rick Potter: Absolutely none.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. We'll move on to the NDP, and you have six minutes each for this round.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. A whole bunch of little questions that have nothing to do with one another in any particular order. I'll start with, when you were talking about some of the other projects, you mentioned projects for Saskatchewan, AirMed for Alabama, Fort Lauderdale, and then you concluded this by saying, "Mr. Apps had designed a structure which I challenged." I'm curious to hear more about what the structure is that had been presented to you that had been designed by Mr. Apps, and what are some of the challenges that you brought?

Mr. Rick Potter: Well, the challenge is compliance with—in the United States, first of all, it's the DOT, the Department of Transport. Their role is to look at new businesses, whether it takes away from American business, whether it's going to impact on American business. One of their mandates is, they're very adamant about ownership, clarity of ownership and who is operating and managing the aviation enterprise.

You know, Virgin Airlines spent $10 million and still couldn't get through the DOT. It's a fairly significant hurdle to cross. Mr. Apps designed a system which—to call it complex is being generous. Basically I said to him, at the end of the day the word they look at is "control," and if at any point in this process, in the control chain, there's less than 75% US control, they won't buy it. My interpretation of what he presented was that that would not be in compliance with the DOT.

M^{me} France G  linas: So, did you ever question why such a complex corporate structure had been designed? What was the idea? Like, why put yourself through that much time, effort and energy? What's behind this?

Mr. Rick Potter: I do not know.

M^{me} France G  linas: Did he ever explain the corporate structure to you?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

M^{me} France G  linas: No? No. Although you didn't know the full structure, you knew enough to say that we have to look at control at each and every one of those—

Mr. Rick Potter: What happened was, there was a meeting with Chris, and Chris said, "Well, we're going to do this." I just said, "Whoa, what are you doing here?" Then I said, "I don't think you can do that, and I've got to see this." That's when I said, "This isn't going to work."

M^{me} France G  linas: And what is it that you have seen? What did they show you when you said, "This is not going to work"?

Mr. Rick Potter: They showed me an organizational chart, which had a number of corporate entities and who owned this and reported over here—I can't remember all the figures, but there was like 25% over here and this went to something like 2%. I said, "It doesn't matter, here, you've got this—it can't work." It won't—no pun intended—it won't fly.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And you were right; it crashed quite badly.

Another question had to do with, when you met Mr. Mazza, you described him as an impressive guy. Do you think he was a good choice for the CEO of Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: I've often thought of that. I think he was a good choice at the beginning, and I think as a visionary he had a tremendous amount that could be accomplished. But if you could put Chris over in the visionary thinking, idea, conceptual mode over here and have somebody who was—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Operational.

Mr. Rick Potter: —perhaps more traditionally business-oriented, it would have been better.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It would have been better. One of the reasons we were given for Dr. Mazza making $1.4 million and having been given personal loans was that other agencies were trying to recruit him, and in order to keep him in Ontario, we needed to pay that much money. You know the aviation business really well. You've been in it. You're known in the aviation business very well also. Who would have wanted Mr. Mazza's expertise in air ambulance?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think Chris's forte was not so much aviation, but it certainly was in emergency transport medicine. My understanding is that there is not a large number of people who are both emergentologists and have an MBA, and have 20 years' experience in the emergency business. So I think he was one of a very select few who could do that particular part of the job.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know if there's a market out there for—there are not too many agencies that offer air ambulance either.

Mr. Rick Potter: Is there a market for it? I don't know. Chris firmly believed there was.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. To my colleague.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So when you were looking at the chart and you said, "You've got this here; this is not going to work," what did you mean by that?

Mr. Rick Potter: It would not meet DOT approval.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Besides DOT approval and in general the complex corporate structure, what else? Were there any other problems you noticed with it?

Mr. Rick Potter: I didn't analyze the corporate structure; I didn't analyze the cash flow. I was at a couple of meetings; I made a couple of comments. I mean, they had a growth rate that was better than Google's. When I looked at the lines, I said, "Where does that come from? Have we got any proof of that?" I never saw any proof.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Beyond that it was complex and you didn't see any proof of it, did you raise any other concerns about the structure—the way it was set up?

Mr. Rick Potter: No, because it wasn't my concern. I dealt with the aviation aspect, and I raised concerns about that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Again, besides the DOT, any other aviation concerns you had about the structure?

Mr. Rick Potter: As it exists today?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Pardon me?

Mr. Rick Potter: As it exists today?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: As it existed when you were looking at the chart and you said, "I don't agree with this. This is not going to meet DOT approval."

Mr. Rick Potter: That wasn't so much a safety thing. It was just regulatory compliance. It was not going to happen the way they wanted to do it. Chris was insistent that he had to have control. Again, that flies in the face of everything the DOT and the FAA say: You can't have control if you're a foreign operator. It's the same thing in Canada: You can't have a US entity come in and have control of a Canadian corporation. That was really the crux of the matter on that one.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I want to come back to what we call kickbacks, but I'll try to find a better word to describe this exactly. We're looking right now at money that the Auditor General has identified for marketing services that looks very much like we paid too much to Agusta so that they would give money back to a for-profit company to do questionable work. Is it common in the industry, when you go out and purchase whatever you need for your aircraft? Is this something you have seen—not that you have done, but that you know is happening?

Mr. Rick Potter: All I can say is that I did not understand going from 144 to 152.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time on this question. We'll move to the government. Mr. Leal, go ahead.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Chair, through you to Mr. Potter, I want to go back and pursue the decision to go to Oshawa. You indicated to me that the city of Oshawa put an incentive package on the table. Is that correct?

Mr. Rick Potter: That is correct.

Mr. Jeff Leal: It was a poor choice to go there, in terms of aviation and in terms of potential patient response because of the curfews at Oshawa airport?

Mr. Rick Potter: All I can say is in response to the aviation side; I didn't deal with the patient side of it. But on the aviation side, I had genuine concerns with Oshawa. They assured us that that would not be a problem—the noise abatement—but my experience has been that that lasts as long as that council is in power and subsequent councils can change it under pressure. That was what scared me.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Do you know the content of the incentive package put forward by the city of Oshawa?

Mr. Rick Potter: No. I think there was incentive by the city. I believe it may have been reflected in fuel pricing or advantage on the fuel pricing at the airport, but you can't quote me on that. We'll try to get you the information for it.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Did you advise against the decision to go to Oshawa?

Mr. Rick Potter: I did initially, and I did subsequently, yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Who made the decision to go to Oshawa?

Mr. Rick Potter: To be honest with you, has a definite decision been made about Oshawa? When I left, there hadn't been—

Mr. Jeff Leal: Who made it? If you advised against, who made the decision, obviously overruling you on technical merit?

Mr. Rick Potter: It would have been the COO of operations and the CEO.

Mr. Jeff Leal: What position does Jim Feeley hold at Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: VP of aviation.

Mr. Jeff Leal: How long has he been there?

Mr. Rick Potter: Three years? Four years?

Mr. Jeff Leal: Was he responsible for the decision to go to Oshawa?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't believe so.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Who was, then?

Mr. Rick Potter: It was made by operations.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Dr. Mazza made the decision?

Mr. Rick Potter: Dr. Mazza supported the Hamilton decision on the initial go around. Now, the subsequent decision-making—I'm just trying to think of how this thing played out. After there was some reconsideration, operations wanted to go to Oshawa. I believe operations were the people who pushed Oshawa, which is Lepine and Farquhar.

Mr. Jeff Leal: So there is documentation, correspondence that would have been going back and forth in terms of the bid for Oshawa?

Mr. Rick Potter: I believe so, yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: I have a couple more questions. How much were you paid as a board member of Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: I think I was paid $1,000 a meeting.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Did you serve on the Ornge board at the time it approved Mr. Kelly Mitchell and the Pathway Group's retainer?

Mr. Rick Potter: No.

Mr. Jeff Leal: If I want to go back to the Oshawa thing for a moment, did you provide a technical overview of the Oshawa operation to determine that it wasn't a good choice?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Do you have that information? Could it be made available to this committee?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't have it, but Ornge has it and they certainly should be able to make it available.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Who would we go to at Ornge to acquire all this correspondence and technical information?

Mr. Rick Potter: I'd start with Jim Feeley.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Jim Feeley?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: I have no further questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mrs. Sandals?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And if we could make a request, then—if I understand you correctly, sir, you don't personally have the documentation around Oshawa, but Ornge would.

Mr. Rick Potter: That's correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So if we could get a request for Ornge to provide all the documentation, correspondence, emails, whatever internal reports or analysis there is—

Mr. Rick Potter: Sorry, but there's sort of two parts to this. The first part would be we were charged with doing an analysis of the GTA/southern Ontario area to find a base to replace Toronto Island. A decision had been made to replace Toronto Island. We did an analysis on every airport we could find to find the most suitable airport and Hamilton won, hands down; unequivocally the best choice at that particular point in time. Subsequent to that—and that was verified by operations at that time; that was also verified by the medical committee at that time, the medical advisory committee, Dr. Sawadsky.

Subsequent to that a change had been made, and there were further negotiations, I believe, with Oshawa. Prior to my leaving, there was still some debate over—I believe there were a number of employees at the Toronto Island who would have preferred Oshawa, and they renegotiated or reopened some of that and went back.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, so if we could get the documentation, correspondence, analysis around the decision by Ornge—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And our clerk has been writing furiously here—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —yeah—by Ornge and the Hamilton versus Oshawa and the decision to go to Oshawa, in particular any incentives that were offered in any meetings with respect to Oshawa.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Any other questions?

Mr. Jeff Leal: I have a quick question.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, Mr. Leal.

Mr. Jeff Leal: If there was all this technical information in terms of response times to go to Hamilton and then there was a 360-degree change to go to Oshawa, Mr. Chair, who exerted pressure to have it move to Oshawa?

Mr. Rick Potter: I don't know that there was pressure so much. In the initial mix, we were charged with finding the most suitable airport that would operate our Pilatus aircraft, our AW139 aircraft and a potential business jet. What the business jet did is it essentially—number one, it automatically eliminates Toronto Island. So it limited a number of airports because of length of runway etc. and some prohibitions. We looked at a number of issues and it's all detailed there, right from air traffic control services to weather reporting, length of runways, noise abatement procedures, availability for snow removal—all of those kinds of things. As I said, unequivocally, Hamilton was way ahead of any other airport.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Chair—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You've got 30 seconds left.

1450

Mr. Jeff Leal: To Mr. Potter: Do you find it passing strange that with all the technical support to go to another location that you ended up in Oshawa, from your professional perspective?

Mr. Rick Potter: Yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Yes. I'm finished, Mr. Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. We'll move to Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Potter, you mentioned earlier that Ornge audits, obviously, all of your service providers, the people who contract—

Mr. Rick Potter: Including Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: I was going to ask, who audits Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: We're audited on three levels. We audit ourselves as part of the safety management system.

Mr. Frank Klees: Right.

Mr. Rick Potter: We're audited by the Ministry of Natural Resources, and we're audited by independent auditors.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, I find it interesting that Ornge audits itself.

Mr. Rick Potter: Every organization does that as a part of a pre-audit process. It's part of the safety management system, to go through and see whether you're compliant.

Mr. Frank Klees: Has that worked well?

Mr. Rick Potter: It works well in every organization, as long as it's not the sole and only source. We're the only organization that's audited by two other independent sources.

Mr. Frank Klees: When was the last time MNR audited Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: MNR started an audit, I believe, in May, and before I left, I bugged them. We still didn't even have an audit report.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, I'd like to get a copy of that latest audit report by MNR.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. So noted.

Mr. Frank Klees: When was the last time that Transport Canada audited Ornge?

Mr. Rick Potter: Transport Canada was in. Initially they do—when we started the Pilatus operation, they did an initial check, and I'm not sure what their date for the next one is.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you recall, overall, the results of that audit? On a scale of one to 10, with one being not very good to 10 being very good, where would it have—

Mr. Rick Potter: It was probably about an 8.5, and that's a subjective opinion. There were some discrepancies in the training files, but in any audit, including Air Canada and any airline in Canada, you go through and you'll find on the maintenance records and stuff minor things. But as far as the operation goes, there were kudos. The independent auditor that we had in the fall, his report said it was the best airline operation he'd ever seen.

Mr. Frank Klees: That's interesting, given what we know and given the rest of the story. Chair, I think we should get a copy of that Transport Canada audit as well.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So noted.

Mr. Frank Klees: Since the last Transport Canada audit, Mr. Potter, would you agree that, given that all of the operations now are under the Ornge umbrella, whereas previously it was CHL that was providing, certainly on the helicopter side, very experienced staff and expertise—as of March 31, all of those functions, 100% of them, are now under Ornge. Do you think it would be appropriate to have Transport Canada come in now and do an audit to see just how well equipped and how qualified the people in key positions are to delivering our air ambulance service—

Mr. Rick Potter: Certainly, it would be. Number one is that every key person at CHL now works for Ornge; okay? That's the first part. The second part is Transport Canada, as a matter of regulation, within the first six to 12 months of operation will come in and do an audit.

Mr. Frank Klees: Except you said earlier that many of the individuals who were highly qualified, whom you expected would come across through the transfer, chose not to.

Mr. Rick Potter: On the pilot side.

Mr. Frank Klees: On the pilot—well, I would say that's a pretty significant part of the operation, wouldn't you?

Mr. Rick Potter: Pilots are critical to that operation.

Mr. Frank Klees: Right. I suppose that given the fact that we have really a very different organization today than we did pre-March 31, it's important for us to know what Transport Canada's assessment of that organization is.

Mr. Rick Potter: I think it's important to know Transport Canada's assessment, but I disagree with you completely that it's a very different organization. It's not. When we designed the transition, it was designed so that there was the absolute minimum of change and a minimum of disruption. The same reporting systems, the same key personnel positions were all retained; the same policies, same procedures, all retained. The idea was, and it worked out tremendously well, actually, that it was essentially transparent to an employee whether they worked for CHL in February or Ornge in May—that it was any different.

Mr. Frank Klees: When it comes down to the qualified people who are in those positions, can we get a list of the individuals and their qualifications who were on the job while CHL was operating and what the staffing complement looks like now in terms of positions and qualifications?

Mr. Rick Potter: Sure. I can't do it, but Ornge would—it's a matter of record. HR would have that.

Mr. Frank Klees: So, Chair, we should request that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So noted.

Mr. Frank Klees: I think it's important for us to get a sense of what the comparative complement of expertise and qualifications is in the organization.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a minute.

Mr. Frank Klees: I have a minute. Mr. Potter, I want to thank you for coming here today. You've been very helpful. As much as I wish I could say that I was encouraged, I'm really not. I think that we have a great distance to go before we can express confidence in our air ambulance service. You mentioned earlier in your comment that you felt that what went wrong here was politics. I'd suggest that I think what went wrong was greed. I think there were a lot of people at the trough here who took a concept and, quite frankly, abused it. We're dealing now with the fallout of that. We'll see over the next few weeks where this takes us.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for making the trip down from Thunder Bay today for your coming before the committee, Mr. Potter. It's appreciated.

There is one matter before we recess. Mr. Potter had requested reasonable airfare for the trip. The subcommittee has discussed this already. Do I have agreement of the committee for this? Agreed? Agreed. Okay.

Thank you very much. This committee is adjourned.

The committee adjourned at 1457.

ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE

MR. LUIS NAVAS

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'd like to call this meeting to order. Our first witness this morning is Luis Navas. Mr. Navas, if you would come forward, please. Thank you. Just to confirm that you received the letter of information for witnesses coming before the committee?

Mr. Luis Navas: I did, thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk has an oath for you to swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): The Bible is in front of you there, Mr. Navas.

Mr. Navas, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Luis Navas: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. You have six minutes for an opening statement, and then we'll go through the parties for questioning.

Mr. Luis Navas: Thank you very much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're welcome.

Mr. Luis Navas: My name is Luis Navas. I left the board of Ornge over three years ago in 2009. Over the last 20 years, I've advised on executive compensation, corporate governance and human resource strategy to more than 200 corporate boards around the world. I am also an established business professional in investment banking and capital underwriting.

I volunteered to appear before this committee to provide clarity about my involvement with Ornge from the year 2006 to mid-2011. In 2006, Rainer Beltzner, the chair of Ornge, approached me to join the Ornge board. From 2006 to 2009, when I was on the Ornge board and chair of the compensation committee, there were no for-profit legal entities.

I can tell you that the not-for-profit board I sat on reviewed and made decisions with respect to all matters of executive compensation with the highest standards of rigour and accountability. Over the four-year period, the CEO's compensation increased by approximately $200,000. The increases were based on the best corporate governance practices. We evaluated comparative compensation levels provided by the sunshine list of hospitals and P3 organizations, and competitive compensation levels were considered for the CEO in light of the increased mandate of Ornge by the government.

The board prepared a detailed CEO performance scorecard every year that improved the level of services, budget efficiencies, and the overall effectiveness of Ornge. The board capped CEO compensation each and every year.

I left the Ornge board in 2009, and that was the last time that I had anything to do with the board's decision-making process for executive compensation. At that time, the CEO of Ornge was earning about $550,000 in total compensation. The CEO's compensation was approved by the board and deemed appropriate.

In spring 2010, several months after leaving Ornge, Odgers Berndtson, a search firm, contacted me because I was considered to be the best candidate for the newly created Ornge Global to establish business partnerships outside of Ontario. I was never an employee or executive at Ornge, only a third-party adviser. I accepted that this adviser's position was paid for for approximately 14 months. The retainer I received was for about $175,000 in 2011 plus warrants. Maria Renzella, Ornge Global's COO, advised me that I was being paid from the revenue generated by Ornge Global and not by Ontario taxpayers funding Ornge. I was asked to work with Ornge's marketing group as well as David Santangeli from Morrison Park Advisors. This is the firm that did that the $275-million bond offering and the Ornge office lease-back financing.

My role was to reinforce this group's efforts by identifying development opportunities, arranging meetings with potential development partners, linking Ornge to a group that could set up an underwriting capital pool. I had no involvement with the AgustaWestland marketing services agreement, but I did provide advice on a global endorsement partnership with AgustaWestland.

The government supported Ornge Global, and I base this understanding on the numerous reports and presentation papers that many members of the government had seen, which I have provided for you today. I was advised that the vision for Ornge Global came about because of the current air ambulance service gap that exists in Ontario. There was a study that Ornge commissioned by Hay Group that identified this gap in air ambulance services of over 9,000 Ontario patients per year. It was my understanding that the underlying premise for creating a for-profit Ornge entity was that a portion of the profits would be channelled to additional resources for the benefit of Ontarians. This was seen as the best way to reduce the significant service gap and lack of funding.

Know that I am far from suggesting that nothing went wrong at Ornge. I fully support the work of this committee to get to the bottom of what went wrong, which is why I'm here today on a voluntary basis from the United States.

In order to improve public sector accountability in the future, I have put some thought to what would help the government avoid future situations like this.

Apply due diligence with compensation when considering public-private partnerships. If you refer to the document I have tabled in front of you with regard to the CEO of CHL, CHL was in a private-public partnership with the government, and its CEO received three times what Mazza has been reported as making, almost $10 million in the last five years alone.

Evaluate conflicts of interest that may develop with compensation consultants. I tabled a CEO contract with you here, where the firm Hay Group is sharing the CEO role at one hospital in Ontario amongst five Hay Group compensation consultants and operational consultants, as well as a booklet of over 100 other examples of conflict of interest.

Pay closer attention to the credentials of compensation consultants. There are consultants who have never practised before taking on senior advisory roles. Hugessen Consulting, who actually educated the Ornge board on executive compensation through a directors' education program, is a case in point. Two of the three founding partners of Hugessen had no prior experience in executive compensation consulting before they took on senior advisory roles. Without the professionalization of the compensation consulting industry, the barriers to entry are non-existent.

I believe greater transparency, accountability and rigour with compensation governance is essential so that what may have happened here with Ornge does not happen again.

With all that said, I hope that people realize that running an airline is complicated, running a helicopter company is challenging, and running a multi-base land and air hospital across a province that is more than 10 times the size of the state of New York is daunting. Ornge is all of those organizations wrapped into one. It's an extremely complex organization to successfully manage, but a service that Ontarians deserve.

I hope my testimony has given you further insight into making this critical component of health care in Ontario better, and I support the work that this committee does.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much, and we'll move to the opposition first for questioning. Mr Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Navas, did you read the Auditor General's report on the Ornge air ambulance service?

Mr. Luis Navas: Yes, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: According to the Auditor General, this organization is anything but well-run: serious problems in terms of patient care, serious issues in terms of disclosure and in terms of return on investment for the people of Ontario. That's why we're here, by the way. If what you said about Ornge was true, we wouldn't be here.

I'd like to ask you this: You say that you were with Ornge from 2006 until 2011, but then you said you left in 2009. When you first joined Ornge, you were there as a director. Is that correct?

Mr. Luis Navas: That is correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you were there as the chair of the governance and compensation committee?

Mr. Luis Navas: That is correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: That is correct. When did you leave the board?

Mr. Luis Navas: In 2009.

Mr. Frank Klees: And when you left the board, what position did you then take on with Ornge?

Mr. Luis Navas: This is in my capacity as an adviser to Ornge?

Mr. Frank Klees: So you're saying you were strictly an adviser to Ornge.

Mr. Luis Navas: That's correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you said you had nothing to do with any of the for-profit entities of Ornge.

Mr. Luis Navas: No. I said that at the time when I was on the board there were no for-profit entities.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you have anything to do as a director in terms of decision-making with regard to the plans that Ornge had for the for-profit entities?

Mr. Luis Navas: No, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: That never came before the board?

Mr. Luis Navas: Not between 2006 and 2009.

Mr. Frank Klees: And when you took on your role as an adviser, as you put it, who hired you for that position?

Mr. Luis Navas: That was Dr. Mazza.

Mr. Frank Klees: Dr. Mazza himself.

Mr. Luis Navas: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was your compensation when you were on the board?

Mr. Luis Navas: I believe we received $1,000 per meeting and a retainer of $10,000 per year.

Mr. Frank Klees: Ten thousand dollars per diem, so annually?

Mr. Luis Navas: No, not $10,000 per diem. A $10,000 annual retainer, plus $1,000 per meeting.

Mr. Frank Klees: And how many meetings would you have?

Mr. Luis Navas: At that time, there would probably be about six to eight meetings a year.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. So your total compensation between the years 2006 and 2009, as a director, would have been what, annually?

Mr. Luis Navas: I'd have to look back, but it was based on those numbers.

Mr. Frank Klees: Approximately.

Mr. Luis Navas: That would work out to around $100,000, I guess.

Mr. Frank Klees: So, $100,000. How much was the chair of the board making at that time?

Mr. Luis Navas: I don't know.

Mr. Frank Klees: You run the compensation committee. You don't know what the chair of the board was earning?

Mr. Luis Navas: I would guess he was probably around $40,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: But why would you say you didn't know? You were the chair of the compensation and governance committee of the board.

Mr. Luis Navas: Because it changed every year.

Mr. Frank Klees: Pardon?

Mr. Luis Navas: Because it changed every year.

Mr. Frank Klees: How much was it—

Mr. Luis Navas: I would guess about $40,000, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Forty thousand. That's not the number that he told us that he was earning.

Mr. Luis Navas: I'm giving you the dates from 2006 to 2009.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was your title when you left and you were taken on into a new role by Dr. Mazza? What title were you operating on as an adviser?

Mr. Luis Navas: There was no title. It was "adviser."

Mr. Frank Klees: So you assumed that role of adviser from 2009 to what date?

Mr. Luis Navas: No, I believe I indicated it was spring of 2010 to about summer of 2011.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you recall a meeting that you had with the Cleveland Clinic regarding Ornge Global?

Mr. Luis Navas: Which one specifically? There were a couple.

Mr. Frank Klees: You had many meetings?

Mr. Luis Navas: I think there were two.

Mr. Frank Klees: Why don't you tell me about those?

Mr. Luis Navas: There was one in Cleveland with members of the Cleveland Clinic. There was one other one with one of their satellite offices.

Mr. Frank Klees: Where did that take place?

Mr. Luis Navas: That was in Weston, Florida.

Mr. Frank Klees: Weston, Florida?

Mr. Luis Navas: Correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: During that time that you were working as an adviser, where were you living?

Mr. Luis Navas: Half the time—originally, when I started, I was living in Oakville, Ontario. Then in the spring of 2011, I moved to the United States.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did Ornge pay for any of your moving costs or living costs while you were living in—

Mr. Luis Navas: I believe they paid for my airfare on my first trip down, correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: And subsequent to that, all of your living expenses were looked after by yourself?

Mr. Luis Navas: That's correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what were you being paid in that position as an adviser?

Mr. Luis Navas: In 2011, I was paid $175,000 plus warrants.

Mr. Frank Klees: Plus bonus? And how much was the bonus?

Mr. Luis Navas: Plus warrants.

Mr. Frank Klees: Tell me about that.

Mr. Luis Navas: Warrants were a form of compensation in terms of kind of like a stock option, I guess, on the increased value of Ornge Global.

Mr. Frank Klees: What would the value of those warrants have been?

Mr. Luis Navas: Zero.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. What was the potential of those warrants?

Mr. Luis Navas: I think they probably could have accumulated to about $200,000 over a five-year period.

Mr. Frank Klees: All right.

Do you recall writing a letter to Dr. Bernardo Fernandez of the Cleveland Clinic?

Mr. Luis Navas: I do.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's interesting: You say that you never had a title, but you signed that letter as chief operating officer of Ornge Global.

Mr. Luis Navas: I did not have a title. There was no employment agreement with me whatsoever.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, why would you have signed this letter?

Mr. Luis Navas: I don't know. I don't even know what you're referring to right now, to be honest.

Mr. Frank Klees: Clerk, if you wouldn't mind?

What we're getting at here is—I appreciate the fact that you've come here to clarify things, but by suggesting that you don't—

Mr. David Zimmer: Have you got copies there, Frank?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, it's being distributed. I've asked the clerk to make copies.

Interjections.

Mr. Frank Klees: I apologize. I just got a copy of that this morning.

My point is, Mr. Navas, you're a very experienced business person. You write interesting articles for global governance advisers, advising other companies worldwide about governance and how directors should be conducting themselves, and yet something as basic as your title—you tell us that you didn't have any formal arrangement with Ornge Global, and you don't even recall signing a letter. It was very clear from the reading of that letter—I'm sure that seeing it has probably refreshed your memory—that you were much more than an adviser. You were acting in a very senior capacity of Ornge Global. But having said that, in this article that you wrote called “The Risky Business of Executive Compensation and Banking”—do you recall writing this?

Mr. Luis Navas: If I could see that—you keep asking me to recall things, but it’d be great to see it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure. That’s a pretty striking title; I can’t imagine that you’d forget about this, but maybe we can pass that along. In that article, you say some very interesting things about the role of directors and responsibilities of boards. You refer, in that article—and, my colleagues, I apologize again; I just got that this morning and it’ll be circulated to you—to Lehman Brothers and Merrill Lynch as examples of lucrative compensation packages for CEOs that have embarrassed boards and forced directors to question the design of executive pay. Do you recall saying that? Is that—

Mr. Luis Navas: Now that I read it, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Obviously, that was somewhat prophetic because I think the board of Ornge, certainly, is embarrassed about the compensation that Dr. Mazza—are you familiar with—I know that you said that when you left, Dr. Mazza’s compensation was $550,000. Was that the base, or were there additional bonuses in addition to that?

Mr. Luis Navas: That was total compensation.

Mr. Frank Klees: And that was, at the time—I’m assuming that was in 2009.

Mr. Luis Navas: That’s correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: How many employees would Ornge have had at that time?

Mr. Luis Navas: I would guess around 200 or so at the time.

Mr. Frank Klees: About 200. And what would the annual budget of Ornge have been at that time?

Mr. Luis Navas: About $135 million.

Mr. Frank Klees: About $135 million. The current chair of the board, Dr. Barry McLellan, who is the president-CEO of a major hospital—they have some 10,000 staff and an annual budget of $850 million. You know what his compensation is?

Mr. Luis Navas: You surely are not comparing Ornge to a hospital.

Mr. Frank Klees: I am. It is a base hospital. I would suggest—

Mr. Luis Navas: I don’t think that’s a fair comparison whatsoever.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, I’m going to—

Mr. Luis Navas: Why don’t you compare it to CHL?

Mr. Frank Klees: No; I’m asking the question. I will ask you the question, and I’d appreciate a response. The fact of the matter is—and as a board member you should know—that there was a performance agreement between the Ministry of Health and Ornge that clearly designated it as a base hospital. Its functions are precisely that—very focused, of course, and very specialized. The fact is that it is an organization. Do you know what Dr. McLellan’s salary was and is?

Mr. Luis Navas: Not in 2008-09.

Mr. Frank Klees: It’s $700,000 today. Compared to $550,000—I think that for someone who is in the compensation business and compares organizations, I would suggest to you that there is quite a gap here. And there isn’t anyone who has come before this board—even current board members and former board members—who say that that compensation was justified.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have one minute left, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: You mentioned—

Mr. Luis Navas: Sorry, what compensation are you referring to “justified”?

Mr. Frank Klees: Either the $550,000—

Mr. Luis Navas: You’re saying that $550,000 was not justified?

Mr. Frank Klees: —or the more than $2 million of compensation.

Mr. Luis Navas: I can’t speak to the $2 million, but I think I have heard you say and talk about CHL and the comparisons of CHL to Ornge—

Mr. Frank Klees: Tell me the annual—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Please let him answer, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, he’s—you know, Chair, I’m sorry, but this is unfair. CHL—you tell me the size of that international corporation.

Mr. Luis Navas: They had the exact same operating budget as Ornge at that time.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you tell me whether, as a private corporation, it is fair to compare the Ornge organization, which is a not-for-profit, public service organization, not at all comparative to a private sector corporation—I suggest to you that for you to draw that comparison is in fact not being forthright with this committee.

Mr. Luis Navas: May I answer the question?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yeah, please do.

Mr. Luis Navas: Thank you. You’re absolutely right, but that’s one single data point. Just as it’s incorrect for you to say that Sunnybrook is the only example that you can compare the Ornge CEO pay back in—

Mr. Frank Klees: It isn’t the only one.

Mr. Luis Navas: Please let me answer the question. Thank you.

Mr. Frank Klees: It isn’t the only one.

Mr. Luis Navas: Well, that’s what you said. The approach is to look at, as I mentioned in my introduction, if you listened, a multiple list of organizations on the sunshine list back in 2009. The CHL example was actually never even used. It was used as a data point just for comparison purposes. But for you to make a statement that Ornge is only a base hospital—I’m sorry—is completely inaccurate. It is a multiple of things, as we’re learning—

Mr. Frank Klees: I did not—

Mr. Luis Navas: I am trying to answer your question, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: I did not say that.

Mr. Luis Navas: I am trying to answer your question.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, sir, let me tell you, you are a witness here and we have the right to ask you the questions that we feel are pertinent to the report that's before us, that we believe are pertinent to the mismanagement that has taken place and, quite frankly, that are pertinent to your role as a director and especially as chair of a compensation and governance committee of this organization. That's our role here.

Mr. Luis Navas: I agree; I agree. And I wish you would actually let the witness answer the question.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you're out of time. So I'll let you answer the question, then we'll move to the NDP, please.

Mr. Luis Navas: Thank you. Those are good points, Mr. Klees, but again, you're looking at just one single data point. Back in 2009—and in any situation, you need to look at multiple data points. Are you aware that back in 2009, the CEO of CHL was making over $1 million a year? And we—I am trying—

Mr. Frank Klees: That is totally irrelevant to what we are talking—

Mr. Luis Navas: I am trying to answer your question, sir. I'm trying to answer your question.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll move on, then, to the NDP, please. Go ahead, France.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. Good morning.

Mr. Luis Navas: Good morning.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You said in your opening comment that you felt that the government supported Ornge Global. That was in the comments you made. What do you base that on?

Mr. Luis Navas: I circulated a presentation that was shown to me. I was not involved in preparing it or presenting it, but in my professional opinion, the report that was presented and circulated to a number of people in the letter I felt was actually quite detailed. I was also updated on other occasions around conversations that were had with government officials. So based on that is what I'm basing it on.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Have you yourself ever checked if anybody at the Ministry of Health knew what was going on? Did you ever ask some of the people at Ornge Global how things went updating the ministry?

Mr. Luis Navas: Yes. People like the chair of the board of Ornge—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Mr. Rainer?

Mr. Luis Navas: Yes—did provide updates in terms of any meetings that they had, or conversations. It was my understanding that, yes, there was an understanding as to what was going on.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, but when you were on the board, you were not involved with Ornge Global. Or were you?

Mr. Luis Navas: Correct. Sorry, I'm speaking 2010 to 2011 as an adviser, not on the board.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So what was your relationship? How come you knew what was being said at the board?

Mr. Luis Navas: Just as an adviser, you would have the ability to, at times, find out what was going on. Also, just from a commonsense approach. No adviser wants to be involved in a situation in which you know that there isn't support for what's being done. Nobody wants to get to the end of a process and find out that there's no support. From my perspective, especially from my experience as a board member from 2006 to 2009, I viewed Ontario as the main stakeholder in Ornge and critical to make sure that Ontario and Ontarians knew what was going on.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You also mentioned that you asked—I think you said that Maria had assured you that the contract you had to give advice to Ornge, once you started to work for Ornge Global, was paid for by Ornge Global and was not paid for by the not-for-profit. Did I—

Mr. Luis Navas: That's correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. How did you know this, why did you ask and why was it important?

Mr. Luis Navas: To me, it's critical to—it touches on the points that Mr. Klees raised earlier about good governance. If the dollars are coming from Ontario taxpayers for something that is on the for-profit side, regardless of that the fact that the province was standing to benefit from profits that came from it, it would be absolutely poor governance if monies were being used from Ontarians' pockets to pay for that. So I wanted to know.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How big of a budget did Ornge Global have?

Mr. Luis Navas: I don't know that. I didn't have access to that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How much profit did they make?

Mr. Luis Navas: I don't have access to that. The only information that I had been given was, the monies that were contributed through revenue by AgustaWestland—

M^{me} France Gélinas: —were serving to pay your retainer for an adviser.

Mr. Luis Navas: That's correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you want to ask a question?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes. In terms of the government's awareness of what was going on at Ornge, were you ever involved personally in apprising the government, the Ministry of Health, of what was going on at Ornge in terms of salary compensation or anything of that nature?

Mr. Luis Navas: I never had any interaction with any government official relating to anything on Ornge Global.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. As you indicated, being involved, you had some knowledge of what was going on; for example, a letter that you tabled that was given to the Ministry of Health. In terms of just your general knowledge, were you aware if the Ministry of Health was apprised of salary disclosure; for example, how much people were making at Ornge?

Mr. Luis Navas: It was my understanding that from 2008—which I was on the board at that time, as I mentioned earlier—from that time onwards, there was no discussion or disclosure around compensation with the government of any kind.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And do you know why that decision was made?

Mr. Luis Navas: I do, actually, because I was on the board at the time. In 2008, the board's legal advisers were informed that Ornge no longer had to disclose compensation. To be totally honest, being an executive compensation adviser was not anything new to me. There had been a number of other quasi-government entities, P3 organizations, that I was aware of that also were no longer required to disclose compensation levels.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Despite not being required to, did you feel that it was still appropriate, given the fact that all the salary was coming from the public purse?

Mr. Luis Navas: I had no issue, if it wanted to be disclosed or not. I have some clients where there are similar issues, and they are not required to disclose; they disclose the top three executives in the annual report. So I was fine either way, but the legal advisers to Ornge had said, "You should just not disclose it."

M^{me} France Gélinas: Was this a discussion of the board members, and how many board members felt, like you did, that it should be disclosed versus shouldn't?

Mr. Luis Navas: It was a discussion at the board level, and the board as a whole felt that if they were being advised not to disclose it, then that was what should be done.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So how come you're still there? You're still at the board, you're having those conversations, and we're saying that you don't have to disclose because you have now gone to a for-profit entity, but you tell us that there was no for-profit entity when you were on the board.

Mr. Luis Navas: No, sorry. Maybe it's not coming across properly. So from 2006 to 2009, there were no for-profit entities. Frankly, there were no discussions around for-profit entities. Any comments that I'm making around disclosure or pay was as a director. It stops and ends there.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So how could Mr. Mazza's salary have been considered not from the not-for-profit if there was no for-profit existing?

Mr. Luis Navas: I'm sorry. I don't understand the question.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So, when you were advised that you no longer had to disclose the salary, what happened? What was the change that occurred that required—

Mr. Luis Navas: Oh, just that all employees were no longer being reported on the sunshine list. It was as simple as that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Based on? What changed?

Mr. Luis Navas: On the legal advice that was given to the board.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And what was that legal advice?

Mr. Luis Navas: I'm sure it's still in the minutes of Ornge—that, based on the categorization of Ornge as a legal entity, it did not have to actually report it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And it had nothing to do with the for-profit or not-for-profit—

Mr. Luis Navas: There was no for-profit at the time.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So just the new characterization of the organization, that it no longer—

Mr. Luis Navas: That's absolutely correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you remember which lawyer gave that advice?

Mr. Luis Navas: I don't remember the lawyer, but the firm at the time was Fasken.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It came from Fasken?

Mr. Luis Navas: Correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So when you left in 2009, Mr. Mazza's salary was in the $500,000 range?

Mr. Luis Navas: No. So, just to be clear—because I find I've been listening to the discussions of this committee in the last several weeks and also following the media, and people keep referring to salary. There are three components in executive compensation generally. In a not-for-profit, when I was on the board—and it would be the same in terms of Mr. Klees's example of Sunnybrook—you have a salary and then you have an annual bonus. In a for-profit entity, you usually have three components of compensation: You have a salary, an annual bonus and some form of what's called a long-term incentive. The long-term incentive is something that's usually paid at a future date. It works kind of like a stock option, and it only gets triggered if there's an accumulation of value generated in the organization. So the $550,000 that I'm referring to was salary and bonus. I think his salary at the time was $400,000.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And then the other $100,000 was a bonus?

Mr. Luis Navas: That's correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know if the Ministry of Health ever asked how much Mr. Mazza's compensation was?

Mr. Luis Navas: I do know that as the chair of the company, there never was a question asked as to what the compensation was, no.

M^{me} France Gélinas: If you followed the file, you know that the NDP had filed freedom of access to information to find out what Mr. Mazza's salary was. So you're telling us that the ministry never actually asked Ornge what his salary was?

Mr. Luis Navas: No. As chair of the comp committee, I was never approached on anything like that, no.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Would you expect that you would have been if such a request had been made?

Mr. Luis Navas: I would think so, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But it wasn't.

Mr. Luis Navas: Correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: When did you leave the board of Ornge? What month in 2009?

Mr. Luis Navas: It would have been the end of 2009. It should be in the corporate records of my resignation letter.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So in November or December?

Mr. Luis Navas: It would have been, I think, in December 2009.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Go ahead.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Were you ever Dr. Mazza's college roommate?

Mr. Luis Navas: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In terms of the compensation, what points did you compare to determine Dr. Mazza's overall compensation?

Mr. Luis Navas: Sure. It's a good question. That's what I was trying to answer before with Mr. Klees.

What we would do is actually gather—we applied what's called a compensation strategy. We used the exact same type of philosophy and approach that would be used in a publicly traded company at the time. And that should be in the corporate records, the actual compensation strategy of Ornge between 2006 and 2009.

So what we would actually do is we had a pay philosophy to only pay against organizations on the sunshine list, not-for-profits, that had quasi-similar size. We definitely would look for organizations that kind of operate in the same context. Mr. Klees is absolutely right that one of the data points that we would use is hospital CEOs, but it wasn't the only one. The challenge that we would have, though, is how do you find other comparables in terms of aviation experience, both on the rotor side and the fixed-wing side? How do you incorporate, also, the multi-base examples, the air versus land? So it wasn't easy, but we always erred on the conservative side. We really put most of the weight on CEOs of hospitals. When we would compare that to Dr. Mazza's compensation—and I'm talking in terms of target compensation, because what we would do is we'd actually have a salary, and then in terms of the annual bonus, we would have a performance scorecard that would allow him to make anywhere between a threshold level of bonus to a superior level of bonus.

If you combine the total compensation, he was usually around about the 75th percentile of the hospital peer group. So there were other CEOs in the hospital peer group in Ontario who were earning more than him.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did the ministry know about the compensation structure that you had put in place?

Mr. Luis Navas: Yes. From my understanding—I was not involved in the discussion, but I was advised that in 2007 or 2008, Rainer Beltzner had a discussion with a representative of the government just to explain the process that the board would follow around executive compensation.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time, so if we move to the government and Mr. Moridi.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you, Mr. Navas, for taking the time to appear before this committee.

Mr. Luis Navas: Thank you.

Mr. Reza Moridi: My understanding, Mr. Navas, is that you completed a business MBA course at Ivey school.

Mr. Luis Navas: That's correct.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Is this the place where you met Dr. Mazza?

Mr. Luis Navas: That is absolutely true, yes.

Mr. Reza Moridi: And is it fair to say that you got employed by Ornge through this connection?

Mr. Luis Navas: No. I was contacted by Rainer Beltzner about the board chair position. There's no doubt in my mind that one of the reasons I was contacted—it was probably twofold. One, Rainer Beltzner knew me from the work that I was doing on Bay Street around executive compensation in corporate governance, but also, I would imagine when my name came up that Dr. Mazza would have known my name right away in terms of being in his classroom for 18 months at Ivey.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Were you employed by Ornge Global under contract, or it was just permanent employment?

Mr. Luis Navas: Under contract.

Mr. Reza Moridi: For how long?

Mr. Luis Navas: It was just like any adviser. It was a month-to-month contract, so there was no term on it. But it ended up lasting for about 14 months.

0850

Mr. Reza Moridi: What was your title there?

Mr. Luis Navas: Again, I did not actually have a title. I don't understand why there is a CEO title on this letter that I've been given. I did not actually have a formal title. I worked—it was a very open-ended-type relationship, but really focusing on helping introduce business partnerships to Ornge outside of Ontario. I'm happy to speak to that, if anyone would like.

Mr. Reza Moridi: But you signed the letter as chief operating officer for Ornge Global?

Mr. Luis Navas: Right, but you won't find any—I can't speak to that, I'll be honest; I know it sounds terrible—but you will not find any corporate record that indicates that that title is true. There was no employment agreement; there were no statutory benefits—none whatsoever.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So do you think that this is the only letter you signed under this title?

Mr. Luis Navas: At this time, I don't know.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So there might be many more letters—

Mr. Luis Navas: There could be. I'll tell you right now: I've been following the testimony—

Mr. Reza Moridi: Please, let me just finish my question.

Mr. Luis Navas: Sure. Sorry.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Do you think that there might be many more letters you have signed under this title?

Mr. Luis Navas: I don't think so, because what you'll find is that I didn't actually have signing authority at Ornge.

Mr. Reza Moridi: But you have signed the letter?

Mr. Luis Navas: Sorry; that's just a framework in terms of a potential partnership. I had no legal signing authority at Ornge.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So do you think you have done illegal work here?

Mr. Luis Navas: No; that's not a legal document. That is just a framework in terms of a potential partnership arrangement. If you look at any corporate files at Ornge, anything that is a final legal document, you will not find any one of my signatures on it, because I was not a legal signing authority at the organization.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you.

I understand that you had been hired at Ornge Global to design executive compensation for the executives—

Mr. Luis Navas: No, that's incorrect.

Mr. Reza Moridi: This is not correct?

Mr. Luis Navas: No.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So were you responsible for designing Dr. Mazza's compensation package?

Mr. Luis Navas: From 2006 to 2009, as a board member, I was involved in that process. That was the last time.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So did you have knowledge about how Dr. Mazza's compensation moved to $1.4 million?

Mr. Luis Navas: No.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Do you think that there was any specific reason for this, or do you have any knowledge or information—

Mr. Luis Navas: I don't know. In all fairness, I think that's a question for the board. I honestly don't know.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Were you involved or were you aware of how Dr. Mazza's compensation moved from Ornge not-for-profit to Ornge for-profit?

Mr. Luis Navas: Just as I mentioned earlier, the only thing that I was last advised on was around the disclosure. Other than that, I don't know that process. I wasn't on the board at the time.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Did Dr. Mazza ask you to design compensation packages for the executives to avoid requirements from disclosure?

Mr. Luis Navas: No.

Mr. Reza Moridi: It has been reported, Mr. Navas, in the media that Dr. Mazza was trying to set up offices around the world, including Florida. Did you have anything to do with this decision?

Mr. Luis Navas: I had nothing to do with the decision, but I'm aware that those are not the facts. There was never a path to have an office in Florida. I believe the last thing I had heard after I left was that there was a partnership that was potentially going to be signed in Nashville, Tennessee.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Were you involved in the establishing of the office in Florida?

Mr. Luis Navas: No, again, there was no—from my understanding, it wasn't even an office. What you have to understand is, if Ornge Global wanted to grow outside of Ontario into new countries, most countries require, from an aviation perspective, that you have to have a local partner; a Canadian organization cannot own a majority stake in an aviation company in the United States, for example. They were having discussions. I don't know whether they ever closed on the deal or the partnership arrangement with an organization in Nashville, Tennessee.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Were there any business cases for such a branching or opening up offices in, say, Florida?

Mr. Luis Navas: Yeah, so, it wasn't offices—this is a good question, because I really think the media has not followed this properly. It wasn't opening offices; it was expanding the Ornge portfolio of services outside of Ontario, and that could have included, frankly, British Columbia or Quebec.

In terms of the United States—any country outside of Canada that they would go into—I think they were doing the right thing in saying, "We don't know the US market as well as an American company, plus we have the aviation issues, so we need to have a partner in each country that we"—

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you very much.

Interjections.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If we could go back to this letter, Mr. Navas: It's addressed to the CEO of something called the Cleveland Clinic, which is located in Florida.

Mr. Luis Navas: No, sorry. The headquarters are actually in Cleveland.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Well, I'm sorry, the address that's on this letter is in Florida.

Mr. Luis Navas: Okay, fair enough. Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: It's addressed to the CEO of whatever this thing is, okay? What do you think the CEO thought when he got a letter that has your signature on it, that says you are the chief operating officer?

Mr. Luis Navas: I would think he would think that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Regardless of what you think your contract said, you were signing as chief operating officer to external parties, so external parties believed you were the COO of Ornge Global.

Mr. Luis Navas: That's fair enough, yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So why did you sign as COO if you were not the COO?

Mr. Luis Navas: I can only refer to the contract that I have. Again, it's public record. There is no employment contract.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, but the CEO of this corporation didn't get your contract.

Mr. Luis Navas: I would guess that—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: He got a letter that said you were COO.

Mr. Luis Navas: That's a fair question. It's a fair question. I would assume that it wouldn't be common practice, if you're an adviser to a company, to be signing it as "Adviser."

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So one just made up a title and said, "I'm the COO."

Now, what's really interesting about this letter, which was sent in November 2010, is that you are proposing that Ornge will provide "a dedicated rotary, jet and related land transport medicine system" in Florida in the third quarter of 2011, which is, coincidentally, about the time that the new helicopters and the new planes arrived at Ornge Global, or at least at Ornge in Canada. Where were you going to get the helicopter and where were you going to get the jet to provide dedicated service in Florida?

Mr. Luis Navas: That was actually—again, anything going on in the not-for-profit side was completely separate from the for-profit, so—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you, over the signature “COO,” offered up a dedicated jet and a dedicated helicopter, and you had no idea where they were coming from?

Mr. Luis Navas: No, no; that’s not what I’m saying. I’m trying to explain to you that you’re insinuating that the organization was going to be using assets from the not-for-profit side. That’s not true whatsoever. If—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Well, as we know—

Mr. Luis Navas: Well, I’m trying to explain it—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: The profit was holding all the helicopters for the non-profit.

Mr. Luis Navas: I’m trying to explain it to you. If you actually speak to Bernie, what you’ll actually find out is that there were already discussions in place to order a new helicopter from AgustaWestland, separate and through Ornge Global.

The other thing that’s important to realize is that Ornge not-for-profit—Ornge, period—did not actually have a jet. There were already discussions in terms of buying that also, again through the funds that were being raised through private investors.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So the fact that this helicopter happens to show up exactly at the same time as the other helicopters is just pure coincidence?

Mr. Luis Navas: Absolutely, because what you need to understand—I think Mr. Potter was here last week—is when you actually make a purchase for a helicopter or have a commitment for a helicopter with a usage for an organization, you’re looking at about a two-year period to actually fill that. So even if you—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That’s why I’m wondering why they show up at the same time. That’s exactly why I’m wondering that.

Mr. Luis Navas: It’s not the same time; 2010 to 2011 is one year, so you would actually need—and that’s not even a signed deal, by the way.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But it says that the timing for implementation of Ornge providing a dedicated helicopter is the third quarter of 2011. If it wasn’t one of the helicopters that you had already ordered for Ontario—

Mr. Luis Navas: It was going through AgustaWestland.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —how could you get a two-year—your words—lead order time, starting in November 2010?

Mr. Luis Navas: I’d have to read this again, but I highly doubt that that’s actually what it’s saying in terms of starting. The implementation process would start in that period, but then you have a long process to actually train the staff, set up the base, applications for licensing etc.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have one minute left.

Mr. Luis Navas: If you actually ask Ornge for this, you’ll actually find corporate records that show that there were already discussions initiated with AgustaWestland that if that contract or any other contract would go through, there would be new purchases of new helicopters purchased through Ornge Global for-profit with investor money.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Could you clarify for us that you assumed that the government was approving the compensation and the new corporate structure simply because you saw a letter advising the government of the new corporate structure but with no reference to Dr. Mazza’s compensation? And because you saw a letter informing them, you therefore thought they approved? Is that—

Mr. Luis Navas: No, I never made any statement about compensation. I’m making a statement about approval of the strategy.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: No, you said you believed that the government had approved everything or supported everything.

Mr. Luis Navas: The strategy. I never said compensation.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So why would you think that just because they got a letter, they were in support?

Mr. Luis Navas: I’m sorry, Ms. Sandals, but that’s not a letter; that’s about a 43-page detailed document.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, but the fact that—I receive all sorts of things—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You are out of time at this point.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —it doesn’t mean I support them.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, if I may?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: I ask for unanimous consent for an additional five minutes, if we could do that. There are just some things that we cannot allow to have Mr. Navas leave without clarifying. Is that agreed?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Is that five minutes per party?

Mr. Frank Klees: I would think so; right?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Right.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): There’s been a request for unanimous consent for 15 more minutes. Is that agreed? Agreed.

Mr. Klees, it’s your turn.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Unless Liz wants to finish and go first. Liz, would you want to finish and go first?

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you want to go finish off?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: No, we can go around.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Go ahead, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Navas, you came forward saying that, voluntarily, you wanted to clear your name and clear things up. I think you got yourself into some mess here. There are more contradictions—

Mr. Luis Navas: I’m just trying to help.

Mr. Frank Klees: There are more contradictions in your testimony here, quite frankly, than we've heard from anyone else. First of all, you said very clearly that you were not involved with the for-profit, that you did not hold a title. This letter is very clear. One of two things happened: Either someone else signed this or you grossly misrepresented your role to some very key players with whom Ornge was going to do business.

Mr. Luis Navas: No, not at all. Again, I would ask you to please look at any corporate record and find any employment agreement that actually refers to that.

Mr. Frank Klees: That is irrelevant. I'm sorry.

Mr. Luis Navas: I don't believe it is irrelevant, actually.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm sorry, this is about what you, sir—

Mr. Luis Navas: An employment agreement is a legal document.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sir, this is about what you were representing in the business market out there. You would not, as an adviser in business, recommend that anyone do business this way.

You also said that there was no intention of establishing an office.

Mr. Luis Navas: To my knowledge, there was not.

Mr. Frank Klees: In this same letter—let me read to you from your letter, sir, that you signed: "Dr. Mazza and I will be in Miami November 11th to the 14th to finalize the details of our new Miami office and aviation base. If you are available, we would welcome the opportunity to discuss our proposal in person." Sir, this is your letter—your letter that clearly states you're going to open up an office, and you tell this committee under oath that there was no intention.

One final thing. You also said at the outset that you had no involvement with the marketing agreement.

Mr. Luis Navas: No, that's not what I said. I said I had no involvement with the marketing services contract, but I did have involvement with the AgustaWestland endorsement contract.

Mr. Frank Klees: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Luis Navas: Would you like me to say it again?

Mr. Frank Klees: What is the AgustaWestland endorsement contract?

Mr. Luis Navas: There are two contracts. I think—I can actually just address your first one before that?

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, actually, here's what I'd like to do. I'd like to, for the record—because, under oath, when Kelly Long was here, we specifically asked her about the Agusta marketing services agreement, of which we have a copy, by the way, and we know what it referred to—

Mr. Luis Navas: And whose signature is on—may I ask whose signature is on that?

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, I can tell you it's not yours. It is Maria Renzella.

Mr. Luis Navas: Thank you very much.

Mr. Frank Klees: However, whether your signature was on there or not, here is a fact: The agreement—

Mr. Luis Navas: Actually, just for my purposes, can I actually see that letter, please?

Mr. Frank Klees: Which letter are you referring to?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Excuse me, which letter—

Mr. Luis Navas: He's referring to a marketing services letter, and I'd just like to see it.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, I said the marketing services agreement. We have it on file; I don't have it here. The members of the committee have it.

Here's my question to you. My question to you is this: When Kelly Long was asked who she reported to, who was the lead on the project for the Agusta marketing services agreement, here's what she said: "Luis Navas, the former chief operating officer of Ornge Global." Interesting that she believed you were the chief operating officer of Ornge Global; apparently everyone else did except you. He was "the lead on that project. He was actually responsible for overseeing the agreement and the deliverables. When he suffered a medical condition and went on medical leave—I believe that was in September 2011; it would have been September or October ... I can't recall exactly the month—I was delegated, because I was reporting directly to him in a junior executive capacity, that I would oversee the final deliverables."

Sir, you were the lead on that marketing services agreement.

Mr. Luis Navas: That's incorrect. Can I answer that question?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please.

Mr. Luis Navas: Thank you very much. What I'd ask you to do, Mr. Klees, is to do your further research and find any documentation that has an official letter from Ornge relating to any marketing services agreement and see whose signature is on that. If you look at the marketing services agreement, you will not find my signature on that. I do not know why Ms. Kelly Long said that.

I also do know, in observing your testimony with her, that you also disagreed with her on a number of points. So unless you're now saying that you agree with everything she said, then I would argue with you that that is not true. I don't know why she said that, but it's absolutely true, sir, that I had provided advice on the Agusta-Westland endorsement contract, which maybe is what she is referring to, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, I don't think so. Whose signature appears on an agreement is irrelevant to who has responsibility—

Mr. Luis Navas: Well, you've also just spent the last 20 minutes saying that it is relevant in terms of a signature that's on a letter to Cleveland Clinic. So now you're contradicting yourself.

Mr. Frank Klees: I can tell you what's relevant: Based on what I'm hearing this morning, I'm more inclined to believe Kelly Long than I am to believe you.

Mr. Luis Navas: Great.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we'll move on to the NDP, please. France Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: All right, I will give you a few seconds to explain to us what the endorsement contract is.

Mr. Luis Navas: Sure. I think it's actually a very good amount of time spent for this committee.

To my knowledge, there were two contracts. I think this committee keeps referring to one contract for $6.7 million. There were actually two contracts. One was what Mr. Klees is referring to, which is the marketing services contract, which I believe was for $4.7 million. I very much encourage you, Mr. Klees, and anybody else here, to go through all public records and find out when—

M^{me} France Gélinas: You don't have to tell us what to do. I asked you a question.

Mr. Luis Navas: Okay. Okay. The marketing services contract was signed, negotiated and in place by Dr. Mazza and by Maria Renzella. There was a marketing group at Ornge that was in charge of writing, I guess, three or four reports.

When I got there, there was a gentleman in charge of marketing called Modya Silver. He was in charge of the marketing services agreement, in terms of producing consulting reports.

There was then in the summer of 2011—when I left, there was no signed contract, but I believe, from what I'm reading, that it did get signed. What that was was—

M^{me} France Gélinas: But I'm asking you about what the endorsement contract is—

Mr. Luis Navas: That's what I'm trying to get at now, the second—this is—

M^{me} France Gélinas: We already know about the marketing contract.

Mr. Luis Navas: So I'm referring now—when I left, it had not been signed yet, but they were working on an AgustaWestland endorsement contract.

In totality, what people need to understand is—I've heard people talk about these kickbacks or this and that. I can't comment in full to the original marketing services agreement because I was not there when it was done. But what people hopefully will understand is that the partnership or the agreements—the two agreements with AgustaWestland—were not about just these consulting reports. What it was was a global marketing partnership sales arrangement, endorsement arrangement, where the hope of AgustaWestland was that by leveraging the services or the experience of Ornge in using EMS helicopters, that as Ornge Global hopefully grew outside of Ontario, that Ornge would endorse the use of AgustaWestland products.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So how much was the endorsement contract for?

Mr. Luis Navas: It was $2 million, I think, over four years. Again, I didn't see the final signed agreement—

M^{me} France Gélinas: But you're telling us that you were working under this agreement but it had not yet been signed.

Mr. Luis Navas: Correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yet you were retained—worked for—from 2010 to 2011 on an agreement that had not yet been signed?

Mr. Luis Navas: No, no. That was just one of the things I was doing. I was also helping in terms of making introductions, like the Cleveland Clinic example in terms of other potential partners outside of Ontario.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How much money did you make from the share that was offered to you from Ornge Global?

Mr. Luis Navas: Zero.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you still have any of those shares?

Mr. Luis Navas: When I left, I actually returned the vast majority. I think they're worthless anyway. I think I had 300 shares or something like that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Why did you return them?

Mr. Luis Navas: I offered them back so that they could actually use them in terms of recruiting new talent for the venture.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Although they were worthless.

Mr. Luis Navas: Any warrant is worthless until there's actually value generated over time.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Were you involved with salary compensation and talks of salary compensation in 2010 for the board?

Mr. Luis Navas: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: The Toronto Sun reports that, "In talks that involved Navas, a decision was made by the board to increase Mazza's salary and bonus to $1.4 million in 2010." Do you agree with that?

Mr. Luis Navas: No, and also I think he makes a comment that he called me or contacted me for a statement. I've never been contacted by the Toronto Star.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have one minute left.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So in terms of your salary compensation, the last time you had any involvement with that would have been in 2009?

Mr. Luis Navas: That's correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Aside from the framework for a partnership agreement, the words that you used to refer to your dealings with the Cleveland Clinic, were there similar dealings with other health providers in the States or other providers in the States?

Mr. Luis Navas: Yes. Again, as I mentioned—and I never actually got to answer Mr. Klees's point about Florida—the way I understood the question was, was there an office to be set up in south Florida? There were considerations of multiple—not offices but locations in which to have a presence, because you had to have that in order to have an aviation operation in the United States. Mr. Klees points to south Florida, but there were also considerations in California, in Cleveland, in other parts of the United States, in Buffalo. But when I left, the one that they were leaning towards was definitely not Florida, and that's what I'm trying to indicate. It was—

M^{me} France Gélinas: But in your letter, you said from “November 11th to the 14th” Mazza will be there with you “to finalize the details of our new Miami office and aviation base.” That certainly seems like you’re—

Mr. Luis Navas: Right, at that time. Agreed. At that time, that was to be a preferred location—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you look at office space down there?

Mr. Luis Navas: No, we looked at hangar space.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And we are out of time. We’ll move to the Liberals, please.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I think, no questions, and move on to Mr. Blum. Could you tell us how you’re going to work the rotations for Mr. Blum, please?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I will as soon as I figure out how much time we have.

Thank you very much for appearing before the committee today.

Mr. Luis Navas: Thank you very much.

MR. JACOB BLUM

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Jacob Blum is our next witness, if you could come forward, please. Good morning, Mr. Blum.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Good morning.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for coming in this morning.

Mr. Jacob Blum: My pleasure.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You’ve received the information for a witness coming before the committee?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well, and our clerk has an oath for you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Blum, if you could just raise your right hand, please. Do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And if you want to take five minutes for an opening statement, then we’ll go to questions. We’ll have about 20 minutes per party for questions.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. Honourable members of the committee, it’s a pleasure to sit here before you today. Hopefully, I can shed some light and provide some information onto this matter. I have a short statement.

I have watched the committee’s work with interest. I have read the transcripts, watched the testimony on TV and noticed that some of the information brought to light did not square with my recollection of events, especially with respect to the subject of the Ministry of Finance’s interest in consolidating Ornge’s assets. Therefore, in the spirit of clarity and the fullness of information, I would like to table to the committee my notes, my personal diary, on the consolidation matter, which I have affixed to an affidavit.

This is the document. The clerk, I believe, has made three copies, one for each party sitting.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, and the clerk is making copies of that right now and we’ll have them for you shortly.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We don’t have that already?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No, it’s being copied as we speak.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Shall I continue, Mr. Chairman?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, please.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Okay, thank you. When I arrived at Ornge, or the Ontario air ambulance base hospital program, as it was then called, the system was siloed, fragmented, there was no unified systems design, and patient care was being jeopardized. There were some coroners’ reports; there was the Donner report. The program was housed at Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre.

I think it’s important at this time that I make a clarification with respect to Fasken’s role in the evolution of Ornge. Fasken’s was Sunnybrook’s legal counsel at the time. Because we were a division of Sunnybrook hospital, we inherited Fasken’s as our legal counsel, so no one at Ornge—myself or anybody else—solicited Fasken’s as counsel; we just inherited them, and they evolved along with us.

I had met Dr. Mazza in 2002 when I started working at Sunnybrook. Dr. Mazza had the necessary personality to drive the breakthrough of inertia that the air ambulance program found itself in at that time. My role was to create a path to realize that unification.

From 2002 to 2008, I built a transition team primed for change and organizational redesign. Some of the key aspects of that included information technology, human capital and back-office functionality. However, the most critical area that had been neglected as a result of a fragmented system was operations. It became quickly apparent to me that what was needed was a world-class command-and-control centre.

The single biggest challenge was staffing operations. It’s important for me to make note that there is a distinction between medical operations and organizational operations. What I’m referring to here in my five minutes is organizational operations, not medical operations. Having said that, the delineation between these two buckets was never truly made at Ornge, and as such, it served as a significant impediment in creating a performance-based organization as opposed to a reporting-based organization.

Therein a culture started to emerge where it became burdensome to challenge the medical operations from the non-medical. Organizational ops. was not understood and therefore did not become a priority. I had hired the executive team and helped build the board of directors. I believed in the executives, but in many ways they were not up to the job of the mandate for organizational change. Quite often, people say that this is a case study in public policy, governance, transparency and ethics; I would like to think that it's at a more fundamental level. This is a case study of the human condition, where good people found themselves in situations and, if I can paraphrase, took a bite of the fruit of greed. Once that bite was taken, they crossed a Rubicon that I don't think they could come back from.

Their fork in the road emerged, and it ultimately became apparent that developing command-and-control operations was put on the back burner. What ended up happening was a desire to become an aviation company—what I cheekily call “boys with toys.” That fork in the road resulted in the strategy being changed, where management could not keep up with the pace of the original mandate and began to deviate from it. At that point, it became apparent that I had to leave. To be sure, it was a great disappointment that I left because I was severely dedicated to changing Ornge as it was meant to be.

There were some successes, however. A transition team was established to build a modern command-and-control centre. There are some building blocks that still remain in Ornge as a result of that work. To this end, the board can rest assured that there is a good and solid foundation to move forward towards operational excellence as opposed to operational reporting.

Information technology was going to be the backbone of the operational excellence. What we had designed was a service-oriented architecture with dispatch as a core element, and it was through dispatch which is how you could get the performance reporting. To this end, the Auditor General's report clearly demonstrated that there were serious flaws in the communication centre and that the organization and operations were not a focus. An interim solution became the standard, and operational excellence ceased to be the priority.

The front-line staff in the original core mandate of Ornge believed that this was the right direction to go in. Not only did management fail to deliver to the front-line staff the mandate that we had been given, but the 2012 AG report demonstrates that the situation actually worsened.

The operational objective was to have a digital command-and-control centre where core management systems were integrated and all manner of calls could seamlessly be processed. However, the implementation was put on hold and, as I mentioned, the system of Optimus still remains to this day. Optimus was never designed to be a real-time engine and/or a systems architecture. It was only able to report admin reports that could be overridden after the fact, providing static reports on the number of flights.

To address this antiquated system, I had brought in experts to assess and report to management what was needed. The report stated to management that there was a risk in implementing Optimus as opposed to deploying a long-term GIS system, geographical information system. Nevertheless, what I call a “black swan” management decision was made to go ahead with the interim solution.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Blum, are you almost done your—

Mr. Jacob Blum: Almost done.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay.

Mr. Jacob Blum: I'll skip ahead and just come to my conclusion for the sake of time.

Ornge's core mandate was simple: Provide world-class transport medicine and patient safety to the residents of Ontario. In conclusion, as a citizen of Ontario reliant on the health care system, Ornge was never meant to be an aviation company. I use the analogy that I would not want my doctor flying me to Florida, and I would not want a pilot in an emergency room when I walked in with a serious illness.

To that end I'll conclude, and I'll allow the committee to ask its questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for that statement. We'll go to the NDP first. Ms. Gélinas?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. You were there when the transition was made. I take it that you know that the initial performance agreement has been under quite a bit of discussion. In your view—have you ever read the initial agreement that was signed by the ministry that—

Mr. Jacob Blum: I was the lead negotiator for the performance agreement. I negotiated it. Lynne Golding sat to my right as legal counsel. So I am intimately familiar with the original performance agreement.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I kind of knew that. Thank you. Do you feel that there was sufficient oversight in that original agreement for the ministry to follow what was going on at Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, I do. Other presenters, I believe, have also commented on the number of clauses and levers within that performance agreement, and I would echo the same. I think the most important lever was a non-appropriation clause that, if the government felt that Ornge was not living up to its obligations in the agreement, they just simply had to turn off the funding.

M^{me} France Gélinas: During the time that you were at Ornge, did the ministry ever make use of the agreement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: There were many reporting aspects of the agreement: a balanced scorecard, quality management assurance, and I would meet regularly, every Friday afternoon, with the ministry emergency health services branch and we would address any operational and/or other issues that the government may have had. So on a weekly basis, I was in constant contact with the emergency health services branch.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So during your time at Ornge, do you know if the ministry ever made changes to the agreement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: The agreement was amended around 2007 to incorporate a new service that Ornge was bringing online, which was called critical care land ambulance service.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And that was done within the confines of the original agreement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: That is correct. That was negotiated, again, by myself with some operations people at Ornge, with legal counsel on both sides of the table.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. And as far as the fact that Ornge was incorporated under the federal government, when you did the original agreement, was that ever brought into account as something that could impede the government? Did they ever say, “No, we would prefer you incorporate under provincial laws, rather than federal laws”?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Absolutely not, and the discussion on that matter was simply for expediency of incorporation, to meet deadlines.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So it had nothing to do with wanting to—

Mr. Jacob Blum: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So the ministry knew about it. They never raised an eyebrow. Everything was good with you incorporating federally.

Mr. Jacob Blum: That is correct. The ministry lead counsel was familiar with it. There were no hidden agendas and, again I state, the only reason why there was a federal incorporation was simply for expediency.

M^{me} France Gélinas: This close relationship, your Friday afternoon meetings with the ministry, I guess, allowed the ministry to have a pretty good oversight of what was going on at Ornge and Ornge to inform the ministry, or was there a specific agenda aside from this for those meetings?

Mr. Jacob Blum: It depended upon the time of year. If we were in the results-based planning process, we would discuss the necessary information Ornge would have to provide to the branch in order for the branch to incorporate that into their reports that would subsequently go up the chain. But there were, again, more informative, casual discussions. It was a sound relationship. It was a trusted adviser-based relationship. So if there were any concerns on the ministry’s behalf, they would have felt free to express them, they would be addressed, and if there were any concerns on Ornge’s behalf with the ministry, the same would be true.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What was your salary at Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: When I first started, it was $80,000 per year and then it was $190,000 when I resigned from Ornge. That $190,000 was a base salary. Included in that was a bonus predicated on performance metrics, if I achieved them—threshold, target, superior—and I think it constituted 30% of your base salary.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So of the $190,000, 30% came from—

Mr. Jacob Blum: You had $190,000 base and then the performance could exceed no more than 30% of your base salary, so depending upon how well you performed, if you met only your targets, then you could only get 15%. If you exceeded and met your stretch targets, you might get 25% of your base.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And was this compensation package standard within Ornge, that people would get a base salary plus up to a 30% bonus based on performance?

Mr. Jacob Blum: We had originally rolled it out to the executive team, and then in subsequent years rolled it out to the directors and to managers. To the best of my knowledge, after I left they may have rolled it out to the rest of the staff. But it was a compensation structure that was primarily designed for the executives.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Remind me again: What day did you leave Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: July 17, 2008.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In 2008. The time you were there, did you ever have any freedom of access of information directed at Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: None that I was aware of, no.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You probably know, following the media, that the NDP have filed freedom of access of information regarding salaries. Given your close relationship to the ministry, had a freedom of access of information come to the ministry during your tenure, would they have talked to you about this?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Absolutely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: They would have, eh? Do you know if the ongoing meetings that you had with the ministry—do you know if this is something that Ornge would have continued or that the ministry would have wanted to continue after you left?

Mr. Jacob Blum: In terms of the dialogue and the meetings and the relationship?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Correct.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, I believe it was a fruitful relationship, and not to give myself undue flattery, but the government had said—I’ll back up for a second. There was a six-month period where I went back and forth as to whether I was going to leave, and the government had always said, “We sleep at night knowing that you’re there.” So I felt the responsibility to the government. I had negotiated the performance agreement. I had put my reputation on the line. So I felt a higher duty, if you will, to deliver to the government what they expected, and not only what they expected, but exceed what they expected.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You made it clear that you didn’t think that Ontario air ambulance needed a speedboat; you made that perfectly clear. We all know about your little trip to Guelph and—

Mr. Jacob Blum: Right.

M^{me} France Gélinas: —the climbing over the fence and having a good look at this thing. Did you ever mention that to the people at the ministry, that Ornge had purchased a speedboat?

Mr. Jacob Blum: The question was asked to me on July 17, 2008, just after I had signed my departure agreement from Ornge. I met with, then, one Ruth Hawkins at 5700 Yonge St., where the emergency health services branch is located. She looked at me and she said, “Jacob, I’ve learned about a speedboat and lakefront property.” I looked at her and I said, “Ruth, you have the contractual, legislative and regulatory levers to find out anything you want to find out about Ornge. I suggest that you don't rely on hearsay or third party information but exercise your levers to get to the truth."

M^{me} France Gélinas: And that meeting took place at 1700 Yonge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Sorry, 5700 Yonge St.

M^{me} France Gélinas: At 5700 Yonge, and do you remember how long that meeting lasted?

Mr. Jacob Blum: It was over coffee. It was about 30 minutes. Ms. Hawkins stated that if this information was in fact true, she was very disappointed about it. It was an open conversation.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you know the value of the boat at the time?

Mr. Jacob Blum: It was approximately $43,000.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you share that information with the people at the Ministry of Health?

Mr. Jacob Blum: In a roundabout way, yes, I did. I'm confident that when we separated from our meeting, she understood very clearly what my concerns were and that her questions had been validated.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you. My colleague has a few questions, but I may come back.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So, just to make it very, very clear, you left because you were unhappy with what was going on. Could you make it very clear what you were unhappy with?

Mr. Jacob Blum: In late 2007, there was a direction Ornge started to go in that I was not comfortable with. I was of two minds, where I was quite torn. I felt that if I left, then I was somehow abdicating my responsibilities to the ministry and to the citizens of Ontario, and if I stayed, then I would become party to something that I did not agree to. So, knowing that the ministry had put this onus on me, I felt that I would stay in so long as I could have influence at the executive table and perhaps try to curtail some of these issues. When it became apparent to me that I had lost the influence that I had once had at the executive table and that I could no longer change the direction that Ornge was going in, for ethical reasons, I had to leave.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: What was the direction that Ornge was headed that you were not approving of?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Becoming an aviation company, and, in addition to that, there were certain programs, there were certain things that were basically, in short, moving away from our core mandate.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And if you could just be specific with some of those things?

Mr. Jacob Blum: The purchase of the boat.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes?

Mr. Jacob Blum: And I would say principally the aviation component and, you know, there was—it had just become no longer about the core mandate as we had stated to the government to which we were given.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Now, once the direction was moving away from the core mandate, which the government was aware of, what the core mandate was, was this a red flag in your mind, and should this have been a red flag in the minds of those in the ministry, that there was something seriously amiss at Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Absolutely.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And what, in your mind, should the ministry have done to fulfill its duty to oversee Ornge properly?

Mr. Jacob Blum: It was my understanding that—Dr. Mazza had told me that in the fall of 2008, he, along with Rainer Beltzner, met with Ruth Hawkins, and Ruth Hawkins had raised her concerns, and that they had addressed them to the point where Ruth was satisfied there was no need to probe any further.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: What were the concerns that Ruth Hawkins advised, or were you aware of what those concerns were?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I was not present at that meeting, so I can't speak to what she may or may not have said. I can only state to what the concern she had expressed to me.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Salary compensation has been an issue. In your mind, did the ministry use its resources in terms of getting to the bottom of salary disclosure efficiently, properly, and should they have done more?

Mr. Jacob Blum: No, no, and yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Why yes to the last one?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, because you asked if they should have done more. There were three questions there.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What more would you suggest they should have done?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Exercised their contractual obligations within the original performance agreement. I'm not the ministry. They have their protocols and procedures to which they have to work within their confines. Quite often, they have to send it up the line, if you will. How procedurally they would have done, I'm not exactly sure.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So, being one of the negotiators of the original agreement, you felt that the original agreement gave them the power to request salary disclosures if they so wished?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Absolutely. No doubt in my mind.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No doubt in your mind.

Mr. Jacob Blum: No. It's very clear that the ministry had the ability to go in to Ornge and audit, check files, within any aspects which Ornge had control over, whether that be what is called the left side of the organizational structure and/or the right side of the organizational structure.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In terms of being a red flag, how serious of a red flag was it when Ornge took that direction towards becoming an aviation company, or towards aviation, and its interest was aviation? How serious was that as a red flag to show that there was something that the ministry should have known about, that there was something they should have at least gone into more depth on? In layman's terms, why was that such a big issue?

Mr. Jacob Blum: First, it was a deviation from the core mandate. Second, from a policy standpoint, an operational standpoint, Ornge did not have the core competencies to become an aviation company. That was better left to the third party aviators who do this for a living day in and day out.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Now, is there any argument—if you could just speak to this. Is there any argument to be made that Ornge could have provided better patient care, or quicker care, if it had gone down this path successfully, in terms of the aviation?

Mr. Jacob Blum: To my understanding, the primary driver, 80% of the driver, towards bringing aviation in-house was cost-driven, but the analysis and comparative analysis were highly subjective.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So are you saying that Dr. Mazza made the decision to bring the aviation in-house rather than continuing the purchase of service he had done before because financial analysis had shown that it would be cheaper?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, that would be my understanding.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But you had doubts about this data?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, I did.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And did you share those doubts?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, I did.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And did anybody listen?

Mr. Jacob Blum: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You indicated before that this was an example of what greed can do to good people, and that greed was essentially the turning point. Can you explain that in more detail?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I'm sorry, could you maybe rephrase the question?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You had indicated that the Ornge debacle, I guess, is an example of how greed can turn good people down a wrong path. Can you explain that in more detail, and how that led to the fall of Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I think what I said kind of speaks for itself. To expand on that would require me to put myself in the minds of the individuals in question, and I don't think that would be appropriate. I used it only as an analogy, and I don't think an expansion on that would serve any purpose.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes left.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Fair enough. In terms of your opinion on—it's come to light now—or when did it come to your attention that Dr. Mazza was making the $1.4-million compensation?

Mr. Jacob Blum: When I read it in the newspaper.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Your opinion in terms of that compensation?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Speechless.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You were once described as Dr. Mazza's right-hand man. Why was that, and when did that change?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Why was that?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes.

Mr. Jacob Blum: I guess you would have to ask him why he felt comfortable giving me the authority and the latitude to build the organization the way in which I felt it needed to be built in conjunction with the Ministry of Health and the standards which they expected. From January 2008 until July 2, that influence or trusted-adviser status which I enjoyed quickly became diluted and Dr. Mazza started listening to other individuals, as opposed to me.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did anything prevent the Ministry of Health from continuing its Friday meetings, if not with you, when you were no longer there, then with any other individual from Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Not that I am aware of. The relationship I had with the ministry, I think, was based on a solid foundation of trust. I never let them find out about anything prior to me telling them. They were fully informed of all things. We worked quite collaboratively to deal with any issues that may have arisen—stakeholder, for example. So whoever replaced me, how that relationship evolved or what it constituted, I can't say.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you ever talk about salary disclosure with the ministry?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sorry, we're out of time. If we can move to the Liberals, please. Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you very much—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Could he just finish? Just salary disclosure: Did you ever talk about salary disclosure with the ministry, that has to do with the sunshine list?

Mr. Jacob Blum: To the best of my knowledge, the ministry never raised that issue with me.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. On to the Liberals: Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you very much. Mr. Blum, are you now or have you ever been a member of the Ontario PC Party or the Conservative Party of Canada?

Mr. Jacob Blum: If I recall correctly, when I was in university, I believe I was a member of the club in the university, but I don't believe I'm a card-carrying member of the Progressive Conservative Party, federally and/or provincially.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you've never worked as political staff for the PC Party?

Mr. Jacob Blum: No.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You've never worked on a campaign for the PC Party?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I have run political campaigns for the PC Party.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So, in fact, you might not be a member of the party, but you've actually run election campaigns for the party?

Mr. Jacob Blum: My decision to run an election campaign was largely predicated on the candidate and not so much the party.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I see. So have you ever contributed to the PC Party?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, I have made donations to the Progressive Conservative Party, in addition to the Liberal Party.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I see. Okay. Thank you.

Do you know Tony Clement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: No, I do not know Tony Clement.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You've never ever met Tony Clement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I may have, at a function, shaken his hand, but I don't know, if he saw me on the street, whether he would be able to put a name to a face.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Despite the fact that you worked on the air ambulance program during the time that he was the minister in charge and the discussions began, and you were right-hand man, you never met Mr. Clement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: No, Dan Newman, his parliamentary assistant, was responsible for all ambulance services in the province, and it was Dan Newman's office which I was working through. It was not Mr. Clement.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. That's very helpful. Thank you very much.

You mentioned that you know Lynne Golding.

Mr. Jacob Blum: That is correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: When did you first meet Lynne Golding?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I first met Lynne Golding in 2002.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: In 2002. How did that come to happen?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Through her capacity as legal counsel to Sunnybrook—then it was Sunnybrook and Women's College hospital; today it's Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Have you ever met Guy Giorno?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, I have.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And how did you come to meet Guy Giorno?

Mr. Jacob Blum: In the same capacity in which I met Lynne Golding.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: As counsel to the air ambulance program?

Mr. Jacob Blum: That is correct. I had met Guy Giorno back in the 1990s, but it would only be in passing. Again, it would have been an introduction at a function, and whether he would remember who I was until 2002 I doubt very much.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And Kelly Mitchell: Have you ever met Kelly Mitchell?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, I have.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And how do you know Kelly Mitchell?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Again, I met Kelly Mitchell through a function and quite liked him—he's an affable gentleman—so I deliberately stayed in touch with Kelly Mitchell.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And did you have anything to do, then, with Kelly Mitchell receiving multiple contracts from Ornge to do work for Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes. I was the individual who brought Kelly Mitchell in as a consultant to Ornge. I will say that my professional mantra on that is: It's only nepotism if they're incompetent.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: It's only nepotism if they're incompetent.

Mr. Jacob Blum: In other words, if I know people who have good professional credentials, I have no problem bringing them in, and if their competency can address my problem, then there's a trust there. Then I feel comfortable hiring them.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And what particular competencies did Mr. Mitchell use to address your problems? Maybe more to the point, what problems did you ask him to address?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Well, I think "problems" is probably an inaccurate characterization. Mr. Mitchell is very familiar with northern Ontario; that's where he comes from. The bulk of our flights within Ornge are in northwestern Ontario. Mr. Mitchell provided valuable insight as to how to deal with stakeholders in northwestern Ontario.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, thank you.

So, according to the CV which you have provided us, you began work in April 2002 as the vice-president of corporate affairs of the Ontario air ambulance base hospital program at Sunnybrook. Who would you have reported to in that position?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Dr. Mazza. Just for clarification, I think for the first month or so, I was without title and then was given that title. I came in. I developed the strategy. That strategy was approved at a high level, and then I was given the title. All of my titles really represent where we were in the evolution of Ornge. To answer your question: Dr. Mazza.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. So when you were hired, it appears that your previous experience is a consultant. What was it that—why were you hired? Why did Dr. Mazza hire you?

Mr. Jacob Blum: We were introduced via a headhunter. It was my ability to understand organizational transformation, business processes and integrate different departments within an organization, and the ability to do business modelling, in addition to my public policy understanding. So I would say that there were a number of competencies that blended together.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. From what I understand you to say, then, you were explicitly hired by Dr. Mazza to do to the strategic work to create Ornge. Is that correct?

Mr. Jacob Blum: That is correct. There were one or two other individuals whom I met before he made the final decision to hire me, so he wanted feedback from other individuals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. But that was the purpose of your hiring.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You might have been the vice-president of corporate affairs for the air ambulance program at Sunnybrook, but you really weren't there to manage the service at Sunnybrook; you were there to create Ornge.

Mr. Jacob Blum: At that time, we were a division of Sunnybrook. There was back-office functionality which required interfacing—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But your primary role was to create Ornge. That was the purpose of the hire.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes; that is correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You talk about moving forward to create the performance agreement, but presumably before you moved to creating a performance agreement, you had to get some political buy-in. How did you go about getting political buy-in from Minister Clement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I take the approach that you get bureaucratic buy-in, if we want to use that language, by understanding what the bureaucrat's mandate is. So I worked—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So you got bureaucratic buy-in.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: How did yourself and Dr. Mazza move to engaging Minister Clement? You said that there was a parliamentary assistant, but I've been a parliamentary assistant. Parliamentary assistants don't unilaterally sign off. So how did you get Mr. Clement's attention to buy into this? Because we've been previously informed that it was Minister Clement who originally bought in. How did you get that buy-in?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I worked through Mr. Dan Newman's chief of staff, and I believe it was Mr. Newman who had made the proposal to Mr. Clement. So he served as the broker, if you will. I never met Mr. Clement in a meeting as a stakeholder.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Let's talk about the performance agreement, which you say you were the lead on developing. You've given us some of the performance agreement, but the interesting thing about the performance agreement is that the only action the government can take is to totally cancel the agreement. Once you've moved all the air ambulance services to Ornge, and that's the only air ambulance capacity in Ontario, how could the government in good conscience shut it down if that's the only remedy in the agreement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: A number of clauses were in the performance agreement—and I'll paraphrase—that stated that, should the government make that decision, then Ornge had an obligation to work with the government in order to transition it to whatever direction the government wanted to go in. So if, for example, the government wanted to bring it back in-house, then Ornge was obligated by the performance agreement to work with the government in aiding them in doing that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: The performance agreement, which you negotiated for the corporation which you moved to, said that the only remedy was that you could work with the government to undo the performance agreement and move the air ambulance service someplace else. There was no "withdraw a bit of the funding"; no supervision. It just said, "Oh, well. Shut us down." That was the performance.

Mr. Jacob Blum: No, I think that's probably not the way to describe it. There were a number of schedules to the performance agreement whereby, if the ministry felt there was something wrong, there would be cure periods. For example, the ministry would notify Ornge that, "X is wrong; you have 30 days to correct it." Ornge would then have to demonstrate that it corrected it. To shut it down wholesale was the last result. There were many clauses and opportunities for the government to say, "You have 30 days, 90 days or 120 days to correct a specific problem and then demonstrate that problem was corrected." To—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That's in the new performance agreement.

Mr. Jacob Blum: That's in the old performance—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: It's not in the material you've tabled here.

Mr. Jacob Blum: It is. It is.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm going to turn questioning over to Mr. Zimmer, please.

Mr. Jacob Blum: It is in the original performance agreement schedules.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Not in what you told us today.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer?

Mr. David Zimmer: How much time?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have—let's see—about nine minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you. I gather you would describe yourself as probably the person with the most knowledge of the performance agreement at Ornge.

Mr. Jacob Blum: I have a knowledge of the performance agreement from an operational standpoint. In terms of its technical legality, I relied on my right hand, who was Lynne Golding.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. And were you the principal person at Ornge to keep an oversight on the performance agreement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: At Ornge, there were divisions—quality management, operations—so aspects of the performance agreement were parcelled out into the respective departments that would have responsibility to fulfill those provisions of the performance agreement. Ultimately, me being the conduit to the government, if there was an issue within a department about the performance agreement, it would come to me and I would go to the government, or the government would come to me and I would go to the department.

Mr. David Zimmer: So you had the broad oversight of the performance agreement, right?

Mr. Jacob Blum: That's an accurate statement.

Mr. David Zimmer: I want to ask about the sequence of the performance agreement. I gather you negotiated that, and when the performance agreement was negotiated by you, Ms. Golding and others, subsequent to that, you then joined Ornge. Is that right?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I'm sorry, could you repeat that?

Mr. David Zimmer: The sequence is, the performance agreement was negotiated with you at the table, Ms. Golding from Fasken at your side and other technical people. Subsequent to that agreement being in place formally, you joined Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: That is correct.

Mr. David Zimmer: When was the performance agreement in place signed off on?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I believe its effective date was—you'll have to forgive me—2006. But the creation of it was an evolution of many dialogues and meetings, and then the final negotiation of it.

Mr. David Zimmer: So the agreement was in place in 2006?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Approximately, yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: When did you join Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: In 2002.

Mr. David Zimmer: No, that's when you joined OAA. When did you join the entity Ornge?

Mr. Jacob Blum: There were many evolutions of Ornge. First, we were a division of Sunnybrook hospital.

Mr. David Zimmer: When did your cheques come from Ornge, your paycheques?

Mr. Jacob Blum: In 2005, and that would have been the Ontario Air Ambulance Services Co.

Mr. David Zimmer: So just at the time the performance agreement was being negotiated and finalized by you and Ms. Golding at Fasken, that's the same time that you moved over to the Ornge entity. Is that correct?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I moved over to the Ornge entity approximately mid-2006, 2007.

Mr. David Zimmer: And that's at the time in the sequence that the performance agreement was finally negotiated by you?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Let's take it back six months. The performance agreement was negotiated with a legal entity called Ontario Air Ambulance Services Co.

Mr. David Zimmer: The point is, within months of the agreement coming to fruition, you joined the Ornge entity formally.

Mr. Jacob Blum: It was a benign evolution, but to answer your question, yes. Sure.

1000

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. What do you think of the propriety, or the optics, of you being the chief negotiator for the performance agreement and, at that point in time, when the performance agreement is signed off by all parties, you then joining Ornge and taking on the principal responsibility of overseeing the performance agreement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I believe the question, with all due respect, skews the reality of how it all evolved.

Mr. David Zimmer: The reality is, you were at the negotiating table for the performance agreement.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Amongst many other things, yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: The performance agreement was finalized, and in that same time frame, you then joined Ornge—I'm referring to your evidence. You then had the principal, general oversight responsibility for keeping an eye on the performance agreement.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Amongst many other responsibilities which I held, which, once the performance agreement was signed, gave us the authority to start integrating all the back-office functionality.

Mr. David Zimmer: Look, let me cut to the quick here. It strikes me as odd, to say the least, that a person would sit down with an organization and negotiate a performance agreement on something as serious and complex as this, which in this case is to hold Ornge responsible for various things, and then immediately join the organization to enforce the agreement that in effect you just negotiated. Does that look odd to you?

Mr. Jacob Blum: With all due respect, I believe your question is quite narrow. The performance agreement was one step in a sequence of steps that was required to fill the public policy mandate, as cabinet wanted it to be. To single out the performance agreement and take it out of that sequential evolution and make that a question, I think, is wrong.

Mr. David Zimmer: In your judgment—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you. In your judgment, was the performance agreement a weak document that needed to be fixed later on?

Mr. Jacob Blum: The beauty of the performance agreement is, it provided for latitude for both parties to amend it as Ornge evolved, as Ornge may have taken on additional services or as the government may have made policy decisions.

Mr. David Zimmer: And that's a term that you negotiated on an agreement that you were going to administer?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I'm sorry?

Mr. David Zimmer: That's a term that you negotiated on an agreement that you were going to administer.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Among many other responsibilities I had in the organization. That was just one—

Mr. David Zimmer: When you left Ornge, were you fired or did you resign?

Mr. Jacob Blum: It was, to be quite candid with you, fuzzy. I resigned, but Ornge did not want me to resign. I believe, and I am only surmising, they were concerned about the optics of me leaving, with respect to the government, and so what we agreed upon was that I was going to take a sabbatical. It was a one-year sabbatical, at which time—

Mr. David Zimmer: So let me cut to the quick here. Were you fired?

Mr. Jacob Blum: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: Would you say you were fired, or you resigned?

Mr. Jacob Blum: I resigned.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We'll move on to Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Mr. Blum, I'd like to touch on three specific areas with you. First of all, seeing as we've just been talking about the performance agreement, I'll start with that. You made it very clear that you were the chief negotiator, on behalf of Ornge, of the terms of that performance agreement. You, in response to questioning from Ms. Sandals, said very specifically that there were a number of provisions within the performance agreement that would have allowed the Ministry of Health to step in, to take certain actions; that there were some specific time frames—30 days, 60 days, 120 days—that the Ministry of Health could have given notice to Ornge to get certain things right, to work with the government, had the Ministry of Health determined to do so.

Ms. Sandals made a very specific point, and I think it's important that we clarify that. She specifically said that the existing or earlier performance agreement, the original one that you negotiated, did not contain those measures that you had explained. She insisted that it was the revised performance agreement that only contained those clauses. Can you speak to that and clarify that for the committee, please?

Mr. Jacob Blum: With all due respect, I think Ms. Sandals has misinterpreted the original performance agreement.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. So the original performance agreement contained the provisions that you spoke to.

Mr. Jacob Blum: The original performance agreement clearly lays out what are called cure periods to which the government can notify Ornge, and Ornge had those times to—yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Still on the performance agreement: When Mr. Malcolm Bates testified here on April 18, I asked him specific questions regarding the original performance agreement and what was intended. What was the policy intent of consolidation of Ontario's air ambulance service? I specifically said to him, because that was my understanding, that it never contemplated bringing Ornge into the aircraft business, that consolidation meant more the backroom operations, the dispatch and so on and so forth. Mr. Bates agreed.

I'll just for the record read, first of all, part of my question:

"The consolidation that was intended was to ensure that the oversight and the lines of authority were consolidated, that there was in fact a response to the previous audit that indicated very clearly that there were some weaknesses in the system that needed to be addressed. Would you agree with that?"

Mr. Bates responded, "I would agree with that."

I would ask you, again for the purpose of clarification here, to help us understand what exactly that original performance agreement meant and was intended to do when we refer to that term "consolidation."

Mr. Jacob Blum: It was intended—and I believe in my package I had provided committee members with a pre-consolidation of the visual and a post-consolidation of the visual. If you look at the pre, you had a fragmented system, a very odd relationship between the medics, who worked in an aviation company, and the doctors whom the medics performed medical acts under, who worked for a hospital, where the doctor could suspend the medic if they felt the medic needed to true up their continuing medical education, and then the aviation company that was hiring that medic would be out of staff and would have to pay for this.

The pre-consolidation model was highly fragmented—no clear lines of authority. There was no one single point to everything which was a command-and-control centre. Post-consolidation was to bring all of that in, tie it up, integrate it so you had the back office, the air carriers and the medicine within one house, operating with all allied health professionals under one command-and-control.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was the intention with regard to the third party service providers? I'm talking now about the various companies across the province that were providing, whether it be the helicopters or whether it be the fixed-wing aircraft—what did the public policy anticipate would happen with that part of the operation?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Ornge would manage them as third party suppliers through a contract management strategy, as had the government before us. So they just assigned the existing contracts they had with the aviation companies over to the Ornge entity, and it was Ornge's responsibility now to perform the same functions as the government did.

Mr. Frank Klees: At what point was that policy changed? Because clearly, there was cabinet approval for that initial policy. At what point was there a policy decision made by the government to now terminate those agreements or allow those agreements to come to an end, and Ornge would now come into the business of owning aircraft, both fixed-wing and helicopters?

Mr. Jacob Blum: There was no specific public policy process and/or decision made within the government to change the original mandate as you have described it.

Mr. Frank Klees: And your comment earlier obviously is of concern to us when you said, in your opinion, Ornge did not have the core competency to become an aviation company.

Mr. Jacob Blum: That's correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: Based on what we've seen over the last couple of years, based on what we see in the Auditor General's report, I think we are seeing the results of that assessment. In your opinion—because the purpose of this committee is, at the end of the day, to determine what went wrong and make some changes and make some recommendations to the government in terms of how we can get this right and how we can restore confidence in our air ambulance service—what, in your opinion, has to happen, on a go-forward basis, in order to restore that confidence? And perhaps specifically speak to this issue of the aviation aspect of this, where clearly Ornge doesn't have that core competency.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Off the top of my head, three points:

(1) Ornge has to deal with its operational issues, as outlined by the Auditor General in, I believe, three subsequent reports. Reading them, it looks like you're reading the same date. So, deal with the Auditor General's reports with regard to the dispatch centre.

(2) Fix the culture and detoxify the culture within Ornge.

(3) Divest out of the aviation business and let the aviation companies do their job. Contract back out to the aviation companies through a competitive bidding process and allow them to run the airlines, the maintenance and ensure that the aviation component of transferring a patient is safe, and let them assume that liability.

If you think about it, the two most sophisticated aspects of western civilization are medicine and aviation. When you marry the two, it's a high risk. Let the aviators do the aviation; let the medicine do the medicine, and have a wall between the two.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. I'd like to move on to your affidavit.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: I've had a chance—unfortunately, I have a hard time—

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair, just before we do that—

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, please. We only have so much time.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We just have 20 minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair, no. I want to raise a matter of fundamental fairness—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No, Mr. Zimmer. Continue, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

Interjection.

Mr. Frank Klees: I am going to ask this committee to censure you, sir. You are interfering with my line of questioning. I'll have none of it.

Mr. David Zimmer: We're entitled to see the entire diary, not selected excerpts—

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, take control, please.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Please let Mr. Klees continue.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to refer—and I'm having a difficult time reading some of your writing here; however, there are a couple of matters that I would like to address with you. We have had representation here in this committee from two individuals who have said on the record that they have neither lobbied nor engaged in any lobbying activity with regard to this file. One is Mr. Alfred Apps; the other is Mr. Don Guy.

In leafing through this in the short time that I have, there are at least three or four references in your affidavit that I'd like you to speak to. The first one is exhibit I, if you could have a look at that.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Sorry, exhibit I?

Mr. Frank Klees: Exhibit I in your affidavit. It refers to—obviously, these are your notes—a meeting that took place on December 10, 2007—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Point of order, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: The point here is that we have selective notes, so the committee has no access to the complete story. I would like to move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts shall not hear any further oral testimony from Jacob Blum until such time as Mr. Blum has produced to the committee his entire professional diary, as referenced in the affidavit of Jacob Blum, dated May 16, 2012.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, this is an obstruction of the process here. We have the full document.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: In fairness, we need the complete document.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Blum can confirm—I would expect that this is the full document of his notes of that day. Is that correct, Mr. Blum?

Mr. Jacob Blum: That is absolutely correct. In fact, you'll note—

Mr. Frank Klees: That is correct.

Interjections.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, yes. We will continue with the proceedings. Go ahead, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. These notes make reference to a meeting of December 10, 2007. There are two individuals who are referenced as attendees. One is Alfred Apps; the other is Don Guy. In that note, it makes reference to some business that they were to address. Can you comment on this? Tell us very briefly, succinctly, what the nature of that meeting was and what the topic of discussion was, please.

Mr. Jacob Blum: This refers to clarification. Their attendance may have been by teleconference. It may not have been in person.

Here, Alf Apps describes what Don talked about, what Don is doing, number one; number two, senior Ministry of Finance officials are on our side with regard to consolidation.

Don Guy is to handle—there were some cryptic emails—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Point of order, Mr. Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'm not hearing your point of order.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Except I would like to appeal your ruling.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No, we're continuing. Hold on.

Mr. Jacob Blum: He is to ascertain—

Mr. David Zimmer: There's a process here.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Excuse me here. You can ask for further documents with a motion but you can't interrupt the proceedings to do that. You will have an opportunity to put forward a motion to ask for further documents.

So please continue.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I apologize on behalf of my colleagues, Mr. Blum. We're trying to get some straightforward answers here. I don't know what the sensitivity is of the government members. They should be on the same side of this and want the same information that we're asking for.

Can you speak to the information that was under discussion at this meeting by both Mr. Apps and Mr. Guy? What is it that they were speaking to?

Mr. Jacob Blum: The issue was trying to ascertain what the Ministry of Finance's motives were for the purpose of consolidating Ornge's assets up into its balance sheets. These notes refer to the discussions surrounding that: Who is going to handle the issue and how are we going to proceed? So it was more of a strategic discussion.

Mr. Frank Klees: And who was going to handle this?

Mr. Jacob Blum: The "to do's": Don Guy was going to handle some cryptic emails, and then, how fast can we get a meeting? We wanted a meeting with the Ministry of Finance—

Mr. Frank Klees: And who was going to arrange that meeting?

Mr. Jacob Blum: That meeting, to be quite candid with you—previously in my notes there had been phone calls and inquiries made into the Ministry of Finance about the consolidation issue by Mr. Guy through Alfred Apps, and this was subsequent to that, and now we're setting up the meeting: who is going to attend and what the strategy of the meeting is going to be.

The overall purpose of the meeting was to get the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Finance and Ornge to the same table and figure out what's going on with consolidation.

Mr. Frank Klees: And did either Mr. Apps or Mr. Guy volunteer or were they asked to or was it expected that they would arrange these meetings or telephone calls with the Ministry of Finance?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Not specifically, but within conjunction with Ornge, who was tasked with the original phone call—my recollection is not a call, but if you flip to the second page, "[senior finance is] on our side," Don had spoken to them, and this is his feedback, that senior financial is on our side, "certain not offside," "not trying to get us," confident he can manage the outcome, "outcome winning" by our principles of why we ought not to be consolidated; ensure that we would get a "proper hearing." In addition, "what level" at the Auditor General—we had no idea; "proper level of authority," "ensure PWC is confident."

Mr. Frank Klees: Who is PWC?

Mr. Jacob Blum: PricewaterhouseCoopers.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mr. Jacob Blum: They were brought in via Alfred Apps in order to advise on the public sector accounting standards. And then it continued—

Mr. Frank Klees: At the bottom of the next page, Mr. Blum, there's your writing: "Don Guy setting up meeting with [Ministry of Finance] and AG." What did that mean?

Mr. Jacob Blum: That was discussed in the teleconference call. Whether or not that materialized, I can't recall. But that was discussed as part of the strategy. So we're having a teleconference call. People were handing take-aways, and that would have been a take-away.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Thank you. Can I just ask—I think we have a couple of minutes left here—in terms of the oversight responsibility, you mentioned that you met on a regular basis with the emergency health services branch of the ministry. There were certain responsibilities, clearly, that the ministry had, and that's why they were meeting with you in terms of oversight.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: They had inspection rights under the performance agreement.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: Your assessment—you met with them on a regular basis until you left.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you feel that the Ministry of Health exercised its responsibilities both during the time that you were there, in terms of its inspection responsibilities, and once you had left? What's your assessment of how efficiently and effectively they met their responsibilities under the terms of the agreement?

Mr. Jacob Blum: Briefly, while I was there they relied heavily on me to ensure that the performance agreement was in compliance. So if there was reporting, if there was documentation required, they would rely on me to provide it. After I had left, things started to go diagonally and there was a geometrical expansion of issues. How the ministry handled those issues after I left, I'm not privy to. So, while I was there they relied on me to deal with any issues they may have had; after my departure, I don't know who they relied on.

Mr. Frank Klees: The Auditor General made reference in his report to the reporting process and the mechanisms in place that Ornge has in terms of its dispatch and in terms of the tracking of calls. Did you ever make a recommendation to Ornge to upgrade that internal process, the technology, and what was the response that you received from that?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. Jacob Blum: Yes, I had put together a comprehensive strategy in upgrading the performance agreement, some of which I alluded to in my opening remarks. In the package you received, there's one sheet that looks like gobbledygook, but that is the business architecture for which the dispatch centre would be the core, and connections into financials billing. I also brought in an SAP system, from an accounting standpoint, so there could be no funny stuff with the books, to give the government confidence that we had a top-tier accounting system. I also brought in a highly regarded and highly credentialed team in order to build the plan, deal with the third party vendors, build the strategy without disruption. There was very little interest in dealing with the dispatch. I'll be very candid with you: I was completely taken aback to read the 2012 Auditor General's report to find out that the systems that were meant to be interim systems only are still there.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time.

I would just like to comment to the government bench that you will have the floor this afternoon as we start the proceedings. If you wish to move a motion at that time, you're welcome to do so. But there was no ruling to appeal, and you can't, on a point of order, move a motion.

Thank you very much for coming before us.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I was wondering if, in the interest of all the committee, Chair—we do have the Auditor General here as a resource, and I would like the Auditor General to tell us whether he was ever contacted by Don Guy to have a meeting between finance and the Auditor General.

Mr. Jim McCarter: Sure. I'm not aware of any contact. Typically the way the consolidation—this is the accounting consolidation, not the operational consolidation—

Mr. Jacob Blum: That is correct; that is correct.

Mr. Jim McCarter: I agree with your comments on the operational consolidation. But on the accounting consolidation, it would primarily be driven by the Ministry of Finance. Their financial statements—they would come to us and say, "We think hospitals or school boards should be consolidated." In this case they came to us and said, "We think that"—and this was a grey one. Ornge was a bit grey, whether it should be consolidated. They came to us and said, "We think it falls over the side of the fence and it should be consolidated." We looked at it, with the debt issue and 99% of the funding coming from the government, and we essentially agreed with their position. But I'm not aware—I was certainly never contacted by Don Guy. We've discussed it in-house, and I think my staff would have mentioned if we had been contacted by Don Guy, but it probably never got that far, Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you, Mr. McCarter.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. This committee is recessed until this afternoon.

The committee recessed from 1025 to 1230.

MS. MARIA RENZELLA

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'll call this meeting to order. Our first witness this afternoon is Maria Renzella. Please come forward. Welcome. Just to confirm, you have received a letter with information about witnesses coming before the committee?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, I have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. I believe our clerk will have an oath for you.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Ms. Renzella, the Bible is in front of you.

Do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have time for an opening statement, and then we'll move to the parties for questions.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Good afternoon. I would like to thank you and the committee for giving me the opportunity to speak to you today.

I was hired by Ornge in April 2005 as the vice-president of finance. For most of my career as a chartered accountant, I have worked in the health care and telecom industries. I felt that my skills and experience were a good fit with the organization, and I was impressed with its strategic vision.

At that time, air ambulance services in Ontario relied on a patchwork of decentralized operations and private sector airlines. Like all health care services in Ontario, air ambulance services were faced with rapidly increasing costs and constrained budgets. Working under the leadership of Dr. Mazza and our board of directors, it was clear to me that our mission at Ornge was to improve the efficiency and quality of air ambulance services by centralizing the province's operations under a single organization. It was also clear to me that Ornge was committed to a strategy of finding new sources of revenue to help sustain adequate funding for air medical transport services and to reduce the financial burden on the province's health care system.

My role at Ornge was to work within the management team to execute the strategies and policies of Dr. Mazza and the board of directors. I did so with great care and diligence, as did all members of the management team.

Finally, I would like to express my admiration and support for all the dedicated men and women who work at Ornge. I have no doubt that the organization will continue to provide excellent care to the people of Ontario.

I'm happy to answer any questions that the committee may have.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your opening statement.

We'll go to the government first: Mr. Moridi. You have 20 minutes. We're going to do two 20-minute rounds and then see what time is left.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

Thank you, Ms. Renzella, for taking the time to appear before this committee. When did you first meet Dr. Mazza?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I met him April 2005, a few weeks before I started.

Mr. Reza Moridi: What was your initial impression when you met him?

Ms. Maria Renzella: He was charismatic, visionary, very energetic. But the most important thing I noticed was that he had a vision of what he wanted to do with the air ambulance system.

Mr. Reza Moridi: How closely did you work with him when you were working for Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Being the VP of finance and eventually the executive vice-president of corporate services, I basically managed all the back-office processes. So I worked with Chris mostly on financial matters and anything to deal with financial controls, information technology, anything about those processes, to ensure that the company kept running in the back end.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Would that be on a daily basis?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, it would be on a daily basis initially, as we were building the organization. And then as life went on, there would be weekly meetings that the management team would have, and he would call me or talk to me on an as-needed basis.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Were you involved or did you have any knowledge of the review of his salary that led it to increase to $1.4 million?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, I knew what the salary was. The salary was determined by the board of directors, and the position I held was to ensure that the payroll matched the salary that was approved.

Mr. Reza Moridi: But you were not involved in the process?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I was not involved in the process. The output came from the board of directors. They went through their own processes. I was just given the paperwork to execute.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Do you know the reason for that increase?

Ms. Maria Renzella: There were two parts of that salary, as I understand. There was the salary for being the CEO, and he also received a medical director's stipend. Those were the two pieces in that amount. The salary was based on a third party consulting firm coming in, as I understand, that was hired every year. They came in and did a review of that.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Do you know who that consulting firm was?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was a company called Cliste near the end. At the beginning, it was Luis Navas who was the consultant who provided advice on executive compensation.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Do you think that salary was appropriate for somebody in that position, within that sort of company—

Ms. Maria Renzella: I believe that the salary was quite high for that—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Excuse me. Ms. Renzella, can I ask you to back off from the microphone just a little bit? It's making Hansard difficult.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Oh, I'm so sorry.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Okay. Yes, I believe that the salary was very high, given the size of the organization.

Although it was complex, I did believe that the salary was quite high.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Did you object to that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was not my role to object. My role was only to get the directions from the board of directors at the time and execute.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Do you think that it was appropriate for Dr. Mazza to hire his girlfriend?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, from a perspective of, I think hiring someone who is your girlfriend and promoting them provides for challenges and problems at work. You had to be on your toes, knowing that that was the situation, and you had to be careful when working with that individual. I believed it was very disruptive to the work organization and did not think it was a good idea.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you very much. Mr. Chair, I'm passing it on to Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you very much. Last week, we had testimony from Mr. Rick Potter, who used to be with Ornge. We were discussing this whole business of salaries on the sunshine list, or not, as the case may be. Mr. Potter had indicated that it was you who had removed the Ornge executives from the sunshine list. Is that reasonably accurate, that you had a role to play in removing people from the sunshine list?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Just to clarify, the sunshine list was dependent on who was being paid in Ornge. In 2007, we had created a company called Ornge Peel and also the Ornge Foundation. At that time, a number of executives were moved to Ornge Peel, and then later on the rest of the back office was moved to Ornge Peel, so there were a number of people. That was because it was an organization that was being set up in order to do revenue-generating activities. That's why there was the back office.

I went to the lawyers and asked them how the sunshine list impacted this, and we were given advice by the lawyers at that time that they were not required to go on the sunshine list.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And who would the lawyers be who gave you that advice?

Ms. Maria Renzella: This was through Fasken's.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I see. And which lawyers did you work with on the compensation regulatory issues?

Ms. Maria Renzella: On the compensation, Cindy Heinz was the lead lawyer, the billing lawyer at the time, and I believe Lynne Golding and Guy Giorno at the time were also providing advice as to that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So it was Ms. Golding, Mr. Giorno, and then Ms. Heinz was still at Fasken's?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, she was. Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So at the time the decision was made to move people from Ornge to one of the subsidiaries, she was still at the law firm and she was one of the people who gave that advice.

When you were discussing, then, this whole business of where people would be assigned in terms of their jobs, tell me, how did the discussion revolve around whether or not people were on the sunshine list? How did the discussion revolve around should people be moved because that would hide them from the sunshine list?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The majority of the discussion arose as to why people needed to be on the separate organization and what the purpose of that organization was. That was the determining factor at the time, which of course also led to the fact that we didn't have to go on the sunshine list. The lawyers, as I understood it, said that it was not necessary, and we had informed Chris at the time. It was up to him whether he wanted to put people on the sunshine list or not, but we were not required by law at the time to do so.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Mr. Potter indicated that, in fact, he volunteered to go on the sunshine list, but that he was not allowed by yourself to have his salary on the sunshine list; so even though he was willing to be appearing on the sunshine list, the decision was that the lawyer said, "It's not necessary." It wasn't a case of people deciding whether or not to reveal their salaries; it was, "You are now employed here, so therefore you will not be on the sunshine list."

Ms. Maria Renzella: Once the decision was made as to who was in what bucket or which organization, that decision wasn't really revisited until recently, until the media reports. Then the question was asked, "Would you be willing to put your name on the sunshine list?" We all agreed, but at that point—this was December 2011, of which nothing has come—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So it's your position, then, that the fact that salaries seemed to start going up rather dramatically after people went over to the for-profit side and came off the sunshine list—the fact that the salaries were hidden and the fact that they then started to rise rather dramatically were totally coincidental?

Ms. Maria Renzella: What I would like to say is that the rising of the salaries—and I think you're speaking specifically about Dr. Mazza's salary. If you go back to the last time his salary was disclosed, it was 2008, but that was only a partial year for 2007, so that number is understated. It does not reflect a full year of his salary, so I wanted to make sure that everyone was aware of that. But as—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But nevertheless, his salary at least doubled to $1.4 million.

Ms. Maria Renzella: His salary would have increased over that period of time. Again, the board was well aware of that, and they were determining what the salaries were at that time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: The board of what?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The board of Ornge and Ornge Peel. They were the same board. They were the ones who knew what the salaries were—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, that's interesting, because some of the board members have testified that they didn't know what Dr. Mazza's salary was. There seems to have been some people on the board who were aware and possibly some who weren't. That would contradict some of the other testimony we've received.

The thing that I find confusing, and perhaps I'll appear to—could you hand that to the witness? This is something that has been previously distributed to the committee because it appeared in the request for information from Ms. Li, the ADM, with respect to salary disclosure. What she revealed, out of the FOI documents, was an email chain where some of the Ministry of Health people were trying to reconcile—it would appear that they were trying to reconcile the previous sunshine list to the new sunshine list.

What I find interesting as a response, in terms of asking where did these salaries go, is that the payroll supervisor at Ornge says, "A number of employees have left our organization since 2008 and 2009." I'm wondering, if correspondence went out from Ornge in 2009, whose signature, whose name would have appeared on the correspondence from Ornge, the CEO of Ornge, if correspondence went from Ornge in 2009?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It would have been Dr. Mazza. He would have been the CEO of Ornge.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So here, then, we would have had the CEO of Ornge, still being Dr. Mazza, from the point of view of the world, but the communication from the payroll supervisor at finance is that a number of employees, who have disappeared from the sunshine list, "have left our employ." That would include Dr. Mazza; I believe it would include yourself; it would include Mr. Potter. How do you reconcile the idea that people left, which is what the Ministry of Health was told, yet Dr. Mazza still appears to be CEO of Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: One is a legal question as to what needed to be displayed on the public salary disclosure list, and again, that was legal advice provided to us. Dr. Mazza had the option as to whether he wanted to do that.

The organization of Ornge Peel itself that was created was indirectly—it was owned by Ornge at the time, so it was all consolidated within it. The board of directors knew what the position was—at least, the chair did. The way it was structured was that there was an administrative agreement between the two organizations, from a legal perspective, to ensure that Chris would continue to be on as CEO. So there were legal arrangements made for that.

However, how do you reconcile the two would be—I was under the impression that this is all very normal to have people in one organization be able to provide services to other organizations. It was all controlled within. So the issue of the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act decision point was left with Dr. Mazza.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But you did understand that the purpose of the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act is so that the public is aware of the salary levels of the executives at transfer partners who are receiving provincial funds. Does not this decision, this advice that you received from Fasken's, from Golding, Giorno and Heinz, and the decision to say, "Oh, those people have left the organization," rather than disclosing the salary—do you really think that is consistent with the intent of the act?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Personally, I had no issues with disclosing my salary. Again, those directions came from Dr. Mazza at the time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. How much time do we have left in this round, Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about six minutes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Do you want to start now or do you want to add that to the next round?

Mr. David Zimmer: Jeff.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Jeff? Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Leal.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair, and thank you.

Last week, on May 9, Mr. Potter had some very shocking testimony, I believe, confirming rumours that have been circulating for at least a year regarding the selection of the Oshawa Municipal Airport to be a satellite base. It was not based on technical merit, so a lot of people want to get to the bottom of this. Were you aware of the decision to select the Oshawa Municipal Airport as an Ornge satellite base?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, I was aware of that decision.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Were you involved in the decision?

Ms. Maria Renzella: My involvement in any of those decisions was that I provided support to the executive lead in helping to establish a business case. So my team would provide all the financial report and analysis that would go along with such a business case.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Potter, the former chief aviation officer of Ornge, testified that he had “genuine concerns” about the location of a base at the Oshawa airport and indeed advised against that decision. Were you aware of his concerns?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I was aware of his concerns, and he had, as I understood, articulated them both to the executive in charge, Tom Lepine, and Dr. Mazza. Again, it was their decision as to whether to set up a satellite base.

Mr. Jeff Leal: So it's your testimony that he advised both Dr. Mazza and Mr. Lepine on this issue?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Were you aware of any lobbying that was done by either MPs or MPPs to move that site to Oshawa?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I was not aware. I do know that there was discussion that Dr. Mazza and Tom wanted to set up an eastern base at the time, and they weren't sure which area to pick, be it Peterborough, Oshawa or whatever other airport. So they were pretty public—

Mr. Jeff Leal: I'm familiar with the Peterborough business case.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah. And so when they went out there, it was a matter of who could provide the best solution to what they were looking for, but I was not aware of any lobbying.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Potter testified that the city of Oshawa provided incentives for Ornge to locate there. Are you aware of these incentives and could you provide me any information on the incentive package?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I was aware that there were incentives, but I wasn't the person directly dealing with that negotiation, so I don't know all of the details of that incentive.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Who would have that information for me? Is it Jim Feeley who would have that information?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Jim Feeley would have that information.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Lepine would have that information?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Mr. Lepine, yes, would have that information.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Mazza—Dr. Mazza—would have that information?

Ms. Maria Renzella: If you ask him, possibly. But I think if you want to go—the people who would actually have the details to provide you with that could be Jim or Tom, yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: In your opinion, why was the decision ever made to go to Oshawa Municipal Airport if there were so many technical reasons for it not to go there? In fact, Mr. Potter testified that when he was in the air traffic control business for Saskatchewan, Manitoba and, indeed, Ontario, Oshawa had more complaints to air traffic control because of the operation of the airport and, indeed, the curfew and potentially reducing response times if the Ornge satellite base was located in Oshawa.

Ms. Maria Renzella: The decision to have a satellite base was determined by Mr. Lepine, and I think it was more of an operational decision and something to do with time to patients in that area and the activity. But other than that, I was not involved in that decision at all.

Mr. Jeff Leal: I just want to make sure we're absolutely clear here. You're saying it was Mr. Lepine and Mr. Lepine only who made the final decision to go to Oshawa?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Mr. Lepine, under the direction of Dr. Mazza. There was a business case. They went and looked at a number of factors, as I understand. But it was also Dr. Mazza who wanted Tom to investigate whether they should look at opening an eastern base.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Did you review the business case?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, I did.

Mr. Jeff Leal: So what we're saying is that Mr. Potter said that there was no technical reason. You reviewed the business case—

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was reviewed by—from a financial perspective I reviewed it.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Which would have included the incentives that were put on the table by the city of Oshawa?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, yes, yes. But if you're asking me for details of those incentives, there weren't—

Mr. Jeff Leal: Are you aware that in the Municipal Act, in the province of Ontario, bonusing is illegal?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I was not aware of that.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Okay. Mr. Zimmer, you may have some questions?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): There's just one minute.

Interjection.

Mr. Jeff Leal: So, when Mr. Lepine appears in front of this committee, which he will do shortly, he's the individual who could shed a lot of light on this decision, I take it?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes. He will be able to shed a lot more light on this decision.

Mr. Jeff Leal: And Dr. Mazza: He was directly involved in making this decision also?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes. He asked Tom to look into opening up an eastern base, yes.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Okay, thank you very much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll move on to the official opposition. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Ms. Renzella, thank you for being here. You've obviously familiar with the Auditor General's report on Ornge.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: You've had a chance to read it.

Ms. Maria Renzella: I read the draft. I haven't read the new revised, but I would assume it's not substantially different.

Mr. Frank Klees: When you first saw the Auditor General's report, what was your reaction?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I was shocked, dismayed, upset, disappointed, a number of—I was just very upset about it.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's a very scathing report—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: —on a number of fronts. Whether it has to do with the patient safety and patient care side or whether it has to do with the operational side, it left a lot of questions, which of course is why we're here.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: One of the things that concerned us a great deal, and I think probably added to the concern not only of this committee and legislators but the public as well, were the Auditor General's comments that it was very difficult for him to get information when he asked for it. The minute that there's a cloak of secrecy, it obviously begs the question: What are these people hiding? Can you help us to understand why the Auditor General would have been obstructed to get information that clearly he felt was in his mandate to have available to him so that he could, in turn, report to the Legislature on what was happening at Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: As I read that, I felt that we responded to all the Auditor General's requests in a timely manner. In some places, we had to go look for the information due to filing and having it in boxes or pulling some things together to make it cohesive. If the Auditor General is referring to the issue about the restructuring and understanding there were some documents that were in or out of scope, there was a discussion between the chair of the board at the time and the director in the Auditor General's office to determine what the scope of the work was between that for-profit side and the not-for-profit side. My understanding at the time is that there was agreement as to what was to be shared and what was not to be shared. There was no comment otherwise that would have indicated that we were not sharing information appropriately. I did not hear that we were not sharing information. I do understand, at times, though, it just took us a little longer to pull some information together.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Chair, I'd like to hear from the Auditor General. My question to the Auditor General is: Were there specific requests that you made to Mr. Rothfels on occasion? What was the response from Mr. Rothfels to your request?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Auditor General?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Thank you, Chair. I think maybe the best way I can characterize it is, we eventually got the information that we requested, but compared with our other audits, it took an unduly long amount of time to get the information. Often we'd ask for it, we'd have to ask for it again, and we'd get a document, but we wouldn't get all the document. As Ms. Renzella knows, a lot of the documents were at the lawyers'; that took a fair bit of time. It was challenging to get the documents. We eventually got it, we eventually got the explanations, but it just took a lot of time.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. I think the concern that we have, Ms. Renzella, is that there seemed not only to be a great deal of complexity around this organization; there clearly were a lot of issues that did not invoke a great deal of confidence.

We've already heard your responses to the issue of the sunshine list.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right.

Mr. Frank Klees: We also heard testimony from Ms. Golding about the fact that, yes, they provided legal opinion, but in providing that legal opinion, they also made a recommendation that, notwithstanding the fact that you are not obligated legally to disclose, you do so anyway, given the relationship between Ornge and the government of Ontario. Can you confirm that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes. Nevertheless, despite the fact that your legal firm, while responding to the technical request to provide a legal opinion—and they provided that—offered their best advice to say, "Look, in the interest of public confidence, you should be disclosing these salaries." You can understand, I'm sure, why we would question the motivation and the intent when this organization that was receiving $150 million of public money would choose not to. Does that make sense to you? Do you understand why we would be concerned?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I understand. As I had already said, this was a Dr. Mazza decision, so this is what he wanted to do.

Mr. Frank Klees: Ms. Renzella, you have a professional background. Prior to coming to Ornge, you were with Allstream, a respectable company. What was your role there?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I was a director of finance. I worked mainly with the sales and marketing departments.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was your income at Allstream?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was $120,000 at the time, plus a number of options.

Mr. Frank Klees: And when you came to Ornge, what was your starting salary?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was $130,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: I think the last salary that I saw posted was $430,000. Is that correct?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The salary was made up of a number of components. It was $240,000; plus there was a performance bonus on top.

Mr. Frank Klees: Right. But basically, in the space of—when did you start?

Ms. Maria Renzella: April 2005. So I started at $130,000 plus a performance bonus at that point in time—as well, at Allstream, there was a performance bonus and options, too.

Mr. Frank Klees: So it's fair to say that you've done very well there. In fact, what we've seen from other executives is that everyone did well at Ornge. No one denies anyone success, but the reason that we're examining this is because it is tax dollars, and it wasn't exactly a perfect organization in terms of the success measurements that, as a public body, we would like to see, from the standpoint of delivering emergency ambulance services. So you understand again our questioning, and I think the taxpayer wants us to get some answers to these questions.

Can I ask this? As a professional who no doubt took your responsibilities very seriously, did you at any time, while you were employed at Ornge, feel that you were being asked to do certain things that you felt were the wrong things to do?

Ms. Maria Renzella: While I was at Ornge, I thought a lot about whatever I was asked to do. I stayed at Ornge mainly because of the mission that it had. It was performing a service to the province of Ontario which was very important to me. I was very loyal to that and committed to that organization.

When things were asked, I tried to ensure that it stayed, in my mind, within the realms of what would be appropriate. I ensured, first and foremost, that whatever was done was legal. I would go to the lawyers a number of times to make sure that whatever was being asked was legal. That was my first and foremost. In many cases—and we were able to always work within a legal environment.

Whether or not I agreed with every decision made, I would suggest that I could say to you I didn't agree with every decision made. I would have made other decisions depending on if I was in that position to make the decision.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like you to think about this very carefully.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like you to think about the time when the aircraft purchase agreement was finalized and the follow-up to that with the marketing services agreement. I understand that you were the point person, along with Dr. Mazza, in negotiating directly with Agusta the marketing services agreement. Is that correct?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, with the marketing services agreement. I was not involved in the negotiations on the helicopter agreement, no.

Mr. Frank Klees: That is contrary to what Mr. Potter said, and I'm sure you saw his—

Ms. Maria Renzella: I saw that, and that was incorrect.

Mr. Frank Klees: Why do you think Mr. Potter would have put you into that position?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I don't know. At the time when they were negotiating the agreement, I was not part of that. It's a very complex agreement. You're buying helicopters, so there were consultants on board whom we had hired and contractors with aviation experience in aircraft procurement, and there were lawyers on board. I was not involved in the set-up of that. He may have forgotten—

Mr. Frank Klees: But you were involved in negotiating directly with Agusta the marketing services agreement. Is that correct?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Initially, and then, as the services started to be defined, it actually moved over into the marketing area.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, but at that beginning stage—can I ask: Where did the original draft of that agreement emanate from? Is that something that you prepared, or was that initial draft delivered to you by Agusta as a starting point?

Ms. Maria Renzella: So if I can step back and sort of walk through what the agreement was, I received a phone call in January of—I believe it was 2010. Dr. Mazza had called me and informed me that he had negotiated a deal with Agusta whereby he agreed to pay for weight upgrades. In return, he wanted to receive a donation, of which he wanted the donation to be used to help with these revenue-generating opportunities. He therefore mandated me, when I returned back, to get in contact with lawyers and determine on how to execute this.

I returned from school at that point in time and spent the first week understanding the facts. I didn't understand completely what the deal was. I had to talk to a number of people. I spoke with the lawyers to understand what they understood the deal was to be. I just had to think about what this all meant.

Later on, it became apparent—the lawyers did come back to me and said that what Dr. Mazza wished to do could not be done, especially in regard to a charitable organization. You could not take funds like that, receive them and have them used for revenue-generation activities.

Mr. Frank Klees: How much money were we talking about?

Ms. Maria Renzella: We were talking $4.8 million.

Mr. Frank Klees: So $4.8 million?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

Ms. Maria Renzella: At this point in time, just to make it all clear, the organization Ornge owned both the foundation—not legally, but it had control over the foundation and the organization called Ornge Peel at the time. So there were discussions with the lawyers whereby, for such a transaction to occur, a value for the service being given had to be demonstrated. Therefore, we sat and we talked about it. I talked to Chris. I was just trying to think through what that could mean.

If you read the agreement—I read the agreement with Agusta; it had contemplated a joint marketing agreement at the time. I spoke with Chris and explained to him specifically what the lawyers had said, talked to him about the concept of this joint marketing—maybe there's a marketing service that could be provided or something. But it was more of a brainstorming to talk about value for service.

Then I talked to the lawyers a bit more to understand whether that would be something that was legally qualifying. Dr. Mazza therefore—he thought about it a bit more and spoke with Agusta at that point in time.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, that's interesting. So it was intended—the $4.8 million was really a donation. Your lawyers told you that you can't accept that donation and so we went back to the drawing board to say, "How can we accept this $4.8 million and how can we paper this?" That's really what it came down to, isn't it?

Ms. Maria Renzella: How do you make it legal, to be used for what you needed to use the funds for.

Mr. Frank Klees: Or at least appear legal, right?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Well, at the time, the intention, I believe, was to make sure, right? But—

Mr. Frank Klees: In the process of this—again, I remind you that we've had a number of people here under oath, and there will be more to come. There were a lot of people concerned about this process and there were a lot of people who saw through the facade of this paper.

At any time—and please think about this—did any of the consultants or executives around you or board members come to you to say, "Look, this is wrong. This is illegal. This is essentially fraud"? Did that ever happen?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. People were—there was definitely controversy between Rick and Chris at the time as to whether Chris would pay for the weight upgrades, but no one ever used the word "fraud." No one said it was illegal. It was never mentioned. I never heard of that term.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did anyone suggest it was questionable?

Ms. Maria Renzella: There was a lot of internal controversy. I think the focus and the mandate I had at the time was definitely to try to ensure that whatever we were doing was legal. That was the focus.

Mr. Frank Klees: You are confirming that Mr. Potter—who took great pride in telling us that he had, whether it was him or whether it was a group of them, essentially negotiated away the cost of that weight upgrade and that Dr. Mazza insisted, nevertheless, to pay that. The way we understand it is that even though Agusta had agreed not to charge it, Dr. Mazza insisted on paying it, and it was going to be paid, clearly, out of the bond offering funds that had been raised to buy the helicopters. And then that money would be funnelled back into what was going to be the charity but ended up being—which company?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Ornge Peel.

Mr. Frank Klees: Ornge Peel. So you are confirming that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The actual discussions and the negotiations, I was not part of. I just received that phone call from Chris. Rick said he was unhappy with it. Again, I don't know all the details of what Rick negotiated at the time. I received the phone call from Chris at the time stating that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Can you tell me, when those payments—I'll just fast-forward a bit here.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Sure.

Mr. Frank Klees: When those payments were made—and we have a copy of the marketing services agreement; I think it has been circulated to everyone. There's a schedule of payments. When those payments were made, they were made to Ornge Peel, you say?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, and they would have come through your office as the finance person. You would have received those wire transfers, I'm assuming, and you would know where they were deposited; is that correct?

1310

Ms. Maria Renzella: My finance team would have known that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Where were they deposited?

Ms. Maria Renzella: They would have been deposited in the Ornge Peel bank account at the time. Then, when there was the corporate restructuring in January 2011, there was that movement—a new corporation of Ornge Global Corporate Services was set up, at which point in time that agreement was assigned there. Once it was assigned there, then those payments were made to that organization.

Mr. Frank Klees: All right. So there would have been funds already deposited from the previous payments.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're saying, then, that those funds were transferred into the Ornge Global services account.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes. The way it would have worked at the time—this is where things get a bit complex—is, through the corporate restructuring, what we ensured during that time period—or the finance team—was that any funds received from the marketing service agreement were delineated from the rest of Ornge's funds. There was to be no commingling of the funds, the government funds versus the Agusta funds. Those funds were used to pay off any activities that were not related to the provision of air ambulance services in Ontario. That was how it was working.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. I'm sorry, I—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about 30 seconds left, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Well, we'll have to—could I take about five minutes of my time? I just want to finish this line of questioning, if you don't mind. I'll make it up on the next round.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead. Continue.

Mr. Frank Klees: What we have here—and it's very honourable that the folks wanted to make sure there was no commingling of funds; right?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Exactly.

Mr. Frank Klees: They didn't want that money to go into the not-for-profit section.

Ms. Maria Renzella: And vice versa. They didn't want the not-for-profit section—

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure. Did anyone suggest that that's where they came from to begin with?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, of course not. Can you tell me—because they originally came from the bond offering; right?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The bond offering was used to pay for the upgrades and a number of other upgrades that were going on at the time.

Mr. Frank Klees: Right, but we negotiated down, so we didn't have to pay the $10 million. Now the $4.8 million, net of the upgrades, was funnelled back into Ornge Global, so it's all from the same source. Of course, the taxpayers are paying the interest payments on that money, so in the end, it's nice to keep it segregated, but it really was all public money to begin with. Nevertheless, we'll deal with that elsewhere.

Can you tell me what happened? You said that those monies were then earmarked to use for other things. What other things and what other activities—

Ms. Maria Renzella: They were to be used for the provision of the services per the marketing agreement, so it was any of the hiring of marketing personnel, sales personnel, and professional fees that were encountered in helping to develop some of the revenue.

Mr. Frank Klees: So $4.8 million was used to pay people like Kelly Long, who I understand had the lead on that whole marketing production. We're going to be getting a copy of the deliverables under that marketing agreement.

In your professional opinion, was that marketing agreement and the products that were ultimately delivered to Agusta worth $4.8 million?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Two ways to answer that: First of all, it was negotiated with Agusta. There was a large amount of time negotiated. It was not something that was done overnight. I started with that negotiation in March. The agreement was signed about four or five months later, and it was to ensure that the services did provide $4.8 million.

Now, when looking at it from our perspective, at the beginning it was to understand what the costs would be in delivering such a service at that time, and there was obviously a profit component. But again, I would ask Agusta to ensure whether they received that value.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure. Well, we know it was a donation. And we also know that the contract itself was nothing more than a sham, and Agusta participated in that. We have evidence that they do that worldwide. This is part of how they do business, from what we're told.

I guess what I was hoping to hear from you, and I'm hoping that someone—I mean, Mr. Potter came very close to it. I'm hoping that someone within Ornge will actually fess up and actually say, "You know something, folks? This was wrong. We did the wrong thing." Everybody sees it. What we're looking for is for someone—now, it may take the police to do that; I don't know. I'm sure they're following the money, and ultimately they will draw a conclusion. What I think the public is interested in, and what we would like to see as a committee, is someone who was engaged in this, whether they were bullied into doing it or whether they did it simply through complicity—it would be good to simply have an answer and for someone to stand up and say, "You know what? I'm willing to actually tell the truth here. I think this was wrong, and yet I was bullied into participating, into making this happen." Would you be willing to step forward to do that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: When I looked at the transaction at the time, and it was at the time when everything was within the same—it was all within the same group. It was the same organization. It was looking at making a payment, receiving a payment, in order to generate revenues; that was looking at ensuring the long-term sustainability of the organization. It was to help generate profits. It was going to help provide services to the province of Ontario. It would help mitigate any financial risk. There was a number of things potentially that was going to help do when it was pulled together underneath one roof.

As the for-profit structure was created, that was the one in 2011, and then that agreement was moved over to that side, you know, I can understand how, as you sit there and you're looking at this—I can understand your position. So I would relook at that transaction, given the way it ended up being. But initially, it was all to be a beneficial transaction for all.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have used your five minutes. For the additional five minutes, we'll move to the NDP: Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You were at Ornge from April 2005 till 2012; you invested seven years of your life into that organization. How could it be that you ended up being terminated?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I was terminated legally. I was an employee of a company called Ornge Global GP, which was providing master management services to Ornge. That was the organization that was on the right-hand side of the big corporate structure. It went into insolvency. The contract between Ornge and Ornge Global GP was terminated, at which point my employment was terminated. There was a windup of all the for-profit activity at that point in time.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did Ornge Global GP—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Apart from what was transferred over in the agreement from Augusta, what other source of revenue did they have, and what kind of amount were they bringing in?

Ms. Maria Renzella: So when it was started up, the organization had a marketing services agreement in one of the entities that belonged in that whole family. Ornge Global GP just housed a few executives who charged their time at cost. Everything was done at cost. There was no profit to Ornge. So that was their other source of revenue, through this master management agreement.

Any time that those executives, including myself, worked on any Global initiatives that were not specific to Ornge, they were charged to the Global services side. That was either financed through the marketing agreement—there was also a loan that was done from Ornge to the right-hand, to that for-profit, side. That loan was a result of a credit lease transaction. The credit lease transaction was where there were some funds raised through the monetization of a lease that was done between Ornge and Ornge Real Estate.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So that was for renting of the space?

Ms. Maria Renzella: That was for the renting of the space, yeah.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So, aside from the money you were getting from the dealings you had with Ornge the not-for-profit and Augusta, there were no other sources of funding?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. The organization was pursuing external investors at the time, and at the same time, they were looking for other alternative sources of revenue. They had visited the States to see if they could generate some potential customers down there. They were setting up a joint-venture-type partnership down in Brazil to see if there could be some work that could be done down there.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Wouldn't you say that it was a little bit premature to move you over there? Why not wait till some of that work was done?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I agree. I think, from my perspective, it was premature to create the structure. The business plan was not fully created at the time in order to entice the investors to come in or to generate the revenue. There had to be additional research required at the time before that would be going. So I do agree with you.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But yet you agreed to transfer your employment agreement to an entity that had no revenue.

Ms. Maria Renzella: At the time—it was sort of like the structure was being approved through the board. The process by which they went through the approvals of the structure and the legalities were such that I went along to do that. But if you're asking from more of a business sense whether the timing was too early to move people around or to even set up the structure, that was more of what my answer was pertaining to. It was almost like it was preparing for things to occur.

M^{me} France Gélinas: When you received your paycheque, would you receive a paycheque from Ornge Air, the not-for-profit, and then a paycheque from Ornge Global?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. I received only one paycheque, from Ornge Global.

M^{me} France Gélinas: From Ornge Global.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who paid for Mr. Rick Potter's salary, Ornge Global or Ornge Air?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Ornge Air paid Rick Potter's salary, and then the way it was structured was, Ornge Air provided services to Ornge; it was an aviation services contract. So all the actual costs—again, nothing was done at profit; everything was—it was almost like all actual costs. So if I paid Rick $240,000 a year, that salary was charged back to Ornge at $240,000 a year. So that's how that would work.

M^{me} France Gélinas: On Rick's paycheque, it would show Ornge Air. On your paycheque, it would show Ornge Global.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So we come back to, then: How could it be that the decision was made not to disclose Rick's salary if he was paid by Ornge Air?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The decision was made basically by Dr. Mazza at the time. Legally, he was given advice that if they were in separate legal structures, he did not have to disclose, so he did not want to disclose and the decision was therefore to disclose only those salaries that were in Ornge at the time.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So just to break down the difference: Before 2009, would you agree with me that there were no for-profit entities?

Ms. Maria Renzella: In 2007, I believe we set up Ornge Peel, which was—the way, legally—we just set up an organization. It was owned by Ornge. It was for-profit from a legal perspective, but it didn't generate any profit. Everything was done at cost. It was just a method to ensure that—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure. So, with the exception of Ornge Peel, the whole for-profit structure hadn't been set up yet.

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. It had not been set up yet; absolutely.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Your salary up until—you weren't paid by Ornge Peel, ever. Is that correct?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I was not paid by Ornge Peel ever—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: By Ornge Peel.

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, no, I was paid by Ornge Peel.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You were paid.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, I was.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And when were you moved to Ornge Peel?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I moved at the same time as a number of other people were moved, as well as the back office. I believe it was in 2007.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Rick Potter was never moved to Ornge Peel. Is that correct?

Ms. Maria Renzella: He was in Ornge Peel at one point in time. He was in Ornge, then Ornge Peel. Then, when the decision was to internalize the aviation operations, he was then moved into Ornge Air, because there had to be an accountable executive from a regulatory perspective to ensure that you had someone in there.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure. His pay, though, throughout his time period, while he was working there, was always from Ornge Air. Is that correct?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And Ornge Air is not-for-profit?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Ornge Air, again, is in a legally set, for-profit organization. It's called for-profit. But as Peel was, they were just providing services, so nothing was done at profit. There were no profits being generated; it was just at cost. It was a charge-back.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: But he was always being paid by Ornge Air from the beginning of his payment till the end.

Ms. Maria Renzella: He started in Ornge and then he moved to Ornge Peel, and then he moved to Ornge Air. So he did move around.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: If Rick Potter testified that he was always paid by Ornge Air, would you agree with that or disagree with that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: As soon as Ornge Air was created, I would agree with that, yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: No, for his entire—if he testified that for the entire duration of his payment, working at Ornge or working at this establishment, he was always paid by Ornge Air, would you agree with that or disagree?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I would say no, because in 2007, Ornge Air did not exist.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Mr. Potter indicated that he was always willing to disclose his salary. Would you agree with that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: We didn't talk about it that much. When it really came to fruition was when the media reports started coming out. There was an ask to say: Are you willing to disclose your salary? I asked him. I said that I would disclose mine, and he agreed to do that. But that was where the majority of those issues came out.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Was the decision to end the salary disclosure ever your decision?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, it was not.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And if he testified to that fact, would you agree with that or disagree with that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: If he testified to that fact that I—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That you're the one who said that he should not disclose—

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I would disagree with that. The decision not to disclose on the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act was Dr. Mazza's decision at the time in 2007. We just continued on with that decision.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you ever receive any freedom-of-information requests to disclose salary?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. No, I have not. We received a number of other FOI requests, but that one I have not seen. I'm trying to remember.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. What other FOI requests did you receive?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Performance agreement. That was the major one that I remember that was received.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And when was that, approximately?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I think it was 2010 or 2009.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In 2010 or 2009?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was late fall 2009.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Do you recall who made that request?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, no. That just came through the normal channels where there's a—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And if there was a freedom-of-information request for salaries, would that have ended up on your desk being one of your responsibilities?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes. That would have been on my desk, and I would have done what I normally would have done: phoned the lawyers and tried to determine what we needed to do with that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So if that request had been made, you would have received it? Do you agree with that comment?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It would have come to me at some point or someone would have told me about it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. If you never received that request, would it be fair to say that no one actually passed that information along to you, then?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Exactly.

M^{me} France G linas: Just to continue on this, the NDP did file a freedom of access of information when we realized that Dr. Mazza was no longer on the sunshine list. We were told that 13 documents were found and that none of them they could share with us. That's the ministry saying this. So you are telling us—we filed a request for freedom of access of information for Mr. Mazza's salary with the Ministry of Health. The Ministry of Health never asked you how much Mr. Mazza was making?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. I never received that request. Again, it depends on when you sent it. It might have gone through another channel in the organization, and I just never heard of it, but I've not personally seen that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You say that a loan helped pay for the salaries at Ornge Global?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That loan was secured—was that secured by Ornge, the not-for-profit entity?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was an unsecured loan because it was Ornge Real Estate that was making the loan to the global side, and there was no—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So were there any public assets used in securing that loan?

Ms. Maria Renzella: That's a more complicated question. The loan was an unsecured loan, and it was based on the difference between the amount of the capital value of the building and how much of a bond—there was a bond that was raised in relation to the building.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Was that building owned—

Ms. Maria Renzella: That was owned by Ornge Global Real Estate, which was a subsidiary of Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So then would that be considered a public asset?

Ms. Maria Renzella: If it was owned by Ornge. The question of whether it's a public asset or not I can't answer because that's more of a legal question. But I can at least tell you it would be an asset of Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's fine. Sure. Who paid the interest on the principal of that loan that Ornge Global had?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Ornge was paying the interest and principal on that loan.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So Ornge, the not-for-profit Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Ornge, the not-for-profit. The concept was that, at some point, the difference in that loan of—I think it was about $5 million, but it would have gone up to about $8 million. That was going to turn into an equity investment on the global side, and therefore there would have been some ownership there. The other concept was also that there were going to be some savings from that that Ornge would realize because Ornge Global will now pay a fair share of the rent and would pay more of the back-office services because that would be shared. There would be some offsets to those costs, so that—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure, but in actuality what happened was that a publicly funded entity was paying the interest on a for-profit loan given to a for-profit entity?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right, and then the for-profit entity was paying the interest on the loan back so it would have been nil, but at the time they were using the same funds to pay off the loan.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How much of this did the ministry know? I mean, every year you had to do an annual statement; you had to have your annual statement audited. I mean, we had a previous witness who says that they met with the Ministry of Health every week. How much of this did the ministry know?

Ms. Maria Renzella: All of this transaction happened in January 2011, and it was disclosed to the ministry as part of the documentation that was sent to the minister at the time. It was a 45-page document. Then they met with the various ministries and members of the government at that time. There were a number of people. I believe it was Tom Lepine, Rainer Beltzner and Alfred Apps who attended those meetings. At that point in time, all of this was disclosed.

M^{me} France Gélinas: From those disclosures and those meetings, did anybody from the ministry go back to you and ask for clarification?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I did not receive any clarifications on that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: The Minister of Health is on record as saying that of course alarm bells and red flags went up when they presented the 45-page document, but she says, "We were stonewalled by Ornge"—we couldn't get any information. But you're telling us that nobody from the ministry ever came and asked for more information?

Ms. Maria Renzella: That's true. No one came. I never heard an additional request at any point in time after those meetings had occurred.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Could it be that more financial information requests would have gone to somebody else and you wouldn't know that the ministry is looking?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I would say that if it went to my team—to the finance team directly or the government relations team—they would have informed me, so I did not hear that there were any other requests.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Are you aware of any other briefings or any other meetings where the ministry was apprised of what was going on at Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I was only aware of that set of meetings that Rainer Beltzner, Tom Lepine and Alfred Apps had at that time. There was about three or four different sets of meetings at that time, and then as a matter of course we had our quarterly meetings with the ministry.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And what did you discuss in your quarterly meetings?

Ms. Maria Renzella: We'd discuss any hot issues. At the time, the hottest issue was the Auditor General: What was the status of the Auditor General? So we discussed that. We discussed any operational issues. It was Tom Lepine and myself. It was mostly a matter of day-to-day issues, any operational issues, the Auditor General. We discussed where we were with some of the revenue-generating pieces, but those were mostly the discussions. They lasted for about half an hour to an hour.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So from 2008, let's say roughly, until 2011, how often and on what basis would you be meeting with the ministry to give them updates on what's going on at Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: There was a set meeting, and it started in about 2008. In late fall, there were quarterly meetings set up with them.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Quarterly meetings set up as of late 2008.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, late 2008.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And those continued on until the end of your stay there?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: Mr. Blum this morning told us that when he was there he met weekly with the minister and the EMS department at the Ministry of Health. Then, when he left, did anybody else continue those weekly meetings with the ministry?

Ms. Maria Renzella: We replaced the position, and that person, I think, had a different communication style than Mr. Blum. They talked on the phone quite a bit. I don't believe there were formal meetings because we had the quarterly meetings, but they would pick up the phone more often just to be able to keep them up to date as to what issues we were presented with and ask them questions, so it was more of that.

M^{me} France G  linas: And who would he call?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Who would that individual call? It was mostly with Dennis Brown.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And who was that individual?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was Catherine Rosebrugh who replaced Jacob Blum.

M^{me} France G  linas: When you had your quarterly meetings, who from the ministry would be there, or would attend or teleconference or whatever?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It would be mostly Dennis Brown, Malcolm Bates sometimes, Narendra Shah, who was their finance arm, Tony Campeau, Mike LeGros, and Patricia Li would attend—not all the time, but she would attend some of the meetings.

M^{me} France G  linas: And at no point did any of those people during the course of this say that the Minister of Health, or the office of the minister, has questions about your for-profit entity, they have questions about the marketing agreement, they have questions about the corporate structure, nothing?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, there was no discussion of that, no.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about one minute.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Was there any point in time where the ministry asked you a question or asked for some oversight and you said no or Ornge said no?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, there was nothing like that. This year when the organization handed in their results-based planning template, it was a bit confusing to everyone because of the change. There was change in where certain line items were, so I asked for a meeting with the finance team at the ministry and I walked them through the corporate structure, how it worked with that team at the time.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When was that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I would believe it was the fall, the September/October time frame. I went down there—it was after I did the RPP, so it would have been a November time frame. I walked through all of that with them, so that they could understand. It was a more informal setting, so that we could have a bit of interaction if they had a number of questions at that point in time.

M^{me} France G  linas: And the fact that the Minister of Health told us that she was trying to get financial information and she was stonewalled: Those people never shared that with you, they—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Exactly. I've not heard of that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much. We'll move on to the government now. Mr. McNeely, go ahead.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Ms. Renzella, you were executive vice-president, corporate services and vice-president, finance at Ornge.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Phil McNeely: And at some time, then, you became an employee of Ornge Global.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Which was for-profit.

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was a for-profit organization legally, but again it was a way to house a number of executives and then they could do a charge-back, but everything was done on a cost-recovery basis only.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Thank you. This morning Mr. Blum was asked if he was fired or quit, I think, in 2008. He was asked whether he was fired or quit. He said, "Neither." Would you comment on that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Whether he was fired or quit? I believe that he and Chris eventually just parted ways. They had a very close relationship, as I remember, but as life went on, I think Jacob and Chris were just not working well together and they decided to part ways. But there was a severance package arranged for that, so definitely it was an agreeable termination—but there was severance paid for that.

Mr. Phil McNeely: What are the terms of that separation agreement, then?

Ms. Maria Renzella: You're going to ask me to go way back in my memory. It was approximately, I believe, a year payout at the time, with some education payments.

Mr. Phil McNeely: So a full year?

Ms. Maria Renzella: A full year.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Plus some education?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Phil McNeely: If we could try to get that. That seems to be, the termination agreement, innovative; it was referred to, I think, by Mr. Blum as a sabbatical.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right.

Mr. Phil McNeely: And so it was a sabbatical—a full year's salary-plus. What was Mr. Blum's salary at that time?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was between $140,000 and $160,000 a year, plus bonus.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Plus bonuses. It seems to be a strange parting of ways that those kind of dollars should be paid out. Why do you think they were so generous with this separation agreement?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I think that was a decision from Chris. Anything I could offer here would be just a personal opinion.

Mr. Phil McNeely: So in your position, you had no input into that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I had no input into any of that.

Mr. Phil McNeely: I think I'd like to go now to that $4,772,500, or $7 million, whatever; it was the value that AgustaWestland received for those payments that were made. Potter had a different view about what the $7 million was. But what do you see as this agreement, which was signed—I'm not sure of the date—but it says $1,281,000 to be paid as phase 1; $1,740,000, phase 2; $1,750,000, phase 3, so a total of $4.7 million. What was that exactly for?

Ms. Maria Renzella: There were a number of services that were detailed. There was a whole phasing approach that said—I think there were three or four pages of deliverables where they had to do a large amount of research and then provide some deliverables. It's all very specific in there. It was agreed to between Agusta and the marketing team at the time.

The first phase—you can see that there was a large payout at the beginning. I believe it was, like you said, $1.2 million. It was almost to be able to fund the people that were going to do the work and some of the costs involved in doing the work. Then, at the end of the phasing, there would be another payment, and then they would start the second and third phases. The idea is, as they went along the phasing, as I remember—and I'm going from memory—is that the deliverables would also be further defined as you went along, because as you got more research, there would be more deliverables, there would be better definition, further defined. But it was going to be more of a collaborative effort between Agusta and the Ornge side.

Mr. Phil McNeely: The taxpayer eventually pays for the full amount of the aircraft, and Mr. Potter had proposed a good agreement with the plane manufacturer. We heard that evidence. In your position, was this realistic? Which hat were you wearing? There was the for-profit hat that some taxpayers' money had been put in through this—somebody referred to it as a kickback. Which hat would you be wearing when you were giving advice on this?

Ms. Maria Renzella: So at the time when this occurred, there was no for-profit side, so—always wearing the Ornge hat, always ensuring that there was value to the organization as a whole and, hence, value to ensuring that the services are being provided in accordance with the performance agreement. That was the hat that I wore all the time.

Mr. Phil McNeely: I'll turn it over to Mr. Zimmer.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: You're a chartered accountant—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: The early part of your career was with a national accounting firm. Before that, you have a bachelor of finance. Then you got a master's degree in business administration at the Kellogg-Schulich, that's in Chicago and at York; comptroller at the University Health Network; director of finance for the old AT&T, now Allstream; and most recently at Ornge. So you're an experienced financial person.

Last week, Mr. Potter gave his evidence, and he told us how he negotiated a substantial discount with Agusta. He presented what he thought was good news to Chris Mazza and was met with the response from Mazza, "No, we're not going to take that discount. We're going to pay the full price"—if you will. Mr. Potter was asked, "What was your reaction to that?" I'm quoting Mr. Potter's evidence from Hansard. He said to Mazza, "Are you freaking crazy?" referring to Mazza not taking the discount. That "Are you freaking crazy?" comment from Mr. Potter to Mazza, when he got Mazza's rejection of the discount: Is that a sentiment that you would have shared?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Initially.

Mr. David Zimmer: So you would have felt, as Potter did, "Are you freaking crazy?"

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah, but at that point in time, I had to understand all the facts. I was not—Mr. Potter's a bit more boisterous in his response. I would have—

Mr. David Zimmer: But it's a sentiment that you would share?

Ms. Maria Renzella: But I would have thought, "Why are you doing this?" Then I had to understand what it was—

Mr. David Zimmer: Why would you have those thoughts?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Again, you had to understand the whole agreement, arrangement. So initially you're thinking, "Why are you paying for that?" As I had said before, I looked at it as a whole and understood that some of the payments were coming back. But I also had to understand what the full picture of all the negotiations were.

Mr. David Zimmer: When you understood the full picture of the negotiations, did you convey your feelings, perhaps in less colourful language, to Mr. Mazza?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I was given a mandate at the time, so I was more or less more focused on ensuring that things were done legally at the time.

Mr. David Zimmer: But you still felt it was—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Well, I knew that there was definitely this conflict between the two.

Mr. David Zimmer: In the Attorney General's report, he was critical of the mark-up on the rent—

Interjection.

Mr. David Zimmer: I'm sorry, the Auditor General.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Jim just thought he got a promotion.

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes. Sorry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Or a demotion, whatever.

Mr. David Zimmer: He was critical of some of the pricing services that Ornge paid, particularly this business of the rent, marking up the rent. Did you share that sentiment also?

Ms. Maria Renzella: You see, I was not involved in any of that, so I'm not a valuator by any chance. I understood that a valuator was selected, and I just don't have the knowledge to be able to question it at the time.

Mr. David Zimmer: So at the time, you had no knowledge that the rent paid was way above market rent?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. All I knew was that there was a valuator who provided a value of, I believe it was, $20 and that there was a comfort letter provided by a—

Mr. David Zimmer: So when Ornge purchased services from Ornge Global, who decided what the cost of those services would be?

Ms. Maria Renzella: So the way things were done was, you looked at—it was almost as if Ornge was one entity. Sorry, is that okay? It was almost as if Ornge was one entity. So Ornge received a budget of $150 million and then every piece was apportioned. Aviation was given a portion, the back office was given a portion etc. Everything was done at cost, so it was almost like a bottom-up, cost-centred budgeting arrangement. There was no—

Mr. David Zimmer: And who decided what those costs were?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Each one of the people who ran those areas—we did a bottom-up: “So how much do you think it would cost to do this and that?”

Mr. David Zimmer: And did Dr. Mazza review those—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Dr. Mazza would review the cost estimates. We would have to balance against the budget. Dr. Mazza would review the cost estimates and then they were presented to the finance and audit committee of the board to ensure that they knew what the breakdown was. But everything was done at cost.

Mr. David Zimmer: And did Dr. Mazza ever adjust those costing figures that he got from the staff?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, no. It was a collaborative effort between myself, Rick Potter, Tom Lepine, in most cases, where we would go through to determine what the cost—

Mr. David Zimmer: But did Dr. Mazza ever interfere or change those costing—

Ms. Maria Renzella: He would tell me what the targets were—

Mr. David Zimmer: Aha.

Ms. Maria Renzella: —to ensure that there would be—like, if he needed some money for himself, like $1 million.

Mr. David Zimmer: So he set the targets and the staff, under you, worked to those targets.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Thank you.

Mr. Potter also said that as the executive who was accountable to Transport Canada, he was having real trouble proving, showing, demonstrating to Transport Canada Ornge's source of funding to run its aviation operations. Do you know why? Can you shed some light on why he was having trouble?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I read that and I kept wondering, because I worked with Rick quite closely in ensuring that he had the financial resources he required to run the organization. Again, we were in a transitional time period, so a lot of the costs were not known and they were guesstimates.

Mr. David Zimmer: But his concern was not so much the costs themselves; it was the source of the funding for those costs.

Ms. Maria Renzella: He knew that they were coming from Ornge. I am not sure why he was confused, but all of those—the funds that were used to fund the day-to-day operations of Ornge Air were coming from Ornge and he was given a budget to work within. Any funds that were required for any capital, because there were still additional modifications, other software etc.—those were usually done out of the bonds money, because that was—

Mr. David Zimmer: Mr. Potter made it quite clear in his evidence from time to time that he was the aviation guy. He wasn't the medical person or the business person. He also said he had great difficulty understanding the corporate structure and the financial comings and goings and all of that sort of stuff. Would you agree with that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I thought he did understand it. I think when we moved it to the more complex structure we were still working out things, but the general—but it was the same; right? So I just—

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. You know, it's a principle of business management that often the best management chart, if you will, is the simplest, the clearest chart that everybody can clearly understand: Who's doing what and who reports to who and all that sort of stuff. In your testimony, you just finished using the words, “It was a very complex structure.” You used that sort of phrase throughout your testimony.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah.

Mr. David Zimmer: Given your business background, your MBA, your commerce degree, your CA degree, you must have thought, “This corporate structure is complex to the point of actually being a disservice to what we're trying to do here; it's just too unwieldy, too difficult to understand, too difficult to put your finger on accountability and all of that stuff.”

Ms. Maria Renzella: The focus at the beginning was definitely to set up a corporate structure. As I understood, the mandate was to set up this corporate structure. The organization was looking for investors on the global side, and there were a number and multitude of reasons why they had to set up this complex structure, and I agree with that. And it was a bit unwieldy, as you're trying to figure out who's doing—I tried to simplify a lot of it from pulling away from a financial perspective, but my hope and where I was going down the road, should I have stayed at the organization longer, would have been to try to simplify that structure. But it was just early in the game. We were still trying to implement—

Mr. David Zimmer: You know, I had a conversation with some management expert friends of mine—they do some teaching—and this thought was offered, so I'll throw it out to you: "You know, in my MBA program, teaching in an MBA program, if I had an MBA student or a couple of students who came to me with a project with a corporate structure as complicated, as unwieldy, as unaccountable as the world of Ornge, I'd fail them all."

Do you have any sense that that complex structure failed the people of Ontario and would fail if you wrote it up as an MBA case study? Would you have the nerve to do a case study and turn it in to a professor at Schulich or Kellogg and say, "Here's a corporate structure. What do you think of it, Professor?"

Ms. Maria Renzella: From a business perspective, the corporate structure was complex. It was more generated due to tax accounting and regulatory—

Mr. David Zimmer: Would you have the courage to turn that kind of a corporate structure into an MBA case study?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I would have simplified it.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You still have another three and a half minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Oh, well, let me root around here a bit. Ah. Thank you, Chair, for giving me this chance.

You know, one of the ideas on the Ornge thing was to set up the for-profits away from the not-for-profit, speaking broadly, and in theory, the profits were going to generate some income and some of that was going to come back to the province, to the non-profit, about 3%. Did any of that projected 3% ever work its way back to Ornge, back to the public purse?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I just want to make sure I understood. So, as you're aware, there were no revenues that were generated external, so there was no money yet—right?—but should, let's say, the right-hand side have become profitable and—

Mr. David Zimmer: On any business plan where you go to the bank with your business plan and you lay out the plan when the revenues are going to come in, the bank looks at it and says, "Give us the time frame when you're expecting the payback"—the 3%, in this case. On your business plan, looking ahead, when were you anticipating the first flow of money back to the non-profit?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The way the agreement worked, if I remember correctly, there was a three-year holiday period and then it was going to flow back. The plan, again, as I remember—as in any plan, it's made of assumptions, etc. I think it was within the first year that they were going to generate revenue, should things—

Mr. David Zimmer: And it's that same sort of business plan where you've got the revenue stream several years down the road and it's only a paltry little 3%, and that was the business plan.

Ms. Maria Renzella: It's 3% of the gross revenue, and I also understand that there was a pledge agreement, so any of the profits that would go to the partners that moved up, that would be pledged back to Ornge.

Mr. David Zimmer: In your theoretical business plan that you might submit to the professor at the MBA school, if you had a 3% payback that you were expecting to get some years down the road in an unwieldy and complex and unaccountable organization, do you think that you'd get much more than an F in an MBA class for that business model?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I think you would look at what the return should have been, and I think you needed to look at a number of things.

Mr. David Zimmer: What do you think the return should have been?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Well, it depends on your risks, as you would say; the risks that the organization would take. As in any risks, you would determine your rate of return. The higher the risk, the higher the return.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you use any of your work experience, the things you were working on at Ornge, for your MBA case studies? You did your MBA in 2010.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, 2009-10.

Mr. David Zimmer: So you did some case studies?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you have the courage to use any Ornge things you were working on as good examples?

Ms. Maria Renzella: What I would do was, I applied the tools given to me at the MBA school to Ornge examples. For instance, I used it to help determine what were good performance metrics for Ornge, and that was going to be a way to get a—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time now, so we'll move to the opposition. You have 15 minutes. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Ms. Renzella, I have just a few housekeeping items I'd like to deal with. First of all, Mr. Potter. I'm not sure why your testimony is so very different on so many things from Mr. Potter's. He's such an affable guy; you're such a nice lady.

Ms. Maria Renzella: We got along.

Mr. Frank Klees: Somewhere, I would have expected that we would get the truth. Mr. Potter insisted, through three questions, that his paycheque has always been with Ornge Air. It was never paid by any other entity of Ornge. Can you confirm that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: He was paid by Ornge Air when Ornge Air was created. However, prior to Ornge Air being created, he was an employee of Ornge in Ornge Peel.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you for that. We'll deal with Mr. Potter on that.

Mr. Luis Navas: Can you tell us, just very briefly, what role he had at Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Luis was head of the—we called it the global solutions business, but he was in essence head of the for-profit: getting it established, developing the business plans, doing the sales. So he was the point person after Chris, reporting to Chris, to actually focus on developing the profits that we're talking about.

Mr. Frank Klees: And I suppose that's why we have a letter on hand that he personally signed as the chief operating officer of Ornge Global.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And he was the chief operating officer of Global?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Of Ornge Global Solutions. Yes, he was.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's interesting, of course, that he denies that he was ever the chief operating officer of global Ornge. Interesting. Anyway, thanks. We'll deal with him on that.

I'd like to talk about Alfred Apps and Don Guy. You were very much part of their communication. How can I put it? Certainly you're on many of the email trails. There was a particular email that was sent directly to you by Mr. Apps, copied to Tom Rothfels, John MacKenzie and Christopher Mazza. I'd like to read it to you.

1400

Ms. Maria Renzella: Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: It says, "Last nite"—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Do you have a copy?

Mr. Frank Klees: You all have it.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But does the witness have it?

Interjection.

Mr. Frank Klees: She doesn't mind if I read it, and I'm happy to pass it on. I will read it first, if you don't mind.

The subject is "Last Nite."

Ms. Maria Renzella: Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: Does that bring anything to mind?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, okay.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Do you have a date?

Mr. Frank Klees: It says, "Friends"—

Mr. David Zimmer: Wait a second. I think we—

Mr. Frank Klees: It says, "Friends: Last nite worked perfectly. Chris was able to make a real connection with the Premier, and to lay out"—

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Hang on a second.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Can we get a copy made?

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, sure we can.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You can go on to something else.

Mr. Frank Klees: We'll get a copy for you. In the meantime, I'll ask if you—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll come back to that, Mr. Klees. We'll get a copy. If you want to continue with something else.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure. Let's switch to 2007. By the way, is Mr. Zimmer on retainer to you here? No?

Mr. David Zimmer: Frank's complimenting me.

Mr. Frank Klees: During 2007-08, I understand that there was an additional request made to the Ministry of Health for $5 million in funding. This is over and above the operational costs. Does that ring a bell? You're familiar with that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was the reason for requesting that additional $5 million in funding?

Ms. Maria Renzella: If it's the example I was thinking of, this was where we had—the organization had underspent on their land ambulance side. Remember, there was this CCLA? There was a land ambulance. There was a request to be able to use the $5 million on the air side, as the organization was going forward and transitioning to new aircraft and dealing with some of the standing-offer-agreement issues and some fuel issues. But it was mostly in relation to getting ready for the transitioning to new aircraft.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Well, I'm not sure we're talking about the same—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Okay, so that's why I'm just trying to remember what that is. If there was a letter, that would be great.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. But let's say that that may even have been the case.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Okay, sure.

Mr. Frank Klees: My understanding is that there was an additional $5 million of funding requested from the Ministry of Health, and at the same time—my understanding is that it was to pay for aviation costs.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right.

Mr. Frank Klees: It rings a bell?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes. Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: The additional aviation costs because of the increase in prices.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was the Ministry of Health aware that at the same time that Ornge made the request for the additional $5 million of funding, Ornge had a surplus, on deposit with Nesbitt Burns, in the amount of some $30 million?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Oh, they would have been aware because it would have been in our cash balance, which is shown in the financial statements. But the $30 million, what was in Ornge's bank account, would have represented—a large amount of it was working capital and some other depreciation. So you've got cash and then you have accounting profits, so there would have been a difference between the two there.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's very interesting that the Ministry of Health would have approved an additional $5 million of funding to pay for fuel, knowing that there was $30 million on deposit in another bank account of surplus funds, so designated. Does that not strike you, as the chief financial officer, as somewhat strange?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Well, they had access to all the records and it was their determination whether they were willing to give the $5 million. But we looked at it from an accounting perspective.

Mr. Frank Klees: And you're confirming for us that, at that time, the Ministry of Health was fully aware that there was $30 million in a Nesbitt Burns account?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It would have been in the—we provide annual financial statements.

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand you do that.

Ms. Maria Renzella: The $30 million would have been disclosed in those financial statements.

Mr. Frank Klees: That's not my question.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: My question is, at the time, which was mid-year—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Would they have known that?

Mr. Frank Klees: —would they have known that there was $30 million of surplus funds in a segregated account at Nesbitt Burns while you made the request for $5 million of additional funding?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I would have assumed that they would have looked at the financial statements from the year before.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, can you tell us how that $30 million was ultimately drawn down? What was it used for?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The $30 million: Part of it was working capital, so that would always represent at least a month of operating expenses, because you're always delayed by a month. The government pays you a month in advance; right? So the organization would always have funds in the bank, because they would always be in a positive working capital situation.

Mr. Frank Klees: Then why was this totally drawn down in 2008?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Because some of it was moved from the Nesbitt Burns account to the TD Bank. But it was all within the same bank account.

Mr. Frank Klees: Those funds would have been drawn down with your approval.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, they would have been.

Mr. Frank Klees: So, the $30 million: Why was it drawn down out of Nesbitt Burns?

Ms. Maria Renzella: If I had my financial statements in front of me, I would be able to track the numbers and understand how I did the flow of funds at the time.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thirty million is a lot of money. I can't imagine that you would not remember why $30 million from—

Ms. Maria Renzella: From Nesbitt Burns.

Mr. Frank Klees: Nesbitt Burns to TD—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Oh. At the time—and I will tell you, because I was getting a better deal from TD on interest rates than what Nesbitt Burns was offering me at the time.

Mr. Frank Klees: So the full $30 million was shifted over to the TD Bank.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Slowly. As certain things were expiring, then we slowly moved it over to the TD.

Mr. Frank Klees: Is it still there?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Do we still have some money? Does the organization still have money at Nesbitt Burns? I think they still had some money left with Nesbitt Burns, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: What happened to the $30 million? I mean, that's a lot of money.

Ms. Maria Renzella: A lot of it went into paying off the expenses and the principal and interest. Right?

Mr. Frank Klees: Was any of that money used for the for-profit side?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Never transferred?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. And $30 million is still there?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I wouldn't say $30 million is there. I believe it would have gone down to reflect whatever the working capital is now.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can I ask about, while we're waiting for this—

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I have it right here.

Mr. Frank Klees: Is it here now? Okay. I don't see it. Can someone give me a copy now?

Interjection: It's there.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

So it says: "Last nite worked perfectly. Chris was able to make a real connection with the Premier, and to lay out the success story of Ornge at a high level in a way that provides the groundwork for our entire initiative."

"Once we have massaged the game plan past the Minister of Health, I will organize a follow-up private dinner for Chris with the Premier so that he can outline the vision and the game plan in greater detail."

"It could not have gone better." Signed, Alfred Apps.

Now, this was directed to you. It was to you and Mr. Blum. Can you tell us about this email and what exactly it was that you were trying to achieve there?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was 2007, in the summer, so I would assume this was about the acquisition of the aircraft and getting that ready. I think that was the first, because that summer was the summer when we started looking at acquiring aircraft. Then I wasn't sure, also, if they started talking about trying to raise the awareness of what Ornge was, maybe to lay the groundwork, that maybe in future they were looking at some revenue-generating opportunities.

Mr. Frank Klees: I would assume, from the fact that Mr. Apps is sending you this email, that you would have been involved, probably, in the pre-discussions, when you discussed about Alfred setting up this meeting with the Premier.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Most of my discussions with Alfred were very high-level.

Mr. Frank Klees: That's pretty high.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah, that's pretty high, and it was just—

Mr. Frank Klees: It doesn't get any higher than the Premier.

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, no, no. I meant high-level in the discussions and in the details. He was just letting us know that he had set this up.

Mr. Frank Klees: But you would have been aware that Alfred was setting this meeting up with the Premier.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yup.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, yes, I would have been. He would have told us, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: This is not something unique. I mean, Alfred was a key player. I understand from even his discussions that in terms of that corporate structure, a lot of that tax planning, that he was really the brainchild behind that. Is that correct?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, he was.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes. And I would think that in the course of that, there would have been a number of other meetings that he would have arranged, with—whether it's the Premier, the Minister of Health or the Ministry of Finance.

Ms. Maria Renzella: I wouldn't know. My focus at the time was—as life continued on, my conduit was just trying to figure out how to do the corporate restructuring and addressing issues he would have raised in the specifics. A lot of the higher-level and discussions with government—I would assume he would have dealt with Dr. Mazza directly and not with me. I was not involved in any of those.

Mr. Frank Klees: What about Mr. Guy? Did you ever meet Mr. Guy?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Mister who?

Mr. Frank Klees: Guy, Don Guy?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I met him in passing, but never purposefully.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Any meetings that you would have participated in where perhaps he was on the phone in a conference call?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I'm just trying to think through. Most of the dealings with Don Guy occurred when we actually had Catherine Rosebrugh working for us, so I wasn't as engaged at that level at that point in time. I was more in the back end, working out finances.

Mr. Frank Klees: On the issues of lawyers, you mentioned—we're going to go back to the marketing agreement.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: You mentioned that you were running this by lawyers—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: The first set of lawyers who said it would be illegal to do what you were contemplating to do: Who were those lawyers?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The same—Fasken's.

Mr. Frank Klees: Fasken's. And what about Cynthia Heinz?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Cindy was the lead lawyer at Fasken's—

Mr. Frank Klees: Did she tell you as well that this was—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, yes. Most of my discussions with Fasken's would occur between—I would pick up the phone and call Cindy or talk to her directly. Then she would go to her subject-matter experts at the firm as I was trying to raise issues—

Mr. Frank Klees: When did Cindy Heinz come to work directly at Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: June 2011.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Did she have a hand in actually structuring the marketing services agreement? Were her hands on this? Would she have been the lawyer or the point person?

Ms. Maria Renzella: She was the lawyer who wrote out the agreement, working with our marketing folks at the time.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. So initially, she said that this was illegal. Then she would have been the point person who said, "Okay, we can cobble this together, and this will make it all okay." Is that right?

Ms. Maria Renzella: She said that—yes, she said that that was the case and that we just needed to work through the services and we had to ensure that there were actual services being rendered for the value. She was very careful on that.

Mr. Frank Klees: My final question to you is: The director of regulatory affairs at Ornge—I'm assuming that that person would be responsible for briefing the Minister of Health or the Ministry of Health on what is going on and would be the liaison with government. Is that a fair assumption?

Ms. Maria Renzella: A fair assumption.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who is that director of regulatory affairs?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Presently?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Ms. Maria Renzella: I don't know, because I don't know if the person has left the organization. When I left, the director of regulatory affairs was a young lady called Lisa Kirbie.

Mr. Frank Klees: Lisa Kirbie?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was her background before she came to Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I believe she was working in the Senate office out in Ottawa. She worked for the feds at that point in time.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You are out of time, Mr. Klees. We'll move on to the NDP, please.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'll let her answer the question.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, go ahead.

Mr. Frank Klees: I was just going to say, prior to that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I don't know. I did not interview Lisa, so I did not go through her resumé at the time.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you very much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: A few more questions: You handled the financial part as part of senior management at Ornge. Through the times you were there, you were quite successful in getting the Ministry of Health to increase your budget year to year. Did that require any negotiations with the ministry? How did you convince them that you needed your budget increased when a lot of other transfer payment agencies had their budget frozen?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The first three years I was there, the budget increases had already been reflected in the performance agreement. So there was no need to ask; it was already stated in the performance agreement. Come the fourth year—and I'm just going from memory and doing my math, and 2009 would be the first year—we would prepare our budgets, but a lot of the requests and discussions actually happened between Dr. Mazza and the ministry at the time. We would prepare the documentation, he would have some secondary conversations with them, and we received what we received. I went through the normal—you know, the results-based planning. For instance, last year we went through, and we had assumed—we asked for a 3.5% increase; we received the same as the rest of the organizations, which was 2%.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you were treated like every other transfer payment agency of the Ministry of Health.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Everybody else, yes. Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: The only difference is that in 2009, you were able to negotiate a higher increase than the rest of the transfer payment—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right. From what I understand, we did, but that was a discussion that Dr. Mazza would have had.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know who Dr. Mazza talked to at the Ministry of Health?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I would assume he would have talked to Malcolm Bates at the time.

M^{me} France Gélinas: That would be his—Malcolm Bates?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were you asked to prepare any financial information to justify the budget increase?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. All I ever did was go through a results-based planning exercise and just went through those increases, and by virtue of doing the bottom-up, that's how you justified how much you needed.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. In the documents that would have been presented, did they at any point make reference to Ornge Peel?

Ms. Maria Renzella: All my documents were consolidated, so Ornge Peel was always in there.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It was always in there?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was always included in there. Yes, it was.

We also showed that we were looking at generating revenue in all of those documents, too, that were presented to the ministry.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So would it be fair to say that step by step, as the for-profit entities were being developed for profit yet to come, all of this corporate structure was being shown through your financial statements and through your financial documents?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Just to clarify, the corporate structure prior to December 31, 2010, up to that point, was all within that Ornge. So everything was together. Ornge Peel, at that time, was part of that structure. Come January 2011—so it's only been this past year—that's when things started to be disaggregated, at that point, where you had a for-profit side and a not-for-profit side. At that point, the elements of any potential revenue or expenses that were not being borne were not included in those numbers. But this was the first year we ever did that, and we were trying to explain that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So when you say that Ornge Peel was included—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But Ornge Peel was an independent corporation?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was an independent legal organization up to 2010, but it was owned by Ornge. So it was all part of the same family of companies. From a financial perspective, it was fully consolidated.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

During the estimates in 2009—estimates is a process we have here where the opposition gets to ask the Minister of Health all the questions we want—we put on the record 42 different questions that had to do with Ornge. The minister was not able to answer any of those questions. Ms. Li was there at the time; a number of people from emergency medical services were also there. They were not able to answer any of those questions, but they promised us that they would get the answers.

Did you know that a lot of questions had been asked? Have any of those questions ever filtered down to you? Did they ever ask you? Some of the questions were to explain the corporate structure between Ornge Air and Ornge Peel, for example—that was one of the 42 questions.

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I don't remember receiving the list of questions.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So none of this was ever asked of you?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I don't remember seeing any of it, so I'm really thinking that through, and I don't remember. No, because I would have remembered answering the questions, obviously, and sitting down and walking through.

I do know that we had a meeting, which was part of our quarterly meeting, where we were presenting our proposed budgets; that was in the fall of 2010. That's when I first met Patricia Li, and she asked me to explain the corporate structure at that point, and we talked about some of those things. But I'm trying to remember if there were those specific questions.

M^{me} France Gélinas: After your meeting with Ms. Li, were you under the impression that she understood?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: She didn't come back with more questions?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: She was clear as to what you had had to say?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, and again, the door was always open.

In addition, we've always presented to everyone the offering memorandum that we issued when we did the bond issue, because that was a really nice document that explained what the organization was, how the corporate structure worked and how the interactions between all the organizations were. It also provided a brief explanation as to some key contracts and stuff. So I also believe that that was a really good wealth of information for people.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And that was shared with the people at the ministry?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just building on that last point, Patricia Li specifically inquired about the corporate structure. Do you know what her questions were?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was in a quarterly meeting, so she just asked me, "Maria, could you explain how the corporate structure works?" It wasn't asked before, so it was one of these informal—I stood up in front of a board and just sort of wrote it out for her at that point in time.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. What date would that have been, roughly? Or what year, let's say?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I'm thinking it was October/November 2010.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Would you have had any correspondence to follow up, like any emails?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. There was always, at the end of those meetings, sort of a bit of a minute-taking that happens that says, "This is what we talked about at these meetings, and these are the action items."

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Do you know who would have those minutes?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It would have been Michael LeGros.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Michael LeGros?

Ms. Maria Renzella: On the ministry side.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: On the ministry side, okay.

There were a number of purchases and a kind of direction that Ornge was taking, and I wanted you to comment, as an employee there, on the water ski boat, the OC Chopper motorcycle, these purchases, and their costs. I mean, what was your opinion on them?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The water ski boat was purchased for the charitable organization called J Smarts. Again, you could not use performance agreement money. There were monies that were generated from tuition revenues that we used to loan to J Smarts at the time to help buy the boat. The negotiation, the purchase of the boat, was all done by Dr. Mazza at the time.

With regard to the chopper, that was part of a fundraising event that was positioned to the board. I believe

Dr. Mazza thought it was a neat idea to partner with a company called Orange County Choppers—Orange, Ornge; Choppers, choppers—and wanted to use that as a way to kick-start fundraising for the foundation. So when that occurred, they talked a lot about—I guess as part of the show, the show manufactures motorcycles, and you have to pay the show X dollars of money and they get a trophy bike and another bike. In order to do that, we were advised at the time not to use the money from the foundation, so the organization actually went to ask Augusta to finance the acquisition of that. But there was a whole presentation made to the board of the foundation to say whether this was a good idea, if that was an appropriate use of funds.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So just a couple of pieces there. One was: Augusta funded the motorcycle?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And the board was aware of these decisions that were being made?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And was the ministry apprised along the way of this—

Ms. Maria Renzella: That one I couldn't tell you—no, they were, because what happened was, when they launched the motorcycle, the fellow that heads that show, Paul Teutul, Sr., came. It was at the Blue Jays game. So when they came, there were some ministry officials there, so yes. There were people who were apprised, and they went there, and there was media, so the organization was trying to make a big splash with it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Do you recall who from the ministry—

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I wouldn't know. Again, I wasn't part of that whole—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: There has been some indication—so whenever decisions were made, you would go through the lawyers to ensure that everything was legal; you've been saying that. When the issue of salary disclosure came up, again, did you go to the lawyers to ask the lawyers' confirmation about whether or not salary should be disclosed?

Ms. Maria Renzella: At the time when that happened—it wasn't me specifically. I believe—it might have been Jacob at the time who went and asked them specifically whether that was legal, but, you know, it did come through to me how it worked out. I'm just trying to remember who asked who, but it was either me or Jacob.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. Now, specifically, Lynne Golding has testified that she did not think that the salaries should be—I mean, she indicated, she testified that the salaries should be disclosed, that they should not be kept off the sunshine list or not kept hidden. Would you agree with that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Would I agree that she said that?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's what she—

Ms. Maria Renzella: I believe she said that, because Lynne would have said legally it was fine, and then she would have offered that other piece of advice, but, again, that would have gone to Chris, and it was his decision point.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you recall hearing that advice? I mean, is that something—

Ms. Maria Renzella: I just heard the one thing, but I also believe I've heard that she had said that in subsequent discussions.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That the salaries should be disclosed?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, yes, that that was her opinion. That would be something—yes, I believe I've heard that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you ever bring that discussion to your quarterly meeting with the ministry? I mean, here we are; I'm representing the NDP. We're trying to find out what happened to the salaries, why were they taken off. We filed freedom-of-access. Patricia Li is the one who handles this. You meet with her regularly, and squat, bugger all, nothing was ever said?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, nothing was ever said. Now, I do also understand that—as you know, the organization had gone through an audit from the Ministry of Health, their internal audit department. So a company called MNP had audited us. I understand that Dr. Mazza was quite open with them and told them that we were not on the public salary disclosure list at that point in time. That was also discussed with those auditors at that time.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you understand why?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Why Dr. Mazza did not want to be on there? I think for him, it was a privacy issue.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you ever have this discussion with him?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I did not. When it came to compensation, he was very sensitive.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Was he the only one in the organization like that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But nobody else had their salary disclosed? If he didn't want to have his, what would have kept—

Ms. Maria Renzella: I think it was one of these—you needed to—he was making the decision on behalf of the organization.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Potter has indicated—and the fact is, that his salary was disclosed up until 2008. After 2009, his salary was no longer disclosed. What changed between 2008 and 2009 that precluded his salary from being disclosed?

Ms. Maria Renzella: He was moved out of Ornge. He was transferred into either Ornge Peel or Ornge Air at that time.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: But my understanding is that he has always been paid by Ornge Air.

Ms. Maria Renzella: But Ornge Air didn't exist in 2007, so he couldn't have been, right?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: It didn't exist in 2007.

Ms. Maria Renzella: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did it exist in 2008?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. I think the organization was set up in the spring of 2009, around that time frame.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: When you say “Ornge Air,” is this one of the for-profit companies?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was a company that had to be created to house the fixed-wing operations. So it was created legally. We called it a for-profit because a not-for-profit requires all these objects etc., but it never generated profit. It was just a separate entity indirectly owned by Ornge at the time. But it had to be a separate legal entity because of the operating certificate and some of those regulations around that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Didn't it seem to you that this was just all a roundabout way of hiding salaries, that this is public money that's going to a publicly funded organization? All of its funding is essentially public. All the for-profit—there's no real revenue being generated. It's essentially public money being spent in Ornge, but then there are these entities created just to hide salaries.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Ornge Air: I would say, that was created definitely for regulatory purposes. Ornge Peel was initially created in order to house the back office and generate the revenues. Was it created too early and, again, were we doing things far too early? Possibly. I do agree that that's the case. Was there a benefit because the organization was not on the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act because of that? Yeah, there was that benefit—I say “benefit,” but that was the outcome of that. Was that the reason for it? I wouldn't say it was a direct reason for it, but I think Dr. Mazza was quite pleased that this enabled him not to be on the sunshine list.

M^{me} France Gélinas: When other witnesses came to testify, they talked about different meetings that took place; that Mr. Apps was often at those meetings with Mr. Mazza or with other leadership of Ornge. Do you know why this particular lawyer would be chosen to come to meetings between the government and Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: From my perspective, Mr. Apps understood more of what Chris wanted to do and could articulate it quite well; also, because he understood how the government worked and what the concerns were. He was also able to talk to Chris about those concerns in such a manner as to not be an alarmist with Chris. So I think it was more his relationship with Chris and his knowledge on how to work within a government setting. Chris would listen to him in that manner.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. The relationship between different employees and Mr. Mazza, I take it, was tense? Only a few people were able to get through to him?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right. Chris surrounded himself with a team of people. His personality would go up and down. It would be temperamental at best. I think on one hand he tried to protect himself by not exposing himself a lot to his employees at the time, and he liked it better when that group of people, of which I was one, could go and talk to employees and work on things. He also believed, being a CEO, he was entitled to not have to deal with certain people, that he was the CEO and the CEO only deals with other CEOs, so he had that type of leadership where he felt that he could just have to deal with the higher echelons as opposed to dealing with everybody.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Mr. Apps told us that he was the architect of the corporate structure. Would you agree with that?

Ms. Maria Renzella: That Mr. Apps was the architect of the corporate structure? Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were you ever able to fully understand this? You've probably seen it; it's part of the big memo that everybody talks about.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes. Right.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You're able to understand this?

Ms. Maria Renzella: There was a lot of learning. There were certain elements of it that I was still trying to understand, a lot of the details, but generally speaking, I could understand what that structure was, and the focus on my side was trying to implement that structure.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have one minute.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know anything about Ornge Brazil, which is not on this lovely map?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What's Ornge Brazil?

Ms. Maria Renzella: The organization had developed a relationship with a company called Synergy in Brazil; it was Avianca. They were looking to set up an Ornge-type business there. In discussions with both lawyers, both in Brazil and in Canada, as well as accountants, both in Brazil and Canada, due to the taxation issues, the best way was that there had to be a company set up here that held the shares of a Brazilian company in Brazil, so it was just more for tax reasons.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And did anything ever come of it? Did they ever hold shares?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. The organization was close to signing an agreement in December, but with all the media—and eventually we just wound everything up. But there were agreements that were almost put in place that they were negotiating.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. You're done the time for that round.

I have a question for the committee, and that is, there are two motions that would be good to deal with today. Would you like to allow five minutes at the end of the committee? In other words, quit at five to 3 and deal with both those motions then? Is that fine with everyone?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, five minutes at the end.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Very well, then. We will continue. You'll have six minutes then, so we'll move on to the government members and Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: From time to time, in your evidence, when you're trying to explain things, you've said you're trying to explain these issues between Ornge not-for-profit and Ornge for-profits. You've come back to this idea that, in one sense, it was one organization, although they were parcelled out, not-for-profit, profit, and so on. The Auditor General in his report said that he had great difficulty accessing information from those entities on the for-profit side. So my question is, in looking back, in hindsight, do you think it was appropriate for the corporate structure to be set up in such a way that this sort of big Ornge family was organized in a way—a not-for-profit, several for-profits—that it made it very difficult to examine the use of the public monies that were put into the big Ornge family? Do you think that was appropriate? And then to rely on, "Well, you can't have that information because that's on the for-profit," and the way the company was organized defensively—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right.

Mr. David Zimmer: —made it hard for everybody to understand what's going on, made it hard for everybody to follow the money.

Ms. Maria Renzella: I think the focus when—no, I'll just reword that. In retrospect, I believe anything where government funds were being used should have stayed on the not-for-profit side, and then there would have been a much more clear delineation as to any revenue-generating, because the intent with the Auditor General was not to not allow them to look at—follow the money. Absolutely, they should have been allowed to see any monies that were paid for my salaries and what my salaries were.

I believe that was the direction. It was anything that had nothing to do with government money at the time that needed to be segregated. So there could have been, I would say, a much more elegant way to do it, so as it would have eased up the—follow the money.

Saying that, though, the majority of that happened in January 2011, so a lot of the review could have happened up to December 31.

Mr. David Zimmer: You say there would have been a more elegant way to do that. I take it from that that another word might have been that there was a more transparent way to do it?

Ms. Maria Renzella: That could be a better—

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah. That could be a better word, yeah.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. And again in hindsight, given your background as a CA, particularly as a CA—and you're a member of the institute—and your professional obligations and all of that, do you think there was a shortcoming in exercising your professional due diligence in alerting folks or dealing with or calling into question some of these financial irregular or odd or inelegant or less-than-transparent corporate structures?

Ms. Maria Renzella: When looking at all of this, I spoke a lot with the accountants also to understand. The unfortunate part was that sometimes it was the accounting rules that created the reasons for this complexity, which was the unfortunate part. So those were the things—but I did run things by other people and asked them what they thought; right?

Mr. David Zimmer: I know accountants and lawyers, and physicians, I suppose, but especially accountants and lawyers, will often call their professional body, the Law Society or the Institute of Chartered Accountants, if they're in an ethical quandary, and ask their institute, "Can I do this? Is this proper? Is this ethical?" Were there ever any calls put in to the institute to seek their advice?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, I made no calls. Like I said, I thought, by speaking with lawyers from a large legal firm, and a large accounting firm, that if there were any concerns, they would have been raised.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have one minute.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. And Ms. Sandals?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. Just one other quick question: You mentioned that when you were going through the budget allocation process, you would get the allocation from the Ministry of Health and then various branches of Ornge or the entities would get their piece of the budget for air or paramedics or land ambulance, whatever, but that Dr. Mazza asked that a certain part be set aside for his purposes. How much was that typically?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Oh, it was almost set up like a contingency fund. It would be $1 million or half a million dollars, just to make sure—it was there to deal with any surprises.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And during your time there, how was the contingency fund actually spent?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was never spent. It was never spent purposefully. Like, it would be dealing with—let's say the fuel cost went up. So it would be part of that forecasting. It was almost like a certain way that you do budgeting. You always sort of set aside a little bit of money just in case—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So it wasn't his personal purposes?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, no, no. It was more—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: It was a corporate contingency fund?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah, yeah.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We're out of time there. Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: How much time do we have?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have six minutes.

1440

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Just a couple of things. Your executive MBA: I understand that you spent a considerable time in Europe doing that work. Is that right?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Actually I only spent four days in Europe.

Mr. Frank Klees: And at a cost of how much? The total MBA was what?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I believe it was about $110,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: And how did you feel about that being paid for by Ornge?

Ms. Maria Renzella: First of all, I had no choice. I was basically told I needed to take my MBA or it was my job.

Mr. Frank Klees: I see.

Ms. Maria Renzella: So I had no choice at the time.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was that a taxable benefit to you?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was it a taxable benefit to anyone?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: How was that justified?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was just like when you provide training or education to any of your employees; that's an allowable expense.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

A bond offering dated January 31, the debenture, Ornge Global Real Estate Inc. with BNY Trust Co. of Canada: You recall that $30-million debenture?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was that taken out for?

Ms. Maria Renzella: That was, as we call it, the credit lease transaction. That was for the building.

Mr. Frank Klees: For the building. So Ornge Global Real Estate Inc. borrowed $30 million against that real estate that had been purchased for how much?

Ms. Maria Renzella: They borrowed—well, the debenture says $30 million, but the building was purchased for approximately $16 million.

Mr. Frank Klees: Right. So that would have been the market value, right?

Ms. Maria Renzella: That was the market value at the time when we bought the building. You're right.

Mr. Frank Klees: And then how much later was this debenture issued?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was issued—it would have been 18 months later.

Mr. Frank Klees: Eighteen months. That's quite an incredible—you know, through all our discussions, the numbers just keep going through the roof, don't they? It's amazing.

Here's what's particularly—I'd like to ask you this: Unless I'm reading this wrong, it looks as though there's a 25% per annum interest on this debenture.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah. No, it isn't. It's about 5.2%—

Mr. Frank Klees: Really?

Ms. Maria Renzella: —the actual interest. The way these are being written up, it looks odd. It looks odd, but it's actually a 5.2% amount. As you know, the rationale for that increase in the value was basically the present value of the lease payments. That's how they were able to do that.

Mr. Frank Klees: I would think that in anybody's books what you're essentially saying is that the present value of the lease payments increases the fair market value of this property, which is why someone was willing to lend $30 million against a building that was originally purchased for how much?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Sixteen million.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sixteen million, 18 months before. Did you not have any concerns about this transaction?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Alfred Apps was the architect of that transaction at the time.

Mr. Frank Klees: It all seems to come back to Alfred Apps, doesn't it, somehow?

Interjection.

Mr. Frank Klees: Just a lot of it.

I just have final questions. There was this deal. There was the $275-million bond offering, all of which you knew would attract interest payments. Can you tell me where you believed that the interest payments for this debt would come from? Who would be making those payments?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Specifically with the $275-million bond, that would have been coming from Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: Ornge the not-for-profit?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Ornge the not-for-profit, because that would have been what—basically it's almost like a replacement of what you used to pay the private sector, CHL or whatever, because you would pay them for the helicopters. You're just paying yourself.

Mr. Frank Klees: Except that, at the end, not only are you paying the interest, but you're also on the hook, the not-for-profit, for the $275-million capital amount that has to be repaid at the end.

Ms. Maria Renzella: The way the organization set it up, it was an amortizing bond, so it's very similar to a mortgage. There was a payment of $22 million or $23 million a year, which was principal and interest. At the end of 25 years, everything was fully paid for, and the assets—being the helicopters, the planes and whatever other assets were purchased with that money—would go back to Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: Interesting. Not my reading of it—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah, but that's how it worked.

Mr. Frank Klees: —that was one option under the agreement.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah. No, that's how it worked.

Mr. Frank Klees: So are you saying that the payment that Ornge was making to the third party suppliers was the same amount that was being paid under the repayment plan for the bond offering?

Ms. Maria Renzella: What I'm saying is, the way you—you sort of replaced it. Yes, there was a payment—you could never specifically identify it with the third parties, but the way you financed the principal and interest was through the fact that you no longer paid your third party providers as much because they weren't providing you with the capital.

Mr. Frank Klees: But you are agreeing with me now that Ornge the not-for-profit is responsible for the interest payment and for the repayment of the capital of that $275-million bond offering, correct?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes. Yes, it is.

Mr. Frank Klees: Are you aware that the Ministry of Finance disagrees and absolutely washes its hands of any responsibility for that bond offering?

Ms. Maria Renzella: But it was Ornge, not the ministry. Right? It's Ornge, yeah. So at the time it was Ornge only.

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand, but, you know, it's interesting that it all comes back. The ministry, on the one hand, is denying their responsibility because of how it was structured, but you knew full well that all along it was the not-for-profit Ornge organization that was responsible and would, in fact, be making the repayment on that bond offering, correct?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you very much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you are out of time, Mr. Klees. On to the NDP: Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I will continue with that $275 million. There seems to be $25 million missing. We have the Minister of Health saying she wants to know where that $25 million is. Do you have any idea where that $25 million—

Ms. Maria Renzella: This is the first time I've heard that there's $25 million missing. There was—every item and every disbursement made was always supported by a receipt of some sort, so every transaction is supported. So I'm baffled by a $25-million amount that they say is missing, because that doesn't make any sense to me. Every amount was being accounted for.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Of that $275 million that was brought in through the bond offering while you were there, how much of it was left?

Ms. Maria Renzella: We spent the whole amount.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You spent the entire amount?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, we did.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And you were paying back through this portion of interest, portion of your capital back to the people that had financed the bond through the money that was coming from the ministry to Ornge, to paying the bond?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Right, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Coming back to what Mr. Klees was saying, you can see how, in the public eye, it looks like the government—this is our money; this is the people of Ontario's money—goes and transfers money to Ornge, a not-for-profit corporation, so that they can provide us with air ambulance services, and then that money is used to pay interest and capital on the bond offering that is used to purchase aircraft that a for-profit company owns. We, as in the transfer payment agency, the not-for-profit transfer payment agency, did not own those aircraft. It was a separate entity, a for-profit entity, that owned it. Where am I going wrong?

Ms. Maria Renzella: So it wasn't a for-profit; it's a trust that presently owns the aircraft, but the beneficiary of the trust is Ornge. So once the assets are fully paid off, those assets go back to Ornge, and they do become Ornge's property assets.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In the same way that if the payment is not done, it becomes Ornge's responsibility to make the payment—

Ms. Maria Renzella: Let me clarify that. So the question is, if there is no payment—in most cases, there would be no payment. Let's say the performance agreement was terminated with Ornge, and Ornge couldn't make its payment at that point in time. Then the question is, what recourse do the bond holders have? Do they go after Ornge? Well, if the performance agreement is terminated with Ornge, Ornge basically is insolvent, so there's no money to go for there. So therefore, the bond holders—the only thing they have access to are the assets themselves, which would be the helicopters and the aircraft, I believe. Right? So at that point—but it doesn't go back to the government. That's what would happen there.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Just quickly because we don't have much time: You had knowledge of the performance agreement? You referred to it many times this afternoon.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Mm-hmm.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Has the government ever asked you to do modifications to the performance agreement?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, they never have. And any discussions of modifications would have gone through Chris at the time.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Are you aware that modifications were asked for and refused?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. I will say this: When MNP came in to do their audit, they had initially recommended that both the ministry and Ornge should relook at the performance agreement and look to see if there should be some potential changes, and then that was removed after some discussion. But that was the only time I remember there being some discussions in that light.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So it was a suggestion that the performance agreement should be modified?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yeah.

M^{me} France Gélinas: A discussion took place. You were aware that a discussion took place. Was Mr. Apps involved in those discussions?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No, no. Those were not involved with Mr. Apps at all, no.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who was?

Ms. Maria Renzella: It was definitely the auditors that were doing the work and it was people from Ornge that were involved. I wasn't specifically there.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When did this take place and who was it that made the recommendation that perhaps—

Ms. Maria Renzella: MNP. It was MNP.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: MNP.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you had to modify your performance agreement when you started doing land ambulance, did you not?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes, we did. So we did an amendment to the agreement at the time. Yeah, it was an amendment.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So that was the only time an amendment was made?

Ms. Maria Renzella: There were two amendments: When we had to add additional services up to Thunder Bay and then when there was the land ambulance.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And an agreement was always reached?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Was it difficult to negotiate those agreements?

Ms. Maria Renzella: I wasn't part of those negotiations at the time, but from my understanding, they were not that difficult.

M^{me} France Gélinas: They were not that difficult. Who would have been in charge of those negotiations?

Ms. Maria Renzella: Jacob Blum was the one that negotiated them, and then we had lawyers involved, too.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Had you ever wanted to modify your performance agreement yourself?

Ms. Maria Renzella: No. I think we were still working out how to work with it better, work on some of the reports and the indicators. I think there was some work that we still needed to do from that perspective. I think the focus should be less on modifying the agreement, more on improving the communications and the indicators and those types of items.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you are out of time. So thank you very much for coming before the committee today.

Ms. Maria Renzella: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We have two motions that have been tabled, the first one by Mr. Klees, if we can deal with those before we wrap up.

Mr. Klees, do you want to move your motion?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes. Thank you, Chair. I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, request a copy of the report, product or other material produced under the terms of the marketing services agreement between Ornge and AgustaWestland; and further, that the material be provided in its entirety to the committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried. Very well.

Ms. Sandals, you have a motion?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That Jacob Blum be compelled to produce and table with the Standing Committee on Public Accounts no later than Monday, May 21, 2012, his entire professional diary during his employment with Sunnybrook, starting April 2002 and with Ornge and its related entities through July 2008, as referenced in the affidavit of Jacob Blum, dated May 16, 2012.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? Is there any discussion. You wanted—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes, discussion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead, Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: My assessment of Mr. Blum was that he was more than forthright. If there were any questions that we wanted to have answered, he was more than willing to answer them—or any questions that we had, he was more than willing to answer them.

With respect to his entire professional diary, it may include portions that have nothing to do with Ornge. I think that's going beyond what the purpose of our duties here are. I'm more than happy to ask Mr. Blum to table anything that's related to Ornge, and I'm sure he would be happy to do that, but to require him to provide his entire diary I think is not necessary.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Well, I would put in "his entire professional diary as it relates to the provision of air ambulance services and critical land ambulance services in the province of Ontario."

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Is that fair?

Mr. Frank Klees: That's friendly.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer?

Mr. David Zimmer: I think the point is here, he introduced an affidavit and he pulled excerpts from his professional book; he referred to excerpts from his professional diary. I think now, on this idea that if he's referred to a part of a document, we should be able to see, have a look at what else—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. We're going to run out of time unless we get this modified and vote on it.

First of all, we'll vote on the amendment. All in favour of the amendment?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I want to make sure: So we will only ask Mr. Blum to add information that he has not already provided if it has to do with air ambulance or other ambulance services.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): In the province of Ontario, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In the province of Ontario.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, that was the amendment. Correct. Okay, and that has carried.

Then the motion as amended: All in favour? Carried. Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, I have a quick question.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes?

Mr. Frank Klees: In light of Mr. Blum's testimony today and the very critical issue of the role that Ruth Hawkins played, can the clerk confirm for us that Ms. Hawkins will in fact appear before this committee?

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): The clerk will inquire with the Ministry of Health.

Mr. Frank Klees: And the reason I say that is that if in fact Ms. Hawkins does not appear, I will move that we issue a Speaker's warrant because of the importance of her testimony to this committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. The clerk will make inquiries.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are adjourned.

The committee adjourned at 1456.

*The committee met at 0846 in room 151.*SPECIAL REPORT, AUDITOR GENERAL:
ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE
AND RELATED SERVICES

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I call this meeting to order. Before we have our first witness, there are a few motions we need to deal with.

Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts invite Dr. Chris Mazza to appear before the committee at 9 a.m. in committee room 151—you can fill in the blah blah blah, where—on Wednesday, July 18, 2012.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts seek the authorization of the House leaders for each of the recognized parties to permit the committee to sit on Wednesday, July 18, 2012, for the specific purpose of hearing from Dr. Chris Mazza relating to the 2012 Special Report of the Office of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All those in favour? Carried.

Mr. Klees, you have some motions?

Mr. Frank Klees: I think I have three here.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. The first one, please.

Mr. Frank Klees: That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, request a copy of any and all correspondence including letters and/or emails, from the associate deputy minister of health, Hugh MacLeod, to Malcolm Bates, director of the emergency health services branch, and Dennis Brown and any other person at the EHS branch in which the associate deputy minister references Ornge, or gives direction concerning the role that the EHS branch is to have concerning Ornge, or relates to allowing Dr. Mazza to do whatever he determines appropriate at Ornge and not to obstruct him during the period October 1, 2005, and the last day of February 2007 or makes any reference to how the EHS branch and its staff is to monitor, oversee, hold accountable or review the performance of Ornge, and that said correspondence be delivered to the clerk of the public accounts committee no later than Thursday, May 31, 2012.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, call Fred Rusk, former employee at the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care, emergency health services branch, to testify before this committee.

Interjections.

Mr. Frank Klees: Oh, we don't have to do it?

Interjections.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), request a copy of the 2012-13 balanced budget from Ornge that was approved by its board of directors.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Discussion?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Just a friendly amendment: How about we just ask for the budget?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): The only reason I used that wording is because that's what Ornge told me the document was called.

M^{me} France Gélinas: The balanced budget?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): That's what they said that they referenced in the Star article and that was what the specific request was. If you want to amend it, that's fine.

Mr. Frank Klees: I just want to be sure that we get the document that was referenced in the Toronto Star.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): They said that was what the document was.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): All in favour? Carried.

And you have one more?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes. That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things, request a copy of the tariff schedule prepared by Ornge to comply with CTA regulations; and further, a copy of any MOU or agreement between Ornge and Ornge Air related to the provision of air services and related costing.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

MR. TOM ROTHFELS

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's it for motions, so I'd now like to invite our only witness of the morning, Mr. Tom Rothfels, to come forward, please. Good morning. Welcome. Just to confirm that you did receive a letter outlining information for a witness appearing before the committee?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes, I did.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk has an oath for you to swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Did you want to swear an oath or be affirmed, Mr. Rothfels?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I'll be affirmed.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Rothfels, do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have six minutes for an opening statement, and then we'll have questions from the parties.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I don't have an opening statement. I thought I'd just give the time over to you for questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Then we'll start with the official opposition. We'll start in 20-minute intervals and see how much time we have left after that. Go ahead, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Mr. Rothfels, for being here this morning. We know, certainly according to your CV, that you have extensive experience in the aviation field and held a very responsible position at Ornge.

Can you tell us how it came that you were hired into your position at Ornge, and did Mr. Alfred Apps have anything to do with bringing you into Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. I got a call, essentially out of the blue, from Alfred, introducing himself and saying that he was acting on behalf of Ornge, which I didn't really know, and would I be interested in having a chat, as Ornge was looking for some aviation expertise.

We arranged a time to meet. I met with Mr. Apps for probably an hour or an hour and a half or so, in his office. He outlined what Ornge was, what the requirements were, what Dr. Mazza was looking for, and asked if I would be willing to meet with Dr. Mazza, and I said I would.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did Mr. Apps give you any indication of what his relationship was with Ornge and what role he played there?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. He said he was senior legal counsel.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can you give us an approximate date of when you might have met with Mr. Apps?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Probably, if I recall, in the spring of 2007, so let's say April 2007.

Mr. Frank Klees: In that conversation in the spring of 2007, did Mr. Apps share with you what the future plans were of Ornge and, specifically, did he discuss at all the broader international scope that they had in mind?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. He said that Ornge had determined that there was an opportunity to enter the international sphere in repatriation, if you will, of injured people, bringing back injured or sick individuals to Ontario with international emergency medical evacuation, and that in fact Ornge had hired some consultants previously who had developed a business plan, and Ornge was going to use that as a basis to go international for EMS.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. When you took on your role, what was your title?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: They called me the chief operating officer for Ornge International.

Mr. Frank Klees: For Ornge International, and Ornge International, then, was one of those for-profit companies—

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No. As far as I know, Ornge International was never created. It wasn't a for-profit company; it wasn't anything. They just gave it that name, but I'm not aware of any company ever having been formed with that name.

Mr. Frank Klees: Isn't that interesting—so you were the COO of nothing?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Exactly.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, I'd like to—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Unlike the guy last week, who was not the COO of something.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's very interesting.

M^{me} France G  linas: It was funny, though.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to pursue what it is that you did for this company then, Ornge International, and I'd like to fast forward to the acquisition of the AW139s. What role did you have in that acquisition?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Okay. If I can just take two seconds, this international part of it, when I got to Ornge, they handed me this business plan that had been developed by these consultants, and I told Chris that it wasn't worth the paper it was written on, there was no possible way to implement this, and it was just a piece of garbage, and, you know, if that was their plan, count me out.

I very quickly then was asked to get involved in the process to acquire the helicopters, and so we set up a process under which we would acquire these aircraft. There was a team set up internally at Ornge, of which I was part, but we also had outsiders involved as well. We went through a selection process to find what we called a fairness adviser. We hired PricewaterhouseCoopers as the fairness adviser for this process so that the people who were bidding on the aircraft could have an independent source if they had concerns about the transparency, legitimacy or adequacy of the process. We also went out and went through a process to hire what we called purchase advisers, people who were highly experienced in acquiring major aircraft. We hired a company called M-Powered Solutions, a fellow out of McMillan Binch and an associate of his, and there was a team involved at Ornge.

First we went through a selection process to look at the available aircraft that are out there that could conceivably meet the mission that Ornge required, and we defined Ornge's rotary-wing mission in terms of the weight it needed to be able to carry, the distance it needed to be able to fly and the technical aspects of the aircraft that we required.

We determined that there were essentially three aircraft make and models that met these standards. We created a request for information, a fairly substantial document with all of the technical specifications, and we passed that through our fairness adviser. We went through a process outlined with the fairness adviser to make sure that they were comfortable that we had an open, transparent and fair process, and then we sent it out to those three companies, which were Sikorsky, Eurocopter and AgustaWestland. All three submitted very substantial responses to that document—binders probably, on average, about a foot high—

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Rothfels, I appreciate all of that detail. Can I, with your permission—

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Sure; yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: —I'd like to just get on to the actual deal, if I could. We're limited in time.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: Suffice to say that you were satisfied that it was an exhaustive process, that it was competitive and that in the final analysis, the decision was made, as we understand it, to go with the AW139s with Agusta?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And can I ask, what was your role on that negotiating team?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I was then asked to lead the negotiations for the acquisition. Again, we had this team of people that were a team of people within Ornge, as well as the fairness adviser, legal counsel and purchase advisers, but I led the team, led the negotiations, which then took place over six to eight weeks, over which period of time we negotiated the actual deal with Agusta.

Mr. Frank Klees: And who was on the Agusta side of the negotiating team?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: It was led by Lou Bartolotta, and he had a couple of more junior people with him.

Mr. Frank Klees: And was Mr. Mazza involved on your side?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes, but not directly in the negotiations. Before we started the negotiations, I laid out a list of all of our positions, a list of where Agusta was and how we might be able to solve the differences. I regularly updated Dr. Mazza every couple of days, or every few days, with where the negotiations were and where the differences were. I would get advice from him as to what he thought we should do in terms of how to move forward.

Mr. Frank Klees: So he was fully apprised of the ongoing negotiations.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Absolutely.

Mr. Frank Klees: He obviously had input through you.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Absolutely.

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand that Maria Renzella was also involved.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was she actively engaged with you in that process?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Not in the negotiations. She was part of the selection group, she was part of the process, but she wasn't there in the room for the negotiations.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. So the deal was concluded. The amount, the final purchase price for the helicopters, was what?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Roughly $12 million and change per aircraft.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to pursue an interesting element of this deal. You negotiated the purchase of the aircraft. I understand that, subsequent to signing the deal for the $144 million, you heard back from Agusta. As I understand it—correct me if I'm wrong—they advised you of some good news, that they had qualified for an upgraded weight category, and because of that good news, they were going to assess you for an additional—how much?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I think it was a little over $600,000 per aircraft.

Mr. Frank Klees: Per aircraft. "So here's the good news: We got this upgraded regulatory blessing, and for that good news, you're going to pay another $600,000 per aircraft." What was your responses?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: "Nice try." This is the sort of thing that goes on, and no harm, no foul. But it clearly was completely inappropriate. We had covered this off in the purchase agreement. There was no way that Ornge would be required to pay this.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you're an astute business person. This isn't the first time you've been through this. You covered that weight issue off in your agreement, and as far as you were concerned, it was incorporated into that original purchase price.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Absolutely.

Mr. Frank Klees: And Dr. Mazza was aware of that as well.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you went back to them and said, "Under no circumstances." What was the outcome of that secondary negotiation that you had with Agusta?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: By that point, Rick Potter had assumed responsibility for the relationship with Agusta. I was involved in other areas.

When Agusta asked for that extra $600,000, I pointed out, both to—well, actually, to everybody; to Rick Potter, to Maria Renzella, to Chris Mazza—the two sections in the purchase agreement where we had covered this off, and said that we absolutely didn't have to pay for this. Do you want me to describe those areas in the purchase agreement?

Mr. Frank Klees: We don't have—

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Okay.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's sufficient to know that that was covered off.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Absolutely.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Potter testified here, when he was here, that he went back to Agusta and successfully negotiated away that $600,000 per aircraft.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Well, right. I guess what he did was point it out to them that it had already been covered off, so, "No."

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. So, as we understand it—did Mr. Potter come back and report to you and the rest of the team of his successful negotiation?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was the reaction?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: "Great."

Mr. Frank Klees: Are you aware of what took place when Mr. Potter advised Dr. Mazza of his success?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I wasn't there in the room, but it's my understanding that Chris was relatively cool to that news and was not enthusiastic about the fact that that payment was not going to be made. As I said, I wasn't in the room but I do recall that the reaction that Rick got was not positive.

Mr. Frank Klees: Is it true that Dr. Mazza subsequently insisted that Ornge pay that $600,000 per aircraft?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: That's my understanding.

Mr. Frank Klees: Then, subsequent to that, obviously we have to do something. The $600,000 per aircraft was then paid to Agusta, and there is a sense that that created some problem, then, for probably people like Mr. Potter. You were no longer in the picture directly, but I would expect Ms. Renzella and perhaps—who was the legal responsible for—

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Cindy Heinz was acting as corporate counsel at that point.

Mr. Frank Klees: So I understand it fell to them now to structure an agreement between Ornge and Agusta that would somehow recover that $600,000, because, having negotiated the $600,000 away, insisting that the $600,000 would be paid to Agusta—Agusta now, obviously, was in hand of a lot of money that they had agreed not to charge. Tell us what happened then, to your best understanding. Who was charged with negotiating what I understand is referred to as a marketing agreement?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I do need to state that I was not directly involved in this, and so there were—I don't have direct knowledge of this, but it was my understanding that both Maria Renzella and Cindy Heinz were primarily responsible for carrying out the directive that they got from Chris to come up with a marketing services agreement.

Mr. Frank Klees: And that was basically to paper, essentially, the kickback of that money into one of the Ornge companies. Is that right?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Well, again, I wasn't directly involved so there may have been other things that I wasn't aware of. I'm not aware of anything else, but that certainly could be one explanation.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Rothfels, you're a very astute business person, and while you weren't directly involved, these are not things that are hidden within the executive group of a company like this. I would expect, sir, when you heard about this and you knew what the flow of money was, that you would have had some concern. Did you have any concern about what was going on in this agreement?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes, I did have some concerns.

Mr. Frank Klees: What's your immediate reaction? When you became aware that this flow of money was taking place, what did your gut tell you?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I was very uncomfortable. I knew, in terms of the purchase agreement, that there was no requirement to pay this. I'd heard about this marketing services agreement. I wasn't aware of the terms of it, but it didn't smell right, I suppose.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you express your concern to any of your colleagues at Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. I think I reiterated a number of times to Rick Potter, to Cindy Heinz, to Maria Renzella and to Chris Mazza that the $600,000 weight upgrade was a fictional charge and that we, Ornge, should not be paying it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did the term "fraud" ever cross your mind when you were contemplating this?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: It certainly—again, it crossed my mind—

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you ever express that in those terms to any of your colleagues?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: You know, I don't actually recall if I used that word. It was certainly in my mind, but I don't recall if I used that word to them.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have three minutes left, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: If you don't mind—I don't know, because we do have other rounds—would you mind if I just continue and wrap up this line of questioning?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Certainly, if the other parties don't mind. We'll all keep track of the time.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'll give it to you on the other end, right? Is that okay?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Continue.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Rothfels, we had here some very senior people, whether it's Mr. Potter, Ms. Renzella—certainly Cynthia Heinz, whose background as a lawyer would have triggered her, I would think, and Ms. Renzella as well as Mr. Potter, in the same way that it triggered you. Something is fundamentally wrong here, and yet they were charged with implementing this strategy. Did you ever express your concern to any member of the board?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And who was that?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Don Lowe.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was the response from this member of the board?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: He expressed some concern and surprise and indicated that he would look into it. But I think his feeling was that the lawyers had covered this or papered it or something to that effect.

Mr. Frank Klees: Knowing what the fiduciary responsibilities of a director are, did it concern you that that would be the response of a member of the board, that the legals had papered it?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: The timing was such that, once I had expressed these concerns about this transaction internally and was quite vocal about it, I became persona non grata internally at Ornge. Within a few months, I had left Ornge, and the meeting that I had with Don Lowe took place a week or so after I left Ornge. I felt I had a responsibility to make sure at least someone on the board was aware of my thoughts, and so I had that meeting.

Mr. Frank Klees: Would you say that the reason that you ended up leaving Ornge is because you had expressed your concern about what was going on around this deal?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I think that that was certainly part of it, yes. There may have been other issues as well, but the organization was such that you were either with the organization or not. Clearly, I was not.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did any other members of the executive, your colleagues, ever express to you their concern about what they saw going on, whether it was—and let's just stay with this deal. Did anyone confide in you to say, "Look, I have serious concerns about this"?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I think that most of the people who were aware that the weight upgrade charge was not appropriate and who were aware that Ornge was going to pay it anyway probably had some level of discomfort with that.

Mr. Frank Klees: But they were silenced.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can I ask you, were there other issues that concerned you in the organization that caused you to question whether you should be working and associated with this organization?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. You know, the work that Ornge does on the front lines is absolutely spectacular. There's no other organization in the world, other than militaries, that operate across the breadth and depth and the horrendous conditions weather-wise and everything else that Ornge does. But Ornge up until that time had been primarily a medically driven organization. It had no institutional history of operating aircraft. To go from not operating aircraft to acquiring complex, medium-weight, twin-engine helicopters in an IFR environment is not something that you do lightly. So with no institutional capability or history, it concerned me greatly that Ornge was about to undertake this in a very short period of time. 0910

I came up with a plan to joint venture with the world's largest operator of this class and this type of aircraft, the AW139, to help us, to help Ornge learn how to do this and do it safely, properly and within all of the guidelines that were required. When that began to be shunted aside and I realized that Ornge was essentially going to go alone, it gave me great concern.

Mr. Frank Klees: We've had other testimony here to the effect that the concept was far beyond the core competency of the individuals who were then put in charge of this very complex, far-reaching organization. You're agreeing with that.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: As I said, there was no institutional history. There was no one there who had ever operated aircraft, let alone a mixed fleet of fixed-wing and rotary-wing, complex aircraft.

Mr. Frank Klees: Prior to if I can refer to it as the Mazza scheme, the aircraft side of it was contracted out to experienced air carriers who then complemented, obviously, the health care side of it. Would you agree that where things started to go off the rails here was when, in fact, under the Mazza scheme, all of that air carrier responsibility was brought in-house and essentially overwhelmed the people who, as you say, didn't have the institutional knowledge, didn't have the core competency to cope with that? Is that a fair statement?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I think that that's certainly part of it. The justification internally for doing this was that the costs that were being charged by these third party carriers were unsustainable in the long term and the only viable solution was for Ornge to bring it in-house.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. My last question to you: As a layman, going back to that marketing agreement, would you characterize that, as a layman, as a kickback within the industry?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Oh boy. Again, I wasn't party to whatever other discussions may have gone on between Agusta and Ornge. There may have been other things. All I can say is that I wasn't comfortable with it and, from what I saw, it certainly bore some—there were issues there.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. You used 26 minutes, so perhaps we'll have 26 minutes for each of the other parties, then.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I may choose to cut it up, you know, just to be different.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're welcome to if you so desire. Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I will go back to the line of questioning that my colleague started, but just a few housekeeping items before I do this.

The first one is, were you aware of Mr. Mazza's salary during your tenure at Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were you aware of any other executive's salary during your time at Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: We can see that your salary increased during the period of time you were at Ornge. How were those increases awarded?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I don't recall that there was any substantial increase in my—there was a bonus structure that was added to my compensation once I started to get involved in some of the serious negotiations for the acquisition of the aircraft and the plans subsequent to that, but the base salary was not—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. And while you were there, although you were with Ornge International—which I guess as a title means all of the business that was to do with international would have fallen under you?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Well, I was never involved in anything, other than initially telling them that their business plan that they had for international wasn't worth the paper it was written on. Beyond that, I had no involvement in anything international.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And that did not gain you any popularity points.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I don't think that they were completely wedded to that plan when I got there, so they dropped it fairly quickly.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Coming back to what went on: The deal is being negotiated. We've had Jacob Blum here to testify. He was there part of the time that you were there. He testified that he met with Ministry of Health officials on a weekly basis. He even gave us, usually on a Friday afternoon, the time, date, place etc., when those meetings took place. During the time that this was being discussed, was any of this ever shared outside of the organization, the fact that you were negotiating a purchase, the discrepancy between what you wanted and what—the briefing that you would give to Chris as to where things were progressing, before the $600,000 I'm talking about: Was this ever shared with anybody at the ministry?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I don't know. I wasn't involved in any discussions, briefings or anything else outside of Ornge, so if there were any conversations like that, you'd have to ask people who did those briefings.

M^{me} France Gélinas: To your knowledge, in the management team, who, when there were questions coming from the ministry, would have answered those questions?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I was so far removed from that—I'm not sure. I do recall that some combination of Jacob, Chris and occasionally, I think, Tom Lepine, were involved in briefings to various people at the ministry. But again, it just wasn't anything I was involved in.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You did say that it was Mr. Apps who first approached you to join Ornge. What were some of the other dealings that Mr. Apps did for Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: In the time that I was there, Alf certainly acted as the senior legal counsel. As we were negotiating the deals with Agusta, as we were selecting fairness advisers, purchase advisers, Alf was the senior lawyer who reviewed all of the documents and approved, frankly, gave final approval to whatever documents we issued. I was heavily involved in an RFI to select a helicopter operator. There was another one for looking at this joint venture we were trying to set up with Ornge. Alf may not have been involved in the day-to-day basis of discussions and negotiations, but certainly he was the lawyer that the other people on the Fasken team reported to and got approval from.

M^{me} France Gélinas: If we look more specifically at the deal: You did an RFI, you started negotiations, then Rick Potter finished the deal where the extra cost for the extra weight was brought forward, then this deal was sent to Cynthia Heinz, Maria and Rick to figure out and to put on paper. Would Mr. Apps have signed off on the finals of those agreements as well, like he had overseen everything else legally that went on?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Since I wasn't involved in that, I can't answer that directly. You'd have to ask the people that were involved. I don't know.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But when you were there, he was giving the final approval for the legal work that was being performed for Ornge.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: As far as I know, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So it's not a stretch to say that that agreement also would have needed final legal work that Mr. Apps would look at?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I think that that's probably a logical conclusion, but I don't have any direct knowledge of that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: We have correspondence from Mr. Apps that, if you follow the—do you want to bring this over for him? This is the exhibit that we all have. It's an email from Mr. Apps, and you are cc'd on it. He's actually writing to Maria and to Jacob, but you're cc'd on it. The last line says, "Once we have massaged the game plan past the Minister of Health, I will organize a follow-up private dinner for Chris with the Premier so that he can outline the vision and the game plan in greater detail." This took place on June 20, 2007. Sorry; I should've given you time to read it.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Okay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So, any idea why you were copied on that kind of information?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I probably had been with the organization for—this was June 20—maybe a couple of months. No, I don't recall why. In fact, I don't even recall this email. I'm sorry; I really don't.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No, that's okay. Memory is allowed to forget, and so are you.

By the text that you have seen here, Mr. Apps offered a follow-up private dinner for Chris with the Premier. Do you know if this is something that Mr. Apps could have delivered on? You've had some dealing with Mr. Apps; do you figure he's able to organize dinner with the Premier?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I suppose it's possible. He seemed to have the ability get people to return his calls.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. And you say this based on—

Mr. Tom Rothfels: He clearly seemed to have relatively high-level connections into the government.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And have you ever seen evidence that he had those connections?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Only through third parties. I was never involved in any of these meetings. I never really was—as I said, I was never involved, so I have no direct involvement.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But you just knew because you knew him; you knew the work that he did? Okay. What was the extent of your relationship with Mr. Apps?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: We didn't have a very extensive relationship. I was involved in a number of Ornge's transactions: to negotiate the helicopter acquisition, to negotiate the continuation of the helicopter services agreement, to negotiate the joint venture between Ornge and Era. Alfred, again, was senior counsel, and the lawyers that he had assigned to work with me on these transactions would report to Alf. I suppose there may have been occasional either conversations or emails between myself and Alfred including the rest of the team that may have discussed specifics related to those transactions.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Mr. Apps brought in a consultant by the name of Don Guy. Have you ever heard of this man?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I've heard the name; I've never met him.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Do you know what Mr. Apps would have brought him and what kind of work he would do for Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. There are also paper trails where Mr. Apps and Mr. Don Guy are trying to arrange meetings for Ornge. Any idea why Ornge would need to arrange meetings with either the Premier, the Minister of Finance, or the Ministry of Health?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No. Again, I wasn't involved in any of that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: When the change from strictly Ornge being run as a non-profit agency to the creation of Ornge Peel, which later became Ornge Global—were you there at the time when those changes took place?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I was certainly there when Ornge Peel was set up. I'm not—do you know the timing of when it was changed to Ornge Global?

M^{me} France Gélinas: In about the time you were there. Ornge Peel started in 2007, and Ornge Global in about 2008.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes, I left in August 2010, so I guess Ornge Global was in existence at that point.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you have any dealings with Ornge Global?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No. I was always paid by Ornge.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Ornge Global was the agency that owned the helicopter. Were you aware of that?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes, I think someone may have shown me something that said that there was—Ornge Global, and there was something about an Ornge issuer trust for the bond that was issued or something. Again, I wasn't involved in the structuring of any of that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did it sound okay for you that an agency of the Ministry of Health—you know that your budget came from the provincial government. The provincial government usually deals with not-for-profit agencies, certainly when it comes to health care. Was there discussion as to, why did we need that trust, why did we need a for-profit agency under Ornge? Was this ever discussed at management?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who made those decisions? Who decided on that corporate structure?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I wasn't involved in any of that structuring or any of those discussions, so I'm afraid I really don't know.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You don't know?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Good morning. You were speaking about the fact that the business strategy or business plan for Ornge International, I think you said wasn't worth the paper that it was written on. I enjoyed that analogy. Were you apprised of the overall for-profit side, or was it just one section?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No, I was not, again, involved in anything on what is called the for-profit side. I had no involvement there.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just on that component that you were apprised of, that you were able to speak on and say, "This plan is pretty much worthless," was it abundantly clear that there was really no effective strategy in that business plan?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I think we need to clarify here. In 2007, when I joined Ornge, as I said, Ornge had previously hired a couple of consultants to write a business plan for international EMS. That was the plan that I felt had no merit, and it was dropped. Ornge never pursued that. I understand, a few years later, on the for-profit side, there were some other plans, but quite different from the one that these consultants had written. So I don't know that there was much connection there.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's fine. Thank you very much for that.

You were speaking on some of the problems, overall, with Ornge and some of the things that you felt uncomfortable with, and one thing that you highlighted was the shift from being medically driven to then becoming part medically driven and part aviation-driven. Were there any other concerns that came to your mind in terms of the way that Ornge was being run?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: From a straight, objective point of view, no. I've outlined the concerns that I have. Unless you have more specific—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Certainly. In terms of the way funds were being allocated and the way money was being distributed in terms of the priorities of the organization, can you comment on that?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No. I wasn't involved in any of that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Throughout your tenure at Ornge, you indicated you were paid by Ornge directly?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Are you aware if your salary was disclosed on the sunshine list or if it was ever taken off?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I was an outside consultant the whole time. I was a third party contractor; I was never an employee.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Any reason why you were always a third party—chief operating officer, part of the management team; you could have been brought in—the reason why this particular arrangement?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: It was never offered. I was never asked or offered to become an employee.

As a personal observation, I'm not sure I fit very well in that organization from a number of perspectives.

M^{me} France Gélinas: A lot of witnesses have hinted the same way you did. Can you describe the culture and how you don't fit in that culture? You had an office there. You saw them every day. You—

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. There were an awful lot of very dedicated people who worked very hard in that organization, who believed very deeply in the mission that Ornge was fulfilling day in and day out.

I think that Dr. Mazza, as you may have heard, is and can be a very charming, inspiring person, but he was also emotionally—the organization was very sort of top-down driven. Chris would make decisions and people would then carry out those decisions.

It was my first and only foray into the public service sector, if you will. I wasn't familiar with how things operate in that environment. I think I'm probably more comfortable in the normal for-profit industry.

Mr. Frank Klees: But not a good example.

M^{me} France Gélinas: This is not the way it's usually done.

Did you have any communication with the board, except for that one time when you called Don Lowe? Did you ever communicate anything, make a report to the board?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No. That was absolutely, strictly forbidden. There was never to be any communication with members of the board, other than either through Chris or someone that he may have authorized. So no, that was very much something that wasn't done.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. How much time do I have left?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Let's see. You have seven minutes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. I'm going to let it go and take a second round instead.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. On to the government members, and Mr. Moridi.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you, Mr. Rothfels, for appearing before this committee.

One of your former colleagues at Ornge, who was associate vice-president, Ms. Kelly Long—did you know her?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I knew her, yes.

Mr. Reza Moridi: In what capacity did you know her?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: She worked on other areas of the business that I had no involvement in, so I really had virtually no dealings at all with her on a work basis.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Did you know of her special relationship with Dr. Mazza? Were you aware of that?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Not right away. But things don't stay secret in an organization all that long, so eventually rumours circulated.

Mr. Reza Moridi: What was your impression of her work at Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: As I said, I wasn't involved—I had no involvement with her, so I really don't know.

Mr. Reza Moridi: She started as a junior person at Ornge and then she moved up to the position of—basically executive positions—associate vice-president very quickly. So the promotion was very fast in an organization—for a person to begin with a junior position and then reach a higher executive position in a short time. What do you think is the reason for her very fast promotion in the organization?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Moridi, if I could ask you to pull your mike down a little closer.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Oh, sorry.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'm having trouble hearing you. Thank you.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Well, again, since I wasn't involved in any of the work that she was doing or really any areas that she was involved in, I honestly don't—you know, I don't have a way to evaluate what she did, how she did it, whether she did it well or not. I simply wasn't involved.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So do you think that Dr. Mazza's decision to promote her was a proper decision, just in your own opinion?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Again, I have no way of giving you an objective answer to that, since I don't know what she did or how she did it.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So you had no dealings with her in her capacity and in your capacity?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No, not within the organization, no.

Mr. Reza Moridi: What's your general opinion about Dr. Mazza? Just give us a picture of what you think about him.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I think, as I said earlier, he's a somewhat complicated fellow. He can be charming and brilliant and inspiring. He can also be emotionally driven, volatile, demanding. There are all different sides to him.

Mr. Reza Moridi: How would be his relationships or his interactions with employees as a boss of the company? How would you explain that?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Pretty much the way I just described him. He could be any of the above. You never knew.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Was he very controlling in terms of—

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. Yes.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Staff, even senior staff, have been controlled directly by him?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. You were told what to do and you were expected to do it.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Was there any possibility that senior staff—at least the vice-president, the associate vice-presidents, directors, people on that level—would report something to the members of the board of directors?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: This is more opinion than anything. There may have been some relationships, but as far as I knew, there was a very strict rule in place that there was to be no communication to the board other than as authorized by Chris or through Chris.

Mr. Reza Moridi: You were chief operating officer of a corporation called Ornge International. Earlier today, you mentioned that this corporation didn't exist. It didn't exist; it didn't appear at the Auditor General's report. There's no mention about this corporation. You were there for three years, I believe, right?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: A little over three years, yes.

Mr. Reza Moridi: From 2007 to 2011. You were COO, chief operating officer, of this organization. This organization wasn't an incorporated organization, was it?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Not that I know of, no.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So when they appointed you as COO of this organization, did you know that this organization was basically a phony organization?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: When I first joined, the intention was, as I said, that they had this business plan that these consultants had written to do this international EMS repatriation. So I think there may have been an intent to form a company along that line. When I and others said, "This business plan is simply not viable," I guess they never bothered to incorporate any company because there was no business for it to do. Then I was pulled off to do other things like the helicopter acquisitions and other matters.

Mr. Reza Moridi: But you had been there for three years as a COO of this unincorporated corporation, from 2007 to 2010. Of course, you signed various communications—letters, emails—under that title. Did it never occur to you to ask the question, saying, "I'm the COO of this corporation which doesn't exist legally. Could you do something about this? Could you either move away from this position or incorporate this entity?"

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No, I never did. It didn't particularly concern me. There was never an Ornge International Corp. or Inc. or anything like that. It just said "Ornge International." I guess it was implied that there's a company there, but there never was and it never said anything like that. Maybe it should have bothered me, but it didn't.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Well, your CV or resumé basically outlines that between 2007 and 2010, you were chief operating officer of Ornge International, and within that period, you have done quite a number of works for the company, including negotiations on helicopter purchases from AgustaWestland and others, and Era as well. Again, as a senior person yourself, Mr. Rothfels, when you have been appointed to such a position and then you will say, well—you know, it's not a one-day, two-day or three-day period. Then various activities were conducted by yourself under the title of COO for this phony corporation, never incorporated, and then you kept basically continuing work under that title. You even put it in your resumé, that within those three years you carried that title for a phony corporation. Would this at any time bother you, or did you ask any questions of, say, Dr. Mazza, saying, "I'm COO of this corporation. When are you going to incorporate this?"

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Well, first of all, I'm not—I don't think I agree with the characterization of it as a phony corporation. It was a title that was given. I guess if I had given it much thought, which I probably didn't, I would've thought if there ever was a business that's international that I would ever get involved in that maybe they would incorporate something. But I was never involved in anything that would give rise to the need for that.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Well, they called it Ornge International, as they had various Ornges within the main company. This wasn't a branch of, say, Ornge, a division of Ornge or an office of Ornge. It seemed to everyone that this is a corporation. It has a chief operating officer.

Anyway, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'll pass on to Mr. Zimmer to continue.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: The marketing services agreement that was negotiated, the lead-in to that is this business of the weight upgrade charge of $600,000 per helicopter, times 12 is $7.2 million. We heard from Mr. Potter that he went back to Agusta and quickly negotiated or told them that Ornge wasn't going to pay the $600,000 times 12 helicopters. He went back to Chris Mazza and told him the good news and said frankly that he was expecting sort of a pat on the back and a comment, "Job well done. You saved us $7.2 million." And Mazza's reaction was, as you've said and as Potter said, that he was not keen on that and, in fact, gave the direction to pay the full price. Potter was asked what his reaction to that direction from Mazza was—and I'm quoting from Hansard. Potter said he said to Mazza, "Are you freaking crazy?" Is that a characterization which you would agree with?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: With respect to Mazza's view of that?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes, it was surprising.

Mr. David Zimmer: You say "surprising"; Potter is a little more colourful and says he thought Mazza was “freaking crazy.” Would you agree with that stronger characterization?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I’ll stay with it was surprising. There may have been other things that I wasn’t aware of, but on the surface, it certainly was surprising.

Mr. David Zimmer: Why do you say it was surprising? Why do you think Potter, who’s an aviation expert rather than a medical guy, thought it was freaking crazy? What was wrong with it that made Potter think it was freaking crazy and you say, more diplomatically, it was surprising?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Well, I think we were both aware that under the terms of the aircraft purchase agreement, there was no need to pay this.

Mr. David Zimmer: Are you aware of any speculation floating around the executive team as to what might have motivated Mazza to say, “Thanks for negotiating the reduction, but let’s pay it anyway”? There must have been gossip around the executive corridors. “Why is the boss doing this? We’ve just set it up so we can save $7.2 million, and the boss doesn’t want to take the savings.” There must have been gossip and rumours and conversation in the executive team. Was there?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I’m sure there was. I didn’t really participate much in that. Things were somewhat siloed, so people stuck to what they were told to do. If there was speculation about it, there may also have been, because Chris was involved in direct discussions with senior people at Agusta—maybe there was something else going on that other people weren’t aware of.

Mr. David Zimmer: But absent of being aware of what those other considerations might be, the sentiment was that it was surprising or that it was frigging crazy that he was doing this.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I don’t think anybody understood.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you ever see the marketing services agreement that was put in place?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you ever become aware of the terms of the marketing service agreement, who was working on it, that sort of thing?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I knew that there was a marketing services agreement being put into place, and I knew that Cindy Heinz and Maria Renzella had been directed to make it happen.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you know who was going to be the front-line person doing the research and doing the marketing services?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: On your resumé, you’ve got an item here: “2007 to 2010, chief operating officer, Ornge International.” One of the things you did in that capacity and during that time frame, the third-last bullet point on your resumé: “The negotiation with Era and the creation of a joint venture to assume the direct responsibility for Ornge’s rotary-wing operations.” That’s one of the first times I’ve come across Era. What is Era? Who is Era?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Era Helicopters is a wholly owned subsidiary of a New York Stock Exchange company called SEACOR. They’re one of the largest fleet operators of the AW139 in the world. Their headquarters is in New York, their main base of operations is in Louisiana, but they have operations in many parts of the world.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you in fact create a joint venture service with them to assume the responsibility of the rotary-wing operations of Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes, we negotiated a joint venture agreement. The joint venture company was created, and Era owned, I think, 25% of that; Ornge owned 75%. I left the organization shortly after that joint venture had been created, and, as I understand it, the agreements were never implemented.

Mr. David Zimmer: What was the strategic objective of that joint venture agreement, and who initiated the idea and negotiated the agreement?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: The purpose was that because Ornge had no institutional history or internal capability to operate these rotary-wing aircraft, I think it was mainly my idea that we should bring in somebody who knew what they were doing to help Ornge in getting up to speed and learning how to do this and learning how to maintain these aircraft and staff them and pilot them and train the pilots and manage spare parts. This was a very, very complex undertaking where Ornge had no history or capability. So we thought, let’s bring in somebody who really does know what they’re doing.

Mr. David Zimmer: And then you’ve said that that agreement in fact did not take effect?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: That’s my understanding. After I left, the agreement was essentially left to wither on the vine.

Mr. David Zimmer: So the operations contemplated by the agreement never took off, never took effect?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: That’s correct, yes. Ornge just did it itself.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have a couple of minutes, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: With respect to Chris Mazza, I’ve been sitting here now for days and days with my colleagues and I’ve been following all the evidence, and for the most part—in fact, probably to a person—every witness talks about the difficulty or the challenges of dealing with Chris Mazza’s personality. Generally, the theme seems to be that he was mercurial, he was aggressive, he was secretive, he was up, he was down: a very difficult relationship to manage.

I can’t help but get the sense that there must be—in my amateur reading there are sort of elements of almost a bipolar disorder here, the way he fluctuated in his management style. Would you agree with that?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I have no medical background. I don’t think I’m qualified to comment. I can simply say that Chris was—at times, it was challenging to deal with him.

Mr. David Zimmer: Could you give me a couple of examples of what you mean by “challenging”? Give me one good example of a challenging situation you had with Mazza in terms of interacting with him as one of his executive officers.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Um.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just so I get the flavour.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Right. In general, his management style did not include an open discussion of issues. He would make a decision, he would announce the decision, and people were expected to follow that through. I myself often questioned the thought process, analysis or logic that may have gone into that decision when I may not have agreed with it, and areas of aviation where I felt I had some significant competence, yet decisions were made that, frankly, I found difficult to understand.

Mr. David Zimmer: And yet on paper—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're pretty much out of time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: For the whole time?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): No, you'll have another 12 minutes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We'll bite into it and let Mr. Zimmer carry on.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Go ahead

Mr. David Zimmer: And yet, you know, the irony is that on paper Dr. Mazza obviously is a very intelligent person. He's a highly trained physician—a trauma physician, emergency medicine—MBA training. Academically, I expect he was probably a star in his studies and so on. How do you account for someone with that apparent level of academic intelligence, at least, not being able to function as a chief executive at least vis-à-vis his executive team?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I wouldn't say that he wasn't able to function. I think there's quite a difference between going to school and learning stuff out of a book, and being in the real world where you have to operate in a much messier environment than what you see in textbooks and what you learn at school.

Chris had never run an organization like Ornge. Chris had no background in aviation and had no experience. So it wasn't a matter of whether he was bright or intelligent; he is. There wasn't any experience there in business, in aviation, in the areas where he was now suddenly involved and he had nothing on which to fall back.

Mr. David Zimmer: Given that and given your executive experience yourself, when you were recruited to join Ornge, you must have done your own due diligence; that is, who's the CEO, what's the CEO all about, what's his personality, what's his vision, what's his background? As an experienced executive professional, is this an environment that I want to join up with? Obviously, you said yes. So given what you knew about Mazza's background or his inexperience in the area and so on, what motivated you to take up the challenge and join the executive team? I mean, a lot of people might have looked into it and said, "I'm going to steer clear of this. Nothing good can come of this," but you joined. I'm not being critical of that. I'm just asking why.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Right. Well, in hindsight, of course, that's a very valid point. I met Chris probably two or three times before we decided to work together. As I said, Chris can be a very inspiring, very charming, very—you know, just a charming guy.

He was very passionate about the mission that Ornge needed to accomplish in terms of being the service that provides this medical transportation on this great geographic scale and complexity. He needed some aviation help and was quite passionate about needing someone who could help him make this really the service he always wanted it to be.

Did I look into his background? Yes, I did, and I saw all of these great things that you've described in terms of his medical background and MBA and all the rest of that. I met him a few times and I thought, "You know, I've done all this work in the private or for-profit sector." There was an element, I suppose—I don't want to go too far down this, but there may have been an element, I suppose, of saying, "Well, if I can help in this sort of public service way, then maybe I should do that too."

Mr. David Zimmer: So even an experienced and seasoned executive, as you are, which is evident in your resumé, in your years and years of experience, in the course of doing some background checks and, more importantly, in the course of three or four meetings or so with Chris—and I'm not being critical in this, but you too got caught up in the charming manic of his personality and his vision.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No, I'd like to think I'm a little more objective than just being charmed by a pretty face and a good story, but—you know, there may have been an element of that, but there clearly was a need in this organization, in talking to him and others, for the aviation expertise that I could bring to the table.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, most of the other people who have appeared before the committee have talked about recognizing the need of doing the air ambulance piece and doing it properly for the people of Ontario. So there was that, plus the magnetic, charming, visionary, dynamic personality of Dr. Mazza that attracted them. Is that a fair summary of how you got involved in this?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I think that was certainly an element of it, yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: So what lessons have you learned, as a seasoned executive, as a result of this difficult relationship that you entered into for a while and are now out of?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: You know, I think you take away learnings from every situation. Much of it, I have to say, was positive in that there are a tremendous number of highly dedicated and skilled people in Ornge who work really hard to deliver the service under trying and difficult circumstances, and it was inspiring to be part of that.

It wasn't an entirely positive experience, as I think we've talked about today and as I'm sure you've heard from other people who've appeared here. That's unfortunate, because I think that, again, the vast majority of the people who work at Ornge are now forced to work in an organization that has a black cloud over it. They see their organization being dragged through the mud, and they had no involvement in that.

Mr. David Zimmer: So what are a couple of big lessons you've taken away from this experience?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I suppose, if anything, that I'd be very leery of anything involved with an agency in the public service sector, because it clearly operates under different rules than what I'm used to.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And if you want any time left, you might want to wrap up.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, very well. We'll move to Mr. Klees. You have six minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. Mr. Rothfels, you've been very helpful. I think what you've confirmed is something that we learned this past week, and that is that the government was warned by senior civil servants not to go down this track. You've made it very clear that Dr. Mazza neither had the experience nor the background, certainly no experience in aviation, to take on what was a monumental undertaking—a great concept, but the core competencies were not there to actually deliver on it.

I think that's why we're here today. We're here because what was a good intention just simply did not have the core competencies to be able to deliver on that.

I'd like to just ask you this: You've confirmed for us that you had serious concerns about a number of aspects of the Ornge operation. You confirmed that you had very serious concerns about the kickback document, the marketing agreement that made no sense—there was no financial background to it. You expressed that concern to Ms. Renzella; you expressed that concern to Cynthia Heinz, who was the lawyer for Ornge. You warned them. For whatever reason, they chose to ignore that warning and carried on and, as you say, they ended up papering that document. You confirmed that you expressed your concern to one of the directors of the board, Mr. Lowe, who has fiduciary responsibilities. The fact that none of these people came forward and assumed their responsibilities—whether that be as an executive, whether that be as a director of the board—and none of this was exposed until such time as it became a public embarrassment to obviously not only Ornge, but the government.

So we're here today to determine, really, two things: first, what went wrong and who was responsible—you've been very helpful to us in that; more important is what has to be done to move forward and restore confidence in this province's air ambulance system.

What we're hearing about the lack of competence, the lack of experience and the lack of institutional knowledge about the air carrier side of this industry—sir, nothing has changed since you left. In fact, when you left, you were probably the person who was bringing that experience to the organization.

We have an organization that's flailing. I saw a report yesterday that is riddled with incident reports about patients dying because of either a lack of competence on the dispatch side or a lack of competence on the part of the individuals who are doing the staffing—understaffed bases, whether that be for pilots or for paramedics. We have a serious problem, and I think that unless the government gets serious about hearing from people like yourself who are telling us that this is a fundamentally flawed structure, that we need some competency, certainly on the air carrier side—until we do that, more people are going to die. We're going to continue to have the kind of incident reports that we're getting almost on a daily basis.

I'd like to know from you: The recommendation has been made—in fact, I think Mr. Blum, amongst others, stated in their testimony here—that the only way to move forward is to pause, to restructure this, to admit that mistakes were made, that the competencies are not there, that the air carrier side of this air ambulance service has to be rethought, that we get back to the point where we contract out that competency—because it is out there. It was done before Ornge under a third party contracting basis to air carriers who are stationed throughout the province who have the ability. They have the knowledge, they have the experience, they have the ability to staff. And that we refocus and get the public side of this back into the business of actually focusing on the health care side. Trying to be all things to all people is how we ended up here.

I would just like your thoughts on that and to take advantage of your experience, your insight into this organization now that you're not there. Can you give us some guidance in terms of just your thoughts on next steps?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: First of all, I think your concerns are very valid. There is an established model out there in the world for what Ornge probably should do. The best example is Federal Express.

FedEx, for many of its air operations, owns the aircraft and then subcontracts private contractors to operate them on behalf of Federal Express, and there are a couple of reasons for that. First of all, FedEx has access to capital and their capital cost is lower than these contractors. But even more importantly, it gives FedEx the chance to make sure that that service is being delivered on the most cost-effective basis with industry players who are known to have good safety records who are being audited regularly by the regulatory authorities—whether it's Transport Canada or the FAA or whatever it is—and FedEx does their own internal audits. It allows FedEx to change operators and put the contract out to competitive bid on a regular basis without worrying about who has the appropriate assets to be able to supply the service.

Ornge has exactly the same situation. When the contract with CHL, the rotary-wing operator, came up for renewal, the problem was that Ornge couldn't find anybody else to bid on it because no one had the aircraft. You just can't find 10 or 12 of these expensive aircraft, properly equipped, lying around waiting for somebody to pick up a contract. So there simply wasn't a way to take this contract away from CHL and give it to someone else because CHL owned the assets.

I think that the Ornge model that probably makes sense is that there's nothing wrong with owning the assets and then you can put them out to competitive bid on a regular basis. There is a significant difference, though, in trying to operate those assets. What you suggested in terms of getting back to a medically focused organization, have the private air carriers operate the air service under Transport Canada guidance and regulations, proper audits by Ornge, making sure that they're following the requirements that Ornge lays out, is probably a model that would make a lot of sense.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees, you're way out of time. We'll move to the NDP, and you have 12 minutes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You've said a few times that you haven't worked in the public sector before and, given that experience, you're happy to go back to the private sector. Did you know that there was a performance agreement between the government and Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I'd heard the words "performance agreement" and I was vaguely aware that that was the basis under which Ornge operated, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You have never seen it?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Not that I know of, no.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So the part of the agreement that has directly to do with aviation was never shared with you?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No, no.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So it was there, part of it squarely had to do with aviation, but it was never shared with you. You were never asked to report on it, anything of the sort?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No, not at all.

M^{me} France Gélinas: All right, that's reassuring. I'm joking; it's not reassuring at all.

Do you know if anybody else reported on the performance agreement, if anybody else let the government—which was the payer, really—know what was going on?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No, I don't know.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You don't know. It was not something that was talked about. It was not something that you had to worry about because it was never brought to your attention.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Correct. I was the aviation guy. I was put over in a corner and told, "Do aviation stuff."

1010

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. "Make sure the aircraft are there when we need them and perform the way we want them to perform?"

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you want to ask your questions now?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes.

You indicated there were some business consultants who initially came up with this plan, and it was quickly abandoned. Who were those consultants, and do you know how much they were paid?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I don't remember their names, and I do vaguely recall that they were paid what I thought was a fair bit of money, a couple hundred thousand dollars, to produce this.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I'm just going to read this other question: Do you know how the previous business plan was approved if you thought it was so bad that it took you looking at it—and again, give me your opinion—for it to be eventually scrapped? This would have been a marked and substantial change from the initial business model that the government had approved; do you know if there was any government approval that went along with this business plan that was eventually scrapped?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I'm not sure it was ever approved. I think the business plan was developed; it was handed to Dr. Mazza. I think he then handed it to me and said, "What do you think? We want to implement this." I said, "I just don't understand it."

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. I'm going to ask you another question, and then I'm going to pass it over to my colleague. We were talking about how you were uncomfortable with the shift towards aviation from being medically driven. Do you know if this would have required any approvals from the government, and were any of those approvals granted? Were you in the loop in terms of the government supporting any of these decisions for the Ornge mandate to shift towards the aviation focus? I mean, did you ever have to wait for approval before you could proceed to the next stage of acquiring any airplanes or aircraft? Can you comment on those?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I wasn't aware of any approvals process that was done with the government or anything like that, no.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you be able to conjecture that perhaps there was just a rubber-stamping going on, that the government had just given wide latitude to what Ornge could do and didn't oversee these particular steps, whether or not they approved of switching into aviation or approved of acquiring the aircraft and dealing with ending the contracting-out to private airplane operators?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Again, I wasn't involved in any of that. I don't know.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So for the three years and seven months that you were there, where major business decisions were made—I mean they acquired millions of dollars in aircraft, shifted their business model dramatically from subcontracting to operators in Ontario to owning the aircraft and operating. Through all of this, never were you questioned, "We've got this question from the Ministry of Health asking us to justify this, that or the other thing aviation-wise"? None of that ever came to you? You never gave any account to the government whatsoever?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I, personally, never gave any account to the government, and I don't recall anybody asking me or having any involvement at all in terms of government briefings or approvals or any of that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: If the government had asked how the purchase of the helicopters was decided, what was the process followed, would you be the one that would have been asked to put that paper together, given that you had led the team?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: You know, I could have been. I suspect that that's probably something more that Maria Renzella probably would have done if the government had requested that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Do you know if Chris ever reported to the government?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I don't. I mean, again, I was just not involved.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You never heard about any obligations to report, any obligations to put documents together so that you could meet the requirement of the performance agreement?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I was certainly aware that there were meetings that either Chris Mazza, Jacob Blum or others would have with different people within the government. I had an understanding that there were meetings happening with the government. The subject of those meetings and the content and discussions were something that I simply wasn't involved in.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Jacob became very uncomfortable with what was going on at Ornge and, in his dealing with the ministry, certainly let the ministry know of how uncomfortable he was with some of the decisions that were being taken—a $600,000 decision certainly being one of them. Did Jacob ever share any of his lack of comfort with what was going on at Ornge with you or with any other?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Not with me.

M^{me} France Gélinas: No?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know if he had let it be known internally that he was unhappy with some of the decisions that were being taken at Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No, he wouldn't—you know, Jacob was fairly discreet. He never shared anything with me along those lines.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And you never heard it through other sources of information through the office either?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: That Jacob was uncomfortable?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yes.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Not that I recall.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know why he left?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No, I never really knew. I didn't know whether it was at his choice or at Chris's choice. I knew that there had been some disagreements—I heard that there had been some disagreements between him and Chris and they had come to a parting of the ways, and that was the end of it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: If you had seen something like the overpayment on the weight for the helicopters in the private sector, what would you have expected, in terms of what your shareholders or the board would have done? This was the public sector. If that happened in the private sector, what would you have expected?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: It was a complete non-issue. It was covered in the purchase agreement. You can't blame Agusta for trying. This goes on all the time. It's the way the game is played. You call them up and say, "Nice try, boys. It ain't going to happen," and move on.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: But what would you expect that your shareholders would have done or the board members would have done if they would have heard of this issue or if this came to their attention?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I've never seen a situation in any organization that I've been involved in where this would have ever gone to a board. It just would never—maybe it does happen in other places, but this isn't a matter that would have gone to a CEO or a board, because it would have been stopped at a level way below that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You were the lead for the negotiations of the helicopters with Agusta. Then Mr. Potter came in and you went on doing something else. The whole time you were there, Chris was not on the negotiating team, but you updated him regularly. But at the very end, you said that Chris was involved in discussions with Agusta; there might have been other reasons why this extra payment was going on. When did Chris become involved, directly dealing with Agusta?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Oh, Chris was involved from the very beginning. I mean, we first met Agusta when they responded to the RFI. We went over to Italy to tour their facilities. Chris was there on that trip and met all the senior people at Agusta, so he had created a relationship with them from the very beginning.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes left.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So the relationship has been created, then you come in as the lead negotiator and Chris is not on the negotiating team.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Not in the room, day to day, but, I mean, he was making the decisions.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, but he would make the decisions. He was not in the room day to day, but would he still negotiate on the side?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Not that I'm aware of. I was conducting the negotiations, but I was authorized by Chris to go as far as this on this point, or offer this concession or do that, and that's what I would do.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And that's what you would do.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But Chris was involved when it became time to pay the extra $600,000?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: He certainly, as far as I know, made—you know, when he found out that Rick had gotten an agreement from Agusta that they weren't going to charge that, as I recall and as far as I'm aware, Chris was the one that decided that it would be paid.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Are you familiar with Luis Navas?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Was Luis Navas the COO of Ornge Global?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: You know, he was on the board for a while. He then came in in some capacity, but I was never sure what he was doing.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. He testified last week that he signed some documents in 2009, and he had signed them as the COO of Ornge Global. I mean, would that make sense to you? Did you have any independent knowledge of that?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: It's possible, but again, I wasn't involved.

1020

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. If there had been an organizational chart of executives of Ornge or Ornge Global, do you know where Luis Navas would have appeared or if he would have appeared at all?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Have you ever seen an organizational chart of all of the subsidiaries of Ornge?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: It's worth having a look, let me tell you.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I've heard that it looks like spaghetti.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If we can move to the government for the remaining time, please. Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Ornge International is mysteriously absent from the spaghetti plate—no meatballs called Ornge International.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: There were never any meatballs; it was never there.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I wonder if we could go back to Era and the negotiations and their expertise. I believe I understood you to say that they operate AW139s.

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And you were involved as the aviation expert here as Ornge was acquiring aircraft. There has been some questioning of whether AW139s were appropriate—leaving out the expertise—to operate. Was that an appropriate choice of aircraft for the purpose for which they were procured?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. I believe it was.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You then spoke about the expertise and that this joint venture with Era fell apart after you left, and you were trying to fill specific gaps. At the point that that fell apart, what were the gaps at Ornge that went unfilled, at least by that particular agreement which you had negotiated?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Wow. Operating rotary-wing aircraft of this level and this degree of complexity—because these are not simple, little, single-engine training helicopters; they're complex, twin-engine, medium-weight helicopters that were designed mainly with the offshore oil industry in mind. So they have a great deal of capabilities built into them. But a helicopter is something that tries to shake itself apart at any opportunity it can—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just by the virtue of opposing propellers?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Everything's going on. I mean, there's an old saying in the helicopter industry that a helicopter is 15,000 pounds of metal fatigue rotating around an oil leak. Theoretically, it shouldn't fly; it's like a bumblebee.

But to operate aircraft like this, you have to have a tremendous degree of expertise in everything from spare parts, materials management, supply chain, warehousing, engineer training in airframe, engines, avionics, landing gear and propellers. You have to have pilots who are properly trained and are scheduled every six or 12 months for recurrent training. There's constant turnover. It is a very, very complex organization.

When you add to that that this isn't a scheduled air service—you've got helicopters operating out of remote bases scattered all over the province, on demand. So at 2 in the morning in the middle of a snowstorm, off you go. This is way more complicated than an offshore oil operation that operates during the day, in nice conditions and nice warm water in some cases.

It is an extraordinarily difficult thing to do to manage a transition from the old aircraft, the Sikorsky S76s, which are three generations behind the AW139, to the new aircraft where you have two sets of spare parts, two supply chains, two different skill sets in terms of flying the aircraft and maintaining them. This is an enormous undertaking.

Where was the lack of competency? Ornge had none. Ornge had never done this before.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And just one final question because we have a bell competing with us. You've obviously got a lot of respect for Era and the work it could have done to build that expertise. Do you continue to have any sort of other business relationships with Era?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: Yes. I was—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And could you describe them?

Mr. Tom Rothfels: I worked for Era for a while after I left Ornge. I'm not with them anymore.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Thank you very much.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for coming before the committee this morning.

We are recessed until this afternoon at 12:30.

The committee recessed from 1025 to 1230.

MR. TOM LEPINE

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'd like to call this meeting to order and welcome Mr. Tom Lepine to the committee this afternoon. I'd just like to confirm that you did receive information about a witness coming before the committee.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, I did.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well, thank you. Our clerk has an oath or an affirmation for you.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I prefer an oath.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): The Bible is on the table there. Mr. Lepine, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. You can start with an opening statement, and then we'll move to the NDP this time to start questions after your opening statement.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Good afternoon. My name is Tom Lepine. I was the former chief operating officer of Ornge.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman and honourable members of the committee, for providing me with an opportunity to present an opening statement today and to answer any questions regarding Ornge in an open, honest and transparent manner.

There have been many statements made in the media and in the House by members of various parties and by others of activity at Ornge. The public has the absolute right to know where their tax dollars are used and for what purpose.

I have had the privilege of helping patients in this province for over 32 years. I've devoted my entire adult life to providing the best care possible. The reality in health care today is that dollars are scarce and need to be spent wisely and creatively to deliver the best possible care to as many patients as possible within the fiscal realities that we face.

In my role as chief operating officer of Ornge in Ontario, I took the responsibility for service delivery extremely seriously and very personally. You see, I've never forgotten what it's like to watch a patient die in front of you despite the best efforts of everyone involved in their care. I have never forgotten the fear on a patient's family members as you load their loved one into a helicopter or airplane to move them, in some cases, hundreds of kilometres from their homes to a hospital that can care for them when those services or beds are not available in their area. I remembered these feelings and the impact on patients every single day when faced with operational decisions.

The decisions that are made by governments and health care executives are not easy decisions. I would say that every one of us who makes those decisions does not do so lightly, and has spent many sleepless nights agonizing over them. Difficult decisions, however, must be made to ensure the sustainability of the system. Whether we like it or not, to ignore the financial reality in health care decision-making is to ensure the complete failure of the system.

I know there will be questions regarding the rationale for some of the operational decisions at Ornge, and I'm happy to provide you, to the best of my ability, with the answers you and the public seek.

I would be remiss not to mention that the front-line paramedics throughout this province, in both land services and at Ornge, are among the finest in the world. The paramedics, pediatric transport teams and pilots in Ornge who service the front-line calls are exceptionally skilled, extremely dedicated and rightfully proud of what they do every day. Behind them are support teams who are equally skilled in their own right and just as dedicated to ensuring that they do the best they can every day to ensure that patients get what they need when they need it.

This includes communication officers in the Ornge communication centre, transport medicine physicians, aviation experts, educators, back office support staff, and management.

All of the staff at Ornge strove to perform their duties to the best of their abilities during my 11 years at Ornge, including the past year when every single decision and action was being scrutinized under a microscope and reported almost daily in the media. Their professionalism is unquestionable. It is extremely important not to forget these dedicated staff or to allow the great work that they do to get lost as the investigation of Ornge continues.

I have held various roles in Ornge, starting in education, and progressing to take on the role of a member of the negotiating team which negotiated the first performance agreement with the ministry, and eventually assuming senior management positions within operations. I was very fortunate to work alongside Mr. McKerlie when he joined Ornge as the interim CEO.

The appointment of a new leadership team, including Dr. Barry McLellan, to oversee quality and medical aspects of the organization will ensure that the organization moves forward in a transparent and positive manner.

I believe it is important to spend a minute to describe the service that Ornge delivers for the benefit of the public, who may not really understand the complexities of the system and the dependencies on others in the health care system.

For many, in particular in southern Ontario, Ornge conjures up images of helicopters landing at the scene of horrific accidents. These calls, however, make up less than 8% of the calls that Ornge responds to. The majority of calls are the transport of patients between hospitals in either fixed-wing aircraft, or airplanes, helicopters or land ambulance units so they can get access to the care they require. The majority of these calls occur in the north. In the remote communities of northern Ontario, transport by air is often the only access to the health care system.

Many of the patients transported are the sickest of the sick in Ontario, including patients who are beyond the capability of their local hospital to adequately treat them and are therefore transported to hospitals with the availability of specialty services. These patients are often on ventilators with multiple medication infusions, and in some cases are being transported as the final heroic measure to save their life.

At times, there are multiple requests for the same aircraft. As in any emergency department, triage decisions must be made. These triage decisions are made by physicians in the Ornge communication centre, a vast improvement over the process for these decisions before the creation of Ornge.

Ornge is the link that supports the Centres of Excellence model for hospitals in Ontario. Successful transport of a patient requires the coordination of many different resources. Sending hospitals must first identify early on that a patient needs to be transported. A search for a receiving hospital that can care for the patient and has an available bed is performed by CritiCall. Weather is a major determinant as to when aircraft can fly, as are Transport Canada regulations regarding pilot rest. Collective agreements with unionized staff have requirements for rest that dictate when paramedics can be assigned calls other than emergency transports. Availability of land ambulances to transport non-urgent patients to and from airports is a major determinant of aircraft availability, as Ornge is often unable to unload a patient for the final land leg from the airport to the hospital, leaving aircraft and paramedics unavailable for other calls. Municipal land services must also triage their calls to ensure coverage for emergency calls within their communities, often leaving them unavailable to pick up patients from the airport for Ornge.

Once all these things, however, come together and the transport of a patient takes place, the patient is moved from the relatively controlled environment of a hospital to an enclosed space where paramedics and pediatric transport teams do their best to treat the patient in an environment that is cramped and noisy and sometimes hours from the receiving facility.

Moving on, I would like to include in my statement for the record three important facts:

(1) In response to statements made that Ornge was uncooperative with the AG's office, I can stand before you here today and say with great confidence that I and all staff that reported to me cooperated fully with the AG and his team to provide information, background and answers to all inquiries regarding operations or medical oversight as quickly and completely as possible.

(2) The ministry was kept informed of requirements under the performance agreement and Ambulance Act, and proactively to proposed changes to the way in which Ornge operated in Ontario. Quarterly meetings were held with senior executives of Ornge and representatives from the ministry to the level of the ADM in which plans, issues and challenges were discussed. These included discussions prior to the implementation of changes to scene response policies and plans to deal with Ornge's projected deficit for the fiscal year 2011-12, including plans to deal with escalating overtime costs and other service delivery options. I am pleased to see, however, that measures have been put in place to clarify the types of reports that will assist the ministry to monitor the performance of Ornge to ensure the confidence of the public.

(3) When I did become aware that inaccurate data had been provided to the ministry and to the AG, as Mr. Bates noted in his testimony, I notified the AG's office and the ministry immediately, without hesitation or reservation, and provided the appropriate data sets.

In closing, I feel privileged and proud to have had the opportunity to work with the many dedicated men and women at Ornge. I am dedicated to working with this committee to ensure that Ontarians have a service as crucial as Ornge that they can be proud of.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I welcome questions from the committee.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We'll have 20-minute rotations, starting with the NDP. Who would like to go first? Ms. Gélinas, please go ahead.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Thank you for coming to Queen's Park, Mr. Lepine. The first question I'd like to ask is a bit personal, but I hope, in the spirit of your opening comment, you will agree. How did you come to leave Ornge, as in fired or left?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I was terminated from Ornge without cause on February 16 of this year.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And did they tell you why you had been terminated?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Mr. McKerlie and I had a pretty frank discussion, in that I think it is pretty much necessary in order for Ornge to move forward. He indicated that there were no issues with my performance or anything else, but it was more to the point that in order for Ornge to ever be able to move on with the scrutiny that's taking place, I think—and I agree that it's necessary. They won't be able to do so while any previous COOs or the CEO or executive vice-president are still there.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So they basically explained the need to turn the page and move over with new management because things went wrong?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, absolutely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Why do you figure we need to turn the page at Ornge?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Transparency, accountability. I would say that those are the main things that we have to turn over, absolutely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Can you give me some example of where transparency had failed?

1240

Mr. Tom Lepine: Well, I mean, the main one that is being discussed and I agree with is the availability of salaries. When Dr. Mazza left, I was appointed interim CEO for two short weeks before Mr. McKerlie came in, and I made it very clear to staff at a town hall meeting that those days were over, that everybody will be reported who makes over $100,000, on the sunshine list, fully disclosed—it doesn't matter what entity you're in—that we would be amalgamating the entities, those types of things. I think that's important, to be able to follow where the money is going and how taxpayers' dollars are spent. Those are the main priorities, absolutely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'll come back to accountability, but staying on transparency, did you know how much Mr. Mazza was making?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I figured out, first of all, what he was making when the Auditor General's report—before the draft report was released to us, we met in one of our boardrooms with the Auditor General's team. There was myself; the chairman of the board, Rainer Beltzner; Barry Pickford; Maria—and I think that was pretty well it. When they presented their facts to us—it wasn't their draft yet, but they were certainly going through their facts—they gave us an aggregated amount for what the top five executives made at Ornge. I just quickly, on my notepad, took my own salary and multiplied that by four, figuring that the rest must be making pretty close to what I made, and came up with $1.2 million, which later turned out to be $1.4 million. So that was the first indication I had.

Immediately after the meeting, I went up to Maria's office and spoke to her and said, "Is this true? Is he actually making this?" She said, "Well, around there. I don't have the exact number right now, but yes, it's around there."

So that was the first indication that I had of what he made. It was confirmed when the minister was asking us to present her the salary, and we were getting some push-back in terms of being able to present that. Once we compiled the data, it did in fact come out to be $1.4 million.

M^{me} France G  linas: That happened last spring, when the Auditor General had come in?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. Just before they went off to write their draft report, they met with us to just go over some of the facts, that they had to give us an opportunity to say whether any of them were off or anything like that. I don't know—I'm sure Mr. McCarter could say when that would have been.

Mr. Jim McCarter: It could have been—probably verbally we might have discussed that.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, it was.

Mr. Jim McCarter: And then, I think when you got the draft report in September, I think we did make reference that there were five people with a total salary of $2.5 million.

Mr. Tom Lepine: That's correct.

So, in answer to your question, Madam G  linas, I did know when they first presented it to us orally, by calculating it myself. Then, when it was in the report, it made it fairly easy to calculate.

M^{me} France G  linas: Here again, I know that it's personal information, but in 2008, your salary was $158,000. By 2012, we're at $300,000. That's 2008—we all know what the economy of Ontario looked like. We were in the grip of a recession, which we're having a tough time coming out of. We've heard a lot about wage freezes in the broader public service. Your salary was coming from the broader public service. How did it get to increase by $142,000 over a three-year period?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That was a board decision, so Dr. Mazza came to me in my office and told me what my salary was. The board and Dr. Mazza determined what it was going to be. There was no negotiation or anything else, and obviously I stayed employed there, so I accepted it.

M^{me} France G  linas: Is this how salary grid changes were made? The board and Mr. Mazza would decide, and then it was shared with you?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yeah, absolutely.

M^{me} France G  linas: The management team never talked about it? No?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

M^{me} France G  linas: Did the Ministry of Health ever ask about how much you were paid prior to 2011?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Not that I'm aware of. If they did, they would have probably gone through Maria's office, but they certainly never asked me, and it was on the sunshine list.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. They never asked you if you wanted your salary on the sunshine list, if you would prefer not to or anything like that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: The ministry?

M^{me} France G  linas: No. Maria and the people within Ornge.

Mr. Tom Lepine: No. They made it very clear that I would always be on the sunshine list as a COO. Once I became COO of Ornge, I was always on the sunshine list, but they did split my salary and put some of it under Ornge Peel in certain years. For example, in 2007-08, everything was on the sunshine list; in 2009-10, it was back in; and 2011 was in.

M^{me} France G  linas: When some of it was being charged to Ornge Peel, then was that part on the sunshine list or not?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, it was not.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. So you received income from two different corporations of Ornge—

Mr. Tom Lepine: That's correct.

M^{me} France G  linas: —one being public.

You did mention that you had quarterly meetings with the Ministry of Health. What were those meetings for?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Basically to discuss any issues that were going on, an opportunity for them to have any questions that they had answered, an opportunity for us to discuss any challenges that we were having. Minutes were taken and an agenda was circulated prior. The first few meetings—I think we only had one at our office, and I believe the rest were by way of teleconference.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. In those meetings, did—I guess if you follow the press, you would know that the NDP had filed a freedom of access of information for salary way back in 2008. In those discussions, did the ministry ever ask you about those salaries, about the freedom of access of information?

Mr. Tom Lepine: They never brought up the freedom-of-information questions at all. I certainly have had discussions—I was frequently in touch with the Ministry of Health, emergency health services branch, primarily through Dennis Brown, prior to his retirement, and then afterwards with Malcolm Bates and Patricia Li. Malcolm and I had several discussions where he would say, "Tom, it would be so much easier if Chris would just report his salary." And I said, "Absolutely, Malcolm. We all agree on that, and you've got no pushback from me," but I didn't have the authority to do that.

M^{me} France G  linas: So Malcolm knew that Dr. Mazza was not reporting his salary on the sunshine list?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, absolutely.

M^{me} France G  linas: He addressed that with you. Did he bring it to be known as to why that was important?

Mr. Tom Lepine: He didn't say why it was important. I think we all know why it's important, in terms of transparency and being forthright with the ministry. I can say—and I've read the testimony of other people from Ornge, other executives, and I can stand here before you today and say nobody else had a problem with it, so everybody else would have been willing to disclose.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But Mr. Mazza was not the only salary that was hidden from the sunshine list. Other executives who testified very similarly to you, saying, "I had no problems sharing it," their salaries were not shared.

Mr. Tom Lepine: He put me on—it was his choice who went where, as far as I understand it.

M^{me} France Gélinas: He, as in Dr. Mazza?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Dr. Mazza, sorry. He put me on the salary disclosure list, and I had no problem with it, because I was running Ornge Ontario.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I want to come back to the meetings that you had through teleconference or otherwise with the Ministry of Health. You talked about, "Agendas were circulated; minutes were taken." Where are those kept? And do you figure we could ask for copies of those?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, certainly. So it was typically—I think they took turns between Michael LeGros from the ministry and Scott Lovell from Ornge, in terms of, first of all, developing the agenda, getting agenda items, and then preparing the minutes, and then they would circulate them back to both parties. I think you could probably get the minutes from either the ministry or from Ornge, either one.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Physically, do you know where they were kept?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, I don't.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were they emailed around or were they paper copies?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, yes; they were emailed around. Everybody who attended the meeting got a copy by way of email and you had an opportunity to correct the minutes or anything else and then they were finalized. So I would say that they're stored in soft copy.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You did mention that sometimes at the meetings comments were made that the ministry had wanted salaries—certainly of Dr. Mazza—to be made public, that it would make things easier. Did the ministry ever make other requests that were denied?

Mr. Tom Lepine: So, first of all, just to clarify: At the meetings themselves, it didn't come up, that I can recall, but in various conversations with Malcolm—we spoke fairly frequently. They were frustrated, and he would often say, "Tom, it would just be so much easier if Chris would report it."

M^{me} France Gélinas: How long ago was that, do you figure?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That's probably going back at least two years.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So in 2010 or 2009? Shortly after?

Mr. Tom Lepine: At least.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yes, in 2009, shortly after we asked for the freedom of access. Okay. So you had frequent communication with the ministry. Did that stay all the way through, as in from 2009-10? The whole tenure at Ornge, you were in regular contact with the ministry?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, absolutely. I know that Jacob Blum testified earlier as well that he met with the ministry frequently. I often attended those meetings with Dennis over at the EHS branch—not as often as Jacob did, but I certainly went over probably every month or two months. Basically, Dennis called them fireside chats, and we would sit and have a coffee and go over any issues and keep him updated on anything that was going on.

After Jacob left, I continued those meetings with Dennis up until he retired. Once Catherine Rosebrugh joined our organization as regulatory affairs, she attended with me, with Dennis. Then she took over—she did most of the communication above the level of Dennis, so with Malcolm or the ADM or anything at that level, up until—let's see, I would say it would be last year, so the end of 2010, when Chris said, "You deal with the ministry from now on, Tom. I don't want to be dealing with them. You deal with Malcolm and Patricia. Steve can deal with Tony Campeau and Rob Nishman."

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, so you were in charge of dealing with Malcolm and Ms. Patricia Li?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Just for operational issues. Lisa Kirbie, who became our director of regulatory affairs, I believe, did most of the communication on stuff other than operations.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I want to bring you back to a memo that I'm sure you'll be able to identify—but I could circulate it, if you need to—that basically outlines the new corporate structure of Ornge. That was dated January 2011. We already know that numerous briefings took place about this memo. Did you ever help brief anybody at the Ministry of Health about this memo?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, I did. I was there with Rainer Beltzner and Alfred Apps.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who on the ministry side attended those briefings?

Mr. Tom Lepine: The one when the initial report was tabled—I believe, up to the level of deputy minister was there, but nothing above that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So the deputy minister was there—

Mr. Tom Lepine: I believe so. I'm trying to think back, because we later had the briefing with the minister regarding the salaries, so I'm just trying to get the two worked out.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did they raise any questions at the time?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Regarding what? The presentation?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yes.

Mr. Tom Lepine: No. Basically, the comments we got back were, "This looks solid. Have your lawyers reviewed it?" I think that was Saad's comments, actually, Mr. Rafi. I think; I'm not absolutely certain of that, so I just want to say that for the record. It was somebody there who said, "As long as your counsel has checked it over. I don't understand all the legalities of the structure, but it looks solid, and this looks like a good plan to generate revenue outside of Ontario."

M^{me} France G  linas: So as long as your counsel, which was Mr. Apps, had looked it over, they were comfortable. If Mr. Apps said that this was good, then they were comfortable that this was something that the ministry didn't need to look at any further.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I don't know that they were going to look further or not, but certainly, for that meeting, they didn't have any questions regarding it. I would think that they would have taken it to their counsel. But for the purpose of the meeting, to your question, "Did they have any questions about it?", no.

M^{me} France G  linas: Did they ever come back to you for more questions? When you had your follow-up meeting with Malcolm Bates or any of those people, did they ever come back and say, "We need explanation about the for-profits, the not-for-profit, how they're linked?"

Mr. Tom Lepine: Not to me, they certainly didn't. At one of our quarterly meetings when Patricia Li was new to the portfolio, she asked about the structure, and Maria drew it up on the board.

M^{me} France G  linas: Patricia Li asked about the structure and—I missed your answer.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, sorry. And then Maria Renzella drew it on the whiteboard for her.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. She's able to draw the corporate structure from memory on a blackboard?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think it was more of a simplified version at that point. I don't think it had evolved into what it later became.

M^{me} France G  linas: I think Picasso would have had a tough time, but she must be very talented.

Coming back to those meetings, you presented—ADMs and basically people in the know within the Ministry of Health are there. They realize that it is a complex corporate structure. They check with you that your lawyer says that it is okay. Therefore, no more questions.

Mr. Tom Lepine: In terms of the legality of the structure, absolutely.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. And we turn the page.

How would you explain that when the minister was questioned on that—this is Minister Matthews—after that briefing that you attended with Mr. Apps and Mr. Rainer and yourself, when asked, "Was there a red flag?" she said yes, of course there were red flags. "We tried to get answers but we were stonewalled."

What event is she referring to?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I have no idea. You would have to ask the minister. To my knowledge, nobody ever stonewalled the ministry in giving them information about anything other than the salary disclosure, for which they had a legal opinion. Ornge had a legal opinion saying they didn't have to disclose, and Chris made that decision not to disclose. Other than that, to my knowledge, nobody ever tried to avoid giving anybody information.

M^{me} France G  linas: No. Had you had questions, were you under orders or whatever to keep things secret or to not share?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, no. My role in these meetings was primarily to discuss the operation of Ontario. So sometimes I didn't even speak.

Quite frankly, I didn't understand the corporate structure. I'd only seen the agreement in terms of what was going to come back to Ontario literally days before our first meeting. So I was still trying to understand as well. My role was strictly to talk about what had been done in Ontario and then it was handed over to Rainer to go through the plans and then Alfred to discuss the corporate structure.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about a minute left.

M^{me} France G  linas: Oh, I'm so sorry.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's okay.

If you could just quickly break down who exactly you spoke to at the Ministry of Health and roughly how often it was. If you could just kind of give us names and roughly—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Sure. As I mentioned earlier, initially it was usually with Dennis Brown. So Dennis Brown and I spoke very frequently; I would say every other week or perhaps once a month at least.

I also had—Steve more so than I had fairly frequent conversations with Rob Nishman. Tony Campeau later came over to the air side after Dennis Brown retired. Again, he dealt more so with Steve by that point—I forget what year Dennis retired. But at that point I was dealing more so with Malcolm and Patricia.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, thank you very much. We'll move on to the government side. Mr. McNeely, go ahead.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Thank you, Chair.

Mr. Lepine, when did you first meet Dr. Chris Mazza?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That would be, I believe, around 1990.

Mr. Phil McNeely: And what was your initial impression of him?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Well, he actually—if I could describe the circumstances in which we met, he came to ride out with me in the ambulance. He was an intern. He was just going through his internship and had to do a ride-out in an ambulance as he was very interested in transport medicine. He came out to ride with myself and Steve Farquhar, who was my partner at the time. Very charismatic, very eager, keen, wanted to play with the siren, that type of thing. So that was my first encounter with him.

Mr. David Zimmer: Sorry, what was that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Wanted to play with—you know, work the siren for us going to calls, that type thing. So that was my first impression of him: very keen, very, you know, hyper kind of guy.

Mr. Phil McNeely: When you heard about Dr. Mazza's salary—and that's already been mentioned—what did you think of the $1.4 million a year?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I thought it was ridiculous and what I really felt is the same as I think most Ontarians felt, which is betrayed.

I'm sure we'll get to the discussion later about some of the operational decisions that I had to make. To find out that I was being asked to make those types of decisions, up to and including the potential to have to close bases, in order to stay within budget, and to find out that he had a salary of that and, more particularly, the loans, I felt betrayed and angry.

Mr. Phil McNeely: So you were aware of the advances he had received as well?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Not until we started preparing things for the minister and getting his salary. Maria came up to me and said, "There's something else you have to know."

Mr. Phil McNeely: You were the chief operating officer, so you were number one there. How did these things happen that you weren't aware of before they happened?

Mr. Tom Lepine: What things?

Mr. Phil McNeely: The salaries, the advances.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I would have no reason to ask what the CEO's salary was. He didn't make it public to anybody. I'm a COO. The board determined his salary. Nobody went around asking him what his salary was, and he certainly didn't go—well, I shouldn't say he didn't tell anybody what his salary was. Up to the point where we were actually preparing his salary for the ministry and gathering all the details, he walked into my office shortly before he went off and asked what we were doing. I told him what we were doing, and he said, "Well, Lepine, you know what my salary is." I said, "I don't, Chris. We're pulling it altogether." He said, "Well, it's $500,000," and I said, "Well, it's not $500,000, because we've already got documentation here that it's up over a million now and we're trying to include the rest," and he said, "Well, the rest of it goes to my private corporation." I said, "But it's paid through taxpayers' dollars, Chris. That's your medical stipends and we're including that."

Mr. Phil McNeely: The other major issue, of course, is that his girlfriend rose very quickly in the company, was making good dollars as well. What was your thought of that happening in this organization?

Mr. Tom Lepine: He first told Maria, myself, Rhoda Beecher after work one day in—I don't know what year it was. I think it was the end of 2010—in the summer, I think it was. We made it very clear you have to keep work separate from your personal life. Like, I truly don't care what he does in his off time, in his personal life, but we all were very adamant about the fact that he had to keep any relationship separate from what he was doing at work.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Did this create difficulties in the organization?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Absolutely.

Mr. Phil McNeely: The aircraft purchase—Rick Potter, when he was in here, said that he had negotiated to pay about $7 million less for the helicopters. We heard this morning from Thomas Rothfels that it was $600,000 per helicopter times 12, so $7.2 million less. What's your recollection of that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Rick Potter was constantly in negotiations with Agusta. To use Rick's terminology, he was always trying to beat them up to save some money. So he had been working for quite some time on the weight upgrades. They were charging us for the weight upgrade from 6,400 to 6,800 kilograms. He worked at that for quite some time. He announced at a senior management team meeting that he had negotiated them down to, I believe, zero on it, and including some other upgrades. Everybody clapped and said, "Congratulations." I think I was busy answering an email or something like that, so I didn't catch the first part of it, but certainly clued into what was going on. So yeah, that's my recollection.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Tom Rothfels mentioned this morning—I think he was close to the negotiations—that that weight upgrade, those costs were already in the contract, and Rick Potter was able to see that and to make sure that Ornge would get that $7 million less, yet it wasn't taken.

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Was that time to go to talk to the Ministry of Health?

Mr. Tom Lepine: If I can go through the timeline on that: When Rick negotiated that, approximately a year later, amendment 3, which was the actual amending agreement with Agusta, was signed. So it was a year later, and my signature's actually on that. It was sort of a last-minute addition that Maria put on that somebody from Ornge should be signing it, although the contract was with Ornge Issuer Trust, which I wasn't a signing authority for, and I was no part of any of the negotiations. So I went through the contract with Bruce Tavender and said, "Is Rick happy with this?" I was more concerned at that point—so I wasn't even thinking about the upgrades or anything else at that point. It was a year later, and I really hadn't heard anything about it since. I was more concerned that we were going to be taken advantage of in terms of not getting what we wanted in the helicopters. So I went through it with Bruce and said, "Is Rick happy with this? Is he getting everything he wants?" There's a whole list of landing lights, different avionics equipment, navigational equipment, antennas, multiple different things that he had also been negotiating with Agusta and trying to beat them up on.

I said, "Is Rick happy that he's got everything that he needed in here and has he seen this?" And he said, "Yes." I said, "And who's signed off on the dollar amounts?" And he said, "Maria." I said, "Are these the correct dollar amounts? Is this what's been negotiated?" And he, you know, affirmed that it was. And then I said, "And is this the amount that was negotiated?" And he said, "Yes."

Mr. Phil McNeely: Mr. Potter was quite upset about the reaction he got from Dr. Mazza. We know the final helicopters did not include the $7-million discount and you've sort of explained, in your mind, why that was. What did Ornge get for that $7 million? Can you describe that? Because we haven't had a very good description of what was delivered for that $7 million delivered by Ornge.

Mr. Tom Lepine: In the actual helicopters?

Mr. Phil McNeely: Ornge received another $7 million, later.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, I don't—I was not—

Mr. Phil McNeely: What did we deliver for that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: So, there was a marketing services agreement that was negotiated which I wasn't part of, I never did see, as a matter of fact, until—again, after Chris was off and I was appointed interim CEO, I arranged an interview with Kevin Donovan, invited him to come in. Again, in the spirit of openness and transparency—he'd been trying to have an interview with Chris—I offered to meet with him on several occasions and he said, "Well that's great, Tom, but I really want to speak to Chris." So as soon as I was in that role, I invited Mr. Donovan in.

We sat down, which coincidentally was the day Mr. McKerlie was starting. I think Mr. McKerlie arrived 20 minutes before I was meeting with Mr. Donovan, and I briefed him and said, "Why don't you sit in on the meeting?"

So Mr. Donovan asked me about the sales marketing agreement and if he could have a copy. And I said, "Well I don't even know who has it. I really don't know who has it." And Ron and I exchanged glances and said, "We'll try to find it for you." So we found a copy and then there was a debate as to whether we could turn it over because Agusta had a confidentiality agreement attached to it, so I contacted Lou Bartolotta to see if we could turn it over. That was the first time I saw the agreement.

Mr. McKerlie said to me, "Tom, it's time both you and I have a read through this agreement and the deliverables, and see what we delivered for them." So I got somebody to make us up two copies of the sales marketing agreement itself and what they had delivered to date. That was the first I saw of it, so that was when Mr. McKerlie arrived—the day he arrived.

Mr. Phil McNeely: The $7 million went into the for-profit company?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Correct.

Mr. Phil McNeely: You were involved in the purchase and design of the interior modifications for the AW139 interiors. When did you first discover that you could not do CPR in the helicopters?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think that was January 2011—either late December or early January, shortly after the first one went into service.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Why do you think that was missed in the helicopter?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think it was an absolute failure of process that there was no prototype done. It was suggested that we should be doing a prototype; that would have been caught if we had done a prototype, and it was not done.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Where would the blame go in Ornge for that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Well again, that is one of the complications of Ornge, that the accountability for things, which is quite often—so if I could walk through that timeline, if time permits and you want to hear on that.

Chris approached me when they had decided to buy helicopters and obviously he wanted to design his own interior with the idea that he would be able to sell it commercially and make money on the for-profit side to later come back into Ontario. He told me he wanted me to pull together a medical team to design the interior and I said, "Okay, I'll get Farquhar on it and so and so." And he said, "Absolutely not. I don't want any management on this team. I want this to be a helicopter interior that's designed by the medics for the medics because no matter what we do, if there's any management interference or suggestions in it, then it's going to be wrong and we'll get blamed for it forever. So I want this to be absolutely done by the paramedics and no management on it at all."

So we picked a team: a paramedic from the south, a paramedic from the north—both rotary-wing paramedics, both very, very experienced; we got one of our transport medicine physicians on the team; there was a project manager that reported directly to Dr. Mazza on it, Philip Giles; and Jim Feeley was on it, from an aviation perspective, VP of aviation, to ensure that anything that was done did not throw off the weight and balance of the helicopter, didn't draw too much power—all of those types of things would affect the flying of the helicopter.

We sent the team over to Switzerland. I went over with them for the first visit, more so from a contract management perspective. Chris had concerns from when he went over about the capacity of Aerolite to be able to deliver the interiors in time, and he wanted me to tour their plant and give him an idea what my impression was as to whether they would actually be able to deliver them or not. When we got back—

Mr. Phil McNeely: I'd just like to interrupt there. Ornge told the ministry that that flaw had been fixed up when it hadn't been. What was that about?

Mr. Tom Lepine: From what I understand of that, when we got the helicopters back and obviously there was a flaw in the ability to do CPR, to transport patients in a semi-sitting, semi-Fowler's position, to deal with certain conditions, I went to Steve Farquhar and asked him if we could actually perform CPR or not, and he said—I think he has already told you about transfers and positioning and all those issues, so I don't think I need to go over that unless you want me to. I said, "Have you been working with medical affairs? Has the chief of staff"—Bruce Sawadsky—"signed off on it? They're saying that it's safe to transport patients. Is it safe or is it not safe to transport patients?" He said, "Bruce is satisfied that with these measures we're doing, it's fine for the patients."

Fast-forward to some of the investigations that come in. I believe that Rick Brady, who's an investigator for the ministry, spoke to Bruce. I knew they were meeting and didn't hear anything else about it. It wasn't until that brief period when I was acting that we had our regular ops meeting and Bruce brought up the fact that he still had some concerns about the interiors. Things weren't moving along as quickly as we had hoped with Transport Canada, and Aerolite was taking forever. The fix that is in place today is the one that we'd been working on for a year, and Bruce voiced at the operations meeting that he was having increased concerns over the interiors.

I looked at him and said, "Bruce, you have been out on a ride-out, correct? You have actually seen this interior?" That's when he told me he hadn't. I ordered him to go out that week and do a ride-out and have a report for me by the end of the week. I think that's when the ministry thought that they'd been deceived.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Thank you. I'll switch to Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: How much time do we have left, Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about six minutes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. Thank you for appearing this afternoon. When Kelly Mitchell was here, he testified that there was an emergency board meeting in December 2011 and that at that time you were chosen to replace Dr. Mazza as, I guess, either the interim president or CEO or something. Could you explain to us what was happening with Dr. Mazza at that time that the board thought it was necessary to replace him as CEO?

Mr. Tom Lepine: He was off on medical leave.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And do you have any insight as to why you were chosen as the successor?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I had been told prior to that that I was the successor planned for Chris in Ontario. If things took off on a global basis, they were looking at appointing me CEO in Ontario.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That's an interesting observation in and of itself. I think the ministry, the public and people in general have assumed that Dr. Mazza was the primary overseer of the Ontario operation. As we've just discussed, he was making $1.4 million from public taxpayers' funds to be the primary overseer. I think what I hear you saying, perhaps, is that you were already doing a lot of the work that we would expect the CEO of Ornge Ontario to be doing anyway.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Right. He was still the CEO. What he said to me in 2011, back to being more responsible for dealing with the more senior level of the ministry—ADM, deputy minister level—that he wanted that to be me and that he wanted me to take more of a role in leading the organization in Ontario; in fact, at senior management team meetings had said, "Deal with Tom with your issues." I would still go to him with major issues to say, "Here's what I think we should do," or you know, whatever. Or he would come to me and say, "You're doing this." Then we'd get into a discussion:

"Well, are you in charge or am I in charge? Who's in charge?", because sometimes he would change decisions that had already been made or add new ones on.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If you, as the primary hands-on operator, wanted to go one direction, and he sort of waltzed in from the international side and said, "We'll do something else," who won?

Mr. Tom Lepine: He always won.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: He always won. Would it be fair for us on public accounts to conclude from this that, while the public accounts of the province of Ontario were paying his salary—leaving apart whether $1.4 million was an appropriate salary—$1.4 million worth of his time was not being expended on the affairs of the province of Ontario?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, I don't know how they divided up his salary between Global and Ornge. I'm not exactly sure how that was done. I don't know if that answers your question. I don't know how much was appropriated from Ornge to there—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Well, we have a copy of an email from payroll at Ornge Ontario, the actual non-profit Ornge, saying that he has left their employ. It would appear that not any of the salary was on Ornge Ontario's books at this point; it was all over there. But the assumption would be that, as we were providing the money, the focus should be on providing service to the province of Ontario.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think the answer to your question is—if the question is, was the major focus of his attention devoted to Ontario in the last few years—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That's my question.

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, it was not.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. Could I take the remaining time, if there is any, and add it to our next round?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Certainly, yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. We'll move to the opposition: Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Lepine, I'd like to just pick up on the topic of the medical interiors, if I could. Did I hear you correctly; you said that the first time you became aware that there was a problem was in December 2011?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Sorry, after the delivery of the first one, so that would have been December 2010. If I said 2011, that was incorrect.

Mr. Frank Klees: You did say 2011, yes.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Sorry, no; it would have been 2010, either late December 2010 or early January 2011.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Given that fact, why did you not take some initiative and correct those medical interiors if you found out about it in December 2010?

Mr. Tom Lepine: We started acting on it immediately. The first thing that we thought was that they had delivered something that wasn't in accordance with the specs that we'd signed off on. Once that was confirmed, we immediately started working on how we could do a fix to it.

The next thing that people thought—and there was a misperception out there—was that they already had approval for the transverse position for all parts of flights: taxi, takeoff and landing, and any time during flight. When I approached Jim Feeley about it, saying, “Where are we getting at with this?”, he said, “Well, actually, Tom, I think we were misled a little bit on the certification of this. They have to do pull-testing on the stretcher now in the transverse position,” and—

Mr. Frank Klees: Was there not a team from Ornge that actually took a trip or two overseas for the very purpose of helping to design this interior?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, there was.

Mr. Frank Klees: And who was on that team?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That team was a paramedic from the north; a paramedic from the south; Philip Giles, the project manager; and Jim Feeley, VP of aviation. I went for the first trip, again, more so to check on the capacity of the plant and deal with any issues with the contract with Aerolite.

They went back a second time to work on the model. The first time they went, they ran through several scenarios over the course of, I think it was four or five days, in a full-scale mock-up. In fact, I think it was an actual interior that had some mechanical problems, so it was absolutely to scale. They went through a number of scenarios all day long for four days—

Mr. Frank Klees: And you were part of that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I was observing. I wasn’t taking part in the scenarios per se, because—

Mr. Frank Klees: But you were ultimately responsible for signing off on what turned out to be a $6-million contract. Is that not right?

1320

Mr. Tom Lepine: That’s actually not correct either.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who signed off on it?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Back to my point earlier in terms of floating accountability: When the interiors were designed, you’ll recall, I said that Dr. Mazza asked me to get a team together, that there was going to be no management on the team. He wanted it to be strictly a paramedic-driven design. I didn’t take part in most of the meetings. When it came down to the final design freeze, Aerolite came over. They were meeting in the boardroom. The two paramedics were down; we flew one down from Sudbury. Philip Giles was here, the project manager; Jim Feeley was there. At this point, the accountability was switching over to aviation in terms of having it put in the aircraft, so there was a project manager from aviation, one from—Philip Giles was still there, and Dr. Denys was there. I went around the table. They had already reviewed the documents, the scope documents, and what was being delivered. I went around the table and asked each individual, “Are you happy that you’ve got what you asked for, that the specs you have in front of you are the specs that you determined meet the exact requirements that you had?” Everybody agreed they were. I gave a verbal report to Dr. Mazza. He asked me, “Is the team happy?” I said, “I went around the table.

Everybody agreed that they’re happy.” At that point it switched over to aviation to manage the installation of them.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you were part of the team. You’re a former paramedic. In your opening statement, you spoke eloquently about your commitment to patient safety. But you never bothered personally to do a hands-on examination and test, even though you were there, you were in Europe, for that purpose?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, I sat in there. I made a couple of suggestions. One of the suggestions I made is, “Why don’t we design this similar to the aviation aspect, the front end, in that regardless of where you sit you should be able to reach for equipment and both sides of the aircraft replicate things set up the same way so it doesn’t matter?” That was a huge improvement. No, I sat there, absolutely, in terms of watching them do their scenarios and taking part, but in terms of actually overriding anything, the only thing that I believe I overrode was that they wanted to have coolers installed in the aircraft to keep some of the medications cool, and when I spoke to Jim Feeley, he said, “Tom, this is going to take so much power. There’s no way this thing will ever get off the ground.” So we said, “No, you can’t have that.” But other than that—

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. So after two trips and your oversight—

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, one trip for me.

Mr. Frank Klees: —and $6 million—is that the correct number for the interiors?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Six million dollars. You found out in December 2010 that they were faulty. How did you find that out?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Actually, it was one of the paramedics that was part of the design process that first reported the issue. Steve reported it to me. I told them to get on it immediately. That’s when I said, “Get medical affairs involved. Is it a risk to patient safety or is it not? If it is not, we won’t be using it.” Medical affairs signed off on it, and we continued at that point to focus our abilities on working with Aerolite to get a resolution to it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Lepine, I’d like to take just a couple of minutes and read into the record some incidences that relate specifically to that interior, if you wouldn’t mind.

First: On May 17, 2011, Ornge was called on a transfer from Pearson Airport to St. Michael’s Hospital in Toronto. There was a reported patient care issue in flight, and according to reports there was a delay in extricating the patient from the helicopter due to the stretcher jamming. The patient was declared in the emergency room—in other words, he died. The coroner has been notified.

Are you familiar with that case?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I read the report on that case, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: On July 15, 2011, a critical care paramedic notified the Sudbury CACC that he was unable to perform CPR on the AW139 and would have to accompany the patient in the land ambulance. The patient was subsequently declared dead. The emergency health services branch investigation found that due to the interior of the AW139, which was designed by Ornge staff, continuous quality CPR could not be performed in accordance with the BLS standards per section 11(a) of regulation 11—uh, 147, under the Ambulance Act.

Are you familiar with that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, I am.

Mr. Frank Klees: On August 13, 2011, a patient in respiratory distress could not be transported by air ambulance as the Ornge AW139 does not allow for patients in respiratory distress because the patient can't sit up during flight.

You're aware of that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That one I'm not sure I read.

Mr. Frank Klees: July 17, 2011: The single primary care paramedic on-board the AW139 who arrived at the scene of a motorcycle crash in Parry Sound district informed the local EMS that because of the interior design of the helicopter, he would not be able to perform CPR on the patient. The patient was transported by land ambulance and died en route.

Are you aware of that one?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I'm not aware of that one either.

Mr. Frank Klees: On October 15, 2011, the single paramedic on board the AW139 informed the local EMS that he was unable to perform CPR on the 14-year-old male patient due to the design of the helicopter's interior. The patient was transferred by land ambulance and died.

Are you aware of that incident?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That one also, no.

Mr. Frank Klees: I find it really very disturbing, given your role as COO, first of all, that you're not aware of these incidents.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Sorry. When you say, "Are you aware of them?" I didn't read the reports on all of them. I knew there were a number of incidents that were attributed to it, but not the individual ones.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Lepine, surely there aren't that many cases where a patient dies that you would gloss over them or that you would not be made aware of a major incident like this.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I was made aware by Steve that there were incidences, absolutely. But in response to your earlier question, people do die in our ambulances, and it's terrible for their families. But back to my opening statement: In many cases, the transport of the patient is the last heroic measure for the patient. So not every death in one of our aircraft is an unexpected event. That doesn't make it—

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, surely these would be unexpected.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, I would say that those are.

Mr. Frank Klees: But after a while, when you know that you can't perform CPR, and you've already had a number of deaths as a result of that, I suppose even those deaths are expected.

My question to you is very simply this: If you became aware in December 2010 that you have not a minor problem with the medical interiors but a major problem—people are dying as a result of that—why has it taken until now—and I understand there's still not a resolution to this. Why would you not have taken immediate action to ensure that that matter is addressed?

Mr. Tom Lepine: So, back to what I said earlier, we did approach—we had Bruce say, "Can they perform CPR? Is this adequate? Are patients at risk? Do you have procedures in place that you can manage patients with respiratory distress?" We were assured by the chief of staff that they could.

We did not sit back doing nothing. We were working with the manufacturer. They did do the pull testing. It takes a year due to regulatory requirements, as was also mentioned by previous witnesses. The fixes that they're working on now they don't expect to have in place until 2014. That's how long it takes with the various regulating bodies, the pull testing, the engineered drawings and everything else. We were not sitting back and taking this lightly. It was a priority for us. It was an absolute priority, and at no point—at no point—did anybody just simply ignore—and it is a major design flaw.

Mr. Frank Klees: If that's your definition of "priority," then I think patients in this province are in serious trouble, if it continues to be the definition of priority for Ornge.

I can tell you, I can't imagine under any other circumstances, if your core business is to transport patients and those patients may well need CPR and your interior can't accommodate CPR and it puts patients at risk, surely, surely there's a backup plan that you would have to deal with critical care or trauma calls. If nothing else, call in Canada helicopters, who have the ability to do it.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Canadian Helicopters?

Mr. Frank Klees: Did the Sikorsky have a problem with this?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Actually they—that's a very good question and one that hasn't come up yet. So, for the record, the only time we couldn't do effective CPR in the helicopters was during taxi, takeoff and landing, in the new design.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, it killed how many people?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No—well, Mr. Klees, to say that it killed them, for traumatic patients, patients that are vital-signs-absent when you load them into your ambulance from trauma, the survivability is almost zero. The trauma literature is very clear on that.

1330

But I do have to address your point where you asked, did Canadian Helicopters, the old interior, have this issue? The answer is yes. So during taxi, takeoff and landing, in order to be able to do CPR in the old interior—well, at any point—you had to be standing beside the stretcher. You couldn't be strapped in your seat and reach the stretcher, because it was sitting right beside you, right here, so directly parallel—and I know you can't write this in the Hansard. But during taxi, takeoff and landing, by law, you have to be firmly affixed in your seat. When the pilot calls, "All secure," you have to be strapped in your seat. During that time, for taxi, take-off and landing, in the old model you could not do effective CPR during that time.

Mr. Frank Klees: The problem is, in the new model, you can't do it at any point during flight.

Mr. Tom Lepine: That's incorrect, Mr. Klees. That's absolutely incorrect.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Let's move on to another point.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Well, I think that requires clarification, because you can do it except for taxi, takeoff and landing—always could—in the new interior. That's not to say it was an acceptable design; it wasn't. We started working on a fix immediately, but from the beginning, CPR could be performed in the transverse position, by lowering the stretcher.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Potter, I was advised by a number of paramedics—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Mr. Lepine.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sorry, Mr. Lepine—advised by a number of paramedics that they tried to raise this issue with you personally and you refused to listen to them.

Mr. Tom Lepine: That's absolutely incorrect. I've been on record at base meetings where I would go around and I said that our number one priority was the helicopter interior. I went down to the Toronto base to have a look at it. I made a trip to London and rode out with the crews there. I rode out with the crews in Ottawa to have a look. I came back and said to Chris, "There are more issues than just the CPR. The loading mechanism is not effective; there's work we have to do on that, and we may have to do wholesale changes to the interior."

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, thank you.

How much time do we have?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have six minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to just go back to the beginning, if we could, to what started all this, and that's the original performance agreement. I understand that you were one of the key members of the Ornge team that negotiated the original performance agreement.

Mr. Tom Lepine: That's correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: Is that correct?

Who else was on that negotiating team for Ornge?

Mr. Tom Lepine: For Ornge? Jacob Blum was the lead, Cynthia Heinz was on there as legal counsel, and Lynne Golding was the senior counsel.

Mr. Frank Klees: When Mr. Blum testified here on May 16, he discussed a number of sections of that performance agreement that you negotiated that in his opinion gave the Ministry of Health extensive oversight controls, as he put it, of Ornge, should it have wanted to exercise them. Do you agree with the fact that, according to Mr. Blum, there certainly were extensive oversight controls in that performance agreement, the original one?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Absolutely.

Mr. Frank Klees: You do. Can you offer the committee any insight into why, when things started to go wrong at Ornge, the government, and specifically the emergency health services branch, didn't exercise any of those oversight authorities?

Mr. Tom Lepine: You're asking me to answer something that I can't answer on behalf of the ministry, so I think you would have to ask the EHS branch, but certainly they had the mechanisms. It was clear in the performance agreement: They could come into our premises twice per year to do audits or to look at anything else, and at any other time to look at any part of the operation with reasonable notice—which around the table we discussed as, well, you don't phone up at 3 o'clock and say "We're going to be there at 3:30," and expect everybody to stop the operation, basically.

Mr. Frank Klees: Sure. Mr. Blum testified that around December 2007—that was during the time that the Ministry of Finance was looking to consolidate Ornge's assets—a number of conference calls and meetings were held that involved yourself, Alfred Apps, Don Guy, PricewaterhouseCoopers. Do you recall those meetings or—

Mr. Tom Lepine: I wasn't at any of those meetings. So I wasn't involved in any of the meetings regarding the structuring, with Don Guy, with Alfred Apps, none of those.

Mr. Frank Klees: You were not privy to any telephone calls?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: No discussions at all?

Mr. Tom Lepine: In terms of what? Just clarify for me, Mr. Klees, because obviously I have spoken to Alfred Apps on a number of occasions; Don Guy, I met once with Catherine Rosebrugh over lunch. But I think your question was in regard to the structuring, was it not?

Mr. Frank Klees: No, the consolidation; this was the financial consolidation.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, I'm sorry. No, the financial consolidation, I wasn't part of those discussions. The only discussions I had with Mr. Guy, with Catherine Rosebrugh, was in terms of plans for the future in terms of generating revenue outside of Ontario. That was it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, back to that original performance agreement. When Mr. Bates was here, we discussed what his recollection was and how he viewed the whole focus of that performance agreement. He confirmed for us in his testimony on April 18 that that performance agreement never contemplated Ornge getting into the aircraft-owning and -operating business, that what was meant by consolidation originally under that concept was a coordination, bringing together the health side of the issue, that it was never contemplated to own aircraft and to bring the aircraft operations in-house, that it was contemplated that they would continue with the third party outsourcing.

Is that your recollection as well?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Certainly there were no discussions regarding insourcing aviation.

Mr. Frank Klees: The original mandate of Ornge, then, based on the policy approval that was made, never contemplated going out and floating $275 million of debt?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: There was an RFI that was issued to your third party contractors, suppliers, and during his testimony, Mr. Bob Mackie, president of Thunder Airlines, told us about that RFI. According to Mr. Mackie, the RFI requested detailed proprietary and confidential information, but no contracts were to be awarded under the terms of that RFI. It was strictly for the purpose of getting that information from the owners of those aircraft.

Do you recall that RFI?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I wasn't part of that, but I do recall that—I do believe that Rick was involved in that, and Maria. I'm not sure who was involved. I wasn't, but I know that they did send out an RFI.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you have 30 seconds.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Can I clarify one thing for the record? Mr. Klees, you said that Jacob Blum said I was involved in those. I've read Jacob Blum's testimony and I don't see my name in there—

Mr. Frank Klees: Actually, I didn't say that.

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, earlier—I'm sorry. I'm referring to the discussions regarding consolidation.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, he didn't say that.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, okay. I'm sorry then; I apologize.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

May I have the same consideration as my colleagues?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. We were told that, when asked—because obviously if you're the owner of a business and you get a notice from your major employer, if you will, told to provide proprietary and confidential information about their business, it would take people aback somewhat. So the questions were asked of Ornge, "What happens if I don't comply with this?" We were told that "since the carrier was not working in a collaborative manner with Ornge, they should not expect Ornge to work in a collaborative manner with the carrier." Would it surprise you to know that the carriers felt somewhat threatened with that response?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Well, I wasn't aware of that response, so—

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you recall what the purpose of the RFI was?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, I do. From my recollection, anyways, although I wasn't involved with it, we were having a great deal of difficulty trying to find out where the expenses were coming from. So, in other words, when we took over from the ministry, we extended the contract for the SA carriers for the first year, and the next year that they came in with bids, some of them came in as high as—I believe there was one that came in close to 80% over the previous year. Many others were coming anywhere—they were all double-digit increases.

We actually called the ministry, Dennis Brown, and said, "Did you guys ever experience increases like this year over year?" and he said, "Absolutely not." So we were trying to figure out where the costs were coming from, what was driving these massive increases. Now, we were able to negotiate them down, and I believe—for the record, I don't know for a fact because I don't have any statements in front of me. I have no access to any records, obviously, any more, but I believe we got it down to somewhere around 14% on average. But that was the initial reason, from my understanding, of that initial RFI, was to try to understand what the cost drivers were.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Mr. Tom Lepine: For example, an advanced care paramedic aircraft—the addition of one paramedic in an aircraft increases the costs even today by $1,000 per hour.

Mr. Frank Klees: So apparently the RFI closed on June 29, and not long after that, on September 17, Ornge Global Air was incorporated. What would Ornge Global Air end up doing?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Eventually?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Ornge Global Air is operating—is operating fixed-wing aircraft and now rotor-wing aircraft. 1340

Mr. Frank Klees: Interesting. Would you blame the carriers or anyone else looking at this scenario for taking the position that Ornge actually blackmailed them into disclosing proprietary and confidential information about their business and then using that business to take them out of business? Would you blame anyone for drawing that conclusion?

Mr. Tom Lepine: First of all, I, again, wasn't party to that, so I can't validate that what you're reading back to me is actually true or not; I don't know, I'm going to take your word for it.

Secondarily, they haven't lost their business. From what I've been told, from aviation, is that the actual number of calls that the SA carriers are doing is the same. So the number of hours they're flying has remained fairly unchanged. The slice that they're getting from each one of them has changed dramatically because one of the carriers increased their fleet quite substantively, had much lower rates than everybody else, and that carrier ended up taking the major slice of the pie; so for the other carriers, they absolutely lost business.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, that's not—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Some of the carriers that were in areas that were not close to calls or had a higher tariff rate were not being used.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Lepine, that is not the reality of what has taken place in the market, and it's certainly not the story of the people who were doing business—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Well, I would strongly urge you to, then, go to Ornge and get the actual number of hours that are being flown. I'm only recounting to you what I was told, that the number of hours has remained relatively unchanged. So I would urge this committee, then, to go and get the information from Ornge to actually see what the number of hours is that the SA carriers are getting. The advanced care hours definitely dropped.

Mr. Frank Klees: In a memo from Alfred Apps to Dr. Mazza, he says this—it's dated July 3, and everyone has this on file because it was actually provided by Dr. Mazza—he states: "Given political sensitivities in northern ridings, especially they, i.e. Guna"—and that would be Guna Deivendran, who was the senior policy adviser to George Smitherman—"wants to know that: (1) none of this will be in the public domain before the election;"—this was July 3, 2007—" (2) you will continue to find a way to work with the vendors; (3) the minister's office will be kept informed as proposals develop; (4) all is directed toward safety, efficiencies and cost savings. Have a great lunch and as you say, keep the business to a minimum."

Now, clearly, this was Alfred Apps writing to Dr. Mazza, giving him political advice about not disclosing the fact that they were getting into the aircraft business, because most of the people they were competing with were stationed in northern Ontario. So this was a political issue for them; they knew full well that they were going to be putting people out of business.

I guess my question to you is, did it ever cross your mind that you were on a road to actually put Ontario air carriers out of business by your venture into the business? Did that ever come up in discussions?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No. We realized that some of the smaller carriers, as Rick Potter pointed out in his testimony, would be unable to fly; but surely—and if I'm reading you correctly, are you suggesting that it was Ornge's responsibility to pay more for services or pay carriers that were charging more for their services than other carriers so that they would stay in business?

Mr. Frank Klees: No, Mr. Lepine.

Mr. Tom Lepine: And that that's a wise use of taxpayers' dollars, for us to—

Mr. Frank Klees: No, I'll answer that question; here's my answer to that question. It was none of Ornge's business to blackmail private businesses into disclosing their proprietary and business information so that Ornge could compete with them and take them out of business. If Ornge wanted to get into that business, at the very least they should have dealt honourably with the other businesses with whom they were doing business. That's my point of the question.

Now, you say you had nothing to do with this.

Mr. Tom Lepine: In terms of that RFI?

Mr. Frank Klees: This RFI issue that we've been discussing.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: I was told, by now three different sources, that you in fact were part of this; that you in fact attended a meeting at the airport in response, where all of these carriers who were requested to submit these RFIs came together to have a discussion about this.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, I was at that—if that's the meeting you're talking about, I was absolutely at that meeting. I do not recall that we were asking them for personal information. What we did there was to go and say, "What can we do for you?" and this was—no, please, Mr. Klees. Please give me the courtesy—

Mr. Frank Klees: No, go ahead. I'm sure. We know what you were doing to—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Do you want to hear my answer or do you not want to hear my answer?

Mr. Frank Klees: Go ahead.

Mr. Tom Lepine: We attended that meeting. The carriers were complaining to us that they were unable to upgrade their aircraft, that they had no certainty under the previous contracts they had had with the Ministry of Health in terms of being able to go to their financial institutions and say, "We would like to upgrade our aircraft." They were annual contracts with no guarantee of hours. We said to them, "What can we do to make these contracts more palatable for you?" That's the meeting I attended. The results of that meeting were that they wanted some guarantee of hours. The next RFP that went out had blocks of hours that they could bid at, guaranteed hours, so a direct result of what they asked for. They asked for three-year contracts. We gave them three-year contracts; again, exactly what they asked for.

I don't recall there being any exchange of, you know, personal information that was then used for—but in terms of attending that meeting, absolutely. I mean, as far as I was concerned, that was an extremely collaborative meeting of us saying, "How can we make your lives easier so that you can upgrade your equipment? Because you're flying antiquated, in many cases, single-piston aircraft, non-pressurized cabins, no navigation in terms of GPS. How can we help you to upgrade?" That was the purpose of that meeting from my understanding and certainly my role in it. I'm not an aviator, but I was certainly there in terms of trying to collaborate with the SA carriers and giving them what they had asked for in terms of blocked hours.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You might want to think about wrapping up, if you want to have some time left.

Mr. Frank Klees: How much time do I have left?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Well, you're about—almost 10 minutes over of the 20 minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: So I'll have 10 minutes left.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): It will all balance out in the end.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Lepine, we'll wrap this up here for now. All I can say is that I can't tell you how frustrating it is sitting at this table, and we continue to hear the words "I can't recall," "Not to my recollection," "My best recollection is," and "That's not the meeting that I remember." It's very frustrating. All I can tell you is that there is a difference of opinion on the part of some people who were at that meeting that you were at in terms of what was being discussed there. But we'll leave that for now.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Certainly. In terms of remembering, Mr. Klees, I didn't expect to be sitting here today. I have no access to any of my records, so I am going from memory, and, as you state, that was quite some time ago. It would be interesting to look—for yourself again, I urge you, then, to go back and look at the records after that meeting to see whether in fact we gave them block hours and we gave them three-year contracts with the intent that they could go to their banks and be able to say, “We’re secure for the next three years.”

Mr. Frank Klees: We know one thing that you gave them: You gave them a new company that floated $275 million of debt, backed by the Ontario taxpayers, with which Ornge bought fixed-wing aircraft and helicopters and basically put a lot of them out of business. That, in the end, is what you gave them. But again, it’s all a matter of perspective. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. We shall move on to the NDP now. Mr. Singh.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Before we start, can you give us an update as to time and how much each of us has left?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You’ll have 20 minutes in this round, and then there will be more time after that as well. So 20 minutes for now.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Good afternoon, sir. I asked you some questions previously, and you’d made some comments about regular meetings and briefings with the Ministry of Health, and you listed some of the people you met with. What I want to know is this: The Ministry of Health and the minister have conveyed this notion that they were kept in the dark. Based on your testimony and other testimony from other individuals, it seems like there were regular meetings held. How do you respond to allegations that the Ministry of Health was kept in the dark with respect to what was going on at Ornge and didn’t know what was actually going on? How would you respond to that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Again, I would ask them. Nobody in operations has ever denied any access to anybody who has asked for it from the government, ever. If any request came to me, the only thing that I’m aware of—and I’ll go back to this—that was withheld from the government is the salaries.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, and that was going to be my next area of questioning. So I’ll put a proposition to you, and you can agree with it or disagree with it. Based on your testimony, just based on your testimony and the fact that you were aware of meetings that you were present in, as well as regular meetings that you were aware that some of your colleagues, including for example Mr. Blum, had attended and the fact that there was an agenda and there were minutes kept of those meetings, throughout your tenure at Ornge, the Ministry of Health was apprised of what was going on at Ornge on a regular basis.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You agree with that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I do agree. I should clarify that those quarterly meetings that were minuted, they didn’t start until after the MNP audit and the recommendation that they be more formal meetings. So prior to that, they were meetings where, again as Jacob and I have both said, we’d drive over to the ministry and meet with Dennis. But there weren’t minutes taken; I mean, we would take our own notes and action items, that type of thing, but there weren’t minutes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, if you could just clarify that. From when to when were they the informal type of driving over to the ministry and speaking with them?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I would say the MNP audit occurred in 2008; I think it wasn’t released until 2010. At that point is when the more formalized meetings took place, with circulated agendas and minutes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: So from 2010 onward there were more formal meetings?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When were the earliest meetings that you were part of, or you were aware of, with the ministry that were the not-as-formal, not-minuted meetings?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, jeez, we had meetings with the ministry prior to Ornge being assigned the responsibility for the delivery of care; we had frequent meetings with them then.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That’s pre-2003?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No—yes, it would be around 2003 or 2004. Then certainly once we were assigned the accountability for it, Jacob started his meetings almost immediately with Dennis. I probably would have started attending within a year of that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay, so by 2005 or 2006.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Now, just with regard to the one issue that came up, and there was a bit of an obstacle with the salary disclosure, can you recall how many times that issue came up? How often, how many times, and when did it begin?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I don’t know that there were any formal requests for it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

Mr. Tom Lepine: But certainly, as I’ve discussed before, more so in the last two years, I would say, or maybe even less—back to my conversations I would have with Malcolm where he was very frustrated and saying, “Tom, it would just be so much easier.” I know that he had—well, I shouldn’t say I know—I was told that he had had meetings with Chris where he had talked about it before. Prior to me dealing at the level of Malcolm, Chris would often go over and meet with Malcolm or meet with Dennis. In fact, Dennis had commented to me at one point, “Chris will come over and tell us that you’re doing something, and then we’ll say, ‘Does Tom know yet?’ And he’ll go, ‘Well, I’m going to go back and tell him that this is what he’s going to be doing now.’”

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. So at least two years ago. Could it have been earlier than two years ago, or was it certainly two years ago that Malcolm Bates first flagged this issue that it would be a lot easier? Again, this was informal and wasn't written, but your conversations where it came up, like, "Listen, Tom, this would be a lot easier if Chris would just disclose his salary."

Mr. Tom Lepine: I would say for at least two years.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: At least two years; okay. And with what type of regularity would that come up? A couple of times over the year?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, I would say a couple of times a year.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: A couple of times a year.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. In terms of the response to that, what was the response? I mean, on your end, you didn't have control over it, but what would you say then?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, I'd say to Malcolm, "Malcolm, you know that nobody else here has an issue with disclosing salaries, and you know Chris. He's not going to give it to you. He's got a legal opinion. He's not going to give it to you."

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. At that point, in your discussions, did Malcolm say, "Well, listen, he'll have to give it to us if we put pressure on him because we're the ones who are footing the bill."

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: He didn't say that? Did you suggest that to him at any point and say, "Listen. I mean, you're footing the bill here. The ministry is paying the fees. You can take whatever steps you need to get that. It's your right."?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I did mention—so, when it became closer to when Minister Matthews was asking us for the information and getting more force with it and Patricia Li had called me to say, "Tom, the minister really wants this information," I said, "I know, Patricia; we're working on it as much as we can. The board is involved. We're trying to get it to you."

That's when we were advised that, should we disclose it without his permission, we could each be held liable, personally and our families. So the board wasn't ready to take that risk and neither were we as individuals, even though we had no problem disclosing ours.

I made the comment to both Patricia and Malcolm: "Why don't you exercise your right under the performance agreement? You just have to give us reasonable notice; you haven't done an audit at all this year, or for many years. Why don't you exercise your right? Tell us you're coming in tomorrow, and Maria can have all the information ready and you can follow the money." Patricia's response was, "We're not going to do that. The minister wants the information and she wants it from you and you'll comply."

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's very interesting. When you made that suggestion that—let's clarify some of those points. One is that there hadn't been an audit conducted by the ministry in a couple of years.

Mr. Tom Lepine: The only audit that was conducted by the ministry was in 2008; they had Meyers Norris Penny come in and do an audit.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Under the performance agreement, they had the ability to do one at least twice a year?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That's correct. Any other time, if they had any concerns with the operation or anything else, they had the right to come into Ornge, with reasonable notice.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You indicated that you had given that suggestion to Patricia Li, that, "Listen: You can come in, with reasonable notice, and audit any time you like."

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. This ended up being about two days before we actually got the information to go down and present to Patricia, so I sent it to Patricia; but that was about two days earlier, because they were getting frustrated. We were trying to pull the information together; we were going around in the circle of whether we can disclose it or not and not be sued. Yes, I said on the telephone to Patricia: "Just exercise your right under the performance agreement; come in and look at it."

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just a question on this mandate issue of what Ornge was initially intended or what its purpose was. Would you agree with me that the initial mandate of Ornge was medically driven and that the services provided were of a medical nature, and then there was a shift where there became a joint mandate of being both medically driven and also aviation-driven?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Absolutely.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When that mandate shift occurred, was the ministry apprised of what was going on in terms of this mandate shift: that initially, Ornge was exclusively medically driven, with outsourcing with regard to aviation; and then the aviation component was now being internalized?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I believe they were notified; I'm not sure who notified them, but I know that they were aware that we were purchasing aircraft. I recall having conversations with Dennis over the types of aircraft—the Pilatus and the Agusta—and them saying, "They're both great aircraft," and that type of thing. In terms of the operating of it, I would say that they were notified, but I can't say who it was.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did they have to approve that mandate shift? Did the government give you approval that, "Okay, that's your new expanded mandate, that you want to now get into the aviation component and internalize that as well as the medical component that has to be there as well"? Did you get approval from the government, or did you have to even apply for approval?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I don't think we had to get approval. They certainly didn't give approval. They didn't say, "You have to have our approval," or anything in that regard. But they were aware of what we were doing, that we were in-sourcing aviation, for sure.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And they're aware to the extent that you recall specifically even discussing types of aircraft with Dennis Brown.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Definitely. Because we had discussions about single-engine aircraft; we had discussions about the AW139, to the extent that Dennis said to me at one meeting, “Oh, Tom, I saw one of your helicopters. I thought you weren’t getting delivery of them until such-and-such a date.” I said, “It’s not ours; we don’t have them yet.” He goes, “Well, I saw a 139 flying over Barrie.” So yes, he was very aware of the type of aircraft that we were buying.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did the ministry ever, then, when they were aware of this shift, ask any questions in terms of, “Is this the right decision for Ornge to be making? Should Ornge be doing this?” Were any of those questions asked by the ministry?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Not to me.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: To your knowledge, would you have been the logical person to ask these questions?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No. That would have been something that would’ve probably gone directly to Chris or to Rick Potter on the aviation side, although Rick didn’t usually speak to the ministry per se. At that time, I believe Catherine Rosebrugh was still with us, so that probably, with her being our chairperson, probably would have come through her, or directly to Chris.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: But you can certainly state that they were aware of this decision to get into aviation and that no concerns were raised with you?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Not with me. Absolutely not.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: With respect to the performance agreement, were there any other mechanisms that you’re aware of that the ministry had access to, beyond the two audits a year and then the anytime audit with reasonable notice?

1400

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. I don’t recall which schedule it is. I believe it’s schedule—it has been a long time since I read it—J, I believe it is, which gives certain things that we have to abide by: key performance indicators. There are three different sets, all with different lengths of cure periods attached to them. In other words, if you’re in violation of them, you’ve got a certain amount of time to satisfy the ministry that you’ve corrected those, and then if you didn’t correct them, then there were steps that they could take.

If they felt there was a risk to patient safety, they could do that at any time, come in and—that was more related, I believe, to the communications centre. They had the right to come in and actually take over the communications centre if they felt that it wasn’t functioning properly or there was any risk to patients or patient safety. So yes, there were multiple mechanisms within that.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: To your recollection, was there any point in time when the ministry exercised any of these other powers that they were given or provided under the performance agreement?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You said that you’ve had one meeting with Mr. Don Guy. You were accompanied by Catherine, I think you said?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Catherine Rosebrugh, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Can you tell me when and where this meeting took place?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That would have been before, I believe, we started up the for-profit entities. Catherine was going to meet with him for lunch, and said he was an old friend and just said, “Tom, why don’t you tag along? You need to learn more about the political side, so why don’t you just tag along?”

M^{me} France Gélinas: Was Mr. Guy working for Ornge at the time?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, I don’t believe he was.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Were you aware that he worked for Ornge?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I found that out later, yes, I did.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Through your work or through the media?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Through the media. Actually, I would say, no; that was probably in the week before we went and presented the salaries to the minister.

M^{me} France Gélinas: That you found that out. Before this, when you were introduced to him, what was discussed at that meeting?

Mr. Tom Lepine: A lot of small talk, for the most part, and then Catherine mentioned that we were looking to generate revenue outside of Ontario and to bring back into Ontario, and is that something that Don felt would be in keeping with the direction of the government or would there be any opposition to that?

M^{me} France Gélinas: And what was the answer?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I believe he just said, “I don’t think so. It sounds pretty much in touch with the”—I believe they were working on their—

Interjection.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. I don’t know exactly what it was at the time because I wasn’t really keeping that in touch with it; I wasn’t really connected on the political side at all. But he seemed to think that that was in keeping with the direction of the government.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Of the government at the time.

I’m going back to the meetings you’ve had with the chair of the board, Mr. Apps and yourself presenting the corporate structure. When Mr. Apps was here, he described himself as really the architect of the corporate structure. He was not always kind to us and said we were not sophisticated enough to understand the structure, but other people better than us would be. Were you one of those people who could understand the structure?

Mr. Tom Lepine: At one point, I did. As it became more convoluted, no, I did not.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Take me back to the point in your organizations where we go from having this not-for-profit Ornge, then Ornge Peel starts and then the transfer to Ornge Global. What was the thinking behind it and how did that flow?

Mr. Tom Lepine: From my understanding, the creation of Ornge Peel was designed so that we could generate exactly that: generate revenue outside of Ontario to bring back in. My understanding was that, as a not-for-profit, we weren’t able to do that.

At the time, we'd had a couple of requests to do some consulting in terms of—there was one for Saskatchewan, I believe, and one for Nunavut. There was also one down, I believe, that they did in the Caribbean, and then we were asked to participate in putting proposals together for the UAE and for Saudi. So there had to be a mechanism to be able to generate that revenue, to bring it back in.

That was my understanding of setting up Ornge Peel. The other for-profit entities followed from that in order to be able to go out and sell like services that we had in Ontario; so in other words, to set up a service wherever, if they wanted it.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So that was to be for-profit, and the profits were to come back to Ornge?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Correct.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Why was there this other trust, this other company that was to be owners of the aircraft? Why not Ornge?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Again, I wasn't part of any of those restructuring or structuring discussions, but from my understanding of that, it's common practice to hold assets in a trust, and that's, again from my understanding, to protect the organization. If there's, you know, a lawsuit for whatever, people can't come after your assets and then you're unable to provide service. So it was really for the protection of Ornge and the government; that was my understanding of that.

M^{me} France Gélinas: This issue of protection and this issue of being able to generate profit, was this ever communicated to the government through your talks with Mr. Bates or anybody else?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, absolutely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: They knew all about it?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. That was laid out in—again, Maria drew the chart on the board for Patricia Li and explained how it was going to work, where the assets were held and where they would flow if the performance agreement was wrapped up or any of those types of things, absolutely.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mr. Lepine, we learned this week that the legal services branch on this exact issue expressed some concerns with the private-public scheme. Did any of the government officials express that concern to you? The legal services branch indicated that there were some concerns expressed in a letter, but were those concerns ever expressed to you about the need for this public-private scheme or the way it was structured? Were any of those concerns ever raised?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Not from the extent of what the result was going to be. Again, in some of my conversations with Malcolm it was just, "Why is it so complicated? Why is this structure so complicated?"

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Malcolm flagged that, that it was complicated?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When would that have been?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I would say that was probably after about the third quarterly meeting, so probably some time in—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In 2010?

Mr. Tom Lepine: In 2010 or early 2011.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Early 2011?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I would say probably closer to late 2010.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Late 2010. Okay. Was there any follow-up with that? When he said, "Why is it so complicated?" you said—

Mr. Tom Lepine: So my response to Malcolm would be, "I don't necessarily understand the structure either," but I'm told that it has to be set up this way for the benefit of tax advantages, to protect the assets. There are certain laws regarding charitable organizations and everything else, and this was supposed to be set up so that nobody could come after the assets of Ornge or the operation in Ornge Ontario. Should something happen outside of Ontario, it was supposed to be in order to create a wall so that nothing could come in and affect the service delivery in Ontario.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did Malcolm have any follow-up then, after you explained somewhat, as far as you knew, but you indicated that you didn't really understand fully either the complexity of it? Did Malcolm then say, "Okay, I'm going to follow up on this," or did he do any other follow-up?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, and I think that was a discussion that took place after the quarterly meetings, like just, you know, "Why is everything so complicated?"

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. We've used up that block, so we'll move to the government. Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you, Chair. I've got some questions about Mr. Blum. Did you know Mr. Blum before he joined Ornge?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, I did not.

Mr. David Zimmer: When did he join Ornge?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I would think somewhere around 2002—no, I think 2003 probably.

Mr. David Zimmer: And when did you join Ornge?

Mr. Tom Lepine: In 2001.

Mr. David Zimmer: And his position when he joined Ornge?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think he was VP of corporate.

Mr. David Zimmer: What was your reporting or professional relationship with Blum?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I didn't report through him at all. So, at that point, I reported through—when he first started or anywhere throughout the—

Mr. David Zimmer: When he first started and then up until the point he left, what was your business relationship or reporting relationship with Blum?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I never reported to him, so I had no reporting relationship with him. When he started, I was in education at the time. I reported through the director of education—

Mr. David Zimmer: Were you both considered to be on the executive team?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, not at that time. But later on, we were.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Let's go to "later on." Were you both considered to be on the executive team later on?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: What period was "later on"?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I moved up into—

Mr. David Zimmer: Roughly.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. I would say, from 2006 on.

Mr. David Zimmer: So from 2006 until Blum's—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Until he departed.

Mr. David Zimmer: —departure in?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I don't have the date that he departed.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. But during that period you were on the executive team together?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: So you had an opportunity to work on various issues together?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Oh, absolutely. Yes. Jacob and I often worked together. He would often come to me to ask operational questions.

Mr. David Zimmer: What is your assessment of Mr. Blum's performance as an employer, as a member of the executive team? Would you hire him in another capacity?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: Why?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Because, in my experience with him, he never delivered on much of anything. He would frequently call me and say, "Can you cover this meeting for me? I'm tied up in traffic," or whatever, or, "I'm going to be late." I would ask who it was with. I wouldn't even know who he was meeting with, and I'd go into a meeting with no information and have executives from another organization sitting across from me saying—after you do your introductions, "So what did you want to speak to us for?", and my response would be, "I thought you had called the meeting."

Mr. David Zimmer: Without leading you too much, would it be your position that he did not fulfill his duties as he was expected to?

Mr. Tom Lepine: He didn't report to me, but back to your earlier question, I would not hire Jacob in any capacity, based on what I saw in terms of deliverables.

Mr. David Zimmer: Mr. Blum testified here on May 16. During his testimony, he said that he was one of the principal architects, if not the principal architect, of the original performance agreement. Specifically he said, and it's in Hansard, "I was the lead negotiator for the performance agreement. I negotiated it." Would you agree with that statement?

Mr. Tom Lepine: He was the lead negotiator, absolutely, but everybody there—Lynne Golding played an integral part. Cindy Heinz played an integral part, as did

I. He had no operational experience. Anything related to anything operational, it was my input on that. So I would not say that he did it on his own, but he was the lead of the team.

Mr. David Zimmer: Was he the lead negotiator in the nominal sense of the word, or, as you say, there were other people who did parts, technical and other business parts of it?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Correct.

Mr. David Zimmer: So he was the nominal lead?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Correct.

Mr. David Zimmer: But not, in effect, the substantive lead in the sense that he knew all the technical stuff?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Absolutely.

Mr. David Zimmer: Mr. Blum also said on several occasions that he left the organization in 2007 because he was unhappy with the direction of the organization. Here's one example of an exchange when he was here. A question from me: "When you left Ornge, were you fired or did you resign?" Mr. Blum: "It was, to be quite candid with you, fuzzy. I resigned, but Ornge did not want me to resign. I believe, and I am only surmising, they were concerned about the optics of me leaving, with respect to the government, and so what we agreed upon was that I was going to take a sabbatical. It was a one-year sabbatical, at which time—" Then I stepped in. Mr. Zimmer: "So let me cut to the quick here. Were you fired?" Mr. Blum: "No."

My clear recollection of that exchange is that, along with that answer "No," there was a body language from him indicating that there was more to the answer than that.

Next question—so following up on that body language that was sending different signals on whether he was fired or resigned. Follow-up question, Mr. Zimmer: "Would you say you were fired or you resigned?" Body language again, uncertain. Finally, Mr. Blum: "I resigned." He also indicated that he resigned with a pay package.

So what's your recollection of the circumstances of Mr. Blum leaving Ornge? Was he fired? Did he resign? Did he get a package? Did he initiate it? Did Ornge initiate it? Was he unhappy? Was Ornge unhappy? What happened?

Mr. Tom Lepine: My understanding is that the board recommended that he be terminated.

Mr. David Zimmer: On what information do you rely for that understanding?

Mr. Tom Lepine: It was discussed at a committee meeting that I attended.

Mr. David Zimmer: Who was at the committee meeting?

Mr. Tom Lepine: It was the operations committee. There were several committees of the board. I was on the operations committee. Actually, back in that time, they may have not even been committees then; it might have been the actual board. So Rainer Beltzner was the one who mentioned it to Chris: "Have you taken care of Jacob yet? Is he gone?" Chris said, "No," and Rainer said, "I want you to take care of that."

Mr. David Zimmer: What did you understand that to mean, "I want you to take care of that"?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That he'd be terminated.

Mr. David Zimmer: Were there any minutes kept of that meeting or other meetings on the discussions of Mr. Blum's termination?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Certainly there were minutes taken of the board meeting. That may have occurred after the board meeting was actually over, but while we were still in the room. So I don't know. There was still part of—I think the meeting had probably adjourned at that point and it was just a discussion with people still in the room, but I was there to hear the board chair say—

Mr. David Zimmer: But you're clear that the board, responsible persons in authority, took the decision to fire Mr. Blum?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: And you would not characterize that as a resignation?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Unless they had a discussion and Chris got him to resign; Chris would have been the one who dealt with it. I wasn't there for the actual delivery of the message, but it was the expectation of the board that Jacob was to no longer be at Ornge. So I don't know what they had discussed, whether Rainer had discussed terms with Chris prior to—how they were going to do that, but it was certainly that they wanted Jacob gone.

Mr. David Zimmer: Was it a competence issue; that is, Mr. Blum's lack of competence, in the eyes of the board anyway or in the eyes of Ornge, that led to his being terminated?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I wasn't part of the discussions to say why they wanted him gone. I can't comment further, just because I wasn't there.

Mr. David Zimmer: Were you asked at any time for your opinion of Mr. Blum's competence—

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: —or whether he should be retained or—

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: Can you characterize for me or describe, give me some insight into Mr. Blum's relationship with Mazza—more of his personal-cum-business relationship.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Jacob was, for all intents and purposes, Chris's right-hand person, or so it seemed from the very beginning when Jacob started. He would call Jacob—Jacob would often say to me, "He's calling me at all times of day and night." I know that they were in touch frequently, so it was a very close business relationship, and then more so on a personal level I know Jacob was instrumental in helping Dr. Mazza through the death of his son as well.

Mr. David Zimmer: Obviously their relationship fell apart at some point.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I can't say that. I don't know whether the relationship fell apart or what the rationale was for him leaving the organization, whether that be through—

Mr. David Zimmer: But anyway, Dr. Mazza did not come to his rescue, and Dr. Mazza wanted him out of there?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I don't know whether Dr. Mazza wanted him out or not or whether Dr. Mazza got him out because he was told to get him out.

Mr. David Zimmer: Who would have told Dr. Mazza to get him out?

Mr. Tom Lepine: The board.

Mr. David Zimmer: Oh, the board. All right. Thank you.

From what you know of the relationship, was Mr. Blum's influence on Mazza's leadership a positive one or not a positive one?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Jacob was a good strategist, knew government. Chris didn't know how to manoeuvre through government at that point. So I think he used Jacob a lot for that. In terms of being—boy, whether it was a positive relationship for either one of them, I'm not sure.

Mr. David Zimmer: Mr. Blum was also asked a number of questions about Kelly Mitchell, how Kelly Mitchell ended up as a government relations consultant at Ornge. Mr. Blum was specifically asked whether he felt that Kelly Mitchell's Conservative political background had anything to do with his getting hired, and Mr. Blum's answer was, "It's only nepotism if they're incompetent." You've described Mr. Blum as being incompetent. So do you have—

Mr. Tom Lepine: I didn't say he was incompetent. I said I wouldn't hire him. I don't believe I actually said he was incompetent. I said he didn't deliver on a lot of things, but for other things that Chris had him doing, I don't know what his competency was at that. So I don't believe that I actually said he was incompetent, but I do stand by that I would never hire him.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Do you know why Kelly Mitchell was hired?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I'm trying to remember when Kelly came in. Yes, I believe Kelly was hired to help us work with the Conservatives—with the Conservative Party. He worked with me on a contract to develop an aboriginal strategy to work with First Nations communities, to get more involved with them, find out how we could improve service to their communities and that type of thing. So I worked with him on that.

He did come in and attend our senior management meetings for a time, to learn more about Ornge. In order for him to be able to assist us, Chris had him actually come in every—I forget which day of the week it was that we had our senior management—

Mr. David Zimmer: Who was part of the executive team that discussed and took the decision to hire Kelly Mitchell?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Those types of decisions weren't made at the senior management team meetings. They would have been a Chris decision.

Mr. David Zimmer: Sorry?

Mr. Tom Lepine: They would have been just a Chris decision. They wouldn't have been discussed that, "Should we hire somebody?" or anything like that. Those discussions didn't take place at any SMT meetings. It would be that Chris would hire somebody.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Do you have any idea or did you get any information as to why it was felt that it was necessary to have an experienced Conservative lobbyist taken on to, as you say, "work with the Conservatives" on this?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I don't know that he was hired on as a lobbyist, and I think that the rules had certainly changed over time—

Mr. David Zimmer: You said he was hired to work—

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think he was hired to work because he was a Conservative and would be able to understand the Conservative Party and work with them. We wanted to work with all parties in government.

Mr. David Zimmer: I've got one last sort of a personal question here, really. I've been sitting here for many, many days now. More often than not, I hear from witnesses that they had to attend meetings, and so they went to Switzerland; they went to Italy; they went to Florida; they went here—everybody took a plane and went to the meeting. Was it the practice of Ornge to do any telephone conferencing as a way to hold down costs, or was everybody flying to the meetings in these exotic locales?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No. People did go to various countries, but no, most work was done on the telephone.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. I'd like to think about the infamous letter of January 19, 2011. Could you give Mr. Lepine a copy? That might make life easier. Everybody else, I think, has one, but if anybody doesn't, I have many.

You have mentioned already that you were at the briefing where this letter was presented, along with Mr. Beltzner and Mr. Apps.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Were you involved at all in producing the letter?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Thank you. But you're obviously familiar with it because you were there to present—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. I read it prior to going. Again, I was always taken to the meeting in case there were questions about what we do in Ontario.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: It's one of the odder letters I've ever read, because it flips between being written by a comms/marketing person and then a nuts-and-bolts person and a written-by-a-lawyer letter. So I'd like to have a look at some of the written-by-a-lawyer parts, but before you went into the briefing, were you given any insight as to what Mr. Beltzner, the chair of the board, thought the outcome of this meeting was supposed to be?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. The outcome was to brief the government and ensure that they were informed and hopefully get their support.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And that would seem to be consistent, if you look at page 3, the very bottom, it says, "Ornge is seeking nothing from the government except to make it aware of what it has done and is intending to do." So that would be your understanding? That's consistent with what you were told?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That's correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Before you went into the meeting, then, what was the status of this new corporate structure? The decision-making had already been done?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I believe it had, yes. I think the structure probably changed after that some more still.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, okay. I wasn't actually aware that it kept evolving, but right at the very bottom of page 3 there's reference to a motion that the board had adopted in November 2010, which said, "The corporation and its subsidiaries are hereby authorized to enter into the final documents..." and then subject to the chair of the board briefing the government?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So this was just the formal briefing, but the board had, two months prior, already approved everything; is that correct?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I don't know, because that was the Ornge Global board. So whether they had already approved it or not, I don't know, but this was to brief them. I think it was subject to this briefing with—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So the board motion that's referenced here is actually a motion of the Ornge Global board—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Correct.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —as opposed to Ornge the non-profit?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I believe so.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. Because you can't tell in the letter—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Reading the letter, I always thought that was the Ornge not-for-profit board.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I believe it was the Ornge Global board. I can't say with certainty because I didn't attend either board meetings. I would attend operations committee meetings—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But that helps in the understanding here of what's going on.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about a minute and a half.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: About a minute and a half. I want to look at page 13. There are a number of statements in the paragraph that's in the top half of the page, so I will speed-read.

"While the performance agreement clearly sets general standards for the operation of the Ontario system, it neither specifies how the standards are to be met nor prescribes the means by which the mandated services are to be delivered. Ornge is generally free of restrictions in structuring its approach to the delivery of the services and is able to pursue whatever business model the board deems appropriate.”

Then it goes on to say, “...under the performance agreement, Ornge is neither prevented from entering into partnerships, joint ventures of other business arrangements, nor restricted in whether it uses owned, leased or third party assets. Ornge is entirely at liberty to outsource any or all of its management or operational functions, whether to arm’s-length parties, affiliated parties or otherwise, as the board sees fit...”

Clearly, this is a section written by the lawyer. So, given that we know that in fact a whole lot of the day-to-day functions of Ornge moved to for-profit entities, do you still stand by your statement that the performance agreement gave the government the ability to see everything that was going on—appropriate accountability, what you’ve called “floating accountability”?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Certainly on the Ornge side, Ornge Ontario, as of—it was in Maria’s testimony. They changed the structure, so I think at that point it was more difficult. Prior to that—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So once we get over to this new structure, the accountability actually floated to the new structure in the sense that that’s where a lot of the business was taking place?

Mr. Tom Lepine: The accountability for delivery in Ontario?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Well, the accountability for what were the salaries, what was the management team doing, who was buying airplanes, who was hiring pilots, who was maintaining airplanes. Where was that accountability, given that, according to the lawyers, the performance agreement says that you can farm all this stuff out?

1430

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think that’s a question that Maria would have to ask, based on the way the structure was set up and Alfred worked to set it up. In terms of accountability for Ontario, that would rest with Chris and me.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So if you wanted to get at—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time, unless you want to use up a little more—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Just let me finish this. If, for example, you had the accountability, and the accountability is supposed to be with you as chief operator for management services, why didn’t you know the salary? Why didn’t you know what was going on with the management contract?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Because they were all done on the for-profit side. My only role—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So how would we get at accountability for management salaries? That’s just one example.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I, quite frankly, don’t know.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And, I think, there lies the problem: The accountability floated away.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Absolutely.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We move to the opposition. You have nine minutes for this round.

Mr. David Zimmer: How much time, Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): He has nine minutes. Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Probably about nine minutes for the next round.

Mr. Frank Klees: I’d like to pick up on Mrs. Sandals’s floating theme, if I could.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: He said it first.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Did I say “floating”?

Mr. Frank Klees: When was the first time that you became aware of the famous boat?

Mr. Tom Lepine: When I got back to work from a weekend, and Chris had purchased a boat over the weekend.

Mr. Frank Klees: Tell me the circumstances.

Mr. Tom Lepine: We were starting to set up J-Smarts under Chris’s direction, a not-for-profit charity to try to prevent injuries in youth. At that time, I think the target range was 13 to 15, youth within that age bracket. There were lots of different ideas floating around. He wanted to do it through high-risk sport. He wanted to take the approach that the traditional ways of teaching—just telling your kids, “Don’t do something”—they’re going to do it anyway, so let’s teach them how to do it safely and still participate in those types of sports.

Mr. Frank Klees: I want to focus on the boat purchase.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. One of the sports that he was looking at was wakeboarding and waterskiing, amongst other things, such as skateboarding and those types of things. I don’t know whether at the time he had started to work on an arrangement with Muskoka Woods or not, or whether that came later. But certainly, those were the sports he was interested in. As I say, I came back to work and we had a boat.

Mr. Frank Klees: You had a boat. Did you have anything to do with signing off on the purchase?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who would have signed off on the purchase of that boat?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I believe Chris made the purchase in terms of negotiating it and making the deal. I would think that Maria would have had to sign off on that as well.

Mr. Frank Klees: And the purchase price for that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I don’t know exactly. I think it was in the 40s. I’m not sure.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was that waterski boat purchased before or after he met Ms. Long?

Mr. Tom Lepine: She was working for us at the time, so—

Mr. Frank Klees: I noticed earlier, when you were asked about whether Ms. Long working at Ornge created some difficulties, that you probably wanted to expand on that. In what way did that cause some difficulties in the office?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think Kelly had more of a direct route into his office than any of the other executives. In other words, if anybody said something contrary to what Kelly believed, chances are, you wouldn't be with Ornge for very long.

Mr. Frank Klees: And that obviously created some tension.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Absolutely. Other people within the organization felt that they were eligible for promotion prior to her, so it created a great deal of tension and angst within the organization.

Mr. Frank Klees: She had a meteoric rise in her career, compliments of Ornge. Mind you, many others did as well. But she ultimately was given the lead on the marketing agreement which was to deliver millions of dollars of expertise to AgustaWestland. When you became aware of that, what was your thought?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I didn't know what the deliverables were or anything in the sales and marketing agreement. Again, I just wasn't privy to that, so I didn't really know what she was—I knew she was working on an agreement with Agusta but I really didn't know any of the details of it, so I really didn't pay much attention to it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Can I ask—I'd like to talk about quality assurance. One of the concerns that were raised by the Auditor General in his report was the whole issue of reporting of critical information from Ornge to the ministry; the lack of information translating, obviously, ultimately into some difficulties at Ornge. Who was responsible at Ornge for quality assurance?

Mr. Tom Lepine: It was fragmented.

Mr. Frank Klees: It was fragmented?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was that fragmentation under your direction? Ultimately, you were the COO, right? This would fall under your responsibilities as well, or were there separate—

Mr. Tom Lepine: On the medical side, we had it, I believe, fairly well under wraps. The VP of medical affairs, Jo-Anne Oake-Vecchiato, was experienced in quality management at hospitals and was well versed in quality management procedures. The medical advisory committee had plenty of quality metrics in measuring the performance of paramedics, in that they would evaluate cases every month. Each of the medical directors had a certain amount they had to do. We had a quality manager in the OCC, and Steve, as was discussed prior, basically looked after it in operations.

When I say it was fragmented—we used to have a quality management department, which oversaw everything. It didn't matter whether it was medical operations; it didn't matter what part of the organization. They reported directly to the CEO, and I think that's the way it should be. There should be an overarching quality management program, or quality management department, that looks after that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who was responsible for changing that structure?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Dr. Mazza.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. When you say it became fragmented, who were the key people responsible within that fragmented structure for quality management?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Again, Jo-Anne Oake-Vecchiato, in terms of medical affairs; Steve more so in the operations; Sandra Wilkie, down in the OCC. In aviation, Rick Potter had—I'm sorry, I forget the gentleman's name. It just slipped—I can picture his face. There is somebody in aviation who was strictly assigned to do it in aviation.

Then, aviation and medical affairs: Jo-Anne started putting together common data sets and putting together a plan where medicine could learn a lot from aviation in terms of how they handle their quality management and the types of methodologies they use and everything else. She was working very closely with aviation to start to develop some of those things into medicine and learning best practices from aviation. I believe aviation is far more advanced than medicine in certain aspects of quality management.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did your wife work in that department?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, she did.

Mr. Frank Klees: What's her name?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Meredith Morrison.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you hire her into that position?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, I did not. Chris Mazza hired her initially, on contract, to look after a different program. Then she was put into that role.

Mr. Frank Klees: You never considered that a conflict? You were able to keep—

Mr. Tom Lepine: The minute Chris hired her as a contract, I declared a conflict immediately with Chris and the chairman of the board. They said, "The conflict has been declared. She'll never be reporting to you," and so on. We declared that conflict immediately.

Mr. Frank Klees: Just a final clarification: When you left, what was your total compensation at Ornge, including benefits?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes, absolutely. Salary from Ornge, $306,000; salary from Ornge Global, $57,000; total, $363,000; taxable benefits, a total of $30,000.

Mr. Frank Klees: It was reported that you were also getting paid a consulting fee by Dr. Mazza. Is that included—

Mr. Tom Lepine: No, that's the Ornge Global. It wasn't a consulting fee from Dr. Mazza. The Star got that incorrect.

Mr. Frank Klees: Just a question: Where did the funds come from? Obviously, we know where the funds came from in Ornge. There was some claim along the way that these for-profit entities somehow were generating their own revenue or were seeded from somewhere. To your knowledge, where did the money come from that gave companies like Ornge Global and these other for-profit companies the ability to pay out salaries?

Mr. Tom Lepine: From the initial donation by Agusta—it's part of that marketing services agreement, I believe—and from the credit lease transaction.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You are out of time, Mr. Klees.

We'll move to the NDP. You have six minutes each for this round.

M^{me} France G  linas: I didn't hear you. You said from the donation from Agusta and from the—

Mr. Tom Lepine: Sorry; the credit lease transaction on the building.

M^{me} France G  linas: The credit lease transaction. So there was no other means of generating profit except for those two that you were aware of?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Right. The plan was to get equity investors. Several were lined up. Obviously, once things started coming out in the newspaper, they were no longer lined up, it's fair to say. But they had not generated any revenue at that point.

M^{me} France G  linas: Did you want to go first?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sure. In general, none of the for-profit side was able to generate any revenue, as far as you're aware of. Is that correct?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That's correct.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: What was your opinion on that in terms of the viability or the need to have a for-profit side if it's not generating any revenue?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Yes. I think I mentioned it earlier in my testimony. I think the plan itself—to generate revenue outside of Ontario to bring back into Ontario, to the benefit of the operation in Ontario—is a good one. I believe it's a good vision. I think it was done in a much more complicated manner than which it needed to be done. I believe that the actual path that they were going by to get money coming in in large amounts through international repatriation was probably too far down the line; it was done too early. If it was me setting it up, I would have left it with Ornge Peel being a for-profit, get your name established doing some consulting services where there's no expenditure of money. If you're asked to go over and do an evaluation or make comments or respond to an RFP, then you have certain stages where you get money and it flows directly back into Ontario—done.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: With respect to the expansion of Ornge in general, would you agree with me that, in a short span of time, Ornge expanded quite rapidly? The number of employees increased, the payroll increased, the fact that there were aircraft that were purchased: That was a huge increase and expansion. Would you agree with that characterization?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Absolutely.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Would you agree with me that the rate of expansion was greater than Ornge could handle, that it expanded much more quickly than Ornge could actually handle?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I would say that everybody was certainly stretched to the limit and there was absolutely no margin for error.

M^{me} France G  linas: You mentioned in your opening comments that when you found out about the over $1-million-a-year salary to Dr. Mazza, you took offence to this, because you had been asked to look at the closing of some bases and tough decisions to try—I'm guessing—to manage to stay within budget, and then you find that out. How tight was the budget?

Mr. Tom Lepine: The last year I was there, the fiscal year 2011-12: By the end of the first quarter, the projections were that we were going to be looking at an $8-million deficit.

M^{me} France G  linas: Had you been in deficits before?

Mr. Tom Lepine: No.

M^{me} France G  linas: No? That would have been the first year that you would have been in deficit. So you had an $8-million challenge in front of you. By the second quarter, how did things look?

Mr. Tom Lepine: They hadn't improved a great deal. By the third quarter we were back on target—back on projections. We managed to come in—well, I can't say whether we came in on budget or not because I was already gone.

M^{me} France G  linas: But it looked like you were going to.

Mr. Tom Lepine: We were certainly back on our projections, yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: So you knew that that budget was tight. What were some of the changes that were implemented to go from an $8-million projected deficit to back on track?

Mr. Tom Lepine: There were a number of things that we were looking at. I was being pressured by finance to actually close bases and to discontinue night shifts at certain bases. I was very adamant that anything that affected the front line had to be an absolute last resort. Maria and I talked. I know you spoke to Steve about not filling overtime. That was one of the steps that we took.

The first thing we did is, the major lever that really drove costs was the flight hours. Whether that be in fixed-wing or rotor-wing, it didn't really matter; they were the costs that really put you over. So we looked at how we could manage the non-urgent transfers, first of all, so that there would be the least amount of impact on patients. We looked at instituting slots, we called them. In other words, if you needed to save a million dollars, here's what it translated into: how many flights you could do per day or per month, or whatever. Then, based on the percentage of calls that were done in each area of the province—we didn't want to say, "Okay, you've only got so many slots in the northwest," which is the busiest quadrant in the province, and they get wiped out, so we really tried to spread it out. Just by changing one to two patients a day, you had tremendous savings over the year, because the costs of aviation are so great.

We tried to shift transports by rotor-wing to fixed-wing for anything that was airport to airport, because there's no advantage to using a helicopter if you have to have a land ambulance pick you up at both sides.

We tried to work with the Thunder Bay hospital and Thunder Bay EMS to look at moving non-urgent patients more quickly from Thunder Bay airport to the hospital. Thunder Bay was the busiest airport, with about 1,500 patients moving in and 1,500 out of that airport over the course of the year. We had great difficulty getting transport to the hospital, so we worked with Thunder Bay EMS and Thunder Bay hospital to get in on their contract with a private transportation company.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you share—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You are out of time now.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you share those plans with the ministry? Did you keep them up to date?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Absolutely. At one of our quarterly meetings, I outlined it to Malcolm. Patricia was there, as well, on the phone; Tony Campeau, I believe, was there. I don't think Rob Nishman was there. Maria was there from our side; I believe Bruce Tavender, Scott Lovell. We mapped out that the plan to manage the overrun was to take the least invasive approach first and then, as a last resort, we would touch anything else. We talked about the slots. We talked about the fact that the next thing may have to be—that we wouldn't be filling overtime for short-notice book-off only, and that's only if people booked off at the last minute. The next step would be to have to decrease service at some bases at night. And then the last resort after that was to close a base and—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, and we'll move to the government. Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: In an earlier round of questions, I asked you whether Mr. Blum was a positive influence on Dr. Mazza, and you said, "They weren't a positive influence on each other."

Mr. Tom Lepine: I believe I said I'm not sure they were.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right: "I'm not sure they were a positive influence on each other." But it seemed to me by your body language—I mean, I just got the sense that there was a little more to the story than was reflected in your answer.

Two questions: Why weren't they a good influence on each other?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think sometimes they both got each other spun up.

Mr. David Zimmer: Sorry?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I think they sometimes got each other spun up. In other words—

Mr. David Zimmer: Strung out?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Spun up.

Mr. David Zimmer: Spun up.

Mr. Tom Lepine: In other words, there wasn't really a calming influence.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. This is a very delicate question, and it may seem like an odd question, but I'm going to ask it: Were you aware or was there talk around Ornge, in executive circles or other circles, speculating on or thinking about whether Dr. Mazza and Mr. Blum were using illicit drugs?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I've never heard any rumours about Dr. Mazza using illicit drugs. Certainly there were rumours about Jacob.

Mr. David Zimmer: And what were the rumours?

Mr. Tom Lepine: That he was using illicit drugs.

Mr. David Zimmer: What kind of drugs?

Mr. Tom Lepine: The rumour was cocaine.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you. Mr. Leal will pick up the time.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Leal?

Mr. Jeff Leal: Thanks, Mr. Chair. Through you to Mr. Lepine, the context of my questions will be regarding the decision to go to Oshawa.

To set the context for you, the city of Peterborough, joint-shared by the government of Canada, the province of Ontario and the city of Peterborough, spent $30 million to renew Peterborough regional airport to eventually accommodate aviation services of Ornge and the Ministry of Natural Resources, and, as you know, we already have a land base in Peterborough for Ornge. So I'll be pursuing questions with you about that.

1450

Mr. Tom Lepine: Okay.

Mr. Jeff Leal: We understand, based on the testimony by Mr. Potter and Ms. Renzella, that you were involved in the decision to locate an air base in Oshawa. Is that the case, sir?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I was directed to open a base in Oshawa.

Mr. Jeff Leal: You were directed. By whom?

Mr. Tom Lepine: By Dr. Mazza.

Mr. Jeff Leal: You were directed by Dr. Mazza to go to Oshawa?

Mr. Tom Lepine: He strolled into my office one day—I don't know who else was in my office—and said, "Lepine, you're opening a base in Oshawa. I can't take the risk of having union strife while I'm trying to woo investors, so you will be opening Oshawa." My response to that was, "Where are we getting the money from? We're still in the process of building Hamilton, and we need to look at both airports." We had looked at Lindsay, Peterborough, Oshawa, all those airports, when we were initially doing the scoping out for where our super base was going to be, which ended up being Hamilton. He said, "Fine. I don't care where it is, then—Peterborough or Oshawa. Do your evaluation." I said, "Nobody in operations can do that. Get aviation involved." We had somebody who reported to Rick do all the negotiation—well, they weren't actually negotiations. We basically asked for you guys to submit what the costs were going to be.

Mr. Jeff Leal: I want to be absolutely clear: You were directed by Dr. Mazza to go to Oshawa?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Absolutely.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Potter, a previous witness here, the former chief aviation officer for Ornge, testified he had genuine concerns about the location of a base at Oshawa airport and advised against it. Were you aware of his concerns?

Mr. Tom Lepine: From my understanding, reading through Rick's transcripts, I think he is referring to when we were initially looking at airports. When we were initially looking to move out of Toronto, we were evaluating all airports. Steve Farquhar and myself both preferred to go to the east end because that's where the preponderance of our calls were. There were more calls coming from the east than there were from the north. It didn't matter to us—Peterborough or Oshawa. In fact, in terms of staffing, it made more sense in Peterborough, because—you're absolutely correct—we did have a land base there. From a strictly operational perspective: Peterborough.

Rick Potter did agree that Oshawa had noise problems, that it wasn't a good airport in terms of noise. Ultimately, Hamilton became a clear winner when you mixed the patient demographics, when you mixed all the aviation functions, when you mixed weather and the ability to launch—it should've increased our launch reliability. All of those factors: Hamilton was the clear winner.

When Chris ordered me to open Oshawa, and I said that we need to look at both airports, the question that wasn't asked of Rick Potter was, "If you had to choose between Peterborough and Oshawa, which would you choose?" I did ask Mr. Potter that; it was Oshawa. Between the two airports, it was Oshawa. He did not believe that we should have a base in the east end at all, because it was going to drive his aviation costs up significantly in terms of having additional aircraft maintenance engineers on staff to deal with any snags that occur out there, and tooling of equipment at another base. The whole purpose of the super base—one of the purposes—was to amalgamate maintenance. So for him, it was going to drive his aviation costs up, and he didn't believe that the city of Oshawa was going to be able to resolve the noise complaints, although they gave us assurances they were. But in terms of, "Rick, we've been ordered to open it. It's clear; the announcement has already been made that we're opening it; Oshawa or Peterborough?" We did all the analysis. There was a matrix done. Oshawa was the clear winner.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time, so I move to the opposition. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Lepine, the Auditor General had raised some concerns about the validity or the accuracy of numbers that were submitted by Ornge to the ministry in terms of the number of transports and so on.

Before I get to this, I'd like to ask you, what was the cost to the Minister of Health of Ontario's air ambulance service before it was transferred to Ornge? Do you recall that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I believe it was around $90 million.

Mr. Frank Klees: About $93 million, something in that range, right?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Somewhere in there, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: What is it today?

Mr. Tom Lepine: Our budget last year was $152 million, I believe it was.

Mr. Frank Klees: The number of transports that Ornge does has actually gone down between then and now. Is that not true?

Mr. Tom Lepine: The overall number of transports?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes. Before you answer that, what the clerk has just given you is a document—it's actually quite current: May 23, 2012. The cabinet members have this in their hands, and now we do. It's compliments of people who care about what's going on here. I'll read the first note. It states: "Please note that Ornge's chief operating officer indicated that a 'method of counting patients was mandated by the CEO with the intention of demonstrating an increase in activity associated with the transition of air ambulance from the Ministry of Health to Ornge.' The result is that Ornge has transported an annual average of 8.9% fewer patients since 2006-07 than it previously reported. This equates to more than 2,100 fewer patients transported in 2010-11."

There are two things that are disconcerting about this. One is that apparently there was a conscious decision made to actually inflate the numbers in the reporting, of which I'm assuming you're aware.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I became aware, again, when I was acting CEO. When Mr. McKerlie came in I was already investigating whether it took place or not, confirming it. When he came in, I said, "Here's another problem that we have," told him about it and said, "Do you want to call the AG's office or do you want me to call?" He said, "You call." So I reported it immediately upon finding out.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who was responsible for implementing the system that actually inflated the numbers?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I don't think it was a system that inflated the numbers, Mr. Klees. If I could take a moment to explain how it was done?

Mr. Frank Klees: You'd better do it quickly, because we've got a bell here, and I need to get the answer.

Mr. Tom Lepine: I thought I was hearing things. I apologize.

It was a method of counting patient legs as opposed to actual patients carried. Chris was using patient legs. I asked for a report, and the people from information management said, "Do you want it the old way we do it or do you want actual patients?" I said, "I want actual patients, and what are you talking about?"

Mr. Frank Klees: So once you brought your calculations into line with the way it used to be before Ornge, the numbers actually reduced by 8.9% fewer patients a year. Is that correct?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I have no idea. I was gone by then, by the time the calculations were done.

Mr. Frank Klees: According to the cabinet document, that's the point. Here's the real question: Given the fact that we're actually transporting fewer patients than we were before Ornge and the cost has increased to the taxpayer from $93 million to $150 million, how does one explain that, first of all, to the taxpayers, and how in the world could a board of directors justify overseeing an organization like that?

Mr. Tom Lepine: I would say that nobody was aware that those numbers were incorrect, so I don't think the board had any visibility into that. I didn't have visibility into that, so I'm quite sure that the board didn't.

In terms of fewer patients, I think the important thing is to find out why there are fewer patients. Is it because hospitals are no longer calling Ornge? The other factor to keep in mind is that Ornge doesn't determine its calls. In other words, it's a sending facility that picks up the phone that calls us. The main driver of call volume for us, when you really boil it down to the end game, is the availability of receiving beds. If there are no receiving beds, nobody moves. Do you understand where I'm going with that?

Mr. Frank Klees: I understand. I think one of the reasons that hospitals stopped calling Ornge is because Ornge wasn't making it there on time and patients were dying en route. Maybe that's one of the reasons. The other reason, we're told—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You're on your last 30 seconds, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: —is that Ornge was understaffed so often that hospitals actually had to release their nurses or their doctors to get on that helicopter with Ornge to ensure the patient was safe.

The reason we're frustrated here is because taxpayers are investing $150 million-plus in our air ambulance service, it's unreliable, and, under the current structure, there seems to be nothing happening other than more Band-Aids by this Minister of Health. This committee has a responsibility to get to the bottom of it.

Thank you for your help today.

Mr. Tom Lepine: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for coming before the committee. We appreciate the time you took.

This committee is adjourned.

The committee adjourned at 1500.

COMMITTEE BUSINESS

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, I'd like to call this meeting to order. The first order of business we have is that we've received permission from the House leaders to attend the annual conference of the Canadian Council of Public Accounts Committees in Iqaluit, Nunavut. The organization committee has set a cap of four members from each jurisdiction, including staff. I do have a letter to the Speaker with an approximate budget of $19,000, and I seek approval from the committee. Any discussion? Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I just want to make sure. With four members, we get one from each caucus plus you, Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's correct.

Interjection.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Oh, sorry. It's one from each caucus, including the Chair, plus the clerk.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Plus Will.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So just one from each caucus.

M^{me} France Gélinas: How about our auditor?

Mr. Jim McCarter: The auditor has the pleasure of going to Nunavut with—we fund that ourselves, out of our own.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You come out of your own budget.

Mr. Jim McCarter: Usually myself and the deputy auditor go to that. We fund that out of our budget.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So two, yourself plus somebody else from your office, will be coming?

Mr. Jim McCarter: Yes, the auditor and the deputy typically go from the different jurisdictions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So our total delegation would be four, including Will. If any members wish to bring a spouse, they pay on their own for that.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: We should maybe just clarify that the way the conference works is that, at some points, it's split off to the legislative branch and the audit branch. That's why we're dealing with the legislative part, which is the clerk and the members, separately from the auditors. I'm sure the auditors—and we should also clarify that the limit of four delegates per province was set by the organizers of the conference. There's nothing we can do for the legislative part, but the auditors—

Mr. Jim McCarter: I should just mention too, to help you out in your planning, that typically, while the auditors work right till 5 o'clock on Tuesday, on the Tuesday, the members are usually done at noon, and there is I think a 1:30 flight out. I suspect that flight will be booked fairly quickly, so should you want to depart, you might want to book that flight fairly early.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Delegate Will to be on it.

Mr. Jim McCarter: The auditors will not be on that plane, I should add.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, and I think that Will has already looked into that.

Is it—

M^{me} France Gélinas: My next question is, do we make our own flight arrangements or will you, Will?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): I'll call your office.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, because I need to go from Sudbury to—

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: And the caucuses sort out who's going from their respective party?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

Okay, so all in favour of that? Carried.

SUBCOMMITTEE REPORT

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Now we have a subcommittee report. Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, thank you. Your subcommittee met on Monday, June 4, 2012, to consider the method of proceeding on the 2012 special report of the Office of the Auditor General on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services, and recommends the following:

(1) That legal counsel attend future meetings as the committee may require.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any comment or discussion? Yes, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes. I think that's entirely appropriate, because—I know we're trying to keep an eye on costs, but I do have a question for the clerk, through you, Mr. Chair: What is the committee counsel's, Ms. Flood's, billing rate or billing arrangement? I assume it's a per-hour. How many hours has she billed to date?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): She brought her detailed billing to the subcommittee. I don't actually have a copy of it in front of me, but there was a detailed billing that she laid out for the subcommittee members.

Interjection.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Yes. Sorry, I didn't—

Mr. David Zimmer: So do you know what the hourly rate was?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Off the top of my head, I do not, no. I can find out for you.

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes, the hourly rate or whatever the billing process was, and the bills to date.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Yes, I'll get it for you by this afternoon.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you very much.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): You're welcome.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Any other further discussion? All in favour? Carried.

SPECIAL REPORT, AUDITOR GENERAL:

ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE

AND RELATED SERVICES

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Here we have another motion. Who is moving this motion?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'll do that too.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mrs. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Because this is essentially on behalf of the subcommittee as well:

"That the Standing Committee on Public Accounts report to the House requesting that the House authorize the Speaker to issue his warrant for the appearance of Dr. Chris Mazza, former president and CEO of Ornge, before the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, in Room Number 151, legislative building, Queen's Park, Toronto, at 9:00 a.m. on Wednesday, July 18, 2012.

"That Dr. Chris Mazza produce all documents relating to the 2012 Special Report of the Office of the Auditor General of Ontario on Ornge Air Ambulance and Related Services.

"That, if necessary the warrant can be delivered to Dr. Chris Mazza's attorney, Roger D. Yachetti, Q.C."

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Discussion? All in favour? Carried.

Mr. Klees, you had a question?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes. We had requested some information, specifically the financial statements from Ornge. That was a week ago now. We still don't have them.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Actually, I'm not exactly sure what information it was that they filed with my office at the end of the day yesterday, but I did receive a binder from them, and my office is in the process of copying it right now. It was a substantial amount of paper, so we had been working on it late last night, and I know that my office is going to be working on it this morning as well. Hopefully, we'll be able to get it to you guys by lunch today.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Very well.

MR. TREVOR KIDD

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, our witness for this morning is Mr. Trevor Kidd. Please come forward. Welcome, Mr. Kidd.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Thank you.

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair, can you turn the—(a) it's really cold, and (b) it makes a lot of noise. I'm just having trouble hearing, even from across the table.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Sure. If it gets too hot we'll maybe—

Mr. David Zimmer: We'll turn it back on.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If it gets too hot, we'll complain.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): But I agree, it's a little hard to hear.

Welcome, Mr. Kidd, and just to confirm, you have received a letter informing you about witnesses appearing before the committee?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I have, thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk will get you to swear an oath or do an affirmation.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Mr. Kidd, do you solemnly affirm that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I swear.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. You have some time for an opening statement and then we'll have the three parties ask questions.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Thank you. Thank you for having me. My name is Trevor Kidd. I have been a paramedic for 11 years. I would like to briefly outline just a few of the many concerns regarding unsafe, egregious and unprofessional practices I experienced under Ornge, which I left in disgust in the fall of 2009.

I initially joined the air ambulance in 2003. Ornge took over the Sioux Lookout base I was working at in 2006. Already having my advanced care, I started the critical care course, which traditionally took one year under the previous carriers and was a time frame that Ornge itself advertises. However, under Ornge, accountability for having properly trained crews was gone. The time frame for the six students in my class ranged from two years, eight months, to more than five years. I feel that the reluctance of Ornge to invest in their paramedics significantly compromised patient care in this province.

In 2008, I was moved to the new fixed-wing that Ornge was starting in Thunder Bay. That was the first time I have experienced the terror of working on an aircraft which, due to the interior set-up, had no business carrying sick patients. We felt we were putting patients and staff at risk.

When Ornge refused to address any of these issues after many months, I applied for and was approved for a transfer to the new critical care land transfer unit that was scheduled to open in Windsor on November 3, 2008. I was one of 11 staff looking forward to providing care in this city that had long been neglected.

Now, of course, I know what you are saying: There is no base in Windsor. On that very day, November 3, we were told that Windsor was not opening, that Markham and Peterborough would be opened half-time. That stunt secured Ornge millions of unearned taxpayer dollars every year thereafter.

As background to the land program, Ornge received $9.4 million in start-up funds for the 2006 fiscal year and $13.2 million the following year, despite only opening a single base very late in the year. This was $23 million for essentially doing nothing.

Unfortunately for Ornge, come 2008, there was finally pressure to deliver something for the money. Instead, they created a crisis. Ornge's documents to the Ministry of Finance claim that they spent $22.3 million on the land program that year. More recently, the Auditor General found that Ornge only spent $8.2 million. That $14-million discrepancy has never been discussed, explained or accounted for, as far as I know.

The Auditor General also found that year that $8 million Ornge received for the program was not spent on the land program and was not returned to the Ministry of Health. We also know that in June 2008, $8.4 million was transferred out of Ornge into the Ornge Foundation charity. Three months later, Ornge created a crisis by not opening the bases they were supposed to. From that time on, Ornge received 70% of the originally proposed funds while delivering only 20% of the proposed crews, receiving millions of dollars every year. The executives took this windfall and ran with it. In the following months, Steve Farquhar and Tom Lepine received raises of $96,000 and $106,000, respectively. For the other execs, we know how well they, their families and friends made out.

For the paramedics involved, the story is different. Some were left commuting several hours to work, others living apart from their families, and others still with expenses which Ornge caused us to incur, which ranged up to $50,000. Ornge not only did not assist us, but their continued lies prevented us from making informed decisions which would have minimized our losses. To this day, they refuse to take any responsibility for their actions in this fraud.

Since that time, Ornge has had staffing issues the likes of which had never been seen before. When I left a year later, Sioux Lookout was properly staffed 27% of the time; Thunder Bay's fixed-wing, 2%; and Moosonee, 0%. These problems have spread to Toronto and Sudbury, which for the first part of this year were properly staffed only 60% and 65% of the time, respectively. Pilots and engineers are also leaving in droves, with six each from Toronto Island alone so far this year.

Despite knowing that the control Ornge had over air ambulance left me with nowhere else to go, I left two and a half years ago with the goal of exposing the corruption that was already evident by that time. I kept in contact with many staff and compiled evidence of Ornge's mismanagement. Those I talk to do not feel that this nightmare is being seriously addressed to this day.

The air ambulance in this province used to be among the most respected in the world. It was so high that it took six years of concerted effort for the execs to drive it into the ground. It will take many years for the system to be restored, but whether that respect can ever be returned, I have serious doubts.

That ends my speech. However, if I may, I have asked many of those who have sent me information over the years if they would agree to allow their names to be submitted to the committee, in writing, under terms of extreme care for maintaining confidentiality. They unanimously said no. However, they have approved a short statement which I can read to the committee if they desire.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead.

Mr. David Zimmer: Well, just a second here. When someone comes before the committee and says, "I have a piece of evidence in the nature of a statement from person X. They don't want to be identified. They won't permit themselves to be identified, but they've given a statement and I am prepared to read in the statement on their behalf. But they don't want to be identified," if there's anything more outrageous than accepting that as a statement without giving—the members here have no chance to follow up on that, to ask questions about who the statement's coming from. That is just unfairness of the grossest sort. That's just scandalous. If the witness X wants to come and read the statement in or present the statement, that's fine. That's entirely appropriate. But you just can't do that, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, Mr. Klees?

Mr. Frank Klees: I cannot believe what I'm hearing Mr. Zimmer say.

Mr. David Zimmer: You couldn't do that in a court.

Mr. Frank Klees: This is not a court.

Mr. David Zimmer: It's fundamental fairness.

Mr. Frank Klees: This is a public hearing on the Auditor General's report on the air ambulance. We have a witness here who tells us that he is willing to respect the confidentiality of his colleagues, who are afraid to come forward but they are willing to share their concerns. What are we afraid that we're going to hear?

Mr. David Zimmer: That's outrageous.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll just hear from France, please. France, go ahead.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'm not a lawyer and this is not a court of law. We know with Ornge that a lot of people who have come to the reporter at the Toronto Star, to Frank, to myself and, I'm sure, to the Liberals have said that they are afraid for their jobs; they do not want to be identified. I will take the statement as one more of those witnesses who is afraid for their job and does not want to be identified and treat it as such. I have no problem with it.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And he has qualified that statement. Go ahead.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Thank you. This statement was approved by nine people who had sent me information on more than one occasion.

Mr. David Zimmer: Nine people? Chair, this is outrageous.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The frontline and office staff who have sent me information over the years almost unanimously remain in fear of speaking out publicly or having their names come to light. They hold this position because some of the management structure remains in place—a management structure that they largely do not trust or have confidence in; because strong whistleblower protection has not been put in place; because they feel that the only people who have faced the threat of legal action so far have not been those who have committed the egregious acts that have occurred at Ornge, but instead those who have tried to bring those acts to light; because people like Tom Lepine have left receiving praise and severance instead of going before the people of Ontario and asking for forgiveness while acknowledging that he does not deserve it; because staff and former staff who have been harmed by this company continue to lack redress against the company that used every dirty trick imaginable to screw them over; because they feel that the actions done so far have been to try to minimize political fallout and have little confidence that serious efforts are being made to improve patient care, safety, relations with allied health care providers or providing a work environment which is positive, honest and open.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your opening statement. Now we'll move to the opposition. We'll do 20-minute rounds and see how much time is left after. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Chair. Mr. Kidd, thank you for being here this morning.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: You're welcome.

Mr. Frank Klees: We're looking forward to hearing from you. You obviously did not have a good experience with Ornge.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: And from what you're telling us, many of your colleagues had the same unfortunate experience.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like you, if you could take some time, to just give us some context for your background. You're a flight paramedic. Could you tell us where you got your training?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I originally trained as a paramedic at Humber College from 1999 to 2001. I worked two years on land between Niagara region and Timiskaming and then I went to air under Voyageur Airways 795 in Sioux Lookout in 2003—I believe, May 2003.

Ornge took over the base I was working at in January 2006. I worked at that base until I transferred to Thunder Bay around February 2007. I transferred to Windsor in November 2008, and then spent the last couple of months I worked at Ornge in Peterborough. Before resigning, I completed a biology degree at Trent University. After Mazza departed from the air ambulance, I came back—not to Ornge but to one of the contract carriers, Thunder Airlines, in Thunder Bay.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was it that motivated you to get into the emergency care business, get your training as a paramedic?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: My motivation to be a paramedic was simply—it was a job; I wanted to help people. At the time, when I was younger, I didn't feel I had enough time to spend many years in school. To be a paramedic was two years, and I could get out working, helping people.

When I had the opportunity to join the air ambulance, the air ambulance was the best of the best. You could work with the people who had the most training. You could see the highest level of acuity care, and it was a great opportunity. I think at that time anyone who could have received that opportunity would have jumped at it. The same is not true today.

Mr. Frank Klees: At what point did things start to go wrong? Can you just elaborate? Is there a specific time or time frame during which you started to see some changes?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The first time that I thought there were potentially some major problems with Ornge was actually within the first year that Ornge had taken over as much of the air ambulance as they had. They had passed some kind of law which had stopped the contract carriers, the standing-offer-agreement carriers, from doing advanced care transfers inter-facility-wise.

Mr. Frank Klees: What year would that have been?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: That would have been in 2006, the first year that they were running the air ambulance. This seemed like just a blatant power grab to harm the competition. It made no sense. It harmed patient care. It left the hospitals in a situation where they had to send staff frequently with primary care SOA carriers instead of advanced care carriers which had previously been available.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. I'd like to just spend a little bit of time talking about that. You're saying that there was a definite point in time when Ornge took over a certain part of the air ambulance business and that certain things then started to go wrong. Can you be specific about the kind of circumstances that you as a paramedic—I'd like to hear this from your perspective as a paramedic who's actually on the front line doing the work. What kind of specific things changed in your day-to-day functions once Ornge took over?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Okay. The issue I was previously talking about: I was working with advanced care paramedics in Sioux Lookout who may have worked there part-time for 795. On Thunder Airlines or one of the other SOA carriers where they worked full-time, they could no longer function as advanced care carrying patients between hospitals, even though they could do that working with Ornge. There was no difference. The only difference was who they were officially working under.

Shortly after that, I transferred to Thunder Bay. There were issues there with getting myself trained to the critical care level. They seemed to be delaying things. They just didn't want to put out any money to get us trained, and they had no motivation, because previously carriers were fined if they weren't at the level of care they were supposed to be at. With Ornge, that didn't happen. So I waited for years to get my precepting done at the critical care level. Even though I was working with a critical care partner who could have been precepting me at that time, they wouldn't allow it to happen. That caused countless delays.

Shortly after that, I was moved to the new fixed-wing, which was simply not set up in any way that could safely transport sick patients. Aircraft that have advanced care and critical care—and even, for the most part, primary care—crews have lots of shelving units where we keep all our equipment. The aircraft that Ornge set up in Thunder Bay, the fixed-wing they set up, we had all of our equipment stuffed into large bags sitting on the second stretcher. Whenever you needed anything, you had to search through bags trying to find the equipment and hope when you found it that it was still good. Chances are it wasn't sterile anymore—you know, bags were ripped open, all kinds of stuff. You would be desperately searching for something you needed to assist the patient, and you'd have to try to find it, and then you'd have stuff strewn all over the floor. It was just a mess.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you, as a paramedic, were going through this duffel bag looking for whatever you need there—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Vital equipment, yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: What did you do about that? Did you talk to your superiors about that? And if so, to whom did you bring those concerns?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I brought up that concern as well as a couple of other concerns to Rick Potter.

The other concerns were that this was a dedicated aircraft where pilots had to be there for the 12-hour shift. So unlike SOA carriers, where you were called in, dedicated pilots all throughout Ornge—previous carriers had always been paid salary and not a combination of salary and mileage. We had been promised before we agreed to go over to this aircraft that the pilots would be paid strictly salary and not a lower salary and then mileage. That was not the case, so I went to Rick Potter with that concern as well. I got nowhere with those concerns. The only thing he did do was that he went to the pilots and informed them that if they spoke to the paramedics about any issue, including safety or weather, that there would be serious consequences for them. So it essentially left us in a position where we wouldn't know what kind of weather we'd be flying through, what kind of weather would exist in the location. And if our patient or a family escort had concerns, we couldn't find out that information. It was very unsafe. It was a childish way to react to the serious problems that were being presented to him.

Mr. Frank Klees: So pilots were told not to have any of those discussions with the paramedics. I'm assuming, and one would think, that it's a fairly tight team on an emergency medical team like that.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: It's supposed to be a very tight team, and things certainly work a lot better when it is a tight team. When relations deteriorate between pilots and paramedics or other kind of crew, then it makes the job a lot harder.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was that the first step of intimidation that you and your colleagues started to feel in this organization?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Certainly for myself in Thunder Bay, what surrounded the implementation of the fixed-wing up there was the first step I had seen of intimidation. It included other intimidation before that. I mean, as someone who was still in the critical care program, I was told that I had to go over to that aircraft from the helicopter or I would be thrown out of the critical care program, even though there was supposed to be complete separation between the education department and the company.

Mr. Frank Klees: So did you attempt—you say you didn't get very far with Mr. Potter. Was there anyone else that you tried to express your concerns to about, first of all, the safety issues that you were seeing?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: These issues were discussed with a lot of people. Fred Rusk came in and looked at the aircraft.

Mr. Frank Klees: Fred Rusk: What was his position at the time?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I can't say exactly what his position was, but he was brought in to look at the aircraft and make recommendations as to what should be done with it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Now, who was Fred with at that time?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I can't say if he was with Ornge or if he was contracted to work with Ornge.

Mr. Frank Klees: Because my understanding is that there was a time when Mr. Rusk was with the Ministry of Health.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're saying you spoke with Mr. Rusk when he was either a consultant or he was employed by Ornge, but he was a go-to person for you?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I didn't personally speak to Fred Rusk. One of my co-workers spoke with Fred Rusk. Then he came in, looked at the aircraft and made a list of many, many recommendations that had to be fulfilled for this aircraft to be workable. None of those recommendations had been fulfilled when I left eight months later—when I left Thunder Bay.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did Mr. Rusk, to your knowledge, express to anyone to whose attention he brought that list of issues?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't know of any reaction of anyone within the company.

Mr. Frank Klees: Were there any other safety concerns?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't believe there were any other safety concerns at that time—not that I can think of. Most of them started to occur in the coming months and years.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you recall any circumstances when you were on duty that, as a result of the circumstances you've described in the aircraft and so on, you felt that a patient's care may have been compromised?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I was pretty lucky. I worked with pretty strong partners, and generally, we almost always made it through. We had one issue where a gentleman had lost some fingers due to an accident with a skilsaw or some other type of saw, and the delays that existed in getting him from Thunder Bay to Winnipeg were outrageous. I was on the phone with dispatch probably 15 times alone, on the ground in Winnipeg, waiting for a land ambulance to pick us up. The land ambulance was finally sent and had been sent code 1 instead of code 4, or whatever their coding system was in Winnipeg.

Mr. Frank Klees: We've had a lot of discussion over the last number of weeks, throughout the course of these hearings, regarding circumstances that involved down-staffing: either not enough pilots, not enough paramedics. You've raised the issue of dispatch. Could you elaborate on what took place at the communications centre? Did you notice a change—again, I'd like to get a sense of before and after. With the advent of the Ornge regime, was there any noticeable change on the dispatch side of the operation?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes, there was. Dispatch is a tough job. I've never worked it, but I can guarantee it is a tough job. Things have never been completely smooth, and you can't expect things to run perfectly when it's that kind of complicated position. But the level of training that was required for people working at dispatch deteriorated under Dr. Mazza. You could see the difference. You could be talking to a call-taker who simply didn't know a lot of the medical terms and what was going on, and didn't know what questions to ask when they initially talked to the hospital. How you can properly dispatch air ambulances around the province when you don't have a firm grasp on what's going on medically is very difficult.

On the pilot side, my understanding is that similar things have happened. I don't have enough knowledge on the aviation side to be able to actually comment on that, but that's what I've been told.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to get your sense of what is happening out in the field today. You haven't been there for a while. You left for the reasons that you've indicated, but you say you continued to stay in touch with your colleagues on the front lines. It's no secret what has taken place at Ornge. It's no secret that there are some serious issues, and we have yet to determine exactly what all of the reasons are. But what we do know is that there continue to be numerous incidents where, for one reason or another, when a call goes out, the Ornge air ambulance cannot respond. We continue to hear about issues on the dispatch side. I've heard about an event this past month where the dispatcher lost the helicopter. The dispatcher actually called the home of the pilot to see if he was there. His wife answered, who happened to know that he was on a call—somewhat distressing for her. I think it speaks to the point that you're making about the lack of qualifications of people who are actually on the front lines doing some of this work—no fault of their own, but it gets back again to training.

I continue to hear—we hear from the minister all the time—that the minister insists that in her conversations with front-line people, paramedics and pilots, she tells us that they're fully supportive of what the government is doing and that all is doing well, that they feel secure with the direction that Ornge is going. Can you comment on that? Is that what you're hearing as well?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Not at all. When it comes to aircraft engineers and pilots, we have the numbers that show that these people are leaving in droves. So, obviously, they don't have confidence in the way the system is going. For paramedics, they don't have as easy an opportunity to leave. If Ornge didn't have basically a monopoly over people with higher training in this province, paramedics would have left en masse in 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011 and this year. Most of them want to work somewhere else, but there is no place in this province where they can work somewhere else. They feel that the problems haven't been dealt with. They want whistle-blower protection put in place. Most of them I talked to feel that we will not receive strong whistle-blower protection until everything has blown over. At that point in time, it's too late to be able to testify.

The people I talk to who work on helicopters feel like these helicopters just shouldn't be used for air ambulance in this province. They don't feel they are the appropriate helicopters. They feel that they're very difficult to work on. They tell me that, as they are loading and unloading patients, they lose intubation tubes; they lose IVs. That's very critical, and that never happened on the previous aircraft. We used to be able to unload the stretcher off the Sikorskys in seconds. It was very quick. If you needed to, you could do it in 10 or 15 seconds, or 30 seconds if you weren't in a rush. People tell me that it can take 10 minutes to unload the stretchers in this helicopter, that they're just—I haven't worked in the helicopter. I haven't actually even seen the interior of the helicopter, so I don't know exactly what they're going through. But there's enormous frustration with the people who I talk to with these new helicopters.

There's enormous frustration with the organization. They're frustrated that some of the people who they feel shouldn't be there are still there, and of course we know that the pilots and the engineers can much more easily just leave with their frustrations and go work somewhere else where they don't have to deal with these kinds of issues.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You've got about two minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Could I have five and I'll tack it on?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Certainly. Go ahead.

Mr. Frank Klees: You know, obviously, what you're saying is very disturbing because it deals with patient care. I'm not a paramedic, but I can only imagine that if it takes 10 minutes to extricate a patient from a helicopter, that could very well be a life-and-death issue.

We would like to think that there are competent people there now in senior management positions who are addressing these issues, so that they get dealt with. You're telling us they persist—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: —even since Mr. McKerlie has been there. You mention that there are still some people there who should not be there, in your opinion. I don't want to put you on the spot, but can you give us a sense of who, in your opinion, is still in a senior management position there who isn't doing their job and maybe is not qualified to?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I have a list that I can submit, if you would like.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. We'd appreciate that.

Mr. David Zimmer: Chair, are we getting that list now or—

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you have it with you?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I have a list right here.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Well, maybe the clerk—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll get it copied.

Mr. David Zimmer: It's a list of names?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. Thank you.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, I will defer, then, until my next round.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well, and you're just about on time. Good. So we'll move on to the NDP. Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Nice to see you, Mr. Kidd, and thank you for coming. I know that it tends to be a nerve-racking process. We will try to be as helpful as we can, but you do have knowledge that we would like to hear from.

In your statement, you start by saying, "In 2008, I was moved to the new fixed-wing that Ornge was starting in Thunder Bay." Now, "I was moved" is really different from "I applied to and chose to go." Why did you use that language?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I was working on the helicopter 797 in Thunder Bay. Ornge brought in a fixed-wing. The staff there had tried to negotiate with management a system where everyone would work on both aircraft, so you're on the helicopter for a while and the fixed-wing, the other aircraft. Ornge said they would not do that and they wanted designated staff over there. To get people like myself on to the fixed-wing, they threatened that they would remove me from the critical care course that I was two years into at the time, if I did not go to the fixed-wing.

There were four of us who were students in Thunder Bay. They threatened the four of us that if we did not move to the fixed-wing, then we would be thrown out of the course, so myself and another person agreed to go.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Because you were dependent upon Ornge to finish your training?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So not only were they your employer, but they were also the one giving the training. So they used that opportunity to pressure you to go to this—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes, and the education department was supposed to be separate from operations, but that clearly was not the case at least for that issue.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you remember who you had that conversation with?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: That conversation—actually, I don't know who the people were in management who informed the union of this. The union had a meeting with us and informed us that was the case.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who was your union?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Chuck Telky was the head of the union.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And who represents you? Was it OPSEU?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The CAW.

M^{me} France Gélinas: CAW. And what local?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Local 2002.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Did you grieve? Did you put in a grievance?

0910

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The union were the people who were telling us that this was what management had decided. They seemed not to have any disagreement with it, so there seemed to be no way forward in grieving it.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you know if any of your colleagues put in grievances? Were grievances happening often?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Oh, there were many, many grievances at Ornge, yes—not on that specific situation, but there were a lot of grievances at Ornge.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Have you ever put in a grievance?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: With my house, where Ornge didn't pay the expenses. I contacted the head of the union and informed him that Rhoda Beecher had turned down my expenses on the house and I wanted a grievance filed. He told me that the union had filed a grievance on my behalf when the Windsor base had been delayed, on November 3, so that was about six months earlier. He said that we were at whatever level—level 3 or level 4—that there would be a meeting within 30 days, and if that failed, then it would go forward to arbitration.

I was in contact with them with text messages about the meeting within 30 days, which he said resolved nothing and that we were moving forward. Later that summer, I was told that the union was dropping the grievance. A year or so later, when I went to small claims court with Ornge, I was informed that the union's position was that there had never been a grievance. I'm at the Ontario Labour Relations Board right now with that issue.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. So this is an ongoing issue that hasn't been settled.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: This is, yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: In 2008, you ended up going to the fixed-wing in Thunder Bay, but you quickly applied to go to Windsor.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: How did this process unfold? How different was it from your being told to go there versus all of a sudden you had an opportunity to bid on a different job?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: With the Windsor base opening, and Peterborough and Markham, they were looking for staff who had experience to agree to go to these bases. For the Windsor base, before I put in to go there, there was really no one who had any experience with Ornge, so they were looking for someone who kind of knew the ropes. They had put out a request to see if anyone wanted to transfer there. That was the end of August. I submitted and was approved for it on September 8, 2008.

M^{me} France G  linas: So from September 8, 2008, you made arrangements to be ready to move and work in Windsor?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes, that's correct.

M^{me} France G  linas: And nobody ever led you to believe that this was not going to happen until the day you were supposed to report to work on November 3, when you were told, "Ha ha, there's no job"?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: In fact, on October 31—the Friday before the Monday—they sent out an email advising us that the 11 of us who were supposed to go to Windsor were to come to Toronto on the Monday at 10 o'clock for a team building meeting. In that email, they outlined the orientation that was going to be continuing over the next couple of days. On the Thursday, from 8 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, there was going to be a trip around the city for the paramedics to get used to it. This was all outlined in the email that came out in the afternoon on October 31, so just a couple of business hours before they told us they weren't opening the base.

M^{me} France G  linas: So the transition had been set, you were to get your training on streets on how to work as a team, how things were going to be. Did they give any explanation as to why they were not opening?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The email that was sent out by Tom Lepine while this meeting was going on said that due to the international financial situation, Ornge was not going ahead with—they said they were delaying the base in Windsor. According to EMS in Windsor and the hospital in Windsor, they've never been informed that this base was any more than delayed. I don't know if anything ever officially came out saying that the base had been cancelled.

M^{me} France G  linas: In your mind, what does the international financial market have to do with providing EMS to the people of Ontario?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't think it has anything with that. I think it has to do with Ornge's for-profit interests and the amount of money they were having to shift onto that end of things. If the international financial markets didn't look as good, then they were going to need more taxpayer money to go toward those private financial interests, and that was going to have to come out of the money that was supposed to go to operations in Ontario.

M^{me} France G  linas: How much did the people at Ornge know that they were for-profit entities being created?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: That's hard to say. I think—

M^{me} France G  linas: How much did you know? You knew that they existed.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes. There was a lot of talk as to what was going on. The difficulty was getting anything ironed down.

Before I left Ornge in 2009, I knew that there was a lot of corruption going on, and I could list all kinds of things that I knew were going on—the speedboat; the resort or whatnot for J Smarts. I knew all this stuff was going on. Whether or not I could provide evidence for it was the issue, like having something ironed down on a piece of paper, saying, "This is proof that this is going on."

M^{me} France G  linas: But staff were talking. In the rumour mill of a place of employment, people knew that Dr. Mazza had bought a speedboat. Could you make a link between the need to provide patient transfer and the need for a speedboat?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: No.

M^{me} France G  linas: No. Okay. And the same thing with what you call the resort: The rumour mills at work knew that taxpayers' money was being used to buy that kind of stuff—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: —and you also knew that some for-profit companies were being set up.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: This kind of information was never shared with the staff at Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: No, absolutely not.

M^{me} France G  linas: You heard of them through the rumour mills, mainly?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes. I mean, Ornge management basically tried to create an air where there was nothing going on, where they were tightening their belts, just as they were expecting everyone else to.

M^{me} France G  linas: The official line you were being told was, "Things are tough. We have to tighten our belts, and everybody has to co-operate." But then, through the rumour mills, you hear—was the rumour mill talking about the salaries that Mr. Mazza was being paid?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: We all knew that Dr. Mazza was no longer on the sunshine list. We all knew that he didn't seem to be living extremely frugally. We also knew that, for instance, Steve Farquhar's wages increased $96,000 in 2009. Tom Lepine's—

M^{me} France Gélinas: How did you know that?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: That was on the sunshine list.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. Sorry, I didn't mean to interrupt.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: No problem.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You knew that Dr. Mazza was no longer on the sunshine list. You knew by his actions that he was being well paid.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes, and we also knew that there were things going on, like Dr. Mazza's girlfriend being hired, Rhoda Beecher's daughter being hired. I mean, these were the worst-kept secrets at Ornge.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And did that worry you?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I was extremely worried, and the main worry was that it was affecting patient care. We already knew that what was going on at Ornge was leading to negative patient outcomes. When we look at the amount, 145 or whatever, that are currently under the coroner's inquest, which I think is far lower than what they would actually find if they dug a lot deeper—I knew in 2009 not only that those cases were already going on, but that it was inevitable that they would dramatically increase as Ornge kept on going, unless something was done to stop what was occurring.

M^{me} France Gélinas: In your letter to us, you say, "I left in disgust in the fall of 2009." I kind of know what you were disgusted about, but could you put it out for the record? You left; you were disgusted about what?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I was disgusted about several things: first of all, the way we had been treated in Windsor and the lack of redress there. But at the same time, I had discussed with the partner I was working with in Peterborough, who was also from northern Ontario like I was, that if patients started to die in northern Ontario, I had to leave. Of course, things have progressed to being short-staffed everywhere, but at that time, the major staffing issues were in northern Ontario.

I put in my two weeks' notice after I had talked to a couple of people who were on a call and was pretty sure that if this patient in northern Ontario, a teenager from northwestern Ontario, did not die because of Ornge—it probably appears as though she would have died anyway—that had she been in a situation where she could have survived, Ornge had robbed her of that chance simply by not having aircraft properly staffed, their own aircraft in northwestern Ontario; also by not having standing offer aircraft properly staffed as advanced care anymore; and by simply not sending out the crews in a timely manner. This patient died after waiting several hours for an aircraft that simply should have been there.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you see what's happening. You're disgusted about the whole thing to the point where you decide to leave. This is a major decision. Did you ring the alarm bells in any way?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Between the fall of 2009 and the fall of 2010, I had contacted a couple of journalists and discussed things that were going on. That didn't get anywhere and I felt that chances were, the problem was with me and that I simply couldn't provide the kind of information that would have got them started.

I no longer believe that was probably the case. It was simply a case where—at the time I left, Ornge had developed and maintained this Mother-Teresa-like—in the media.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Image, yes.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Ornge had this image that was of this incredible organization that had saved the air ambulance from the brink of disaster, which was the opposite of what had actually happened. The air ambulance was functioning not perfect but very well before Ornge took over and Ornge was driving it into the ground.

So you had to overcome the situation where you knew the media had this sterling image of Ornge. At the same time, the information that has come out about Ornge is crazy. When you talked to someone about what was going on, you had to try to really downplay it or you worried that they would dismiss you as being crazy. I mean, the way these stories have come out in the media has allowed people to get used to the things that were going on there, but if you just went and talked to someone and you said that these are the things that are going on at this organization that has this great reputation, nobody would believe you.

My father also talked to some people. I felt that he was in a better position to talk to certain people than I was. He talked to people within the Ministry of Health. He also talked to David Ramsay, before he left office, on more than one occasion.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Just for the record, I know your dad is the mayor, but you may want to put that on the record.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: My father is the mayor of Temiskaming Shores.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So the mayor of Temiskaming Shores knew of the situation because he's your father and you had shared. He went to the Ministry of Health and explained what was going on. He knew about the boats, he knew about—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I can't say what my father discussed with them. I certainly had told him that these things were going on. Of course, he knew about my own situation there. I know that he talked to Kevin Finnerty, who I believe is in communications with the Ministry of Health.

Mr. David Zimmer: Sorry, I missed that. I didn't hear it.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Kevin Finnerty, communications with the Ministry of Health, and Malcolm Bates, who I believe is director of emergency health services for the Ministry of Health. He talked to another woman who had previously been at the Ministry of Health, but she had moved on to another ministry at that time.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you remember her name?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I have it written down here somewhere.

M^{me} France G  linas: And you said that your father also went to his own MPP, who was David Ramsay at the time.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: Do you know if any of them followed up?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Sylvia Shedden was the woman who he spoke to. She advised him to speak to Malcolm Bates.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: And then both of us had talked to John Vanthof after he came into his position. As far as I know, I don't see anything that was done between Malcolm Bates or David Ramsay or Kevin Finnerty.

M^{me} France G  linas: Just to clarify: You said that you yourself also talked to some of the people in the ministry, or only your father?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Only my father talked to people in the ministry.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. Except for trying to ring the alarm bell with the media, did you try to tell somebody else what was going on?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Are you referring to within Ornge or outside of Ornge?

M^{me} France G  linas: Everyone.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Within Ornge, of course, there was communication going on with people who were front-line workers. Going anywhere above that, I don't think anyone would have attempted to do. I mean, nobody was going to go to Steve Farquhar or Tom Lepine, those kinds of people. I had—

M^{me} France G  linas: Why not?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Well, I think we all knew what kind of reaction we were going to get. I don't think we would have got a response anyway. I had contacted Steve Farquhar about the land program and what had happened there probably four or five times, between leaving phone messages and email messages, and never got a response from him at any point in time.

We, of course, had managers who were at a lower level, so they, I would assume, heard the same things we did. Some of them were people who you wouldn't approach about any kind of problem other than—they were people who if they had felt there were problems, they would have just been let go anyways.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about two minutes.

M^{me} France G  linas: So you felt that if you had gone to a manager to explain and that manager had taken your case up as to what is going on here—"Spending money on a boat might not have been the wisest thing to do; maybe we should have spent it on patient care"—they could have lost their job by speaking out?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I think they would have. There was enough lower management that had been fired for any number of reasons that I think it would have happened. I did go to Rick Potter about legitimate safety issues on the aircraft, and I saw what reaction that had gotten.

M^{me} France G  linas: And that reaction was that he dismissed you?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: He not only dismissed me, but then he went to the pilots and told them that they could not communicate with the paramedics and made the aircraft less safe than it had been before.

M^{me} France G  linas: Okay. Does a specific example of a lower-level manager being dismissed come to mind when you think about the culture and what you saw, heard and lived through?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I mean, Robbin Lavoie was the regional operations manager in Thunder Bay. I can't say for sure if he was dismissed or left, but he had certainly come close to losing his job when he had complained a bit about Ornge firing some of the office staff they had. In Thunder Bay, we had Dawna Watts. They were brought down to Toronto, the staff from each base, and were told that their assistance was no longer required.

He had also talked to one paramedic about a situation where Ornge was providing discipline towards that employee. He said that he completely disagreed with what was going on but that if he said anything, he would no longer be working there.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you, and we'll move on to the government. Who would like to ask questions over there? Mr. Moridi.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair, and thank you, Mr. Kidd, for appearing before this committee.

Mr. Kidd, do you currently work for Thunder Air?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes, I do.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Can you tell us a little bit about the detail of the work you did for Ornge when you were working for Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: When Ornge took over, I was an advanced care flight paramedic. I did my critical care training while I was there. I never certified critical care, due to delays that had occurred.

Now, at Thunder Airlines, I work as a primary care paramedic there, so I no longer work at an advanced care level or a critical care level. At some point in time, Thunder Air may be allowed to start doing advanced care transfers again, and if that's the case, I would look at getting my advanced care back.

Mr. Reza Moridi: When you were working for Ornge, whom did you report to? Who was your supervisor there?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: My immediate supervisor when I was in Sioux Lookout was Ron Laverty. In Thunder Bay, it was Robbin Lavoie. In Peterborough, it was Jeff Carss.

Mr. Reza Moridi: And what was your position at Ornge, or what positions did you hold?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I was an advanced care flight paramedic, I was a preceptor of advanced care flight paramedics, and I was a critical care resident. In Thunder Bay, on the fixed-wing, I was the most senior paramedic there, but I don't think that makes any difference for your position there.

Mr. Reza Moridi: How long did you work for Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I worked for Ornge from, I believe, January 6, 2006, until, I would say, early October 2009.

Mr. Reza Moridi: So about three and a half years.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. Reza Moridi: When did you leave Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Sorry, when or why?

Mr. Reza Moridi: When did you leave Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I left Ornge early October 2009.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Do you know a gentleman by the name of Bob Mackie, who is the president and owner of Thunder Air?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes, I know Bob Mackie.

Mr. Reza Moridi: He's your boss now, I guess? You work for him.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes, he is.

Mr. Reza Moridi: He's also a director at the Air Transport Association, I believe.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes. As far as I know, he is.

Mr. Reza Moridi: When Mr. Mackie appeared before this committee, he expressed his frustration about his company losing business when Ornge Air was created. What do you think about his statement?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I believe the statement is absolutely correct. In what I believe was the fall of 2006, Ornge changed the situation. Where prior to that, standing offer agreement carriers such as Thunder Air could do advanced care transfers between hospitals, Ornge removed the ability for them to do that, which left staff from hospitals going along with primary care aircraft and led to companies like Thunder Air needing to lay off advanced care paramedics and left, really, the province with far, far fewer advanced care aircraft than had existed before Ornge took over.

Mr. Reza Moridi: When Ornge Air was created, apart from Thunder Air, did other agreement carriers—they were also affected by lost business, basically?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. Reza Moridi: As a competition.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Most of the previous carriers have left either due to finances or not wanting to deal with Ornge. Voyageur Airways used to have the dedicated contracts for the fixed-wing, but they also had some standing offer aircraft. They no longer have anything to do with the air ambulance. I can't say exactly what their reasons were for making that decision, but I know that they were not happy with the direction Ornge was taking the air ambulance in this province.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Mr. Mackie said that he lost business as a result of the creation of Ornge Air. How much do you think his business lost in terms of revenue?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I can't make a comment about that but I would be pretty sure that it was significant. It's expensive to run air ambulance. You're already buying all the equipment you would need to run advanced care, and when that's pulled out from under you, you've still incurred all these costs and now you're no longer generating revenue from it.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Could it be millions?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I would think so, but I can't say for sure.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Have you read the Auditor General's report?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. Reza Moridi: You have. Do you agree with the Auditor General that our government needs to strengthen the oversight framework and also bring legislation to the Parliament?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Sorry, could you please repeat that? There was a little bit of noise in the background.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Would you agree with the Auditor General's suggestion that we need to strengthen the oversight on our performance agreement with Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I absolutely think that—well, my disagreement would be that I think there needs to be increased oversight on the air ambulance. I don't think, and the paramedics I talk to don't think, Ornge should exist. We think that what is currently under Ornge should be delivered back to the other carriers; have them bid on it. Voyageur, Thunder, these companies can bid on the fixed-wing, and the same with the rotor wing. People I talk to simply do not feel that Ornge has the ability to run an airline. Maybe they can, but the paramedics I've talked to and the pilots I've talked to don't have that confidence.

Everything seemed to go wrong as Ornge moved more and more into the system. Whether or not it can—things can be improved by better regulation and better oversight, but I still think there's a problem with Ornge running the aircraft. I just don't think it makes any sense.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Are you aware that our government amended the performance agreement with Ornge and also brought in legislation to the House with regard to Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I've been told that these things occurred, but I haven't read any of the legislation. I haven't read the performance agreements. I can't say exactly what they say—

Mr. Reza Moridi: Would you agree that government oversight on Ornge should be similar to our oversight on hospitals?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I'm not very aware of exactly what the oversight is on hospitals. I would say that the oversight on the air ambulance has to be much higher than it was. I mean, for several years, Ornge, for the land program, had Ottawa running 24 hours and Peterborough and Markham running 12 hours. That was 20% of the crews that Ornge was originally supposed to set up, and they were receiving 70% of the originally proposed money. I think that the strong oversight wouldn't have allowed that to happen, and strong oversight would have said, when Windsor was shut down, "Why did this happen?" and "Where's the money going?" If the oversight was there, I don't see the evidence for it.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Earlier you mentioned, Mr. Kidd, that you'd like to see whistle-blower protection. Our government brought Bill 50 to the House, basically mentioning that one of the items in the bill is whistle-blower protection. Do you think that all parties should support this bill?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I haven't actually read the bill. I can't say what whistle-blower protection that provides, whether it's strong enough. I think it would have to be some kind of independent counsel who has expertise in whistle-blower protection to provide any foresight on that.

Mr. Reza Moridi: If you think that the clause on whistle-blower protection is adequate from your point of view, do you think that all parties should support the bill?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: If there is strong whistle-blower protection—I'm not a politician. I don't know what all is in the bill. I can't say anything. I don't know if it's possible to support a certain clause. I don't know. I'd like to see very strong whistle-blower protection. How it gets there, I don't know.

Mr. Reza Moridi: Thank you very much.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: No problem.

Mr. Reza Moridi: I'm going to pass it to Mr. Zimmer.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you, Chair.

Do you know Trevor Harness?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I knew Trevor Harness briefly.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you work with Trevor Harness?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Well, it depends on what manner you mean. I worked at Ornge at the same time he was at Ornge. Did I work with him under any of the stuff he was investigating? No. I know that Trevor Harness had an investigative team. I didn't have that, and I didn't want to be part of a broader investigation. I just had a couple of people I talked to frequently, and they provided the kind of information that they could.

Mr. David Zimmer: When you worked with Trevor Harness at Ornge, how did you work together?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: He was at the dispatch centre and I was working as a flight paramedic, so I knew of him. I have never met him. We're each just one of hundreds of people working in the same organization.

Mr. David Zimmer: You said in your earlier statement that you left Ornge "with the goal of exposing the corruption." Is that correct?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: What were the first steps in your reaching towards that goal of exposing corruption?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Over the years I have compiled evidence, or simply lines of "I know this was going on, but I might not have evidence of it"—so everything I found out that was going on that either was corrupt or—

Mr. David Zimmer: And did you make notes and keep a record of your work that you did?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I have notes that I have in a document. I sent Frank Klees a document last April, I believe. It would have been 25 pages or so, that had hundreds of points—maybe not hundreds; probably a hundred points—

Mr. David Zimmer: You sent that to Mr. Klees last year, and it was about 25 pages plus?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes. Well, you know, 24, 25 pages, I would say.

Mr. David Zimmer: Do you have that document with you today?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: No, I don't.

Mr. David Zimmer: Would you share that document with the rest of the committee members so we can all—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. This is the clerk, so you can share that with him.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes. I will email him.

Mr. David Zimmer: The statement that you read in, on behalf of fellow Ornge employees: How many employees were you speaking on behalf of?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: There were nine employees I asked if I could use their names, because they had sent me information on more than one occasion. All of them replied saying that they were not comfortable with that and gave reasons why, so I put together a statement. I sent that to them all and asked if they approved of the statement or not, or if they wanted any changes made to it, and then some changes were made.

Mr. David Zimmer: Do you know why they don't want their names disclosed?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: They feel that there are still people working high up within Ornge who they'll feel repercussions from if their names come out. They don't feel that whistle-blower protection has been provided yet.

Mr. David Zimmer: Were any of those names disclosed in the 25-page document that you released to Mr. Klees?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I can't say for sure, but I'm pretty sure that there were no names on that list.

Mr. David Zimmer: Would you share those names privately with other members of this committee, including Mr. Klees?

0940

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I asked them if I could submit their names, and they said no. So I don't think I have any right to do that at this time.

Mr. David Zimmer: Have you shared those names with Mr. Klees?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: The document you provided here, that you gave to the clerk and he has made photocopies, says, "The front-line staff who I talk to state that they do not feel that this organization can move forward until the following people (in alphabetical order) left over from the Ornge corruption days are terminated," and then you have a list of two, four, six, eight, 10 names. Are any of those front-line staff who gave you those names on the same list as the statement you read on their behalf?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes. The names that are on the list are names that were provided by more than one person. Most people who provide names would—

Mr. David Zimmer: No, no. The front-line staff who gave you this list of names—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes?

Mr. David Zimmer: —can you give me their names?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The front-line staff who gave me those names are the same people.

Mr. David Zimmer: What same people?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The same people I have been talking about who do not want their names brought forward.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The one other person I talked to on this issue was Trevor Harness. He provided names, but they were already names I had on my list.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. So the people you read your statement on behalf of who don't want their names disclosed in turn had given you a list of two, four, six, eight, 10 names, and the names are: Jeff Carss—what does he do?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't know what Jeff Carss' position is right now. He was the regional operations manager when I—

Mr. David Zimmer: The next name is Wade Durham. What does he do?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I believe he is regional operations manager in Thunder Bay.

Mr. David Zimmer: The next name is Steve Farquhar. What does he do?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: He is head of operations, I guess.

Mr. David Zimmer: Jim Feeley—what does he do?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't actually even know who Jim Feeley is. I don't actually know who several names on the list are.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Jim Feeley is somebody you don't know. Christina Howell?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't know what her position is right now. She was in the HR department.

Mr. David Zimmer: Nancy Mulroney?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I believe she's in the HR department.

Mr. David Zimmer: Bruce Sawadsky?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: He is the head physician. He was the person who looked at the aircraft.

Mr. David Zimmer: Rob Smith?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't actually know who Rob Smith is.

Mr. David Zimmer: Lindsey White?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't know who Lindsey White is.

Mr. David Zimmer: Sandra Wilkie?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't know who that person is either.

Mr. David Zimmer: How do you feel about coming to the committee and giving us a list of names, some whom you know, some whom you don't know, a list you have compiled from anonymous sources, and then sitting there and saying, "These people should be fired"? Do you think that's fair?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I was brought here to say how the air ambulance can improve. People I talked to said they don't feel it can improve as long as certain people are there. I asked who those people were, because I suspected it would be asked, and I'm simply bringing those names forward.

Mr. David Zimmer: What would you think of this scenario? You're working someplace—it doesn't have to be Ornge—and the boss comes in to you and says, "I've got a document here from another employee who says you should be fired, but I can't tell you who that employee is and I really don't know much about that other employee other than they think you should be fired, so you're fired." Do you think that's fair?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't think that would be a fair situation.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay, so if it's not a fair situation, do you think it's fair that you come to us with a list of 10 names of people who should be fired that you have prepared anonymously?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Ornge is an organization where millions of dollars have gone missing. Ornge is an organization where the staff I talk to say this organization is not yet on the right track. When I ask them why, those are names they bring forward. I'm not saying what has to be done with those people. I'm saying that the people I talk to say they don't feel this organization can move forward with those people still in the organization.

Mr. David Zimmer: Yesterday, in the legislative chamber, Lisa MacLeod, a PC member from the Ottawa area, in fact quoted many of the names on the list that I've just read out to you that you've provided us with today. Did you give this list to Lisa MacLeod or the PC caucus?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't actually know who Lisa MacLeod is and I gave nothing to the PC caucus.

Mr. David Zimmer: Who else have you shared this list with?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I haven't shared the list with anyone. Of course, Trevor Harness is someone who I've talked to, so I knew that he had a list of people as well.

Mr. David Zimmer: So Trevor Harness has this list?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Trevor Harness I don't think would have that list, but I am of the understanding that he has a list.

Mr. David Zimmer: And would the names on Trevor's list be the same as the names on your list?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I would assume there would be a fair amount of overlap.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. Let me read to you from some of Trevor Harness's—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right, thank you. Trevor said he was running an undercover investigative team of about 28 members. Did you know about that investigative team?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I know that Trevor Harness has had an investigative team. I don't know anything about it.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you know that Trevor Harness was of the view that Kevin Donovan, a reporter at the Toronto Star, and Paul Bliss, a reporter at CTV—at least from Trevor Harness's point of view—were on his investigative team but they did not really know they were on his team?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I've watched Trevor Harness's testimony. I can't speak for Trevor Harness. I can say that I sent information to Kevin Donovan and to Paul Bliss. I wasn't someone who initially contacted them. After initially contacting a couple of journalists, I waited until MPPs or journalists started talking about Ornge and then I would contact them. I was not running an investigative team, but my understanding of Trevor Harness was—

Mr. David Zimmer: Were you aware that Trevor Harness was using a series of at least three aliases?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: That's what I heard when he was here. I didn't use any aliases when I talked to people.

Mr. David Zimmer: Is that my two minutes, Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have one minute left.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. How many employees at Ornge are you aware of that have filed grievances with their union about the issues at Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I honestly cannot answer that. I haven't worked for Ornge for close to three years now. I assume that the union has been busy. I can't give any kind of answer to that.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And that is pretty much your time, so we'll move on. We'll have 10-minute sessions, starting with Mr. Klees. Go ahead.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Mr. Kidd. Don't be too concerned about Mr. Zimmer's grilling over there. I think that the point that Mr. Zimmer was trying to make is that obviously there must be some credibility to this list of employees who have been identified as individuals who perhaps are less than qualified, because they show up on a number of lists. I think that's the point. So I thank you again—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I think what should be done is that they should send people to Ornge and ask the front-line staff who they are having problems with. As far as I know, there really hasn't been the kind of communication with front-line staff that they would like to have about how to move forward with the air ambulance in this province.

Mr. Frank Klees: That's what we understand, as well, and we're quite puzzled about that. What seems to be happening is that new people are brought in who have no experience in air ambulance, who are now being paid consulting fees, who have no prior knowledge or historical context of this organization. My understanding is that they're not connecting with the front-line staff. They're not asking the people who are actually delivering the service what has to be done to restore confidence in our air ambulance service. And at the end of the day, that's why we're here, to achieve that objective, quite frankly.

To that end, I'd like to ask you this: Of the people that you continue to have contact with who are paramedics and who are pilots, what are they telling you that they would like to see happen at Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The people who I talk to on a frequent basis had been quite hopeful in the early months of this year, and since then they really feel that nothing, you know, has changed and nothing will change in the long term. So they really feel that what we have is a situation where a couple of the high-level management were let go, but basically things continue to run in the same way, at least for front-line staff.

People I talk to generally say that as long as the helicopters are there—and these are helicopters that they just don't feel are in the long-term interests of this province. The fixed-wing, the Pilatus, they also don't think was an appropriate aircraft for this province, especially in the north. It's a single-engine aircraft. It's not quite as large as the previous aircraft were in the interior. So, for instance, in Sioux Lookout where you carry a lot of mothers who have just delivered, there's not enough room in the aircraft for both a patient and an incubator, which we always had room for before. Most people I talk to—I would say everyone I talk to simply believes that as long as Ornge still exists, the problems will still exist.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

You know, Mr. Moridi made reference to legislation and this whistle-blower protection clause that's in this legislation. I have it here, and I think we asked that a copy be given to you.

On page 4, under section 7.7, it refers to the whistle-blower protection. What's interesting about this piece of legislation is that it talks about providing whistle-blower protection to anyone who has disclosed information, and you see under subparagraph (a) anything that's been "disclosed to an inspector, investigator or special investigator in connection with a designated air ambulance ..." and then anything that's been "disclosed to the ministry...."

Isn't it interesting that what this whistle-blower protection excludes is anybody else? So there's no whistle-blower protection in this legislation to someone who happens to go to their MPP, someone who happens to go to a reporter, someone who happens to go perhaps even to their employer or a fellow colleague, and yet we hear that, lo and behold, we have this great whistle-blower protection in this document.

We wanted to get a select committee established here that would have had, as part of its terms of reference, very strong whistle-blower protection for people who you've referred to in your testimony, who are front-line employees who would like to come here, so that Mr. Zimmer wouldn't have to go on a fishing trip to determine or to try and undermine your credibility or that of anyone else who is coming here to say, "You know, we've talked to employees and front-line paramedics and pilots"—so that they could come themselves.

This government refused. Why did they refuse to give us that whistle-blower protection? Mr. Kidd, what we're concluding is they don't want to hear the truth. They don't want—and I think you are absolutely right. The conclusion, as you've drawn it, that employees have come to is that they're trying to minimize the political fallout. That certainly is what we're seeing.

So I just want to ask you this: Why are front-line paramedics and pilots and office workers at Ornge not willing to come here and talk to us? Why?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Well, I think there's a couple of reasons. A lot of people had tried to get a lot of information out for a lot of years. I mean, information has come out in the last year, basically, but for a lot of years people had tried to get information out, and I think a lot of them have, for good reasons, become very weary of the way they've been treated in that situation. A lot of people tried to do a lot of things, contact a lot of people. None of it ever seemed to go anywhere, and every time they did that, they felt they were putting themselves at risk and the people who were close to them, work- or relationship-wise, at risk.

People, though, have said repeatedly that we need whistle-blower protection, and it needs to be strong whistle-blower protection. I'm not a lawyer; I don't know what other whistle-blower protection is out there. But this story got out there through people going to MPPs and through the media. If the whistle-blower protection is not going to protect people when they're doing that, then I don't really know what the point is.

I mean, people could go to the Ministry of Health—the Ministry of Health had a lot of information about things that were going wrong at Ornge. The Ministry of Health had to have known what happened in the land program for years and never did anything about it. They had to have known what was going on with the finances. They had a lot of information and—

Mr. Frank Klees: Are they afraid they'll lose their job?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The people at Ornge?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Absolutely.

Mr. Frank Klees: And to your point, this whistle-blower—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: And you have to remember: As paramedics, there is nowhere else for them to go in this province. So if there's a chance of them losing their job—I mean, it's not a case of, "Well, I can come forward here and just go work for somebody else." Ornge has made sure there's no competition in this province for people who are highly trained as paramedics.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Kidd, you know, it's interesting: This whistle-blower protection has about five clauses that relate to anyone who gives the Ministry of Health information. The fact is, we have all kinds of evidence that employees brought information to the Ministry of Health at various levels. And guess what? The Ministry of Health did nothing. Apparently, you don't need whistle-blower protection if you give the Ministry of Health information, because nothing is going to happen anyway.

So the issue here—what we should have in this legislation are consequences to civil servants and managers of departments who don't respond to information that they get. That's what we need. We need accountability not only on the part of civil servants but on the part of the Minister of Health, who also didn't do anything about the information that she received. So I think—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you're on your last 30 seconds.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'll wrap up. I just want to say, Mr. Kidd, thank you for having the courage to come. It's extremely disappointing to see how you've been treated, not only by the previous management of Ornge—the fact that the current management of Ornge and the current Ministry of Health know your circumstances and the way that you have been treated, and that you have experienced financial loss as a result of that—and they leave you out there to fend for yourself—highly unfortunate.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much, Mr. Klees. We'll move on to Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I want to come back to what we were talking about before my turn ended. You touched a bit on it when you responded to Mr. Klees, that, basically, the Ministry of Health had a lot of info. They had info about the land ambulance. They had information about the financial transactions. So, what do you base those statements on?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Well, we know from information that has come out. We know there were the 145 incidents that are currently being investigated by the coroner, or have been investigated by the coroner. I assume all of those had to go through the Ministry of Health.

The Ministry of Health knew where money was supposed to be going. They were the ones who, when Ornge didn't use $8 million for the land program in 2008-09, allowed Ornge not to pay it back and to shift it wherever else they wanted to.

A lot of things had happened, and either the Ministry of Health was incapable of doing anything to stop Ornge from doing what they were doing, in which case I don't know what the Ministry of Health is there for, or they were capable of stopping what they had to have known was going on, in which case they knew something wrong was going on and did nothing when they could have.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I would say that I tend to agree with your analysis of the situation.

You've left in disgust in the fall of 2009. You were bound and determined that you were going to ring the alarm bell and let people know. One such way to reach out was through your father, who happens to be an elected official. Do you remember more details as to what time of the year—when did your father have an opportunity to talk to Malcolm Bates at the Ministry of Health, to talk to the other officials at the ministry, to talk to his MPP, who was also a member of the Liberal government?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: He would have talked to David Ramsay probably in the spring of 2009 and then probably again a year later.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So spring of 2009 and spring of 2010?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I would suggest that's probably accurate, yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: How about his conversations with some of the people at the Ministry of Health? You mentioned Malcolm Bates, you mentioned—sorry—

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Malcolm Bates would have been June or July 2011. Shedden would have been some time before that, because she directed him to Malcolm Bates, so probably not too long before that. Kevin Finnerty my father ran into at a conference sometime in the last maybe six months. He was sitting at the same table as him and started bringing up issues with Ornge. Kevin Finnerty asked my father to email him his concerns; my father did.

M^{me} France G  linas: So there was actually written correspondence where you father put in writing to Kevin Finnerty what he perceived as what was wrong with Ornge?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I would say, especially with Kevin Finnerty, the information was already coming out about Ornge. I would say that he probably just discussed my specific situation with Kevin Finnerty.

M^{me} France G  linas: When was the date again that your father met with Kevin?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: It was sometime in the last six months. I can't say for sure.

M^{me} France G  linas: After it hit the papers or before?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: This was when it was in the papers, yes.

M^{me} France G  linas: After it had hit the papers. Okay.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Can I just jump in and ask you some questions about the land ambulance?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You indicated—and this is corroborated by page 26 of the Auditor General's report—that in 2006, $9.4 million was given, and then a following $13 million was given for 2007-08. The performance agreement was amended to allow this money to be used for ambulance transfer that's by land. You indicated that the money was used for nothing. It looks like the Auditor General also found some discrepancies. What can you add to that in terms of finding out what happened to the money?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: At the end of the 2007-08 fiscal year, it would have been almost $23 million that Ornge had received for the air ambulance. They had only opened up Ottawa late in that second fiscal year. I think they had done 43 transfers or something at that time, so essentially, 43 land transfers for $23 million at that time. The next year, according to the Auditor General, they received $16.2 million. They spent $8.2 million, but in the Ministry of Finance document, Ornge claims that they spent $22.3 million that year. This is what they claimed to the government that the land service cost them in 2008-09, when according to the Auditor General they spent $8.2 million. That's $14 million that's out there in the middle of nowhere, as far as I'm concerned.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Do you have any first-hand knowledge about what was going on in terms of how many transfers were being done by land?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes. In 2009 until I left—I was working in Peterborough—there were not a lot of land transfers being done. I mean, the land transfer program should have been implemented properly, and if it was used properly, it would do a lot of transfers and would be very cost-effective.

I don't think, actually, Ornge had really spent much money at all on the land transfer program. I think they claimed they had, but in reality, I don't think they spent more. It's not an expensive program to run. There's no aircraft; the fuel's not the kind of fuel costs we have; we don't have pilots who we're paying or aircraft engineers. These bases should be extremely efficient to run. Unfortunately, I don't think we have any idea how much it should have cost for the land program to run because we have had no idea of what the real numbers actually are.

M^{me} France G  linas: Where do you figure the money went?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I have some ideas, but—

M^{me} France G  linas: Well, share them with us. I'll compare your ideas with mine.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I think that some of the money, went to, well, things that the executives were interested in. We know that $8.4 million was transferred out of Ornge into the Ornge Foundation charity, which then, I assume, was distributed to the for-profits in June 2008. That occurred at the exact time that a new Minister of Health was being put in place, and I think that Ornge, in my opinion, used that situation as an opportunity to transfer a lot of money through nefarious means, and at a time when the ministry was too busy to really pay attention to what was going on.

I think that after they delayed Windsor and only opened up Peterborough and Markham 12 hours, I think they held out the rest of the fiscal year to decide whether or not they were going to actually end up opening Windsor or opening Peterborough or Markham 24 hours, based on how much funding they were going to get for having this minimal land program. When they managed to get 70% of the original funding for 10 bases, for basically running two bases, then they knew that they had scored a lot of money. If it had been a situation where the ministry had said, "We won't give you more money unless you provide more services," then I think they would have opened those bases.

M^{me} France G  linas: Really. So the intent was really, "How much money can we get out of the government without the government asking us for accountability?" Once that money came in, they ran to the bank with it; they had scored big.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I think that is what happened. I think when you look at the original land program, there were supposed to be land bases opened fairly early. They kept on delaying land base after land base and—

M^{me} France G  linas: Can you think of a valid reason why, except that you have an opportunity to fleece the taxpayer and bring money to intents that were not, through the rumour mills—you worked in that organization. I don't know. Did a tsunami happen that I missed or something? Could there be a good reason why we did not open those land ambulances, except for the fact that they wanted the money but not to provide the service?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: My only explanation is that Ornge wanted this money. They needed money to get their international for-profit things up and running. That was a lot of money that they thought they could make. But they managed to—well, they didn't manage to, but they were attempting to start it without providing any of the capital.

As the sunshine list shows, after the Windsor base was delayed, Steve Farquhar got a $96,000 raise. He was the person who was supposed to be in charge of this. Tom Lepine, who was also supposed to be in charge of this, got a $106,000 raise. Jeff Carss and Christina Howell, who were also in charge of the land program in some manner, have both been promoted in some way since then. I think that they delivered what Ornge wanted them to deliver, which was basically nothing.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So what Ornge wanted them to deliver was for the Ministry of Health to transfer more of the taxpayers' money to Ornge so that they could pursue their for-profit venture?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I would say for-profit ventures and other things, like the money for J Smarts and other things—motorcycles, that kind of stuff, yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have 30 seconds.

M^{me} France Gélinas: As far as you're concerned, the base would have been useful, should have been open; the money was there to do this. And none of this happened, because the Ministry of Health looked the other way, continued to flow the money, and the money went to anything but robust, strong ambulance bases?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes, and this has had significant consequences. I mean, five of the patients, or the victims, for the coroners' investigations are from Windsor, three of them children. It's an area of the province that is not receiving much for services and should have been receiving services and was entitled to it, and they were never given an explanation. According to the hospital and the EMS services down there, they were never told that this base was cancelled, simply that it was delayed.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time there, so we'll move to the government and Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: How much time do I have?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have 10 minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead.

Mr. David Zimmer: Look, I want to ask you a question about the responsibilities of a citizen, the responsibilities of an Ontario citizen like you, because when I sit back and reflect on your evidence, and I sit back and I reflect on the evidence of Mr. Harness, I'm struck by two things: one, your stated concern, and Mr. Harness's stated concern, about the safety of air ambulance care for seriously injured patients in Ontario. I get the sense, on the one hand, listening to you and Mr. Harness, that that is what is motivating you: to make sure that we have a first-class air ambulance service. Is that correct?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes, that is part of the motivation.

Mr. David Zimmer: On the other hand, when we're trying to delve into this and figure out what went wrong, how we can fix it, who can give us information about what went wrong and so on, we hear from you and we hear from Mr. Harness. We get lists of anonymous people who want to tell us things, but you don't want to share those names with us. Mr. Harness doesn't want to share with us. You want to protect your sources.

So my question to you as a citizen is this: When you're faced with this choice between doing what's best for the air ambulance service, fixing it and getting to the bottom of it, and yet you don't want to share some of that confidential information and confidential names who might help us with that and you opt to protect your source, do you think that's a bit selfish of you? Why wouldn't you give us your sources' names so that this committee, all members—Conservatives, NDP, Liberal—can really find out what's going on? Because it seems to me, when push comes to shove, your first loyalty is to your sources; your second loyalty is to the good health of the people of Ontario. How do you respond to that observation?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: My position is, people have told me that if the environment is created where people feel they can come forward, then people will come forward. I don't feel that I'm in a position to put forward people's names who brought me information at risk to themselves—some people who went against their spouses to provide information because they felt that information needed to get out there, but they knew they were putting their career at risk—

Mr. David Zimmer: And you'd rather put the risk of patients using air ambulance service ahead of those private concerns of yours?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Well, as I said, provide the environment for people to come forward and people will come forward. Without the environment for people to come forward, I think what you're asking—

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Let me address that point. You know that anything that you say here in front of this committee, you've got absolute immunity from. Do you know that?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: So nothing can happen to you as a result of anything that you tell us today, and nothing can happen to any of those anonymous people on your various lists and on Mr. Harness's list. Nothing can happen to them arising out of anything that they tell us when they're sitting in that chair. Do you know that?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I know that, but I think that—

Mr. David Zimmer: You know that, do you?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. So—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Let him respond, please, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Chair, I just have an issue. It's a bit of a misstatement of immunity. Immunity doesn't work that way. If people's names are provided, their employer might do something. We can't protect against their employers doing something. If their names are presented, the public may do something. Immunity doesn't work that way. I think there's a bit of a misstatement in terms of comments about immunity.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for that clarification.

Continue with your question—

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you. I gather from your evidence that most of your anonymous names are members of a union.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Most, but not all, yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. And they've got all the protections that unions provide. In fact, you've been through a mediation and arbitration and grievance yourself.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I haven't been through the process yet, but the process is under way.

Mr. David Zimmer: You know how the system works?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: So you've got protections here at this committee. You've got protections in your workplace through your union. So given all of those protections, I don't understand why, on the one hand, you and Mr. Harness say that your principal concern is the safety of Ontarians using air ambulance, and yet when it comes to disclosing your anonymous sources, you opt to protect them.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: The situation is that we have created an entity, Ornge, which controls people's certification, which is their employer, which is their educator. Ornge controls every aspect of that, things that used to be separate. So their careers are dependent on many facets within Ornge, and they feel that their positions are at risk.

Mr. David Zimmer: And their careers trump the safety of Ontarians who are going to use—they'd rather protect their careers than help us root out the causes of the difficulties at Ornge.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Well, as I said, most of them don't have a lot of confidence that what is being done is to root out everything at Ornge. Most of them feel that what has been done is to make just enough changes that they can get by and say, "There were some small problems with Ornge. They were fixed."

Mr. David Zimmer: The report that you prepared, the 25-page-plus document you gave Mr. Klees: Are there names in that report?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Names of sources? No.

Mr. David Zimmer: I also want to confirm what you said in your evidence: that you will email to the clerk the report, or the document of some 25 pages, that you sent to Mr. Klees.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: It was probably 24 or 25 pages.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right.

Just bear with me for a second here.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have three minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Have you worked with Mr. Blum?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Mister who?

Mr. David Zimmer: Blum.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: I don't believe so.

Mr. David Zimmer: Do you know who Mr. Blum is?

Mr. Trevor Kidd: No.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Other questions? Okay. Thank you very much for coming before the committee this morning. We appreciate you taking the time to do so.

Mr. Trevor Kidd: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are recessed until 12:30.

The committee recessed from 1020 to 1232.

MS CINDY HEINZ

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I'd like to call this meeting to order and welcome our witness for this afternoon: Cynthia Heinz. Welcome.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Just to confirm, you've received a letter with information about a witness testifying before the committee?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, very well. Our clerk will have you swear an oath or an affirmation.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Ms. Heinz, do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I do.

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. William Short): Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. You have some time, about six minutes, for an opening statement if you want to go ahead and do that.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Thank you.

Good afternoon. My name is Cindy Heinz. I'm a lawyer. I was called to the bar in Ontario in 1993. For most of my career, except for eight months, I was an associate and then a partner at the international law firm Fasken Martineau DuMoulin. I was a member of the health law practice group at Fasken's and worked with hospitals, charities and other clients in the health sector.

In June 2011, I left Fasken's and went to work as general counsel at Ornge. Ornge has been a client of Fasken's since 2002. Fasken's was counsel to Sunnybrook Hospital at the time. As a result of that role, I received a call from Dr. Mazza, who was medical director of the Ontario air ambulance base hospital program. The base hospital program was operated out of Sunnybrook. Dr. Mazza needed my assistance with a number of contract issues related to the base hospital program, which is regulated under the Ontario Ambulance Act.

Commencing in 2003, Fasken's assigned me the role as billing lawyer for Ornge. This meant that I was responsible for the legal accounts rendered to Ornge, and all of the invoices were issued by me. This also meant that a majority of requests for legal work came to me from the executives at Ornge, and then a decision would be made as to whether other lawyers would do the work or I would do the work myself. This depended on the nature of the work and the expertise required, be it tax, banking, structuring, intellectual property, charities, privacy, government relations or general corporate work. The lawyer who handled the particular piece of work would be known as the responsible lawyer for that work.

In early 2007, Alfred Apps became involved in Ornge work. For the most part, he received his instructions directly from Dr. Mazza. He was the responsible lawyer for the legal work associated with the following: the financial statement consolidation; the Standard and Poor's rating; the 2009 bond transaction; the establishment of the Ornge Issuer Trust; the request for proposal, negotiation and purchase of the AgustaWestland aircraft; the request for proposal, negotiation and purchase of the Pilatus aircraft; the establishment of the Ornge Global structure; the credit lease transaction; and the briefing of the government in January 2011 regarding the structuring of the for-profit businesses.

I did not act as the first point of contact for these matters, but I did render the accounts for the work done on these matters.

On two occasions, I was seconded to Ornge to assist it with legal matters. The first secondment was in February 2005 to help with the divestment of the air ambulance program from the government. There was a great deal of legal work expected, and I was seconded to Ornge at a flat rate to minimize costs.

I spent approximately six months at Ornge before returning to Fasken's in September 2005. During that secondment, I worked with a team from Ornge and a representative from the government conducting due diligence on contracts being assigned to Ornge and assets being transferred to Ornge by the ministry. I also helped draft and negotiate the performance agreement.

The second secondment occurred in November 2009 through to June 2010. Dr. Mazza approached me about the secondment because his in-house legal counsel at the time was on sick leave. I spent approximately 15 hours a week at Ornge, providing general counsel services, primarily contract drafting.

On June 14, 2011, I started as general counsel at Ornge after I resigned from Fasken's. During my time at Ornge, I worked on various matters for the Ontario business, including the internalization of the rotor wing services, as well as the following for the international businesses: a joint venture with Synergy Group out of Brazil; the AirMed transaction; the second marketing services agreement with AgustaWestland—this was known as the joint global marketing services agreement and was between Ornge and AgustaWestland in Italy; a letter of intent with Bombardier; and the 2011 offering memorandum for potential third party investors in Ornge Global limited partnership.

I was not involved in the MNP report, which was commissioned by the Ministry of Health in 2008, nor was I involved in providing information directly to the Auditor General's office.

With regard to the transactions involving Agusta Aerospace Corp. out of Pennsylvania, I did not provide legal advice regarding the aircraft purchase agreement, dated March 27, 2008. While I did provide legal advice to Maria Renzella and others at Ornge regarding the terms of amendments 2, 3 and 4 to the aircraft purchase agreement, I was not involved in negotiating the technical or financial terms of those amendments. At all times, I believed that Ornge Issuer Trust paid fair market value for the upgrades to the helicopters.

When I was a lawyer at Fasken's, our advice was that Ornge Issuer Trust could not pay more than fair market value for any purchases from Agusta Aerospace. Management repeatedly assured us as counsel that they understood our advice and that they were paying fair market value for the upgrades.

I was also involved in providing legal advice to Ornge regarding the first marketing services agreement, the one between Agusta Aerospace and Ornge Peel. At all times, I understood that the financial terms of the agreement were negotiated at arm's length between the parties.

I have brought some documents that may assist the committee in understanding the advice that Fasken's gave relating to the agreements involving Agusta Aerospace. I have also brought copies of my statement for the committee.

I am no longer employed at either Ornge or Fasken's.

I'm happy to now take your questions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you for your statement. The NDP will have the first opportunity to ask questions. You have 20 minutes to ask questions. Who would like to go first?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I guess I'll go first.

Thank you for coming today. I guess, like everybody else, you read the papers, and I'm just wondering if you have been following what has been happening with this committee, if you have read any of the briefings or if you read the Auditor General's report.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: With respect to the Auditor General's report: I had left Ornge, and then the Auditor General report came out after that. I haven't had a chance to read the report in great detail. I did read the summary of the Auditor General's report.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. All right. In your statement you just read today into the record, you make a point of saying that your work on the second marketing agreement was different from the advice that you provided on the first marketing agreement. Can you expand a little bit as to what you had to do with both of them and how they were different and how they came to be?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: The first marketing—we're talking both marketing services agreements?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Correct.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Okay. The first marketing service agreement, I was asked to look at a few legal issues and document the deal that was negotiated between the parties. I was not involved in any of the negotiations on the first marketing services agreement. Rick Potter dealt with all of the negotiations on the technical aspects, the operations. Maria Renzella dealt with Agusta on all of the financial issues. Mr. Potter indicated what he needed operationally; she negotiated the finances of that; and then they asked me to document the negotiation that they had—the arrangements between them and Agusta.

On the second agreement: I had just started at Ornge in June. In July, Dr. Mazza and two other people had gone to Italy and came back with a draft agreement. I think what they had done was use the template for the very first one. The first agreement was with the Pennsylvania corporation. The second one was with the Italian corporation. I think the Italian corporation was the parent of the Pennsylvania corporation. They had gone to Italy and negotiated an agreement, and I think what they had done was they took the first agreement and used it as a template.

They came back and said, "The deal has been done. There are just a few legal issues that we need you to review." And one of them was what happens in the event where there's a disagreement, so arbitration. The other issue had to deal with jurisdiction. If there was some sort of a disagreement, what jurisdiction, what law, would take precedent? Would it be the Italian or would it be Ontario law? There were just a few legal issues that they wanted me to look at, and then I was involved in speaking to counsel in Italy and trying to get those resolved.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You stated that—okay, we'll take them one at a time. During the first agreement, you were looking at a few legal issues of the document, of the deal, that was done with Pennsylvania. Now that you've read the papers—when did you become aware as to where the money was coming from?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: For the first agreement?

M^{me} France Gélinas: Correct.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: For the first agreement, we always thought—and when I say "we," the lawyers at Fasken's understood that that marketing agreement was a separate, arm's-length transaction because of the advice that we had given them when they first came to us. I'd like to refer you, if I may, to tab 2 of the document, the binder, that we just handed out.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yes.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: So, when we were asked for some advice, it's important to note that at that time—and you'll see it's January 15, 2010—we were told that there were penalty payments owed to the trust because some of the aircraft were late. There were delays and they hadn't met the timelines.

In tab 1 in this binder—we had just put in certain pages for the aircraft purchase agreement. You'll see, under tab 1, that there's a provision that talks about inexcusable delay. It's paragraph 5.5. If you see there, it says what happens when there is a delay, and there's a maximum penalty of $160,000 per aircraft.

At the time, what we had understood was that there had been delays and they had penalties that were owing. There were also some credits. They had come to us and asked us if they could take that money and have AgustaWestland pay it over to the foundation so that they could use that for their other ventures.

If you see here in this email from Lynne Golding to myself—

Mr. David Zimmer: Which tab, please?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes, sorry. Tab 2.

We set out very clearly our advice to them, which was that they couldn't take the money, be it the credits or any of the penalties, and give it over to another corporation. If you do that, you're depriving the trust of value, right? That's for the trust. The bondholders had made investments into that trust. You cannot do that. You have to keep whatever you're doing completely separate.

We made it very clear to them that if they didn't want the cash, then they would have to use that money. The penalties and the credits could be used as a set-off, then, for any upgrades that they were going to receive. But we made it very clear—very clear—to them that OIT was to get the full benefit of the credits and the penalties.

If you look at Ms. Golding's email to me—and what you need to understand is what I did with this when I got it. When I got this email, it was part of the time when I was working 15 hours at Ornge. Ms. Renzella was away at school, so I sent this to my Ornge email account, and when she got back, I forwarded it to her. Then she and I sat down with this document and went through it very carefully, she and I. Then, when I didn't know if she absolutely understood what I was saying—

Mr. Frank Klees: Like us.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Pardon?

Mr. Frank Klees: Like us.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: You don't understand what I'm saying?

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm having a hard time. But go ahead.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Sorry.

Interjections.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Let the witness—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm trying to explain—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Please don't interrupt the witness.

Mr. Frank Klees: I apologize.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Go ahead.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I then printed this out and I sat down with Ms. Renzella and we went through it. Then we called Ms. Golding and I had Ms. Golding explain it again so that Ms. Renzella understood exactly what it was that we were trying to say.

I don't know if you want me to read this, but I will just point out to you, in particular, paragraph 1. It said, "It is important that the arrangements with Augusta and the foundation not deprive the trust of assets/value that it would otherwise be entitled to. If the arrangements did deprive the trust of value, and the trust in the future found itself in default to the bondholders, the bondholders could have recourse to those who authorized these transactions, among others. To be sure that the transactions do not deprive the trust of value, the following two things should occur:

“(a) the trust should receive upgrades with a minimum fair market value equal to $1,920,000 ... for which it pays nothing.”

That’s $1,920,000. Again, at that time, we thought that all 12 helicopters were going to be delayed and Agusta would be paying a $160,000 penalty. That was not the case at the time, but that was our understanding as we were writing this email.

“(b) the trust should not pay more than fair market value for the upgrades it is required to pay for (whether by paying with new cash or applying the credit notes it had already bargained for).”

“2. In order to be certain that this is the case, Ornge needs confirmation of the fair market value of the upgrades. This is likely not the list price. A proxy for fair market value may be the list price less the same discount rate that Ornge was able to negotiate when it struck the original deal.”

Then she goes on to say, “I have stated the minimum fair market value of the ‘free upgrades’ at 1.92 million rather than 400k, because I understand that if it were not for the amendments now being negotiated, Agusta would ultimately be required to pay a penalty ... of $1.92 million. So that is the amount that the trust is giving up by agreeing to enter into the” amendments. “It is true that arm’s-length parties will sometimes waive such fees without getting full value for doing so. The trust could do so in this case too if it considered it to be commercially reasonable but not where there is also a contemplation of a gift being made to the foundation or another Ornge entity.”

Then she goes on in paragraph 4.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So you know full well what they had intention to do with the money, because it becomes clear that the advice is being given because they understand that Ornge is about to take money that should be coming to the trust. They want to pursue their other venture, their international venture, so they want to bring that money under a different corporation. Your advice is, “You shouldn’t be doing this, because you are depriving the trust of value. If you are to do this, basically here are the two things that need to occur.”

So everybody knows full well what they have intention to do, and everybody knows full well that what they had intention to do actually happens, because the money does get transferred and the marketing agreement does get written up.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, that’s not what I’m saying. That’s not what we knew. What we knew was that they wanted to take this money from the upgrades—sorry, the credits and the penalties—and give it to the foundation. We said, “You cannot do that, whether it’s the foundation or any other one of those Ornge entities. You cannot take from Peter to pay Paul.”

M^{me} France Gélinas: I fully understand that you told them that they could not, but you knew what they had intention to do, because you told them, “No, you cannot do this.”

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Right.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And you also know what they actually did with your advice, which is, “Thank you for your advice but we’re going to move ahead with what we had intention to do anyway.”

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No. They told us that what they had done—they constantly assured us—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Who is “they”?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I was dealing at the time with Maria Renzella. I was told in no uncertain terms several times that she understood our advice and that she was speaking to AgustaWestland to get the fair market value of the upgrades.

This process took quite a few months, and I didn’t quite understand why it was taking so long. They were going back and forth with numbers, and she said she was working on getting the fair market values. I said, “Make sure you get them in writing. You should find out what other people are paying for these upgrades.” So at all times, we understood that they were paying fair market value for those upgrades.

M^{me} France Gélinas: And you understood this because Maria told you?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Several times. Several times.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So there is information that comes to you in the way of Maria talking to you. There is also information that comes to you—you have eyes. You can see that what they had intention to do is what actually happened. I fail to see—how come I can see this but you can’t?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: What information is coming to me?

M^{me} France Gélinas: The information you’re just telling me, that Maria fully understands your advice and your advice is, “You’re not allowed to do this.”

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Maria fully understands and she tells you that she fully understands that they’re not allowed to do this, but they go ahead and do it anyway.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: They didn’t go ahead and do it anyway. They went and they did a services agreement, which was contemplated by the original purchasing and sale agreement. They entered into what we thought was a separate, arm’s-length transaction. As long as they were paying fair market value for those upgrades, this was a separate transaction with the marketing services agreement. They were arm’s-length parties, and Agusta could pay whatever they wanted for these services.

I was told that they were going to be doing this research because they were doing this new business, they were hiring people at the time, and that Agusta wanted to enter into a new market. They were entering into a transport medicine market, and they thought that Ornge could assist them.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Sitting here, it looks like you drank the Kool-Aid. They are telling you that this is what they want to do with this money. You tell them, "You're not allowed to do this. It is illegal." They come back with this marketing agreement, which Ornge has never been into, has never provided. He hired his girlfriend to do the work and the daughter of another executive of Ornge to do the work. And you think that everything is just fine, that they are following the letter of the law?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I had no indication that anything was amiss. If I had any indication that something was amiss, I would have gone to my managing partner; I would have gone to the board. And if they still wanted to proceed, we would have withdrawn.

I can assure you that there was no way I would put my reputation, my family, at risk for this.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Do you feel that your reputation is at risk now?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Absolutely.

M^{me} France Gélinas: What went wrong?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: What went wrong? He—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Mr. Mazza?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Dr. Mazza wanted too much, too fast. He was very bright. He was a visionary. I really believe that Dr. Mazza's primary motivation was to have a world-class system in Ontario. He wanted to expand it globally. He got ahead of himself.

In the process of creating this vision, he made a lot of enemies. I think he forgot the stakeholders, and he made a lot of enemies. And within that corporate office, there was a lot of fear. It was a combination of things, and there are a lot of people who are suffering as a result.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You're one of them—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Do you want to take a couple of minutes to compose yourself? We'll take a two-minute recess.

The committee recessed from 1259 to 1302.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We're back in session. You have a minute and a half left in this round, Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I have a minute and a half left. The questions will come to me again.

You were one of the persons who got hurt in this—I will call it—fiasco at Ornge. When did you realize that your good reputation, your family, your integrity were at risk?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: It was the day after Labour Day when the CTV story came out from Paul Bliss. I had taken the day off to get my kids ready to go back to school. I had received a call to watch the television, and that was the first time I had heard about the kickbacks and all of the operational issues that were going on. I had no idea about the problems with the interiors of the aircraft. I think it was at that point in time that I got worried when I heard the interviewer—the investigation of Paul Bliss.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So when did you leave Ornge?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: It was February 16 this year.

M^{me} France Gélinas: This year. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We'll move on to the government. Who would like to ask questions here? Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you for appearing here for us today. I'm going to give you a packet of documents. Earlier this week, we received a copy of Fasken Martineau's billing statements for the legal services provided to Ornge and its related entities. Obviously when you look at that, it's clear, as you said, that you were one of the lead lawyers at Fasken's on the Ornge file right back to January 2003. You mentioned that Fasken's began acting for Ornge in 2002, but in fact the first thing that we see is what I've given you here, which is starting back in January 2003, but what you're seeing there would reflect the work that your firm billed for in 2003.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: It would appear, at least from the billings we've seen—and you indicated they might go back further, but at least from the billings that we've had access to, Fasken's was doing work on this file and you personally were doing work on this file during 2003 for certainly the nine months in 2003 prior to the October election, so during the time when Premier Eves was the Premier of Ontario, so during the Conservative government.

During that time, Tony Clement was the Minister of Health; correct?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Could you then explain to us, during this period during 2003, January through early October 2003, what position you held at Fasken's at the time?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: You mean, was I an associate or a partner? Is that what you mean?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, and particularly with respect to this file, so both of those. What position did you hold in the firm, and what position with respect to this file?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I was an associate, and I think I had just become a non-equity partner in maybe February or March of that year. It was either that year or the following year.

With respect to this file, the file had come in in 2002; it was brand new to the firm. But I think in 2003 they had switched over and opened up a new file. Instead of Sunnybrook, it was now Ontario air ambulance, and they assigned me the role of billing lawyer because I had had probably most of the contact initially with Jacob Blum and a few others at Ornge.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay, that's fine. Given your position as a new non-equity partner, you would have reported to a more senior partner?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Well, what we did is we have a group. It's our health law group.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And who headed that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Lynne Golding.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I would talk to her about things that were happening, and there were other people, other more senior people, in the group. It wasn't like reporting. We all worked together, and you always asked for—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: She would have been one of the more senior partners in the group.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you. I'd like to go back to thinking about 2003, because you're quite familiar with the file. How was Ontario's air ambulance service organized at the time? When you started to work with OAA or Ornge, whichever you want to call it, how was it organized at that time?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: My understanding from what I had learned mainly from Jacob was—he referred to it as a siloed system. There were many different entities providing the service, but there was no one real line of accountability. At that particular time, and I am going from memory, the pilots and the medics were employed by the air providers, the dispatch was employed by the ministry, the base hospital was under Sunnybrook—who am I missing? The medics, the pilots, the dispatch—I think another area of the ministry was doing all of the billings.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: So there were a number of different players involved at that time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And what becomes clear when you look at the early dockets is that Fasken's seems to be hard at work addressing the issue of building a new corporate structure. There's a lot of conversation about corporate structure for air ambulance services. Is that correct?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Because they wanted to be their own entity. They were a program or a division of Sunnybrook and Women's, so at that time, they were looking to try and determine what the best structure would be for them.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. And Fasken's is involved in that. So why would it be Fasken's that was busy sort of designing and working on what the new corporate structure should be and not the Ministry of Health?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Well, the Ministry of Health wasn't—I can't speak to that, but the Ministry of Health wasn't our client; it was this Ontario air ambulance that came to us. I think what they were trying to do was have a few options so that they could present to the ministry to get them on side and see which option they would prefer.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So they're having Fasken's explore the possibility of various corporate structures. At this point, then, are you aware of what was the preferred corporate structure that Dr. Mazza said you were trying to get to?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No. I was mainly dealing with Mr. Blum—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And how would he have expressed where you were trying to get them?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Well, it really wasn't—what we were looking at, at that point in time, was, would it be a crown? Like, there were other structures that were being looked at. Would it be a crown corporation, would it be a not-for-profit, would it be a charity? I recall having conversations with Mr. Blum about a crown corporation. What he was doing was—we were providing him with the advice, he was liaising with the ministry, and I remember him coming back and saying, "They've settled on a not-for-profit corporation."

1310

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Which leads perfectly into my next question. If you could look at the docket on page 1, dated January 14, 2003—this is actually the docket of Elena Hoffstein—and the description of the time card there is "meet with Cindy Heinz to discuss compensation of directors and funding activities of the corporation."

Firstly, do you recall what issues were in play when you were talking about director compensation? What does that refer to? What was the issue?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: The issue was if you were looking at not-for-profit or a charity, then there are certain rules about whether directors of charities could be paid for their time as directors.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And why would that be an issue?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I believe they wanted to be able to pay their directors remuneration for the time that they were going to be spending on work, on—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So at that point, were there already particular people they had in mind to appoint as directors—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: In 2003?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: —or particular compensation levels?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, I don't recall that. We're fairly new at this point. We're more or less just looking at different kinds of corporations—for-profit, not-for-profit, charity, not charity—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Are you aware that eventually, it has come out that Rainer Beltzner, who did become the chair of a non-profit corporation, was being paid $200,000 a year?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes. I heard that. I was not aware of that at the time. I knew Mr. Beltzner was being paid something—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Given your advice that he could be paid?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: What we had—it was advice that—we had done a very lengthy memo to them on director compensation. I don't have it, but it was authored by Ms. Golding and it basically said that the amount of money to be paid to directors of not-for-profits and charities should be very slim. You know, it's not a lot of money. So it would be more akin to a per diem that the local integrated health network directors would be receiving.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: And then the other part of this is the funding activities of the corporation. What on earth were they contemplating when they asked you to look very early on in the game here at funding activities for this corporation?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: As far as I can recall, they had always had in their mind that they wanted to be able to get donations from the patients and the families of patients—the patients that they helped. When Jacob had initially come to Fasken's, he talked about this model that was out west—it was the STARS model—and how everyone in Alberta, I think it was, felt that they owned this air ambulance system. There was an issue that Ontarians didn't appreciate that the government provided this service and they wanted the people of Ontario to feel proud of the service and want to donate to the service.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But as early as January 2003, Jacob and presumably Dr. Mazza were already thinking about sources of funding other than transfer payments from the government.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I believe that they had gone—that was one of the things, that they went to the ministry and said, “You know, if we do this, then we can have a foundation like a hospital foundation. We can get other revenues from the foundation, which would lessen the burden of the ministry.” That was the theory at the time.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Could you look at page 2 on a docket dated January 17? This is one of your dockets, about the middle of the page. It says, in part, “conference call with C. Mazza, J. Blum and E. Hoffstein re: structure of new corporation and utility of separate foundations....” What was that related to? Again, why, at this point, thinking about setting up separate entities?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't know if I can elaborate much more, other than that they were looking at other ways to generate revenue, to get more revenues into the program.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So, again, they were thinking about how to generate more revenue.

Same page, page 2, dated January 20; again, one of your dockets, and you've got “Meeting with Elena Hoffstein re: structure of new corporation....” What happened there? Any other—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Nothing of—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So carrying on with the same?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes, I think we were continuing on with the same conversations. I'm not recalling anything different or significant.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Okay. Back at this time you were doing this work, was there any contemplation at this time that this new corporate entity would have spinoff entities? Were you thinking that this new for-profit would somehow have spinoff entities at this point?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: In 2003? I don't think so.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Could you look at page 3, then, and January 22? This one is Lynne Golding. She references a meeting with Cindy Heinz and Guy Giorno re: the structure of spinoff entity. This sounds to me like there is a conversation about “What are the spinoff entities to this corporate structure?”

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, the spinoff entity is the spinoff from Sunnybrook, from the way I'm reading this and knowing what was transpiring at the time. It's the spinoff from Sunnybrook, the program, into a new corporation.

It's not, “We already have the corporation,” and we're looking at—we don't even have a corporation in 2003, a separate corporation yet. That Ontario air ambulance services company wasn't incorporated until 2004.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: When you look at these dockets from January 2003 up until October, what you actually do see is that Fasken has logged an incredible amount of time. There are 30 pages of dockets that I've given you there, during that time. It looks like over 600 hours were logged. Who was paying for this? It wasn't being billed to Ornge. Who were you actually billing?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: In 2003?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I think we were billing the program. I don't think we were billing Sunnybrook, per se, anymore but we were billing the program.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Who funded the program?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: The ministry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So the ministry was funding the air ambulance program at Sunnybrook to provide the air ambulance base hospital, but the money that the ministry was providing to fund the base hospital was then going on to Fasken's to do all this legal work to set up something or do something.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That's my understanding—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So the Ministry of Health was indirectly paying Fasken's.

1320

The other thing that stands out when I look at all of this is that there are a number of individuals who obviously have very high-profile Conservative connections—at this point, we've got Guy Giorno, Jacob Blum, Kevin McCarthy—and it is also quite clear from the dockets that you're not just doing contract work; you're also doing lobbying or government relations. There are all kinds of references to government relations.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I believe Mr. Giorno and Mr. McCarthy registered as lobbyists at that time, so that was my understanding: that both Mr. Giorno and Mr. McCarthy did register as lobbyists in 2003.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So the Ministry of Health thinks it's paying for air ambulance services, but part of what was going for air-ambulance-based hospital services is not only going to Fasken's to do contract work; it's also going to Fasken's to do government relations and lobbying work, to lobby the same government that is paying for this to set up a structure that Dr. Mazza wants. Do you see anything circular about this arrangement?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I see it circular the way you describe it; I can't confirm that's the way it happened. If it did happen that way, the best thing to do would be to ask somebody in the finance department at Ornge as to how they paid for those bills at that time. I don't want to speculate.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Because I must say, looking back on this, is it possible that the firm—so we've got Ms. Golding, who's obviously the wife of the Minister of Health; we've got Mr. Giorno, who used to be the chief of staff to Premier Harris. We've got this lobbying, and there seems to be this financial opportunity: “How can we create more revenue?” You’ve got to admit that this is a very suspicious-looking organization that we’re looking at here.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about 30 seconds left.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: From our understanding, it was all to improve the system. My understanding: There was a report that said that the system was fragmented; there was a coroner’s inquest that said there were problems within the system. They were trying to make the system a better system, which is what I believe the primary motivation was.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We’ll move on to the opposition: Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

Ms. Heinz, we have a serious issue here, and that relates to the total contradiction between what we’re hearing from you today with regard to your understanding of the marketing services agreement and the very clear testimony of three other witnesses before this committee. Have you read the testimonies of Mr. Rothfels and Mr. Potter?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: You will be aware that both individuals who were very intimately involved with the negotiations with Agusta related to this marketing services agreement—both were very familiar with the details and both have contradicted your testimony today. You’re aware of that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I do not agree with Mr. Potter’s testimony, nor do I agree with Mr. Rothfels’s testimony, and I’m happy to elaborate.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Let’s deal with this line-by-line, then. Mr. Rothfels testified that he became very concerned about the agreement that was taking place between Ornge and Agusta regarding the payment of $600,000 per aircraft, and he indicated that it was his understanding that Maria Renzella and yourself “were primarily responsible”—I’m actually quoting from his testimony. He states “that both Maria Renzella and Cindy Heinz were primarily responsible for carrying out the directive that they got from Chris to come up with a marketing services agreement.”

Do you agree with that statement?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No. I’ve never spoken to Dr. Mazza about this agreement until—I should say, I only spoke to Dr. Mazza about this agreement in August of 2010, when Maria was on vacation and he wanted to know why it hadn’t been signed yet. I never received any instructions. I’ve never had any conversations with Dr. Mazza about this agreement.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Rothfels goes on to say—and again I quote from his testimony, which he gave under oath: “Yes. I think I reiterated a number of times to Rick Potter, to Cindy Heinz, to Maria Renzella and to Chris Mazza that the $600,000 weight upgrade was a fictional charge and that we, Ornge, should not be paying it.” Do you disagree with that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Mr. Potter—I don’t know, number one, what Mr. Potter told Maria—

Mr. Frank Klees: Oh, this is Mr. Rothfels I’m quoting.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Sorry. I don’t know what Mr. Rothfels told Ms. Renzella or Mr. Potter. Mr. Rothfels was in my office talking about various things and mentioned the marketing services agreement, and I—

Mr. Frank Klees: What did he say specifically about the marketing services agreement?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: He said, “You and Maria are being set up to take the fall,” and I said, “What in the world are you talking about? Those agreements are separate from the upgrades, and I’ve been assured that they are paying fair market value for the upgrades.” I then went to Ms. Renzella, very upset, and said, “What is he talking about?” She said she didn’t know, and I said, “Are you paying fair market value for those upgrades?” “Yes.” “Did you receive that in writing from Agusta?” “Yes.” “Are you confident that you’re receiving all the upgrades for fair market value?” “Yes.”

Shortly thereafter, I think Mr. Rothfels left the company, and I had no opportunity to speak to him again. That was the only thing that Mr. Rothfels said. I took it straight to management to find out, and again I was assured that they understood our advice and that they weren’t paying any more for the upgrades. He didn’t tie it, at that time or any time, to the weight upgrade.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you’re admitting that the amount related to the marketing services agreement was tied directly to the issue of the upgrades; is that right?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: But you just said—you just referred to the upgrades.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I referred to the upgrades because I went—what else could he possibly be talking about?

Mr. Frank Klees: He could be talking about what you were talking about in your earlier testimony. You made no reference in your statement to upgrades at all. You gave us a scenario that had to do with helicopters being delivered late—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: But there were—sir, there were upgrades within that.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, no. Fine. I’m just simply saying that you now are agreeing that the amount that was related to this marketing services agreement had to do with the upgrades as it has been discussed by Mr. Potter as well as Mr. Rothfels; is that right?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, that’s not what I’m saying.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Let’s move on to Mr. Potter, then. Mr. Potter testified here. With reference to the amount that was to be paid through this marketing agreement, he said, and I quote again from Hansard, “I said”—and this is Rick Potter advising Dr. Mazza. “I said, ‘There is no value in this. This is paper.’ There was no material change to the aircraft. And he said, ‘Well, there are other things to be considered,’ or something to that effect. I’m not quoting; I’m paraphrasing, okay? And that was it.”

1330

I said to Mr. Potter, "And bottom line is, he directed that Ornge should pay that additional amount—"and Mr. Potter said, "Not to me, he didn't, sir." My response was, "Who would he have directed?" Mr. Potter's response was, "I know that Maria Renzella came in shortly thereafter and said, 'There has to be a value to this.' I said, 'There's absolutely none,' and I told her the same story."

He goes on to then talk about the fact that you, as the lawyer, were given direction to draft up the documentation related to what would end up being a marketing services agreement.

Again, I quote Mr. Potter from Hansard, "I talked to Cynthia Heinz and I said, 'Look, this is nuts. This is not a secret.'" He's referring to the fact that there is no value. He goes on to say, "What I had done when I came back was share it with our committee," that is, his negotiating committee, "because we had a list of ongoing challenges with Agusta we were trying to solve and say, 'We can strike this off the list, this off the list and this off the list.' There were any number of people who were well aware of that. In fact, I had reported to the executive committee what had happened that time. I said, 'This doesn't make any sense to me.'"

So that was Mr. Potter's testimony. He also advised us that as the in-house lawyer, you're someone who, as a matter of rule, would draft agreements. We were told that all of the drafts of this marketing services agreement were drafted by you. Is that correct?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: We're also told that there were some early drafts of the agreement that were discarded. Do you have copies of those earlier agreements?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't have any copies of the agreements.

Mr. Frank Klees: Would they be on file at Ornge? Would those records have been kept?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: They would be on file at Ornge; maybe Fasken's would have them. I don't have them.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. I would like us to see if we can get, Mr. Chair, the first drafts of the marketing services agreement that may be in possession—that were drafted by Ms. Heinz.

The reason I'm very interested in those agreements is that we have been told that the reason those early agreements were discarded is that they were very transparent in terms of what the money flow was and that there really wasn't any value to them. Do you have any recollection of that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: None.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: But if you don't mind, I would like to address a few things that you said, first about Mr. Rothfels and then about Mr. Potter, if I may.

Mr. Rothfels also said in his testimony that you did not have to pay for the weight upgrade. The weight upgrade was already included in the aircraft purchase agreement. Now, if you look at the pages from the aircraft purchase agreement—it's under tab 1—there are a number of schedules. The most important schedule is schedule 1; it's toward the back. Page 5, at the back, says, "Additional equipment list, optional equipment." You can peruse through schedule 1 and that basically—it's entitled "Helicopter configuration and weight analysis."

There is nothing in schedule 1 that talks about a weight upgrade. And if you look—

Mr. Frank Klees: Could I just—I don't mean to interrupt you. We will have time to come back to this again—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: But I think these are very important points, sir.

Mr. Frank Klees: And I will let you make them. I just have to deal with a matter of business here.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Please let the witness answer the question.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: So when I drafted amendment 3 to add the weight upgrade—thank you, Mr. Chair. When I added the weight upgrade, if you look at tab 3, number 2 on amendment 3, it says to delete the life rafts on that schedule 1, and substitute the following: "MTOW 6800KG Upgrade". That was the addition of the weight upgrade. It had not been provided for in the agreement of purchase and sale. It was not in there. I added that.

With respect to Mr. Potter's recollection, Mr. Potter and I were drafting the amendments to the agreements. I was drafting amendment 3, and we met, because he came to me—we were going through the technical requirements of that amendment—and said to me, "You know, I negotiated a better deal."

I said, "What do you mean?"

He said, "Well, I got a lower price."

I said, "Well, do you have that in writing? Is there anything in writing, is there any documentation, that can corroborate that?"

He said, "No."

I went to Ms. Renzella and I said, "Maria, Potter says he negotiated a better deal. Can you look into that?"

She came back and said, "There's no other deal."

For the next four months, I continued to send amendments to Mr. Potter. Mr. Potter commented on every single draft of the amendment. He never mentioned another thing to me after that point. In tab 3, you will see emails where Mr. Potter signed off on that final agreement, as did Ms. Renzella and the other people at AgustaWestland. So Mr. Potter's memory, I think, is failing in this instance.

Mr. Frank Klees: I think we have—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have about five and a half minutes.

Mr. Frank Klees: I think we have a lot of memories that are failing.

Mr. Chair, I'd like to deal with a matter of business, if I could.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have the floor.

Mr. Frank Klees: Today, during question period at the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, it was evident that the member for Willowdale engaged in a case of witness tampering. As such, I feel that we should report this issue immediately to the House.

Parliamentary authority says that “Witnesses appearing before committees enjoy the same freedom of speech and protection from arrest and molestation as do members of Parliament.”

Mr. Zimmer’s questioning could not have infringed on this principle more. Mr. Zimmer said this: “When you’re faced with this choice between doing what’s best for the air ambulance service, fixing it and getting to the bottom of it, and yet you don’t want to share some of that confidential information and confidential names who might help us with that and you opt to protect your source, do you think that’s a bit selfish of you?”

He continued, Mr. Chair, by stating: “And their careers trump the safety of Ontarians ... they’d rather protect their careers than help us root out the causes of the difficulties at Ornge.”

Mr. Chair, it’s evident that Mr. Zimmer’s questioning is an attempt to intimidate Mr. Kidd, in an effort to deter the witness, and any further witnesses, from testifying.

O’Brien and Bosc state: “Tampering with a witness or in any way attempting to deter a witness from giving evidence may constitute a breach of parliamentary privilege. Similarly, any interference with or threats against witnesses who have already testified may be treated as a breach of privilege by the House.”

O’Brien and Bosc also state:

“In a ruling given on February 20, 1984, the Speaker stated:

“A threat emanating from any government department or public corporation to withhold information or co-operation from a member of Parliament would undoubtedly hinder that member in the fulfilment of his or her parliamentary duties and therefore constitute a breach of privilege.”

O’Brien and Bosc also cite a case from 1992, where “a witness who had testified before a subcommittee was advised by a crown corporation employee that the issue of her testimony was being referred to the corporation’s legal department. The witness informed one of the committee members who raised a question of privilege in the House.” Speaker Fraser ruled that the matter was a prima facie case of contempt.

When the Committee on House Management reported back to the House on the question of privilege, they reaffirmed that “the protection of a witness is a fundamental aspect of the privilege that extends to parliamentary proceedings and those persons who participate in them.”

Mr. David Zimmer: Point of order, Chair—

Mr. Frank Klees: Australian parliamentary guidelines further clarify—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees has the floor.

Mr. Frank Klees: —that “section 12(1) of the Parliamentary Privileges Act 1987 ... prohibits a person from using various means, including threat, intimidation or inducement, to influence another person in respect of evidence to be given before a House or committee.”

Furthermore, former MP and lawyer Derek Lee states that “obstructing or tampering with a witness is a breach of privilege of the House or of its committees who have the delegated authority.”

These tactics fit a pattern of fear that has been exemplified by witnesses who have already been in front of the public accounts committee. This begs the question: What other witnesses have been threatened or tampered with or intimidated?

I conclude with a ruling by former Speaker of the House of Commons, the Honourable Jeanne Sauvé. Speaker Sauvé ruled, “When new ways are found to interfere with our proceedings, so too will the House, in appropriate cases, be able to find that a contempt of the House has occurred.”

Mr. Chair, I’m prepared to move an appropriate motion for the committee to report on this matter back to the Speaker of the Legislature. Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees, at this point, I will cut you off.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Point of order, Chair: You previously ruled that we couldn’t bring forward motions.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I have the floor, and I would like to inform the committee that the Chair has no authority to rule that a breach of privilege or contempt has occurred. The role of the Chair in such instances is to determine whether the matter raised does, in fact, touch on privilege and is not a point of order, a grievance or a matter of debate.

This morning’s questioning—witnesses come before this committee. The members have an opportunity to ask questions. I did follow the questions very carefully. Mr. Zimmer was asking questions, and the witness was providing answers. I followed it closely, and I saw nothing wrong with that. So we shall move on now, please. I have made my ruling. You have 30 seconds left, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, in my 30 seconds, Chair, I will simply say this: I can tell you that if witnesses who are observing these proceedings see the kind of conduct and the kind of attitude that Mr. Zimmer portrays here, I would not want to be a witness coming forward. I think it’s unconscionable behaviour, and I would simply hope that Mr. Zimmer will take note.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. We shall move on to the NDP. Who would like to ask questions? Mr. Singh.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Thank you very much.

Good afternoon, Ms. Heinz. I want to ask you some questions surrounding any connections or any conversations you had with the ministry in your involvement, both as outsourced counsel with Fasken’s and when you were with Ornge directly as in-house counsel. Did you have any meetings or interaction with ministry individuals?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: The only contact I had with ministry people were the people from the legal branch. That was when we were working on the performance agreement with Mr. Springman. He had a few other people from his branch working on that.

I then had occasion, over the years, to speak to Mr. Springman about questions about the performance agreement. I think he had a junior, Mr. Bill Georgas. I might have spoken to Bill a couple of times about the performance agreement but nobody else from the ministry.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. And would these individuals from the legal department have been with the Ministry of the Attorney General, then?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, that doesn't ring a bell.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You think they were with the Ministry of Health, but the legal—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: The legal services branch of the Ministry of Health.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: —branch of the Ministry of Health.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: There was a meeting with somebody from the Ministry of the Attorney General back in December of 2009. There was a meeting with Mel Springman at our firm, Bill Georgas and someone by the name of Kevin McGuinness from the Ministry of the Attorney General, I believe. They wanted to speak to us about the bond transaction and wanted to learn more about the bond transaction, and Mr. Apps explained it to them.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Just to break down some of those meetings: In the meeting with—you indicated Mr. Springman, and he had a junior, Mr. Georgas?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes, at that particular meeting.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: At that particular meeting. And those were individuals from the legal services from the government side, at least. If you're not sure exactly what division you think it was, you think it was the legal services branch of the Ministry of Health—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That's right.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: But it may have been just from the government side in general.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm pretty sure they said it was the legal services branch of the ministry, though.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's fair. And who was present on your end in terms of on Ornge's behalf?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: At that particular meeting?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: At that particular meeting, yes.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Alfred Apps was there, myself, Maria Renzella—someone by the name of Scott. He was a government relations person from Ornge.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: From the Ornge side. When was that meeting, that meeting specifically with Mr. Springman and Mr. Georgas?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That was sometime in December of 2009.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: It was 2009? In that meeting, can you recall what the contents of—specifically you said it was related to the performance agreement, but what about the performance—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Not in 2009.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: No? Okay.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: In 2009 it was to deal with the bond transaction.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Was it limited to the bond transaction, or was there anything else?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm pretty sure it was limited to the bond transaction.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When did you have meetings regarding the performance agreement?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That was at the very beginning, when we were actually drafting and negotiating the performance agreement. Once we had drafted the performance agreement and it had been signed, over the course of the years Mr. Springman and I had occasion to talk on the phone, but not often. It would be reflected in the dockets if you have the dockets.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Those conversations that were infrequent but with Mr. Springman: What were they about?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: He had a few questions about what we had done on a couple of the provisions. In one particular case he thought that there was a typo and that the intent of the parties was—I can't exactly remember right now, but it was X when he thought what we really intended was Y, so we were trying to figure out if we could maybe amend that just to make it clear.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Were you amenable to Mr. Springman—if in that conversation he said, "Listen, I'd like it to be amended," were you more than willing to have that amended or work on having that amended?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes. I took his concerns to the people at Ornge. It wasn't a significant issue. I don't recall anyone having a problem with it. I remember then speaking to Lynne Golding at Fasken to—I asked her about her recollection. We thought that actually in this particular case Mr. Springman was right and that we should amend it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Now, just in general, as a general practice, for this specific meeting, who arranged the meetings in general, the meetings with Mr. Springman or the meeting with Mr. Springman and Mr. Georgas? Who was, I guess, the—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Mr. Springman initiated those calls to me when he had questions about the performance agreement. He initiated the meeting in December 2009 in the bond transaction. He wanted to have a better understanding and grasp of it.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did Mr. Apps ever set up any of the meetings?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: With the ministry?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: With the ministry—that you were aware of.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: With the legal branch people?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's right.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: I'm going to switch gears a little bit and talk about salary disclosure issues. In terms of salary disclosure, when you were in-house counsel at Ornge, were you asked to give your opinions on whether a salary should be disclosed, or when it should be disclosed or if it should be disclosed?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: When I started, it was in June 2011. Their practice was that anybody who was employed outside the company, Ornge proper, didn't disclose their salaries. So I was an employee of Ornge Global Corporate Services, which was formerly Peel, so my salary didn't get disclosed. The issue came about in December, when I think—I don't know how it came about, but they wanted—we were asked if we would agree to publicly disclose our salaries.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Who asked you to do that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I think it came from the ministry.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And when was that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: In December. It was when all the media stories started to take place. I drafted up consents, and we all agreed to disclose our salaries, except Dr. Mazza didn't want to consent to his.

The difficulty was that the rest of the executive team wanted to disclose their salaries. We knew that the Auditor General's report was coming out and it had an aggregate number for executive salaries. We were concerned that if we all disclosed our salaries, then people would be able to do the math and determine what Dr. Mazza's salary was. Therefore, indirectly we would be disclosing his salary, and we were concerned that because we didn't have his consent, we were putting the corporation at risk.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. What about when you were not in-house counsel, but when you were working as counsel for Fasken's, working for Ornge? At that point were you ever asked to give an opinion on whether or not salaries should be disclosed?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I believe, when I was talking to Ms. Sandals back in about 2003 when we were looking at the structuring, when we were looking at for-profit, not-for-profit, charity, those sorts of things, we were also—I believe that was one element that they had asked us to look into: If it's this corporation, do you have to disclose your salary and all those sorts of things. I had gotten Guy Giorno to come in and look and give some advice on that. My recollection is, his advice was the same as it was in 2007, except he didn't say "disclose," because there was no corporation at the time. I believe he said, "Technically, you do not have to disclose if an employee that was employed by an entity other than Ornge proper wouldn't have to disclose, but a regulation could be made very quickly to change that."

That was back in 2003. Then in 2007, when the entities were—we had incorporated Ornge, then in 2003 they gave a more detailed opinion, I believe, Mr. Giorno and Ms. Golding, and I believe Ms. Golding testified as to what their advice was.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: She did. That's right. At some point, Mr. Potter suggested that you had given him the opinion that he shouldn't or he was exempt from disclosing his salary.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Did you give him that opinion?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I had thought, when I read that—the only time that Mr. Potter and I had that conversation was in December when we were all agreeing to consent, but we had received advice from the privacy lawyers at Fasken's and Hicks Morley. Hicks Morley did all of the labour work for Ornge. We had received privacy advice from them that we had to be careful, given the Auditor General's report was supposed to come out with the aggregate number. We had to be careful. If we all disclosed, we may be indirectly disclosing Dr. Mazza's salary. That was the only time Mr. Potter and I had that conversation.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: That's fine. You indicated that you were employed with—correct me, if I'm wrong—Ornge Global Rotor. What was your involvement with that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I wasn't employed by Ornge Global Rotor. I was employed by Ornge Global Corporate Services Inc.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Ornge Global Rotor—and I don't know if it still exists today, but that was the company that was supposed to run the rotor wing operation. That was the company that applied for an operating certificate to run the operation—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Sorry to interrupt you.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That's okay.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And what was your connection to that company?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Ornge Global Rotor?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes. Were you the administrator or the registered—your name would have appeared on the registered office or the registered head or the administrator?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Are you looking at incorporating documents?

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes. Oftentimes, if you're incorporating a company, it's more expedient for the lawyer to be noted as the incorporating director, and then the incorporating director would resign once the board was appointed, so it's quite usual. It's typical and it's just done for expedience.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And then similarly for Ornge Global Brazil holdings?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That's exactly what happened. I was the incorporating director and then I was to resign when the new board came on, but nothing ever happened with that company.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: You indicated at one point in your testimony that if you had any concern regarding the helicopters in terms of the payments and the overpayments, you would have brought them to the board, if you had had any misgivings, but you were clarified along the way that there was nothing to be worried about. Why would you have brought it to the board?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I had two instances where I did go to the board.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Yes?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: What had happened was, we had come back from Christmas holiday and I had gotten a letter that was dated December 2009. It was a letter addressed to Mr. Potter from someone at AgustaWestland. I was given the letter—I don't know if that letter is before this committee—and what the letter did was set out a prior agreement on what was going to be paid for the weight upgrades and all the upgrades that we ended up paying for.

When I looked at that, I took it immediately to the board chair, Barry Pickford, and gave them the letter. And then—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: When was that, roughly?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That was in January of this year when I saw the letter. The letter had been over two years old.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: If you will recall, I asked Mr. Potter if he had anything in writing to corroborate that he had negotiated a better deal. He said no.

When I took that letter to Mr. Potter, I said to him, "Rick, do you recognize this?" and he said, "Yes. I forgot about that letter." Then I said, "I asked you if you had anything like this. You said no." "I forgot about it." He said, "I actually lost my copy," but there have been a number of other people in that office, apparently—which I had learned later—who had a copy of that letter.

The first time it was brought to my attention was January 2012, right after we got back from Christmas holidays. At that point, I took it to the board. I then gave it to the interim vice-president, Ron McKerlie, and it went from there.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In terms of any misgivings or any problems that you had or if you had any concerns, you said that you'd go to the board. Here's an example: You went to the board. What I want to get at is, do you feel there was an obligation to inform the board of what was going on at Ornge or if there were any concerns that you had at Ornge?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Absolutely. Typically what I would have done: If I had any concerns, I would have gone to my managing partner first and chatted about that. If we did think that there was an issue, then we would have gone to the board. Depending on how they would react, then we would either continue on, if there was a reasonable explanation, or we would have withdrawn from the file if we didn't agree with what they were doing.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Was there any obligation on your part or did you see any obligation to inform the ministry if there were any concerns or any problems that arose?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I didn't see an obligation on my part. My part was to the client, the board—the board, which had a fiduciary obligation to the company.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: In terms of stakeholders in Ornge, would you agree with me that the primary stakeholder was the Ontario government?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: We've seen the debacle that Ornge is. Along the way, the Minister of Health has indicated that the performance agreement didn't provide enough oversight mechanisms and tools. We've heard many deputants who have come forward and said that the performance agreement had a slew of mechanisms in place that allowed the ministry to do various things to oversee Ornge, to provide the proper oversight.

Can you comment on the performance agreement as someone who was working with Fasken's and as someone who is in-house counsel? How did that performance agreement work, and did you think that there were sufficient oversight tools available?

1400

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I haven't reviewed the performance agreement in quite some time, but as far as I recall, there were audit—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Mechanisms or requirements.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Mechanisms, yes, for the ministry to audit their books and records. I think there was a whole schedule at the back with reports that had to be filed with the ministry. There were—Mr. Springman wanted a provision in there that if they were unhappy with the way the dispatch centre was being run, then they could basically come in and take it over.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And when did Mr. Springman want that? You recall that one particular clause—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Oh, it was—it went on for pages.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And how did that come to your attention? Was that something that was amended and put in later on or was it always—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Oh, no, no, no. It was in there from the beginning.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: From the beginning.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. At any point in time were you ever contacted by the ministry to work on amending anything in the performance agreement?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: There were two later amendments. But I wasn't contacted by the ministry. I was contacted by Mr. Blum and—

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Is that Mr. Jacob Blum?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: He had asked me to work on a couple of amendments. One was to provide, I think it was, the critical care land transfer, and then they were doing something in Thunder Bay, and they were getting more funding. So we had to amend the agreements.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. There's been some suggestion that it would have been very difficult to amend the performance agreement, that there would have been a lot of stonewalling that would have been faced—if you can describe how that performance agreement amendment went. Were there any sort of problems or any hiccups along the way?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: It took some time. You know, we went back and forth with drafts and whatnot. It doesn't happen overnight. You go through drafts. Everybody comments. The lawyers put their two cents in, the clients, so I can't—I'd be speculating to say how long it took, but it wasn't a quick process.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: Okay. I'm just going to actually read this one comment to you: The committee has been told that Ornge was given an option by Lynne Golding and Guy Giorno critical of using the network of for-profits to hide salaries—as you've indicated, Lynne Golding and Guy Giorno were critical of it—and a different opinion from Alfred Apps was suggesting that this was appropriate.

Do you have a personal opinion on those two different views?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Well, I think they resolved their views. When I got the two conflicting memos, I called a meeting with Ms. Golding and Mr. Apps—I don't think Ms. Golding recalled that, but I think she clarified that in her letter to the committee. It was determined that Ms. Golding had the better view, and so Mr. Apps called the client and told them that there was this obviously conflicting view. They said, "Don't worry. We don't need the opinion in any event." So I don't think he ever finalized that memo. It remained in draft.

Mr. Jagmeet Singh: And your personal opinion on that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Ms. Golding had the better view.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): And you've used up your time.

Now, we'll move to the government. Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. Thank you. If we could go back to 2003 and if we, I guess, think from 2003 forward, we know from the work of the Auditor General and from prior testimony that eventually Fasken's billed Ornge over $9 million for the work that they were doing, and given what we've been talking about, clearly that included lobbying, or government relations, in lawyer-speak.

If you look at page 3 in an entry that's dated January 22 from Mr. Giorno, he references an "Office conference with C. Heinz and L. Golding to discuss government relations implications of structural and charitable status issues." And then if you go on down to page 5, another Guy Giorno docket—this one's dated February 11, 2003—it says: "Follow up with client official re status of phase II of government relations plan..." Then you go down to the bottom of page 5, and we see that Kevin McCarthy has been brought on the file and it becomes clear with his billings that they are also government-relations-related billings.

So, just looking at those few docket entries as representative of dozens, you've got three well-connected Conservatives—you've got the Minister of Health's wife, Ms. Golding; you've got the Premier's former chief of staff, Mr. Giorno; you've got Mr. McCarthy, who eventually became Minister Flaherty's current chief of staff—all working on government relations at Ministry of Health expense. Agreed? That's what the dockets say, correct?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't think—as I can say, I don't think Ms. Golding was working on government relations.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Ahh.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: She was not working on government relations.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: She's just in on the meetings directing them.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, I don't think she was directing them. I can't really recall, but I don't recall her being—I don't recall exactly what she was doing, but I—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So when Mr. Giorno billed for a meeting to discuss government relations that she was at, Mr. Giorno was incorrect in his billing?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Where was that? Sorry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: That's the one on page 3 about four or five down from the top. Mr. Giorno: "Office conference with C. Heinz and L. Golding to discuss government relations implications of structural and charitable status issues." That seems to me pretty clear.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Well, she wasn't involved—actively involved. As I said, Mr. Giorno and Mr. McCarthy had registered as lobbyists.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: She was just sort of there in the background.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: At this point, I think she was helping us try to figure out the structure, so it was probably more just an update or a briefing meeting. But I don't recall her—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm just reading what Mr. Giorno wrote down.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I know, but—I mean, I think you'd have to ask them, but I don't recall her being actively involved in that part of it.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So she's at least in meetings discussing this, and we've heard that Minister Clement effectively recused himself from the air ambulance file because his wife was counsel and there would be a conflict of interest. We've got the Ministry of Health funding the air ambulance, funding Fasken's—wife is senior partner on the file. This is a circle that is not really quite kosher.

If you turn to page 7 of the docket, again an entry from Mr. Giorno dated February 17, in which he has "telephone calls to minister's office re meeting with minister." And we go down a couple of entries to February 18. Mr. Giorno: "Discussion with ministry official re pre-briefing in advance of Thursday meeting with minister," and below that we then get an entry from Kevin McCarthy on the 18th, same day, that says, "Researched and drafted briefing materials for meeting with Minister Clement." So is it in fact true that Minister Clement was meeting with Fasken's lawyers, including Guy Giorno, regarding the establishment of what eventually becomes Ornge?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I can't dispute what is in here. I don't recall that happening, but I don't know. So I don't think I'm the person to ask.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If it is as reflected in the docket, do you think it's appropriate that we've got Minister Clement meeting with his wife's firm—Mr. Giorno—to discuss what's obviously a big account for his wife's firm?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I just do not recall that happening. I'm sorry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So Ms. Golding never spoke to you about these meetings?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't recall that ever happening.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If we look at the docket on page 8; this is dated February 25, and it's actually your docket, it says, "telephone conversation with C. Mazza re: letters patent and status of meetings with the minister." You've got a "telephone conversation with G. Giorno re: same." There seems to be a conversation going on here between Mr. Giorno and yourself and Mr. Mazza about meetings with the minister. Am I to read this, then, to say that there's another meeting with Minister Clement that Dr. Mazza was at?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm sorry; I don't know. I don't know.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: You've got no recollection around any of these conversations about the minister or meetings that are being set up with the minister. I do recognize that it wasn't you that was setting up the meetings; it's clear from the record that it's Mr. Giorno and Kevin McCarthy that are setting up the meetings. But you have no recollection of these discussions that you're docketed as being participating in?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, I don't recall that. I'm sorry.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Let's look at another issue here. If we go down to page 17, the Red Tape Commission pops up in several entries. Lots of us remember the Red Tape Commission, which was advertised as getting the government out of the way of business. Mr. Justice O'Connor had some pretty negative things to say about the Red Tape Commission in relationship to Walkerton, but at any rate.

If you look at page 17, there's an entry dated April 28 from Mr. Giorno. He's preparing for and attending at meetings with ministry officials and preparing for and attending a meeting with two Red Tape Commission officials; he's booking a Red Tape Commission presentation. Then, at page 18, we go on, on April 30—again, a Guy Giorno entry—a "telephone conference with client vice-president re: legislative reform and meeting with Red Tape Commission."

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm sorry, Ms. Sandals, which date are you on?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm on April 30 on page 18, Guy Giorno, about half a dozen entries down, the middle of his docket entry, timeline narrative.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: "Telephone conversation with client vice-president"?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: "Re: legislative reform and meeting with Red Tape Commission." I'm just wondering, if this is a simple matter of separating off the base hospital into a stand-alone corporation, how on earth this involves legislative change and the Red Tape Commission. This seems to have blown up out of all proportion to the simple matter of, "Let's separate things."

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That was the difficulty. It wasn't a separate matter, and you needed legislative reform in order for them to separate. The Ambulance Act had a certain definition at the time for "base hospital program." It was sort of a circular definition, but it was a hospital that has been, I believe, appointed by the minister to operate a base hospital program. Don't quote me on that, but it was something like that.

Ornge, or the previous entity, was never going to be a hospital. So you needed to get an amendment to the Ambulance Act in order to provide either a hospital or another entity, appointed by the ministry or the Minister of Health, to operate an air ambulance program. I believe what had happened: In 2005, they were waiting for that legislative change to occur.

Now when you read the Ambulance Act, the definition of "base hospital program" had been amended, I believe, to say, "a hospital or a not-for-profit corporation or a non-share capital corporation that has been appointed by the minister." When the minister actually, in 2005, appointed Ontario Air Ambulance Services Co. as the base hospital, it put in there that they had all of the powers of a base hospital under the Ambulance Act. It wasn't a simple matter. It did require a legislative change, and legislative change was—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I accept it needed legislative change—you're the lawyer—but what I don't get is why you need a whole lot of lobbyists being paid by the Ministry of Health, instead of Sunnybrook having a conversation with the Ministry of Health. This seems an awfully circular way of figuring out what you need to do.

I'm going to turn it over to my colleague.

Mr. David Zimmer: And what time do I have, Chair?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have seven and a half minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Okay. Thank you.

Are you familiar with this business that we've heard about, the $1.2 million in loans to Dr. Mazza, which included a $500,000 loan by Ornge Peel for assisting with the purchase of a home?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: You're asking what my involvement was?

Mr. David Zimmer: No. Are you aware of that issue?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Am I aware that loans were made?

Mr. David Zimmer: Yes.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes, I am.

Mr. David Zimmer: At page 921 of the account book, there's an entry—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: She doesn't have that page.

Mr. David Zimmer: One of the dockets: It's 24873713, a docket by Lynne Golding. It says, "meeting with Bruce re: Foundation and JSmart (financial statements) and re: 500k loan (not reflected as being)"—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Excuse me. Would you like a copy of that?

Mr. David Zimmer: I'm sorry.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes, please.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We'll get a copy made. Do you have an extra one there?

Interjections.

Mr. David Zimmer: It's the entry at 24873713.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Okay.

Mr. David Zimmer: "Meeting with Bruce re: Foundation and JSmart (financial statements) and re: 500k loan (not reflected as being owed to GP); discussion with CH and email exchange with Ron." Question: I gather CH is you?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes. I assume so.

Mr. David Zimmer: So what was that meeting about?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Do we have a date? Well, it has to be this year, because I assume Ron is Ron McKerlie.

Mr. David Zimmer: If you don't, that's fine.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm not certain, but Ms. Golding assisted with the windup of all of these for-profit corporations. I'm assuming this docket is more recent because she helped the board wind them all down. She was probably just trying to explain to the board what needed to happen in order to wind down.

Mr. David Zimmer: All right. Thank you. Did you have any involvement with the giving of advice on the $1.2-million loan, including the $500,000, to Dr. Mazza for homes and that sort of stuff?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: There were two loans in 2010—there was one in 2010. I wasn't with Ornge at the time, and I had gotten a call from Ms. Renzella saying that the board wanted to give a loan to Dr. Mazza—an employee loan—and wanted to take out a mortgage. They had apparently called Hicks Morley because it was an employment matter, and Hicks is their labour counsel. Hicks said, "If it's a mortgage involved, you'd better call Fasken's." So I called somebody from our real estate department, who took care of preparing the loan documents and the mortgage.

Mr. David Zimmer: Did you offer any advice on the propriety of that loan?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, I didn't.

Mr. David Zimmer: We've heard in the Auditor General's report and from the Auditor General that he was getting a lot of pushback when he went to Ornge and said, "I'd like to see this; I'd like to see that. I'd like to see salaries. I'd like various statements from subsidiary companies on all of that." Did you offer any advice on the propriety of—I'll use the expression—pushing back against the Auditor General on his requests for this information?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, I never tried—I never offered any advice on the propriety. When they asked me what they could give, it was our view—and not just my view—that they were entitled to see all of the documents that related to Ornge and its subsidiaries. I think the one thing that was in question, in my view, from what I can recall, was the shareholders' agreement for that Ornge Global Management Inc. company. There was personal and confidential information in there of the shareholders, and so we didn't think that it was appropriate to give that out.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have two minutes.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you. So Ms. Golding, Mr. Giorno and Mr. McCarthy were billing Ornge from the period January 2003 to October 2003. Our tally comes to about 600 hours of work that they did. Can you, as the responsible partner, the billing partner—at that time, what was Ms. Golding's billing rate? Roughly. What do you think it might have been at that time?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: In 2003? I have no idea.

Mr. David Zimmer: Could you get that information for us?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I can't because I'm no longer with Fasken's, but I'm sure if you spoke to the managing director of Fasken's, he would give you that information. I understand they're trying to be co-operative.

Mr. David Zimmer: Just as an experienced lawyer—you were there in 2003; you know their level of experience and their age and their call-to-the-bar year and so on. Recognizing that it may be corrected when we hear from Fasken's, what would you guess their billing rate was? In what range?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Are you taking about Ms. Golding or Mr. Giorno or—

Mr. David Zimmer: All three. Each of them. I mean, I know what a beginning lawyer bills at, and you know; and I know what a lawyer with 15 and 20 years' experience bills at. So where in that range were these three?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: It really depends. Mr. Giorno was new to the firm; he didn't sort of—

Mr. David Zimmer: What year were you called to the bar?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: In 1993.

Mr. David Zimmer: What was your billing rate in 2003?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I think I brought mine; mine was $380.

Mr. David Zimmer: Were Ms. Golding, Mr. Giorno and Mr. McCarthy senior to you in terms of call to the bar?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Ms. Golding was. I don't know about Mr. Giorno and Mr. McCarthy.

Mr. David Zimmer: But anyway, a 10-year lawyer is $400 an hour.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You are out of time.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you, Chair.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So we'll move to the opposition now. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

Can I just ask you—you tabled the aircraft purchase agreement. How did you come—you're no longer at Ornge, right?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm no longer at Ornge and—

Mr. Frank Klees: Or Fasken's?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, I'm not there anymore either.

Mr. Frank Klees: How was it that you were able to provide us with a copy of this?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Well, in preparing for my testimony today, I asked Fasken's if I could review some of the relevant documents that I thought you may ask me about today.

Mr. Frank Klees: I see. Did you spend any time preparing with anyone at Fasken's for this hearing?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I spent time going through the documents.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you have discussions with anyone at Fasken's about what you would testify here?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: What I would testify? We talked about what I could—what questions you may—what you might be interested in so that I knew what I could help you with.

Mr. Frank Klees: Was your statement reviewed by anyone at Fasken's? The statement that you prepared?

Interjections.

Mr. Frank Klees: The statement that you gave here. Did you review that with anyone at Fasken's?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Who?

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Stephen Hastings from our communications department.

Mr. Frank Klees: And why would you do that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: To make sure that it was accurate. I'm not at Fasken's anymore. I can't speak for Fasken's anymore. I wanted to make sure that my recollection was the same as Fasken's recollection.

Mr. Frank Klees: So who was it that you reviewed this with?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Stephen Hastings.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what is his role at Fasken's?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: He's the communications person.

Mr. Frank Klees: Is he a lawyer?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm not sure.

Mr. Frank Klees: How long has he been at Fasken's?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't know.

Interjections.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): If you can speak up a bit, please, Mr. Klees. People are having difficulty hearing you.

Mr. Frank Klees: I just want to make sure that you're listening.

You're a lawyer. We weren't, quite frankly, interested in having a communications piece here. We wanted some facts. We assumed that we would get those from you. I find it quite interesting that in your preparation—I could understand if you sat down with Lynne Golding. I could understand if you sat down with—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Well, I did sit down with Lynne.

Mr. Frank Klees: You did with her, as well?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And who else?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: It was Lynne Golding, Lisa Marcuzzi from—

Mr. Frank Klees: And what is she?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: She's a lawyer. She worked on the file, as well. There were a number of people working on this file all through the period of time, and if I was speaking on behalf of Fasken's, I wanted to make sure that my recollection was the same as theirs, because they haven't had a chance to come and speak about this particular matter.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you had an opportunity to collaborate your presentation here with a number of people: the communications person at Fasken's—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: We didn't collaborate. I wanted to make sure that what I was saying in there, they didn't disagree with.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what if they did disagree with it?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I can't speak for Fasken's anymore. At the time that this was going on, I was at Fasken's, so I wanted to make sure that I was making an accurate reflection of my recollection and not saying anything incorrect. There were so many of us involved in the file, I wanted to ensure that I was giving you the proper information.

Mr. Frank Klees: You understand what's puzzling to me.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Not particularly.

Mr. Frank Klees: You have to go to Fasken's and speak with their communications person and some other—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: He was just one of the people.

Mr. Frank Klees: But why was he there?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: It was Lynne, it was Lisa—and we went through it.

Mr. Frank Klees: So there were just the three people there? There was Lynne Golding—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: And their counsel was there.

Mr. Frank Klees: And their counsel?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: Explain that.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Fasken's counsel.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who was that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Gavin MacKenzie.

Mr. Frank Klees: This is getting even more interesting. You had a meeting with three individuals from Fasken's, two of them lawyers, one of them a communications person, and they each had Fasken's counsel attending with them. Is that right? That's what you're saying?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: They didn't each have counsel, no.

Mr. Frank Klees: So there was one counsel for the three of them?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was the purpose of them having counsel there? What was the counsel's role in this discussion?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: He just listened, and he reviewed the statement, as well.

Mr. Frank Klees: So the product that we have here, that you presented, is the result of vetting that took place; it's the result of a collaboration between counsel to Fasken, two lawyers at Fasken and a communications person at Fasken. I'm assuming that, with all of that effort, there isn't anything in your statement that would have contradicted any other testimony from Fasken.

1430

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Number one, I'm under oath. Everything in this statement is accurate and completely correct. Number two, I don't believe anybody from Fasken's has given testimony on the things that I thought you would be particularly interested in knowing and that our story had not been heard. We had been told one thing and we were under the impression that our advice had been followed. What instead has been happening is, people have come before this committee and have said certain things that were not true. So it was very important for us to ensure that our advice that we actually gave—and this should be very helpful to you, Mr. Klees, because this is the truth.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, in that case, I'd like the rest of it. You've given us a partial document.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: A partial document of what?

Mr. Frank Klees: The aircraft purchase agreement certainly isn't all here, is it?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, but I had assumed that you had the entire agreement.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, we don't.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I took excerpts of what I thought you would be most interested in and that would help you understand the issues at the time when we were first asked about this. But I had understood that you had the full agreement.

Mr. Frank Klees: No. We don't.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I thought you had referred to it.

Mr. Frank Klees: So could you arrange to get that for us, please?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I can't speak to Fasken's, but again, I know they're co-operative and they would be happy to give you that agreement.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, I appreciate that.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I assume they would, so you just have to ask the managing partner.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: You're welcome.

Mr. Frank Klees: As the counsel for Ornge, you are intimately familiar, no doubt, with all of the incorporation documents for the various companies. Is that right?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I didn't incorporate all of them; a lot of the documents were incorporated by clerks. Just referring to a corporate chart here—I don't know if you all have seen it, but—

Mr. Frank Klees: No, we'd love to get a copy of that. Clerks may have done the documentation, but you oversaw, so you're familiar with all of the companies—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm not familiar with all of the companies. Various people had incorporated them. I was more involved in the incorporation of the earlier companies. Ornge, for example: I had prepared the letters patent, the objects and the bylaws—

Mr. Frank Klees: Let's talk about Ornge, then. That'll narrow it down. Do you recall how the board of directors was appointed?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: When I was at Ornge doing the secondment in 2005, I had drafted the objects up and I had drafted the bylaws. I was given a number of bios of the prospective board members. I think Dr. Mazza had been interviewing people for the positions and had a list of prospective board members. I then took those bios, the draft bylaws and the draft objects, and someone—I can't remember if it was me or Mr. Blum—sent them to the ministry for approval.

Mr. Frank Klees: So the ministry approved the board of directors?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't know if they were asking for approval, per se, but they didn't raise any objection to any of the people who were on the board.

Mr. Frank Klees: But the board was vetted by the minister's office.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That's my recollection.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you know if any nominations were made from the minister's office for that board of directors?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No. The bylaws didn't allow for that. It was a not-for-profit company. There were no ministry appointees, if that's what you're asking. There weren't any.

Mr. Frank Klees: No, no. I'm just asking if there were any nominations from the minister's office.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. So you got the names back. What happened then? How did I become a member of the board of directors? It was kind of a self-baptism, was it?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, that's not quite how it works. I think there was a company that had been started, it was Ontario Air Ambulance Services Co., and there was an interim board that was comprised of members of Sunnybrook. Once the performance agreement was signed, and once there was no objection by the ministry of the proposed board members, then that board resigned and elected the new people. In their capacities as members, they elected those new people as members of the board of directors.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Do you recall—I'm assuming that those board meetings took place in a very organized way. Who kept the minutes for those board meetings?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: You know, I don't remember who kept the earlier minutes. In about, I want to say 2008 or something, they decided they needed a corporate secretary, but I think they had various executive assistants take the minutes of those meetings.

Mr. Frank Klees: Who became the corporate secretary?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: There were two. The first one was Melinda Moore, and the second one was, unfortunately, just terminated in January. Her name was Lynne Taylor.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. I assume that as the in-house counsel you kept the books or the records of those minutes. Is that right?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No. That's the job of the corporate secretary.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you recall, was directors' liability insurance ever applied for or put in place for the directors?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: And what was the liability limit of that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Pardon me?

Mr. Frank Klees: What was the liability limit under that policy?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I think it went—it morphed; I shouldn't say it morphed. Initially, I think that there was D&O insurance under one—it was like an umbrella policy from HIROC, the Healthcare Insurance Reciprocal of Canada. But then I think, as various things were going and the organization grew, they got their D&O insurance from—I want to say Marsh. I think the limit changed and it increased as we were getting into this structure, but I can't recall the exact—

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay, but it was in place?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: It was in place.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you recall, were bylaws ever passed to provide indemnification of the directors—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: The actual bylaw of Ornge provides for indemnification of directors in the absence of certain activities.

Mr. Frank Klees: And do you recall, was that the case for all of the several companies, then, that were subsequently incorporated?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I just recall there being—there could have been, but I only know of D&O insurance for Ornge, Ornge Peel and that Ornge Global Inc. entity. There could have been. They might have. I'm thinking that they might have had an umbrella policy where it covered all of the organizations, but I just remember, before I left the organization, having this conversation with the new board that has just been appointed as to D&O insurance, and we arranged for Marsh to come in and speak to the new board about D&O insurance.

Mr. Frank Klees: Given the several questionable financial transactions that took place, your opinion in terms of potential liability for directors of these companies—if you were a director of any of these companies, would that be of concern to you?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I mean, you're assuming that—there's an investigation going on. They're going to make the determination of what's occurred. It really depends on what they find out. I would, before all of this happened—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I just caution, let's not get talking too much about investigations going on, please.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes. I just—Mr. Klees, I'm not a director, I can't really speak to it.

Mr. Frank Klees: Have you been a shareholder of any of the several organizations?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: You were never kind of let into the inner circle?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Are you glad about that now?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Pardon?

Mr. Frank Klees: Are you pleased about that now?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: My life has been through enough change.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'd like to—how much time do I have?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): You have three minutes and 15 seconds.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay. Don Guy pulled back his last invoice. In all the time that you've been in business, as a professional, have you ever experienced a consultant withdrawing a bill for consulting services?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't think I knew that he had done that.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, he did that. Do you have any sense of why he might have done that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, I don't. I don't know Mr. Guy, I've never met Mr. Guy, I've had no interaction with Mr. Guy.

Mr. Frank Klees: It was just around the time when there was some media activity around Ornge and, for some reason, Mr. Guy decided to withdraw his invoice. I just thought maybe you would know why that took place.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, I wasn't even aware of that retainer of Mr. Guy. I had heard about it, actually, through someone at Fasken's asking me about an invoice that they had received. But I didn't even know at the time that he had been retained.

Mr. Frank Klees: Do you know who introduced Alfred Apps to Ornge?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That was me.

Mr. Frank Klees: That was you?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes. It was back in 2007 when Maria Renzella came to me and said, "Dr. Mazza wants to buy aircraft. He doesn't have the money. How do we do that?" I went to the firm and I looked for an aircraft financing expert. I sent out a broadcast memo to see if there was any expertise within the firm. One gentleman came forward, but he said that he didn't really seem to have the kind of expertise we were looking for, so I started looking through the firm website to see if there was anybody in the firm who could help. He was noted as a structured finance expert, and I called him. Prior to that time, I didn't know him; we hadn't worked together. I called him and I said, "This is what this client would like to do. Do you think you can help them?" And he got very excited and he said, "Absolutely."

So that was me, but I didn't know him before then.

Mr. Frank Klees: So you made his day; you gave him a call, and look what happened.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Look what happened.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you very much.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you. You have five minutes each for one more round.

We'll move to the NDP. Ms. Gélinas.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Quickly. I have read some of the papers that you have written in Health Law in Canada. Some of them, actually—I was quite happy when you wrote about Bill 179: A Missed Opportunity for Collaborative Care in Ontario. I also saw that you did this with your articling students. Anyway, that's something that I was interested in; I was pleased to read that.

I also saw that you co-authored a paper with Mr. Steeve, and I was wondering, what is your relationship with Jamison Steeve?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Jamison: I believe he was a young associate. That was probably back in 2003-04. I think that was when the Romanow report came out. We worked on a publication together, but Jamison left the firm years ago. I haven't seen him nor have I spoken to him since he left the firm.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay, so you worked with him on that paper and then you never saw him again?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: He was a member of our health law group, but I haven't talked to him; I haven't seen him. He's a very nice man.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So when was the last time you saw or talked to Jamison?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Probably when he left the firm.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So that's about 2003?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Well, was it 2003? If that's when he left the firm, then it would be 2003.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay. So, coming back to the workings with Mr. Apps, Mr. Apps was the expert for structure, a financial expert, and he went on to design this corporate structure for Ornge. In your view, why was such a complex structure created?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: My understanding is there was a need for most of these companies. When we started this, there was just Ornge, and then there was Ornge Peel and there was the foundation and J Smarts—I think there was an Ornge Co. in there somewhere. It was a relatively straightforward structure. At the time when they were looking to purchase the aircraft and do it by way of a bond, Mr. Apps had said that investors don't want to invest in subsidiaries of charities and that you normally do this through a partnership or a trust. That's when OIT was formed. It went from there. Then, when there was the for-profit business, they were looking for an entity or a structure, which was a limited partnership, that would be investible, that would be attractive to investors. I don't know much about this, but right there, with a limited partnership, you have three entities. You have the actual partnership, and then you have your limited partner and your general partner. So you already have three there.

M^{me} France Gélinas: So the structure is there, as complex as it is. Some people say that it evolved under the guidance of Mr. Apps to be what it was before it got all rolled back. None of them ever did anything to be in business. Sure, there was an issue, offering money came. The only business transaction that we saw was really the real estate, where the not-for-profit pays the for-profit more than what the for-profit bought the real estate for. Then there was the marketing service agreement where, again, the not-for-profit has given a whole bunch of money that comes back to the for-profit to go someplace else.

You were there. You saw all that. There was never a red flag raised?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: It seemed to me, at the time, that there was a need for these companies, and when you're trying to get investors in—that's not my area of expertise. I'm not a structured finance expert. That's completely beyond my area of expertise. I wasn't involved in the credit lease transaction. I don't know a lot about the credit lease transaction. I had a hard time following it and understanding it. I wasn't involved in that. But insofar as I was aware, every company had its purpose.

M^{me} France Gélinas: You've worked—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time here. We'll move to the government. You have five minutes. Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you, Chair. Five minutes for the Liberal side, right? Yes.

This morning you gave what I thought was a very moving statement, this sort of general overview about what went wrong, how this all happened. You spoke about some characteristics of Dr. Mazza's personality and ambition and so forth. I was quite taken by that. You're a lawyer of 21 years' experience, obviously very skilled and talented at what you do. You've been through some difficult pressures in the last months or so. As you did this morning—offered that general overview of what the problem was with Dr. Mazza and his ambition and his personality—in hindsight, what lessons have you learned from this exercise as a lawyer and what advice would you offer to a younger lawyer about to start his or her career in a position something like yours who might fall into a similar sort of scenario like Ornge in the next couple of years? What lessons did you learn? What advice would you offer to that younger lawyer who wants to avoid this mess?

1450

Ms. Cindy Heinz: There are always lessons to be learned and there is definitely room for improvement. Looking back, I think we could have done a better job at persuading him to slow down, to move more deliberately in what he was doing in trying to expand the business. At the time, I think we all thought that we were doing what we could to try and slow him down, but sometimes they took our advice and sometimes they didn't. I guess the lesson learned is, we probably should have tried to do more to persuade him to move more slowly and more deliberately.

Mr. David Zimmer: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. As we think about all the money that flowed through your firm, when you get right down to it, why were Mr. Giorno and Mr. McCarthy essentially spending so much government money to lobby their own Harris/Eves government?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't know, Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: How can you possibly justify that tens of thousands of dollars from the Ontario Ministry of Health are being handed over to Fasken's so that Giorno, McCarthy and Golding can effectively take government money to turn around and lobby the government when they've all got such close ties to the government?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't know. They tried to do it the proper way. They registered for lobbying. They knew that legislative reform was needed. That could take some time. That's all I can tell you.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So if you're properly registered, that makes it okay to take money from the government and to, particularly in the case of Ms. Golding—and I know you've said that she wasn't always directly involved, but she was certainly involved in some of the conversations—take money from the Ministry of Health when her husband is the Minister of Health, cycle that through the law firm and have that pop up at the other end of a very lucrative contract? It seems a very unusual relationship.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: As I said, I'm not sure how all of that was paid for, and I don't want to speculate. I think that would better be answered by someone in finance.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I think we can be sure it wasn't coming out of Dr. Mazza's personal pocket, so it had to be coming out of ministry funding.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We are out of time. We have five minutes left for the opposition. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Thank you. We left off with Alf Apps. I'd like to just get back to him. Obviously your introduction meant a great deal to Mr. Apps. He must have been very grateful to you for that. No doubt you became good friends. He—

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Did you say we've become good friends?

Mr. Frank Klees: I would think so.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: We're not close, Mr. Apps and I.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Apps did a lot of contract work, I'm assuming, with all of these various details of his work. Subsequently, there would have been a number of meetings that he had with government ministers' offices and so on to explain things and so on. Do you recall Mr. Apps making arrangements for presentations to ministers and so on?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I understood, just because I go through the bills, that he was arranging meetings with people from the government.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: When we discussed it, he said, "And by the way, I don't have to register because I am"—I just want to get the words right—"because I am not asking the government for anything. I'm only providing them with information, and I'm telling them a good-news story."

Mr. Frank Klees: And when did you have that conversation with him?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Well, that would have been in the fall of 2010, when these meetings and things were being arranged.

Mr. Frank Klees: Did you find it strange that he would go out of his way to say, "I don't have to register as a lobbyist"?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No. I mean, I didn't—I don't know, Mr. Klees, whether I had asked him, "Well, have you registered?" I know that he was looking into registering. I think we had had that conversation before, and then he just followed up to say, "I don't have to because, in my view, I'm not asking for anything. I'm just telling a good-news story."

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Apps was very politically active, and I understand that on occasion he would host little fundraising receptions at the firm. Did you ever attend any of those?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No.

Mr. Frank Klees: But you knew that they were taking place? You would hear about them?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I don't know about—is there a specific one? I'm not sure—

Mr. Frank Klees: Are you aware that he did that?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: That he had—

Mr. Frank Klees: That he held fundraising receptions there?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Yes, vaguely. Vaguely.

Mr. Frank Klees: Okay.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I'm not a political person.

Mr. Frank Klees: You're not a partisan-type person.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: No, I'm not.

Mr. Frank Klees: In retrospect, is there anything on a specific case that was going on that you would have advised the board of directors about, about which you had concern?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: If I would have had an inkling, believe me, I would have gone to my managing partner. As I said, I would have gone to the board.

The toll this has had, no client is worth it. If there was any indication, I would have followed my obligations and responsibilities of the law society, and I would have done what I needed to do, right?

Mr. Frank Klees: You would have.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I would have.

Mr. Frank Klees: There were occasions when you didn't?

Ms. Cindy Heinz: I would have, if I had an inkling.

Mr. Frank Klees: I see. Thank you.

Ms. Cindy Heinz: Thank you.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Thank you very much for coming before the committee this afternoon.

The committee is adjourned.

The committee adjourned at 1500.

*The committee met at 0816 in room 151.*SPECIAL REPORT, AUDITOR GENERAL:
ORNGE AIR AMBULANCE
AND RELATED SERVICES

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): It being 8:15, I call this meeting to order.

We wanted to start early this morning because we have a couple of motions to deal with, so we wanted to get those looked after before our first witness this morning.

I believe we have a couple of motions from Mr. Klees, so if you want to start—and I would just note, Mr. Klees, that you did have one motion to do with calling a witness. I just want to note that you filed that but it's not necessary, because we'll just add it to the list of witnesses to come before the committee.

Mr. Frank Klees: Yes, I heard.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: But with regard to this witness, Will had said that he had a bunch of requests and he was going to explain who these people were and why they wanted to appear. We had asked for more information on who they were. Do you remember that email exchange?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes. This was one of the witnesses who had volunteered to come before the committee.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, and I think France and I had—

Mr. Frank Klees: No, this was not.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Oh, this was not.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Wade is one who I called and asked if he would come. This was not one of the volunteers. But I agree with you: We did say to Will that what we would want, as a committee, is a list of those names and some background on them so that we can discuss what order of priority we would place on calling them.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Of course, Will is away with strep throat today, but Katch may be able to fill us in.

It should also be noted—I'm sure everyone did note—that Will and his wife gave birth to a baby girl.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Oh, wonderful. When did that happen?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So I don't know whether the strep throat is the result of sleepless nights since the birth, or what.

Interjections.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Friday? My goodness!

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Congratulations to Will and his wife. Audrey, I believe, is the name of their daughter.

Anyway, back to business—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So this Bruce Wade, we're just adding to the list, then?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, that's just added to the list, and there were some witnesses who had asked to come before the committee. I believe Will was going to try to get some background information on those people for us.

Go ahead, Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: All right. I'll deal with the documents request; actually, I have two of them.

I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, herein "the committee," under standing order 110(b), stating that "each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things," directs the Minister of Health and Minister of Finance as well as the Ministry of Health and Ministry of Finance to produce, within a fortnight, all correspondence, in any form, electronic or otherwise, that occurred between January 1, 2007, and June 8, 2012, that mentions the following words, terms and names: "Mazza," "Lepine," "Ornge," "Alfred Apps," "Don Guy," "air ambulance."

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Any discussion? All in favour? Carried.

Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: I move that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, pursuant to standing order 110(b), whereby "each committee shall have power to send for persons, papers and things," requests a copy of any and all correspondence including letters and/or emails from/to and between Malcolm Bates, director of the emergency health services branch, and the following people: Ruth Hawkins, of the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care; Mary Kardos Burton, former ADM, acute services division; Patricia Li, ADM, direct services division; and Fred Rusk, former staff member at EHS branch; or any other staff member at the EHS branch, in which the reference is made to Ornge, or gives direction concerning the role that the EHS branch is to have concerning Ornge, or relates to allowing Dr. Mazza to do whatever he determines appropriate at Ornge and not to obstruct him during the period October 1, 2005, and the last day of February 2007, or makes any reference to how the EHS branch and its staff is to monitor, oversee, hold accountable or review the performance of Ornge, and that said correspondence be delivered to the clerk of the public accounts committee no later than Tuesday, June 19, 2012.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Discussion? Yes, Mr. Zimmer.

Mr. David Zimmer: Unlike the first motion that Mr. Klees did, which was quite specific—it's easy to search the records because you punch in the names "Mazza," "Lepine," "Ornge," "Apps," "Guy" and "ambulance" and it spits out the documents. I have a concern that whoever this document goes to, the motion to go and search for these documents—a lot of it is pretty subjective. Somebody is going to have to make some discretionary calls when they search the records. How will the person or persons who have to act on this motion—there's a lot of general stuff they're going to have to sort out. I'm just concerned about how that's all going to play out.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): I believe Mr. Bisson has a comment.

Mr. Gilles Bisson: I don't think there's much in the way of the discretion. The standing orders are clear that the committee has a right to request papers, and if the names and the information that are contained in those records, as per the motion, have to be provided, there's no discretion.

Mr. David Zimmer: No, no. I recognize the committee can order up the documents. I'm the same. When this motion or the order goes to the folks at Ornge, there could be some difficulty in interpreting just what documents they should pull out of the files and send us. I don't want anybody getting in trouble at that end saying they—they're going to have trouble—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Executing. Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: Chair, there is a very specific reason as to why I kept it as general as it is, and the reason is the very offensive letter that we all received from the Deputy Minister of Health last evening. I'll have much more to say about that letter, in which it's very clear that this Ministry of Health has no intention of co-operating with this committee in terms of producing documentation.

So, to Mr. Zimmer and to the rest of the committee, I just say, I think that the message has to go to the ministry that we want the documentation that's being requested, and if it's a pile, I'm happy to go through it, but that's the reason for the generality. I am very concerned about this letter from the deputy minister.

I just noticed, Mr. Chair, that there was a typo here on this last motion.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

Mr. Frank Klees: It should read "February 2012," not 2007. I'm not sure how that date got missed.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): So it should read "the period October 1, 2005, and the last day of February 2012."

Mr. Frank Klees: That's right.

Mr. David Zimmer: Are we on Hansard?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes.

Mr. David Zimmer: I just wanted to get it on Hansard that I foresee there may be a problem in figuring out just what documents are necessary to comply with the motion. I anticipate it's going to be passed.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Bisson.

Mr. Gilles Bisson: For Hansard, I want to be very clear. The information they have provided is pretty specific within the motion, and it says any of the "words, terms and names" come up under Mazza, Lepine, Ornge, Alfred Apps or—

Interjections.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We passed that one.

Mr. Gilles Bisson: Oh, the other one. Sorry. Same idea, the same thing; the motion is quite explicit. It says that if that information comes up, you're to produce it. There's no discretion as to which document, if it has two words or two sentences or two paragraphs about that particular subject, no matter, they must provide all the information.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: What I was actually going to ask is, how is that substantively different than the motion that we passed on, I think, May 30?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Klees.

Mr. Frank Klees: It's substantively different because there are a number of additional names referenced there. Quite frankly, I'm willing to give the branch and the ministry one more opportunity to comply with this request.

For the record, Mr. Chair, I believe that the Ministry of Health is obstructing this committee in our request for documentation. I will have some evidence of that and we'll deal with that at another time, but I can tell you that the Deputy Minister of Health has some explaining to do with regard to this letter that we received. I'd just like to suggest that the motion that I've put forward has been worded as it is for a very specific reason.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Any other discussion? All in favour? Opposed? Carried.

We have another motion from Ms. Sandals.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes, and I don't want you to accuse me of filibustering, so I'm wondering, Clerk, if it's possible—is there some way we can make reference in the motion to the attached list instead of reading this all into the record?

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Yes, there is. I'll get our clerk, Katch, to explain how you might do that.

The Clerk Pro Tem (Mr. Katch Koch): You can move the motion. If a member of the committee asks that it be dispensed, then I will capture it in the minutes—

Mrs. Liz Sandals: So if I start into the first two or three, you will say—I invite you all to say, "Dispense," please.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Count on me, Liz. I'll be there for you.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you.

Mr. Frank Klees: Can we do that before you start?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: No, you need to let me get into about two lines of the list and then say, “Dispense,” and we’ll all be happier.

That, pursuant to standing order 110(b) of the standing orders of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, the Standing Committee on Public Accounts request a copy of any document referred to, directly or indirectly, in the following time dockets from the report entitled “Time Docket Report Raw Data Between 02/01/2000 and 05/28/2012,” produced by Lynne Golding, partner, Fasken Martineau DuMoulin LLP, and that the documents be produced by no later than July 13, 2012:

Timecard index 1558553, dated 01/06/2003—

Mr. Gilles Bisson: Dispense.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Thank you.

0830

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Any discussion on this motion? All in favour? Yes, Ms. Gélinas?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I just want to be sure we’re asking for any document referred to in those, but they would not necessarily be documents by Lynne Golding, because sometimes she refers to documents that have nothing to do with her.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: If I may, what we got was the billings for Fasken related to Ornge, and it’s quite specific. This is not all the billings for that period, which is why we’ve got this lengthy list, but they are billings in which references are made to documents: a document was prepared, a document was discussed or a document was sent, something like that. So in each of these billings, there’s obviously some docket which is, in the round-about way we discussed, being produced at public expense.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Perfect. So it’s all-encompassing?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): All in favour? Carried.

Very well. Legislative research had asked last week for an opportunity to update members, so this would be a good time.

Mr. Ray McLellan: Just a few minutes of your time, if I could: We’ve discussed a bit in subcommittee that my role, leg research’s role, has been somewhat different on this committee, looking at Liz and Mr. Zimmer and maybe Mr. Bisson, than the way we’ve approached reports on this committee over the last couple of decades. Nevertheless, we’re into new territory here and I have to be as helpful as I can to get us through this new experience.

In subcommittee, going back to a couple of weeks ago, I thought a bit about it and I thought to myself, probably the most useful thing that I could produce at the end of this spring session as of today, before we go into the summer session, is to look at the documentation, essentially to go through Hansard. I think Mr. Klees had made reference to the importance of doing cross-referencing to Hansard pages, specifically, but to go through kind of issue by issue for each witness. It’s a long process, because we’re dealing with, I don’t know, 50 or 60 individuals, but to go through by individual and issue by issue, and essentially take the committee’s issue and the response from the witness as to their position so we can go through item by item by item.

Another option is to kind of take all of those responses by issue, if it’s the bond, and kind of parcel those up. But at least, it seems to me that at the end of the day we would be able to go through that 50- or 60-page document, or you would, and it would help us get to the next stage, and the next stage may or may not be a report, and at that point, and through Liz, we’d start to talk about recommendations and say, “Leg research should construct a report essentially addressing these recommendations.” This would be an interim document and I think it would tend to shape out who said what about what given issue, if it’s the bond or if it’s aircraft safety or if it’s purchases or what have you. Any ideas on that to make it more useful would be helpful to me.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): We now have four people who want to speak. Mr. Klees, you were the first with your hand up.

Mr. Frank Klees: I like that direction. I think it makes good sense. I’d ask for one other component to that, though, if you could, and that is also in those sections the subject matter that’s being addressed, whether it’s oversight, whether it’s—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Marketing agreement.

Mr. Frank Klees: —the marketing agreement, or whether it’s paramedics or so on, that you also reference the Auditor General’s report and the pages of the Auditor General’s report under those particular headings, because at the end of the day, what we want to do, obviously, is tie that all together, so that would be very helpful.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Ms. Sandals?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Actually, I was going to make the same suggestion, just to be clear that we’re going to do this by issue. The transcript of an individual witness we can get from Hansard. It’s when you organize it by issue that it becomes useful to us, because then we’ve got all the conversation about one issue in one place. That re-organization is where your work becomes really, really useful. I agree that we should start with the auditor’s commentary on whatever that issue is.

Mr. Ray McLellan: Yes, and I think, with respect to the auditor’s report, just to make it somewhat manageable so it’s not too long, it should probably make reference specifically to recommendations. I wouldn’t want to put too much of Mr. McCarter’s information in, but at least we’d have the reference and the section, and maybe just focus on the recommendation, if that would be adequate. I don’t know.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Or could you at least reference where he has raised the issue?

Mr. Ray McLellan: Yes.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Like Augusta: If I recall, the auditor raised the issue of this controversy over how much they should be paid for and the fact that this seemed to match up with the marketing agreement. I'm not sure you made any recommendation, but it would be useful to know that the auditor has noted this as an issue, even if he didn't have a specific recommendation.

Mr. Jim McCarter: There would certainly be issues in the report where we wouldn't necessarily have a recommendation. A good example would be salaries, where we raised the issue of salaries with the ministry back in September, but by the time we issued the report, it had been addressed.

I would agree with Ms. Sandals. There could be some issues where we did comment in the report and we may not have had a specific recommendation, but it might be worthwhile for the committee to just notice, in legislative research's report, that the auditor expressed concern about whatever it was.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Exactly.

Mr. Ray McLellan: And that could be cross-referenced, so that you know what page to go back to and what section to go back to.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes. Give us a couple of sentences and the cross-reference back to his report, and then the cross-references to Hansard and the witnesses.

Mr. Ray McLellan: Okay. As I was kind of working through it in my mind, the other thing that I think is helpful is to provide details, as we would in any other report. You would know that we provide a list of constructive initiatives undertaken by the auditee with respect to Mr. McCarter's report. I think that to specifically say, in the front of the report—and they did a reasonably good job of listing all the steps they've taken. I think it's important to kind of balance that off, before we get into the testimony section.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Sounds good.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Mr. Zimmer, you had a comment?

Mr. David Zimmer: My points have been covered.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Gélinas?

M^{me} France Gélinas: I'm just throwing it out there, and you certainly don't have to go with this. I think it would be useful—we did that in the select committee on mental health—to do a report that is what we heard. It would not necessarily show everything that the ministry has done. I think it could be done in the final report, but because this is such an extensive number of witnesses coming forward, everything stayed, as what has been stated this morning. Some of the headers from the auditor's report are very appropriate as to "Here is what we've heard" and do the reference and do all of this.

On some of the elements, we heard a number of witnesses all going in the same direction, and then a number of witnesses telling us exactly the opposite. So you can certainly regroup this under the headings. But the document you would produce for the end of this session would be strictly focused on witness testimonies of what we've heard. This would be a document that would be produced, which everybody could read, that would be separate from, at the end of all this, "Here are our recommendations," which would be more focused on the recommendations that the auditor has done.

It's just for ease of use that I'm putting this out. I realize that we've never functioned this way at public accounts, but I think it has value.

Mr. Ray McLellan: Maybe I can just respond to that. With respect to the testimony from Ornge and from the ministry, you're suggesting that that particular response would be something that would be dealt with later on in a report.

M^{me} France Gélinas: The testimony of the ministry, certainly, because they came and testified, would be included.

Mr. Ray McLellan: That's what I was thinking, yes.

M^{me} France Gélinas: But the written response that usually happens—the auditor made recommendations, submitted them to the ministry; the ministry responds to it.

Mr. Ray McLellan: Right.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I think this will come in our final report, but what we would do in the interim will be focused on what we've heard.

Mr. Ray McLellan: And I'm in agreement with that and that's what I understand this document to do. It's essentially to collect up those responses to issues identified by this committee. So I think we're on the same wave—

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Ray McLellan: But my concern was, I thought we weren't clear with respect to testimony received from the deputy minister. When I was speaking with Ms. Sandals, I was saying that that should be part of this background.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yes. Okay. I think we're all on the same wavelength. I know it's none of my business to tell you how to do your job, so you'll take it as advice and you can do with it whatever you want. Try to make the read of the thing as easy as possible. Please put the referencing in footnotes at the bottom so that when somebody reads it, we're not forever interrupted in our reading with parentheses of which witness and the dates and the Hansard and all of this. If it could read easy, with footnote 1, 2, 3 at the bottom, and at the bottom would be—

Mr. Ray McLellan: For Hansard references.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Hansard references, as well as if you're referencing the document of the auditor or anybody else. But when we read the document, it would be a summary of the testimonies, and the background information would be at the bottom in footnotes, at the bottom of the page where you make reference, just to make it easier to read.

Mr. Ray McLellan: We won't debate the footnotes, but I would say this, though: Because I'm going to be using a lot of footnotes, what would happen is I'd end up with a large chunk at the bottom with maybe 30—my preference would be, at the end of it, to end at a summary statement, to put brackets and just put "H-Hansard-32."

M^{me} France Gélinas: Okay.

Mr. Ray McLellan: If not, I'm going to end up wasting a lot of space.

M^{me} France Gélinas: I trust you, as long as when we read it—

Mr. Ray McLellan: You'll know where to go back; you'll be able to go right back to Hansard. In some cases, I may use a direct quote. Hopefully, I won't have to do that and I can just paraphrase and essentially say, "The witness discussed; response with respect to the bond or safety on this page. The critical points were A, B and C."

Because we're going to be dealing with about 500 pages of testimony, we've got to reduce it down to 50, so we're really going to have to condense it as best as possible. Anyway, I think that's probably—

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay. Auditor, do you still have a comment?

Mr. Jim McCarter: The only point I was going to make, just to help Ray out, was whether the committee wanted an exact quote—let's say you're talking about the dispatch system or the marketing agreement. Did the committee want exact quotes—"Here are four or five things Mr. Smith said"—or did the committee want Ray to try to paraphrase that? I'm just trying to—

Mr. Ray McLellan: I appreciate that. As I say, I have to go from 450 pages to 50, so in some instances, as I said, I may do a direct quote, where you couldn't possibly improve on what was said. But if I can, I'll paraphrase, essentially saying, "The witness discussed the issue of the bond, and the ministry's position is X," to try to be as tight as possible.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Yes, absolutely.

Mr. Ray McLellan: Then I'll have longer notes that—I'll be able to go back and elaborate. If you say, "Let's elaborate on this," I'll be able to do it, but I have to bring it as tightly as possible.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Ms. Sandals?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I know what France is getting at in terms of the way we did the select committee as a two-parter, but I don't actually see this as a draft report. I see this as a research document so that we can start to organize our thinking. I'm not expecting it to look like a draft report. I'm expecting it to help us organize all this information we've collected.

Mr. Ray McLellan: It really is a checklist for us.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Yes.

Mr. Ray McLellan: Because, clearly, before the committee—if it decides to write a report, it has to answer certain fundamental questions with respect to this service in Ontario. There have been varying opinions on that as to what it's going to look like for Ontario going forward. I think we're probably a way from actually making comments on that, but I'm in the committee's hands. Hopefully, that captures it. If there are any other great ideas, please let me know and we can shape it a bit and change it so it's useful.

M^{me} France Gélinas: Good luck.

Mr. Ray McLellan: Yes.

MR. FRED RUSK

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Okay, I think we're pretty much ready to start with our witness for this morning. Mr. Fred Rusk is here. Welcome to the committee, Mr. Rusk, and thank you for coming in. Just to confirm, you received the information for a witness coming before the committee?

Mr. Fred Rusk: I did.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. Our clerk has an oath or affirmation for you, whichever you so choose.

The Clerk pro tem (Mr. Katch Koch): Mr. Rusk, if I could ask you to raise your right hand:

Do you solemnly swear that the evidence that you shall give to this committee touching the subject of the present inquiry shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Fred Rusk: I do.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): Very well. You have some time for an opening statement, and then we'll have time for questions amongst the three parties.

Mr. Fred Rusk: I really don't have an opening statement, I'm afraid, but please feel free.

The Chair (Mr. Norm Miller): That's fine. Then we'll start with the official opposition. Mr. Klees, you'll have roughly 20-minute periods of time.

Mr. Frank Klees: Mr. Rusk, thank you for coming here today. I appreciate it.

Mr. Fred Rusk: You're welcome.

Mr. Frank Klees: I've been looking forward to having a chance to discuss this file with you. I understand that you were actually, can I use the term, the founding father of Ontario's helicopter EMS service.

Mr. Fred Rusk: You might want to call me that. Back in 1977—I guess it was 1976—I was asked to be kind of a technical adviser to the ministry on the concept of an air ambulance to support the Sunnybrook trauma centre, which at the time was the only trauma centre in Ontario. Myself and another chap looked at different companies and other services from around North America, and we came back and gave a report. From that, the ministry decided to have an RFP to have helicopter support for Sunnybrook. In 1977, that contract was won by a consortium of five helicopter companies, basically melted down now to Canadian Helicopters; it was a number of different companies involved over the years before they became Canadian Helicopters. So I guess if I'm the father, thank you very much.

Mr. Frank Klees: Well, it's interesting, because when Ornge went out to the market with a very large bond offering, if you look at that offering memorandum—I don't know if you've seen it—it repeatedly makes reference to the excellent reputation that Ontario's air ambulance system has worldwide.

Mr. Fred Rusk: Correct.

Mr. Frank Klees: And although it was claiming that, of course, for itself, it didn't have any history at that point. The only history it had was Ontario's air ambulance system, which is the one that you initiated and, I'm assuming, provided leadership to over the course of those years. So 1997 was the year it was launched—

Mr. Fred Rusk: 1977.

Mr. Frank Klees: 1977.

Mr. Fred Rusk: October 1977.

Mr. Frank Klees: What was your role in that unit, if you could just give us some sense of your role, and also tell us something about the unit of people that you then put together to help manage that?
